HOUSE—Under the special order adopted last week, the house spent Thursday's session in committee of the whole, considering private pension bills. Fifty-three were acted upon favorably and reported to the house for passage, among the beneficiaries being the widows of Col. Orlando M. Poe, Gen. John Newton, Brig. Gen. Charles D. Jameson, brigadier general and ex-Senator George E. Spencer and Robert Smalls, the famous colored pilot and ex-congressman. The contested election case of Henry P. Cheatham (rep.) against Green Woodward (dem.) from the Second district of North Carolina was disposed of by the adoption of a resolution reported from the elections committee No. 2, declaring Woodward entitled to the seat.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—SENATE—By a vote of 31 to 30 the senate determined Friday that Henry A. Dupont was not entitled to a seat in the senate from the state of Delaware. Resolutions were proposed by Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, for an inquiry as to our treaty rights with Spain, and by Mr. Gallinger, New Hampshire, relating to the need of additional tariff enactments. Sixty pension bills were passed, clearing the calendar of all pension bills except the one recommended to pass over a veto. Among the bills passed were those pensioning the widow of Brig. Gen. John Hough, at $50 per month; the daughter of Gen. Phil Kearney, at $25; the widow of Rear Admiral Queen, at $75.

HOUSE—Bills introduced: To re-imburse Dieterick Ginnder for amount of internal revenue tax overpaid by him in 1874. This amount not to exceed $3,500; to grant honorable discharge to Frank Miller, Fifth Ohio. A favorable committee report to the house has been made on the bill to pay James H. Smith, of Manchester, O., $315 for services for nine months while he served as musician in the army, though he was never mustered into service. The Hoge-Otey election case from the Sixth Virginia district was unanimously decided in favor of Mr. Otey (dem.), the sitting member. After the night pension session the house adjourned until Monday.

Fatal Explosion in a Mine.

MONONGAHELA CITY, Pa., May 15.—An explosion in Mongah mine No. 2, property of W. H. Brown & Sons, Thursday, caused the death of Washington Cloughton, a miner, and severe injury of Frederick Wiles, a coal shoveler. The latter may not recover.

Walton.

The first trial in the North Ky. Inter-Academic Elocutionary contest come off on Friday evening at Independence. The participants were, for the Independence High school; Misses Wilson, Dunlap, and Masters Tupman, Ballard and Chambers. For the Walton Academy: Miss Mabel Bagby, Lulu Edwards and Edna Ransler; Master Leon Pryor and Fleming Hedges. The judges were Shelby Rouse, county attorney Simmons and Prof. Hull, of Covington. Both sides did well but the High School team took in all the prizes. There was a very large and attentive audience, a large part being contributed by Walton. Every available vehicle in the town being put in requisition.

Saturday evening the Baptist church was literally packed with people, and no wonder, the contest had been the subject of discussion for a week, the Scott Jackson trial being cast into the shade by the domestic local contest. Men, women and children were loaded with boquets, destined for the favorite contestant. Among the host of Independence visitors were our old friends, Dr. Chambers, C. C. Scales, school Superintendent Neander Stephens, Jordan Harris and a lot more. At about 8 o'clock the chairman, Miss Effie Lermond, in a very graceful and appropriate manner, opened the meeting by announcing the judges, stating that they had been selected in Cincinnati, and were personally unknown to the teachers of the Academy and to any citizens of the place. As a further protection against collusion, the contestants appeared by numbers and the judges could only give the points made by them without knowing to which school they belonged. In making their decision, 100 constituted the maximum and the judges took the following points as a basis: 1, Expression; II, Enunciation; III, Gesture; IV, Management of the voice. Each speaker received a grading on each point to be considered. The average of these points was the speaker's marking by one judge. The final marking of each speaker was the average of the three gradings made by the three judges. The grades of the five contestants from each school were then averaged and the prize was awarded upon this result, which [illegible] 39 for for the Walton Academy, and 68 4-5 for Independence High school.

The judges were Mrs. Virgil A. Pinkley, Col. R. P. Findley and Mr. Sam'l Somers.

Somers.

Excellent music was furnished by Mr. & Mrs. Perry Rouse and the younger Ingram.

The gardens in and around town afforded material for a gorgeous floral display.

Independence can well be proud of her team, while Walton is to be congratulated on account of the masterly style in which her champions acquitted themselves.

Each school had received different training. The writer, had he been one of the judges, and had there been prizes to have been awarded separately would unhesitatingly have given them to the girls. Miss Wilson and Miss Dunlap certainly distinguished themselves in the national roles, while Miss Bagby, Miss Ransler and Miss Edwards could not have been surpassed in the more intricate ones by Sara Bernhardt herself. The boys deserved the loud plaudits that greeted their efforts. Master Tupman will do well to pay strict attention, however to correct some ordinary pronunciation, while a high degree of excellence may be attained if they shall overcome the monotone. Masters Pryor and Hedges have only to eliminate the too free use of quantity, which gave a tinge of drawl, to come nearer the point of perfection they so nearly reached. All in all, the performances were highly creditable and the scholars are well entitled to the congratulations of their friends.

Beaver.

The entertainment given by Prof. Will E. Cook and pupils, at the close of his school Friday night, was pronounced a success by all who attended. It consisted of recitations, dialogues and music, both vocal and instrumental. Also music by the Beaver string band. Mr. Cook is an excellent teacher and we hope to have him in our midst next fall.

Miss Iva Sheets, of Covington, is the guest of Miss Eliza Ellis.

Miss Emma Hance, of Berkshire, is the guest of Miss Kate Moore.

The Monterey correspondent of the Owen News says: "Last Saturday a man giving his name as W. W. Harris came to Joe Karsners inquiring if there were any grangers in this community. He said he had come from Tennessee and was on his way to Boone county, Ky. He said he had a through ticket to Lexington, had fallen asleep on the train and had been robbed of a $600 draft, that he had realized from the sale of a house, and $30 in money and his overcoat. He had walked from Lexington as far as Karsners, had had nothing to eat and his feet were blistered. Mr. Karsner kept him until Monday and loaned him $2 which he promised to return. He started on his way very grateful for the kind hospitality of Mr. K., and family. He was neatly dressed and appeared in every way to be of a good family." Who is he?

Base Ball.

The Franklin base ball club of Cincinnati, came out last Saturday and met a Waterloo at the hands of the Burlington team. The Burlington club did good work from start to finish, putting up a stronger game than was expected of them this early in the season. Brady and Hawes were in good form, while Quick at first, Slayback at second, Arnold at third and Hughes at short, attended closely to the business of the infield. Maxwell, Kendall and Hogan were wide awake in the out field and made several beautiful catches.

The Franklin team was composed of nice young men, and nothing occurred during the game, calculated to ruffle the feelings of anyone.

Examinations for teachers' certificates will occur this year, for white teachers, on June 5th and 6th, 19th and 20th, July 17th and 18th, and August 21st and 22d; and for colored teachers, on Friday and Saturday following each of these dates. On consultation, the State Board of Examiners decided to send questions for the first examination of applicants for State Certificates along with the questions for the first examination in June. The old law, which required it, will be still in force at that time. Examination for graduation in the common school course will come at the usual time—the last Thursday in June, which this year falls on the 25th. L. H. VOSHELL, Supt.

The Ludlow Lagoon will be opened to the public again to-morrow—Thursday. The Lagoon became immensely popular last season, but it will be a much greater resort this season, the ground having been greatly improved since closing last fall, while numerous new attractions have been secured. It is a delightful place for outing parties, and has no equal in this part of the country.

Owing to the three long contributions on the financial question that appear in this issue, we have been compelled to condense, very considerably, both the neighborhood notes and the local news, and then we have four or five long letters left over for publication next week.

A Plea for Harmony.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Democrats of Boone county are called to meet in Burlington the 30th of this month to select delegates to represent them in the State convention to be held in Lexington the following week.

This will be one of the most important meetings to the Democratic party that was ever held in this county. The party is divided into two bitter factions, and unless the cooler heads of the party attend this meeting and use their influence for harmony, a breech will be made in the ranks that will require many a day to bridge.

The party is not divided upon any principle, but upon a policy of the party. They are united upon the principle of sound money, but divided as to what constitutes sound money. Mr. Carlisle, the leader of one faction, defines sound money to be, money whose material out of which it is made will sell in the markets of the world for as much as its stamp or fiat value. For instance: A gold dollar to be sound must contain 100 cents worth of gold, a silver dollar to be sound money must contain 100 cents worth of silver. The commercial world to establish the value of the material in each.

Mr. Blackburn, the leader of the other faction, in defining sound money claims that the material in no way constitutes the soundness of the money; that the stamp of the goverment, alone, is sufficient. Hence, he contends for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 1 to 16.

The Democratic party, throughout the State of Kentucky, and in every State of the union is threatened with disruption and disorganization over this difference of opinion as to the definition of the term sound money. No true Democrat can favor unsound money as a legal tender in the payment of public and private debts.

Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic party, in its first platform declared sound money, consisting of silver and gold, to be the fundamental principle of the party. At that time a dollar in each coin contained 100 cents' worth of the material out of which it was made. Hence both the gold and silver dollar was sound money; but it is not the case to-day. The silver dollar contains only 50 cents worth of silver, consequently, under the system of free coinage it would not be as it was in the days of Mr. Jefferson.

Under the present system of coinage the silver dollar does pass as legal tender without limit. Why is this the case, when under the system of free coinage it would not? Under the system of free coinage, the government receiving nothing for its coinage, would in no way be responsible for its value. Its value would be determined by the commercial value of the material out of which it is made. Since this varies from time to time, any silver coined under the free coinage system would be unstable, unsound money. This is the case to-day in free coinage Mexico, and it would be the same in this country should we adopt the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

Under the present system, established in the Bland and Sherman Acts, the government buys the bullion, coins the money and puts it in circulation by paying its debts with it. Hence the government is responsible to everyone who comes in possession of it, for its stamp or face value.

To illustrate. Suppose I should make you a present of a horse and the horse should prove unsound. You could not hold me responsible for anything in that case. But suppose, on the other hand, I should sell you the same horse for $150—that being a sound price. You could recover from me any damage you would undergo in the purchase. This is a parallel case. Hence it is the declared policy of our government to maintain the parity of the two coins, to make one interchangable with the other. It is also the policy of the government to maintain a parity in all of its circulation, consisting of both paper and coin.

To safely carry out this policy it requires $100,000,000 in gold to be held in reserve by the treasury to redeem its greenbacks. And for every treasury note or silver certificate issued, it requires an equivalent amount of silver either in dollars or bullion, to be held in tact in the treasury with which to redeem them.

In order to maintain the parity with the National Bank circulation, it requires these banks to deposit in the treasury, as collateral security, 10 per cent. more in government bonds than their circulation.

Under this monetary system of our government, one dollar has the same purchasing power as another, a state of affairs that does not exist in any free coinage country.

Take Mexico, for instance. If you go there to-day and make a purchase to the amount of $1, and offer a $5 gold piece in payment, you will receive $9 in silver as change. This is a free coinage country and the stamp of the government does not make its money sound. It is worth only what its material would bring in the commercial world. Were we to adopt the system of free coinage the same state of affairs would exist in this country. But before this system could be adopted every man who owes a dollar to day would be sued and compelled to pay his debts in good money, which would virtually bankrupt the country and a panic would follow such as this country has never yet experienced.

Who are the leading advocates of free coinage? They are the Senators of the United States who bought their seats with silver. They have formed a combine or syndicate by which they hope to double the value of their silver mines and get two dollars for every dollar's worth of bullion these mines may produce in the future. This they hope to obtain by deluding the masses, through their hired agents, and with their assistance force free coinage upon this government.

What I have written are plain facts that can not be disputed. I publish them that many, who have not given the subject a careful investigation, may act wisely in the Democratic mass-meeting soon to be assembled in this county, and not suffer themselves to be influenced by passion and prejudice, to commit an error that will effect the interest of every man, woman and child in the United States.

Whilse I am a firm believer in the single gold standard of values, I am not so bigoted that I can not make concessions for the sake of harmony in our party. This should be the spirit of every true Democrat. And I hope that every Democrat who attends the mass-meeting on the 30th inst., will be infused with this spirit, and come determined to stand by that grand old party that has withstood the storms of political warfare for more than a hundred years; and with its members laying aside their differences and forming themselves into a solid phalanx will be able to extend its victorious march beyond the nineteen hundredth mark into another century.

STATE CONVENTION.

Lexington, Ky., the Place and June 3d the Day.

County Conventions, May 30th, 1896.

The Democratic State Convention to select delegates to the Democratic National Convention will meet in Lexington, Ky., June 3d, 1896.

Each county and legislative district will be entitled to one delegate for each 200 votes cast at the last presidential election or gubernatorial election (the highest being taken as the basis) and one delegate for each fraction over 100 votes so cast.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said State convention, mass meetings of the Democrats shall be held on the 30th day of May at 2 o'clock p. m., solar time, in each county at the county seats thereof, and in each legislative district in counties having more than one legislative district at such places therein as may be fixed by the respective chairman thereof; and at such mass meetings of the Democrats of each county and legislative district they shall choose the respective delegates that they are entitle to upon the above basis of representation to said State convention. The respective chairman of each County Democratic Executive Committee and of each legislative District Democratic Executive Committee shall issue due and proper notices for said mass meetings and respectively call said mass meetings to order when assembled, and see that said meetings are fairly and properly organized and that the delegates therefrom be fairly and properly chosen by the expressed will of the majority of Democrats attending said meetings, and also see that the duly chosen chairmen and secretaries of said meetings properly certify to the list of delegates so chosen, which certificates shall be approved and signed by the respective chairmen of the Democratic Executive Committees for each county and legislative district.

May Musical Festival.

This great musical event will take place May 19th to 23rd, 1896, in the great new and renovated Cincinnati Music Hall. As usual, the program and artists are of the highest known class, and the Thomas Orchestra, a feature of well known excellence. Low round trip rates will be in effect over the Queen & Crescent Route, on sale daily, May 18th until the morning of May 23rd, from all points in Kentucky. Ask agts. for particulars. W. C. Rinearson,
G. P. A., Cincinnati, O.

The indications are that the Democratic mass meeting to be held here on the 30th inst. will be well attended. The present condition of the country is calculated to make the voters take an interest in politics.

From the numerous reports of guns every morning, it is judged that the hunters are having considerable sport with the squirrels, of which it is said there are a great many in the woods.

The protracted meeting at the Methodist church is still in progress. There have been no additions up to this date. Rev. Fizer is preaching interesting sermons to good sized congregations.

Col. Batterson has been at work on the foundation for the court house portico this week. During his idle hours in the evening he gives Cy Crisler instructions in the art of gardening.

F. A. Utz and J. H. Walton, jr., will receive wool at Bellevue, Thurday, May 21st, and at Rabbit Hash, Friday, May 22d. F. A. Utz will receive at his barn Monday, May 25th.

A nice shower fell here Tuesday morning, and as we go to press in the afternoon the indications are that there will be more rain before the weather clears up again.

Elder Smoot, of Virginia, and Elder Moore, of Georgetown, will preach at Salem on the first Saturday and Sunday in June. Dinner on ground both days.

Notice, Taxpayers.

I hereby notify the taxpayers of this county that they must pay their taxes at once. The road money is now due, and the Supervisors are calling on me for the money due them, and I cannot pay it without you pay your taxes. I do not want to be compelled to advertise and sell your property, but I will surely do so if you do not pay up forthwith.

BAD COMPANY.

The Text: "Walk Thou Not in the Way With Them."

Young Men Warned From Paths of Danger to the Safe Byways of God's Own Choosing—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D.

Rev. Dr. Talmage chose for his subject "Bad company," the text selected being Proverbs i., 15: "Walk not thou in the way with them.

Hardly any young man goes to a place of dissipation alone. Each one is accompanied. No man goes to ruin alone. He always takes some one else with him. "May it please the court," said a convicted criminal, when asked if he had anything to say before the penalty of death was imposed upon him—"may it please the court, bad company has been my ruin. I received the blessing of good parents, and, in return, promised to avoid all evil associations. Had I kept my promise, I should have been spared this shame and been free [illegible] the load of guilt that hangs around me like a vulture, threatening to drag me to justice for crimes yet unrevealed. I, who once [illegible] in the [illegible] of society and have been the guest of distinguished public men, am lost, and all through bad company."

This is but one of the thousand proofs that evil associations blast and destroy. It is the invariable rule. There is a well man in the wards of a hospital where there are 100 people sick with ship fever, and he will not be so apt to take the disease as a good man would be apt to be smitten with moral distemper if shut up with iniquitous companions. In olden times prisoners were herded together in the same cell, but each one learned the vices of all the culprits, so that, instead of being reformed by incarceration, the day of deliberation turned them out upon society beasts, not men.

We may, in our places of business, be compelled to talk to and mingle with bad men, but he who deliberately chooses to associate himself with vicious people is engaged in carrying on a courtship with Delilah, whose shears will clip off all the locks of his strength and he will be tripped in perdition. Sin is catching, is infectious, is epidemic. I will let you look over the millions of people inhabiting the earth, and I challenge you to show me a good man who, after one year, has made choice and consorted with the wicked. A thousand dollars reward for one such instance. I care not how strong your character may be. Go with the corrupt and you will become corrupt. Clan with burglars, and you will become a burglar. Go among the unclean, and you will become unclean. Many a young man has been destroyed by not appreciating this. He wakes up some morning in the great city, and knows no one except the persons into whose company he has entered. As he goes into a store all the clerks mark him, measure him and discuss him. The upright young men of the store wish him well, but perhaps wait for a formal introduction, and even then have some delicacy about inviting him into their associations. But the bad young men of the store at the first opportunity approach him and offer their services. They patronize him. They profess to know all about the town. They will take him anywhere he wishes to go—if he will pay the expenses. For if a good young man and a bad young man go to some place where they ought not, the good young man has invariably to pay the charges. At the moment the ticket is paid for, or the champagne settled for, the bad young man feels around in his pockets and says: "I have forgotten my pocketbook." In 48 hours after the young man has entered the store the bad fellows of the establishment slap him on the shoulder familiarly and, at his stupidity in taking certain allusions, say: "My young friend, you will have to be broken in;" and they immediately proceed to break him in. Young man, in the name of God, I warn you to beware how you let a bad man talk familiarly with you. If such a one slaps you on the shoulder familiarly turn round and give him a withering look, until the wretch crouches in your presence. There is no monstrosity of wickedness that can stand unabashed under the glance of purity and honor. God keeps the lightnings of Heaven in His own scabbard, and no human arm can wield them; but God gives to every young man a lightning that he may use, and that is the lightning of an honest eye. Those who have been close observers of city life will not wonder why I give warning to young men and say: "Beware of evil companions."

I warn you to shun the sceptic—the young man who puts his fingers in his vest and laughs at your old-fashioned religion, and turns over to some mystery of the Bible and says: "Explain that, my pious friend; explain that." And who says: "Nobody shall scare me; I am not afraid of the future. I used to believe in such things, and so did my father and mother, but I have got over it." Yes, he has got over it; and if you sit in his company a little longer you will get over it, too. Without presenting one argument against the Christian religion, such men will, by their jeers and scoffs and caricatures, destroy your respect for that religion, which was the strength of your father in his declining years and the pillow of your old mother when she lay a-dying.

Alas! a time will come when this blustering young infidel will have to die, and then his diamond ring will flash no more splendor in the eyes of Death as he stands over the couch waiting for his soul. Those beautiful locks will be uncombed upon the pillow, and the dying man will say, "I can not die—I can not die." Death standing ready beside the couch says: "You must die; you only have half a minute to live; let me have it right away—your soul." "No," says the young infidel, "here are my gold rings and these pictures; take them all." "No," says Death, "what do I care for pictures!—your soul." "Stand back," says the dying infidel. "I will not stand back." says Death, "for you have only 10 seconds now to live; I want your soul." The dying man says: "Don't breathe that cold air into my face. You crowd me too hard. It is getting dark in the room. O, God!" "Hush," says Death; "you said there was no God." "Pray for me," exclaims the expiring infidel. "Too late to pray," says Death; "but three more seconds to live, and I will count them off: One—two—three." He has gone. Where? Where? Carry him out and bury him besides his father and mother, who died while holding fast the Christian religion. They died singing; but the young infidel only said, "Don't breathe that cold air into my face. You crowd me too hard. It is getting dark in the room."

Again, I urge you to shun the companionship of idlers. There are men hanging around every store and office and shop who have not[illegible], or act as if they had not. They are apt to come in when the firm are away and wish to engage you in conversation while you are engaged in your regular employment. Politely suggest to such persons that you have no time to give them during business hours. Nothing would please them so well as to have you renounce your occupation and associate with them. Much of the time they lounge around the doors of engine houses, or after the dining hour stand upon the steps of a fashionable hotel or an elegant restaurant, wishing to give you the idea that that is the place where they dine. But they do not dine there. They are sinking down lower and lower day by day. Neither by day nor by night have anything to do with idlers. Before you admit a man into your acquaintance ask him politely, "What do you do for a living?" If he says, "Nothing; I am a gentleman," look out for him. He may have a very soft hand and very faultless apparel and have a high-sounding family name, but his touch is death. Before you know it you will in his presence be ashamed of your work dress. Business will become to you drudgery, and after awhile you will lose your place, and afterward your respectability, and last of all your soul. Idleness is next door to villainy. Thieves, gamblers, burglars, shoplifters and assassins are made from the class who have nothing do. When the police go to hunt up and arrest a culprit they seldom go to look in at the busy carriage factory, or behind the counter where diligent clerks are employed, but they go among the groups of idlers. The play is going on at the theater, when suddenly there is a scuffle in the top gallery. What is it? A policeman has come in, and, leaning over, has tapped on the shoulder of a young man saying: "I want you, sir." He has not worked during the day, but somehow has raked together a shilling or two to get into the top gallery. He is an idler. The man on his right hand is an idler, and the man on his left hand is an idler.

During the past few years there has been a great deal of dullness in business. Young men have complained that they have little to do. If they have nothing else to do they can read and improve their minds and hearts. These times are not always to continue. Business is waking up, and the superior knowledge that in this interregnum of work you may obtain will be worth $50,000 of capital. The large fortunes of the next 20 years are having their foundations laid now by the young men who are giving themselves to self-improvement. I went into a store in New York and saw five men, all Christians, sitting around saying that they had nothing to do. It is an outrage for a Christian man to have nothing to do. Let him go out and visit the poor, or distribute tracts, or go and read the Bible to the sick, or take out his New Testament and be making his eternal fortune. Let him go into the back office and pray.

Shrink back from idleness in yourself and in others if you would maintain a right position. Good old Ashbel Green, at more than 80 years of age, was found busy writing, and some young man said to him: "Why do you keep busy? It is time for you to rest." He answered: "I keep busy to keep out of mischief. No man is strong enough be idle."

Are you fond of pictures? If so, I will show you one of the works of an old master. Here it is: "I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding; and lo! it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall was broken down. Then I saw and considered well. I looked upon it and received instruction. Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. So shall thy poverty come as one that traveleth and thy want as an armed man." I don't know of another sentence in the Bible more explosive than that. It first hisses softly, like the fuse of a cannon, and at last bursts like a 54-pounder. The old proverb was right. "The devil tempts most men, but idlers tempt the devil."

A young man came to a man of 90 years of age and said to him: "How have you made out to live so long and be so well?" The old man took the youngster to an orchard, and, pointing to some large trees full of apples, said: "I planted those trees when I was a boy, and do you wonder that now I am permitted to gather the fruit?" We gather in old age what we plant in our youth. Sow to the wind and we reap the whirlwind. Plant in early life the right kind of a Christian character and you will eat luscious fruits in old age, and gather these harvest apples in eternity.

I urge you to avoid the perpetual pleasure seeker. I believe in recreation and amusement. God would not have made us with the capacity to laugh if He had not intended us sometimes to indulge it. God hath hung in sky, and set in wave, and printed on grass many a roundelay; but he who chooses pleasure seeking for his life work does not understand for what God made him. Our amusements are intended to help us in some earnest mission. The thunder cloud hath an edge exquisitely purpled, but with voice that jars the earth it declares: "I go to water the green fields."

The wild flowers under the fence are gay, but they say: "We stand here to make room for the wheat field, and to refresh the husbandmen in their nooning." The stream sparkles and foams and frolics and says: "I go to baptize the moss. I lave the spots on the trout. I slake the thirst of the bird. I turn the wheel of the mill. I rock in my crystal cradle muckshaw and water lily." And so, while the world plays, it works. Look out for the man who always plays and never works.

You will do well to avoid those whose regular business it is to play ball, skate, or go a-boating. All these sports are grand in their places. I never derived so much advantage from any ministerial association as from a ministerial club that went out to play ball every Saturday afternoon in the outskirts of Philadelphia. These recreations are grand to give us muscle and spirit for our regular toil. I believe in muscular Christianity. A man is often not so near God with a weak stomach as when he has a strong digestion. But shun those who make it their life occupation to sport. There are young men whose industry and usefulness have fallen overboard from the yacht. There are men whose business fell through the ice of the skating pond, and has never since been heard of. There is a beauty in the gliding of a boat, in the song of skates, in the soaring of a well struck ball, and I never see one fly but I involuntarily throw up my hands to catch it; and, so far from laying an injunction upon ball playing, or any other innocent sport, I claim them all as belonging of right to those of us who toil in the grand industries of church and state.

But the life business of pleasure-seeking always makes in the end a criminal or a sot. George Brummel was smiled upon by all England and his life was given to pleasure. He danced with the peeresses, and swung a round of mirth and wealth and applause, until, exhausted of purse, and worn out of body, and bankrupt of reputation, and ruined of soul, he begged a biscuit from a grocer and declared that he thought a dog's life was better than a man's.

Such men will come into your office or crowd around your anvil, or seek to decoy you off. They will want you to break out in the midst of your busy day to take a ride with them. They will tell you of some people you must see; of some excursion you must take; of some Sabbath day that you ought to dishonor. They will tell you of exquisite wines that you must taste; of costly operas that you must hear, of wonderful dancers that you must see, but before you accept their convoy or companionship, remember that while at the end of a useful life you may be able to look back to kindnesses done, to honorable work accomplished, to poverty helped, to a good name earned, to Christian influence exerted, to a Saviour's cause advanced—these pleasure-seekers on their deathbed have nothing better to review than a torn playbill, a ticket for the races, an empty tankard, and the cast-out rinds of a carousal; and as in the delirium of their awful death they clutch the goblet, and press it to their lips, the dregs of the cup falling upon their tongue will begin to hiss and uncoil with the adders of an eternal poison.

Again, avoid as you would avoid the death of your body, mind and soul anyone who has in him the gambling spirit. Men who want to gamble will find places just suited to their capacity, not only in the under-ground oyster cellar, or at the table back of the curtain, covered with greasy cards, or in the steamboat smoking cabin, where the bloated wretch with rings in his ears deals out his pack and winks at the unsuspecting traveler—providing free drinks all around—but in the gilded parlors and amid gorgeous surroundings.

This sin works ruin first by unhealthful stimulants. Excitement is pleasureable. Under every sky and in every age men have sought it. The Chinaman gets it by smoking his opium; the Persian by chewing hashish; the trapper in a buffalo hunt; the sailor in a squall; the inebriate in the bottle, and the avaricious at the gaming table. We must at times have excitement. A thousand voices in our nature demand it. It is right. It is healthful. It is inspiring. It is a desire God-given. But anything that first gratifies this appetite and hurls it back in a terrific reaction is deplorable and wicked. Look out for the agitation that, like a rough musician, in bringing out the tune plays so hard he breaks down the instrument. God never made man strong enough to endure the wear and tear of gambling excitement. No wonder if, after having failed in the game, men have begun to sweep off imaginary gold from the side of the table. The man was sharp enough when he started at the game, but a maniac at the close. At every gaming table sit on one side ecstasy, enthusiasm, romance, the frenzy of joy; on the other side fierceness, rage, tumult. The professional gamester schools himself into apparent quietness. The keepers of gambling rooms are generally fat, rollicking and obese; but thorough and professional gamblers, in nine cases out of ten, are pale, thin, wheezy, tremulous and exhausted.

A PRETTY young French-Canadian girl, Elsie Lamay, is tempting the inhabitants of Lewiston, Me., to have their shoes repaired quite often as they need it. She is an expert cobbler and works at the window of her little store with apparent unconsciousness that there is anything unusual in her profession. It is hinted, however, that pretty Miss Lamay's unusual success may not be wholly due to her cobbling ability.

SEATTLE reports that fully 1,000 men, well supplied with provisions, have already sailed from that port for the Alaskan gold fields.

BEMUDDLED MUSICIANS.

Strident Strains by the Discordant Protectionists.

The lover of music, in the air or otherwise, can scarcely regard as satisfactory the recent performances of the most eminent republican soloists. The McKinley boom is, of course, no longer a solo, but a piece of ill-concerted music, with obligatos for various unsatisfactory performers. The tutti are ill-balanced, harsh, and strident. The conductor has been frequently expostulated with upon the predominance of the brass, but Mr. Hanna does nothing to amend this defect. The batrachian tones of the ophicleides and the notes in the carpet-tearing register of the trombones are completely unrestrained. At all the recent performances they have spoiled by drowning the plaintive snarl of Maj. Handy's beautiful obligato of the oboe. ("We may be happy yet, You bet.") It is not the fault of the still, small Handy that his instrument is not powerful enough to transpierce the sounding brasses and tinkling cymbals of the band.

It is a pity, indeed, that there is such a preponderance of brass in the orchestra. The Reed instruments, or woodwind, have not been heard at all at the recent performances. The auditors see the cheeks of Bill Chandler and Lodge, respectively first and second clarionets, bulge and turn red, but no audible sound has escaped them since the "one-night stand" in New Hampshire. Mr. Clarkson at the big drum continues to do wonders to the eye, and he occasionally manages, when the performers upon "sonorous metal blowing martial sounds" happen to be all out of breath together, to make himself apprehensible to the ear. But the bass drum is not properly a solo instrument, and no virtuosity upon the part of the performer can make an unaccompanied performance upon it tolerable, except, of course, to Mr. Allison, who has nightly manifested from his box the greatest complacency over the performance of his protege. But Mr. Allison is very easily pleased, if he is willing to accept gesticulation for musical effectiveness.

Mr. Platt has made the same mistake as Mr. Clarkson in assuming that the bassoon was a solo instrument, and he has made other mistakes besides. It was undoubtedly an error to arrange "Oh, let us be joyful" in five flats minor, and mark it "adaglo melancolico." But it was a still greater mistake for the fagottist to neglect his practice. Clarkson is at least a conscientious artist and bangs the Allison drum for all he is worth, when he is not operating upon the Harrison tinkling cymbals. But Platt does not do justice either to the composition or to his own talents as a fagottist. No man can blow the bassoon properly who insists upon playing a solo upon it with his tongue in his cheek and his hands in the pockets of his neighbors.

We have already intimated that the obligatos of the McKinley symphony, the principal number of the programme, were not well done. Where all do so ill, it would be invidious to discriminate, but we are bound to say that Foraker's performance of the passage for fog horn in G flat "allegro maestroso" is by far the most intolerable. It is no wonder that as soon as he begins the conductor stimulates the tubas and trombones to their utmost and, in the language of the poet, "the snarling silver trumpets begin to chide." The wonder is that a performer who plays so persistently out of tune should be admitted into the band at all. Everybody remembers how this player broke up the Sherman cornet band by his outrageously false performance of "Come rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer." He may be trusted to disperse any organization with which he is connected, and the most pressing duty of the conductor, if he would extract harmony from his performers, is to dismiss his first fog horn. When Foraker plays it, it is not less offensive than the Samonian instrument upon which Mr. McKinley renders his own solos.—N. Y. Times.

——There are a good many people in this country who will not believe that McKinley can be nominated until the trick has been actually turned. It is impossible for them to believe that enough men can be hoodwinked or bought to name for the head of the national government a man who brought it to the very verge of ruin, who has shown a deplorable want of administrative ability, and who lacks the moral courage or the intellectual comprehension to take a decided stand on the greatest issue which the voters of the United States have to determine.—Detroit Free Press.

THE MAN WHO CATCHES THE FISH.—Chicago Chronicle.

THEY ARE FORGETTING.

Republicans Are Not Keeping Faith with the People.

There are some indications that the republican politicians are forgetting the lessons of the last two or three general elections, and are disposed, in some things, to presume that the people have also forgotten recent political history. The republicans carried the country two years ago on protestations of supreme devotion to the public interests. They pledged themselves to introduce reforms, to put an end to the evils of ring rule in states and municipalities, and to elevate the standard of the public service by eliminating altogether the elements of personal greed and selfishness.

In some places they seem already to have forgotten these engagements. In this state the legislature, under the dictation of party bosses, has been engaged in "jamming through"—to use the phraze of a party manager—a number of measures which are vigorously opposed by the people, and which embody no possible public advantage. In some of the municipalities of New Jersey, where power was won by pledges of reform in the government, the expected results have not been realized, the public administration not having measured up to the proposed standards, and as a result, in elections recently held, the party has suffered severe reverses. Obnoxious candidates, who had refused to recognize the demands of public sentiment, and who imagined themselves secure against assault, were practically annihilated, in some localities, by a concentration of the votes of law-abiding, public-spirited citizens who only a year or two ago voted in their favor. In some other states there is, apparently, a like disposition on the part of republicans to use the power committed to their hands for the furtherance of partisan ends, rather than for the promotion of public good.

It cannot be otherwise than that this infidelity to engagements solemnly entered into will operate to the detriment of the party in future conflicts. There is a growing independence among voters, and a deepening of the popular consciousness as to the moral forces, which will not brook in any party the methods and policies of selfish partisan leaders. If we are to hold our own in the country, and if we have any desire to permanently impress ourselves as a party upon the life of the time, if republicanism is to be made a practical beneficence in its operation upon legislation and the maintenance of the social order, we must learn to keep faith with the people at whatever cost of personal ambitions and private greed. — Leslie's Weekly.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

WAR AND ATHLETICS.

The Best Soldiers Are Not Always the Strongest Men.

The revival of the Olympic games in Greece, though in a very different form from that of 2,000 years ago, is an event of uncommon interest. When those games were at their best the Greeks were the most warlike nation in the world. This leads a contemporary to ask whether there is any connection between the athletic spirit which characterizes the English-speaking races of to-day and the war-like spirit which they also exhibit.

Byron, too, in speaking of the degeneracy of the modern Greek, wrote:

"You have the Pyrrhic dances yet,
  Where has the Pyrrhic phalanx gone?
Of two such lessons, why forget
  The nobler and the manlier one?"

The poet did not stop to think that the Pyrrhic phalanx would have counted for nothing against modern arms. It is also true that in the age of Grecian glory athletics were an immense advantage in the way of preparation for military service. The physical strength and endurance of the soldier then were of first importance. Now, in most branches of military service strength counts but little, though endurance is still a matter of great importance. But does experience show that athletics are possessed of that sort of endurance that is most useful in war?

Military men tell us that actual experience in war is full of surprises on this question. The strong, athletic fellows, who were expected to prove the most efficient soldiers, disappointed that expectation more frequently than otherwise. The slender young chaps found about towns and cities, who had been clerks in stores, students, mechanics, whose occupations made no great demand for physical strength, suffered severely at first, but, as a rule, soon developed into tough and efficient soldiers, and often bore the fatigue of the march and the battle better than the strapping farm laborers and others that were supposed to be the best material for soldiers. We do not mean that there were not excellent soldiers obtained from all these sources, but that comparisons utterly failed to sustain the expectations that had previously been entertained.

It would seem, therefore, that the connection between athletics and efficiency in war is somewhat remote. Those nations that now excel in athletics excel also in other respects. They are the dominant nations of the world, because of the high spirit and the resources which enable them to excel in almost every department of human effort. Athletic exercises are all right, of course, but their importance in connection with war has suffered great diminution on account of the improvement in arms.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Wonderful Lunatic.

Dr. L. C. Bruce gives an account of a lunatic in the Derby Borough asylum who exhibits the phenomenon of passing from one mental state to another. By birth he is Welsh, and when in his "Welsh state" his condition is that of dementia. He can then understand Welsh, but not English. In his "English state" his condition is that of chronic mania, and he speaks and understands both English and Welsh. But he cannot remember anything that occurs to him when in the Welsh state, although his memory leaps over the interval and recalls events belonging to preceding English states. Conversely when in the Welsh state he is totally ignorant of things that he knows and understands perfectly in the English state. Sometimes he passes from one state to the other suddenly; at other times he goes through an intermediate state, during which there appears to be a mixture of two conditions in his brain.—Brain.

A Retreat Open.

"We are thwarted," she gasped, falling into the arms of the leading juvenile. "My father!"

"What has he done?" demanded the youth, with an ominous intonation.

"He has hidden all of my wardrobe except 27 costumes!" she cried, her voice rising to a shriek.

Anybody at all conversant with the tendencies of the drama could see that an elopement was impossible. However, they could do a song and dance.—Detroit Tribune.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

FINDING THE LEAK.

The Product of the Fields Pays the Mud or Stony Road Tax.

Time spent in marketing farm produce is a dead loss.

This loss falls on the crop produced by the farmer. The dappled fields of green and golden wheat know it and the corn leaves whisper it to the lazy pumpkins yellowing in autumn sun.

They know that against them will be charged all the time of horses and men and all the wear and tear of vehicles employed in transporting them to market.

They know that if the road to town is very bad and but half a load can be marketed in twice the time required for marketing a full load with a good road, it will all count against them when the year's business is finished and the books are balanced.

They know that production and consumption are the great contending factors of the farm. Horses and men are consuming the crop while they are producing it. The consumption of it does not end until it is exchanged for its cash equivalent. The fewer the number of horses and men, the less the amount of time employed in producing and marketing it, the more there will be to credit to the worth of the crop.

The mud tax, or stony-road tax, or the steep-grade tax is assessed against the product of the fields.

If the farm isn't a paying investment, the "why?" should be looked into.

The farm, itself, may show a profit. The miserable road to market may be the unprofitable part of the business. Roads should be so made that loads can be hauled to market when fields are too wet to work.

Quit charging the fields with the great loss of time, the broken vehicles, the worn-out horses and the many other ills occasioned by poor roads.—Good Roads.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD.

Too much or too severe pruning is always more or less weakening, especially if continued year after year.

In pruning trees of any kind it is better to leave one strong branch or limb than two or three weak ones.

The only remedy for black rot is to cut off and burn immediately all branches that show any indication of the disease.

Cultivate your young and small fruits the same as you would any other crop on the farm from which you expect to realize profit.

In setting out grape settings, plant in a dry, low soil, so that only the top bud will be exposed and then mulch with straw.

When selecting the trees take those with the roots large and strong enough, and then top light enough to do away with the necessity of staking.

By leaning the trees a little to the southwest when they are set out, sun scalding may be largely avoided, as the top will partly shade the trunk.

The sooner now that red and black raspberries, blackberries, currants and gooseberries are set out the better. Early planting induces stronger rooting.

A young, tender tree cannot grow without good care and attention. A tree is strong [illegible] ardy when it is old and its roots are well established, but when young it must be attended to.

Trees should always be set about as deep as they stand in the nursery or two or three inches deeper to allow for the settling of the soil.—St. Louis Republic.

BEST ARE CHEAPEST.

When You Build Roads, Build None But the Most Perfect.

A very wise philosopher has observed that the great bulk of the people must always support the mass of the population.

The people pay for everything the people have. The public pays for the railroads and the expense of running them. If the railroads were only half as good and could only haul half as much it would cost the people twice as much to ride or ship over them.

It is fortunate for the people that railroads are conducted in an organized business-like way. If the opponents to improved roads had their way the railroads would be neither profitable nor pleasant.

The people of a community are the ones vitally interested in the roads of that community.

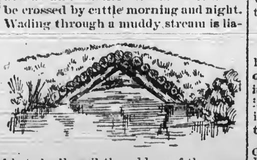
If the farmers of each township were to get together and mutually agree that they would go about a system of good roads their sum of happiness would be increased.

Since the people pay for the roads why not have those that are cheapest and most pleasant—the very best ones?—Good Roads.

PASTURE STREAMS.

How They May Be Bridged Neatly and at Small Expense.

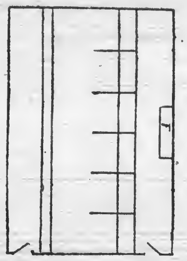
Countless pastures are crossed by brooks and smaller streams that must be crossed by cattle morning and night. Wading through a muddy stream is liable to badly soil the udders of the cows, with consequent trouble at milking time. A regular wooden bridge costs something to build, and is not very lasting, under such conditions as are usually found in pasture streams. A simple plan for bridging a brook is shown in the cut. Stout sticks are set at an angle against each other, thus bracing each other perfectly. Over these are laid rough logs, and the remaining space filled in with dirt. Grass will soon grow over all, and keep the soil from washing. —N. Y. Tribune.



CHEAP COW STABLE.

Can Be Built Substantially for About Five Hundred Dollars.

A cheap and convenient cow stable for six cows may be built 16x24. Feeding alley should be at least four feet wide. Cows facing feed alley. Manure ditch should be deep and narrow so that cows may easily step across and are not likely to stand with hind feet in the ditch while in their stalls. The walk should be three and one-half, or four feet wide. The length of the platform on which the cows stand will depend upon the size of cows kept. The feed bins should be in the loft above and spouted down to boxes (F) below, where it can be mixed, and is convenient to get, while not in the road. To keep the cows clean, clear the gutters at least once a day and use plenty of absorbents, cut straw, dry sawdust or dry forest leaves being the best for cow stables. In building such a stable put up a balloon frame and batten the siding, or use tongue and grooved siding. Such a building may be built in a good substantial way at a cost of less than $500, and would last many years.—Ohio Farmer.



AXLE GREASE CHEESE.

Why Farmers Should Assist in the Suppression of Its Manufacture.

Every effort to suppress the manufacture and sale of filled cheese deserves the heartiest support of all farmers. The question is of more general importance than many farmers seem to imagine, for the cheese and butter industries are so closely allied that when our export cheese trade is destroyed the butter market cannot fail to be affected.

The recent low prices commanded by the best creamery butter has alarmed many people, persuading them into the belief that the creamery business is overdone. If this be true—and it is not possible now to say whether it is or not, for markets are affected by many circumstances—but if it be true, the remedy lies close at hand. With the suppression of filled cheese, America can produce and sell at advantageous prices tons and tons of the real article. Down with the axle grease stuff.—Farm News.

Catching Flies Off of Cattle.

A machine for catching flies off the backs of cattle, and so affording the animals relief and comfort, has been invented by a farmer in Madison county, Ky. The fly catcher is a kind of covered pen or passageway, through which the animal must walk to secure relief. A few feet from the [illegible] a cupola or dome in the roof of the passageway, made of glass and arranged as a fly trap. Beyond this the passage is darkness. The animal walks through the machine, and just as it passes under the dome and enters the darkest part a set of brushes sweep off the flies, which naturally rise into the lighted dome, and the steer passes out at the other side free of flies. The flies are retained in the dome trap. The inventor has experimented with his machine, and finds that the animals soon learn the value of the machine and know enough to walk through the machine when the flies begin to bite. The device has been patented.

Plants for Alkaline Lands.

To the west of us we have what used to be known as the "Great American desert," but now more familiarly comprehended as our "semi-arid regions." It has been supposed that this land was of no great value, having no plant food and filled with the destroying alkali. Recently, however, the government has been making an analysis of these soils and finds them rich with the chemicals necessary for the growth of plants. The next work will doubtless be to find valuable plants that will be able to stand the alkali and the drought. That such a thing is possible is proven by the vigorous growth on those lands of sage and cactus.

Influencing the Calves.

Prof. Stewart once purchased two cows, four and six years old, and fed them to improve if possible their milking qualities. One the second year produced 60 per cent, more throughout and was profitably kept until 18 years of age. The other increased one-third in milk and one-half in butter, and during her 19th year gave 6,278 pounds of milk. And please note this—that a heifer calf from each before development proved very ordinary milkers, but calves from them afterward proved good milkers.

Cost of Paving New York.

An expert engineer in New York city has been carefully estimating the cost of the various kinds of pavements laid in that city during 1895. The figures include cost of curbing, cross-walks, inspection, etc., and are of general interest:

	Per Square Yard.
Granite blocks laid on sand	$2 67
Belgian blocks laid on sand	1 68
Asphalt on six-inch concrete	2 50
Asphalt on four-inch concrete	2 17
Asphalt over cobblestones	1 96
Vitrified brick on five-inch concrete	2 55

Civilization and Good Roads.

There is civilization, enlightenment and economy in good roads. Good roads lead to prompt and steady attendance upon church services, school room duties, neighborly intercourse and social advancement. Bad roads lead to profanity, worry, trials and tribulations and loss of time.—Galveston (Tex.) Tribune.

DOGS AND TRAMPS.

One of the Latter Shatters a Favorite Belief.

"Am I afraid of dogs?" repeated the tramp, as he leaned against the wall to rub his itching shoulder. "Well, that's a queer question to ask a feller who's been on the tramp fur 15 years! What's dogs got to do with it?"

"It is said that dogs have an instinctive aversion to tramps," replied the interviewer.

"Mebbe they hev, but the tramp hain't worryin' about that as I knows of. If dogs was all we had to look out fur we'd be a happy lot. Who's bin stuffin' you about dogs?"

"Weren't you ever bitten by a dog?"

"Of course, but that was when I was green at the biz. After the first six months no dog ever hankered arter my legs. When you read about a farmer's dog humpin' a tramp over the fence, don't you take no stock in it. It's all guff."

"Well, how do you protect yourself?"

"In the first place, dogs are afraid of tramps. Nine out of ten of 'em will growl a few times and then sneak away. They seem to jest figger that a tramp wouldn't be sloshin' around like he is if he wasn't loaded fur dogs. The books all tell ye to look a dog in the eye, but no tramp is fool 'nuff fur that. If ye do he'll figger that ye are defying him and bite ye fur sure. Jest look at his paws instead. That'll bother and annoy him and make him turn tail. If a dog rushes out on me of a sudden I stand still. When he sees I don't run he argues that I'm dangerous. I've had 50 farmers 'sic' a big dog on me, but I simply back slowly away and never get a bite. I've run onto dogs in yards, barns and sheds and skeert 'em half to death by making a 'buz-z-z-z-z-z' with my teeth shut."

"But you do find a dangerous dog once in awhile?" persisted the questioner.

"Oh, of course," replied the tramp, as he scratched his shoulder. "Yes, we find a dog now and then who lacks good sense and we hev to help him out."

"How do you do it?"

"With a handful of dry sand or fine-cut tobacco. As he jumps we throw the stuff into his eyes, and if the owner of the dog hain't clus behind him a feller kin hev ten minutes of solid fun watchin' the circus. That dog may live fur ten years arter that date, but he'll never meddle with another tramp. Dogs—humph! Say, gimme a quarter and bring on yer bulldog and tell him to climb fur me!"—Detroit Free Press.

GOING-AWAY GOWNS.

Alpaca Is Conceded to Be Cool and Quite Dressy Enough.

At this season of the year I always get a fit of longing for somewhere else—anywhere that is not the same place that I have seen all winter, and I think nine out of every ten women I know feel the same way. Now, what to wear when the fit comes on, and the grip is to be packed for the brief outing that brings you home refreshed and better satisfied with yourself and your belongings. You want to look well, the home gowns are out of the question, the real summer ones too dressy, so that there should be a costume designed especially to suit the occasion.

Of course there is always the shirt waist, but there are women unfortunate enough to look but ill in them, and so they are not to be considered. Alpaca is conceded to be cool, and is so if made up properly, with not too heavy linings. It has splendid qualities to recommend it for traveling, because it sheds the dust and does not soil readily.

A smart gown of mode-tinted alpaca, with a finish as glossy as silk, is made into an attractive gown that can be worn equally well for shopping or visiting. The spreading skirt is as plain as possible, but has an interlining of mode tinted silk and a lot of silk dust ruffles as a set-off.

The bodice is round and drawn at the waist by the narrowest of belts in lizard-green kid, with a small oval kid buckle. A narrow pointed waist of black satin set in at the throat is finished by a crushed stock of black satin, with enormous pointed ears standing at each side. Broad lace in butter tint is draped artistically over the tops of the bouffant sleeves and along the edge of the vest to a point at the waist.

With this gown are worn mode-tinted gloves, heavily stitched with black, and a small capote of coarse black braid, trimmed simply with a smart bow of black satin ribbon directly in the front. There are patent leather boots and English gaiters of mode-tinted cloth to match the gown.

As a model this pretty gown will serve admirably for the purpose spoken of, and look not too smart on boats and trains also. Appropriate dressing is the secret of a charming appearance, and nowhere and at no time is it more desired than when the runaway feeling takes possession of you.—Philadelphia Times.

A Convenient Yeast.

Take two cakes of good dry yeast and dissolve them in a teacup of tepid water. Scald three tablespoonfuls of flour, add one-half cup of sugar, two-thirds cup of salt. Boil 12 large potatoes in two quarts of water, adding enough to have that amount. When done mash them fine, and add to them two more quarts of warm water, the scalded flour, sugar and salt. When the mixture is barely warm add the dissolved yeast. Stand it in a warm place for 12 hours, then bottle. This should make a quantity sufficient to fill five quart fruit jars, and should be at once placed in a cool, dark place. To make your bread, take one jar of yeast in the morning, work it moderately stiff with some flour, and set to rise in a warm sheltered place. It will usually be ready to bake by noon, and will make three good loaves.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Noble Work.

The Young Men's Christian Association has accomplished much good throughout the length and breadth of the land. No branch of the Association has garnered more plentiful harvest however than has the Railroad Branch. The good influences that have surrounded and good examples that have been set the employes of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway by the Y. M. C. A. workers have done wonders in improving the morals of the men.

The thousands of delegates, members and friends of the Christian Endeavor Society who will go over the Chesapeake and Ohio road next July en route to Washington to attend the National Meeting will have ample opportunity to study the practical workings of the Railroad Branch of the Y. M. C. A. at Cincinnati, Covington, Ky., Handley and Hinton, W. Va., and at Clifton Forge and Gladstone, Virginia.

Back about the year 1881 or 1882, the employes of the C. & O. were furnished with a reading room and sitting room at Hinton, W. Va., by the Company. The quarters were comfortable, there were good fires ready for the men to warm by, and an abundance of newspapers and magazines were always to be found as well as numerous games such as checkers, chess and dominoes.

Previous to the opening of these rooms by the Company when the train men came in off a run or had to lay over at Hinton they went to the saloons because there was no place else where they could go and have the advantages of heat for warmth and light by which to read the papers. This was particularly true in winter time. Even if they hadn't become unfitted for duty through drinking they stayed around the saloons and lost sleep which they should have had in order to have been in proper condition to perform their duties. The improvement in the men's morals after the opening of the reading and sitting rooms at Hinton was very marked. Soon after the opening of the rooms, they were turned over to the Y. M. C. A., and a lunch room, bath rooms and other comforts and conveniences were added. A small monthly fee was charged the men which they cheerfully contributed.

When M. E. Ingalls took charge of the Chesapeake & Ohio road as president he encouraged the work of the Y. M. C. A. in every possible way and in behalf of the Chesapeake & Ohio company guaranteed to the Y. M. C. A. any deficit that might arise from the expenses of keeping up the rooms at Hinton, or those that might be established elsewhere along the lines. Sleeping rooms were added to the building at Hinton, and the Company erected or furnished quarters at Cincinnati, Covington, Ky., Handley, W. Va., and Clifton Forge and Gladstone, Va. The quarters were all made as attractive as possible for the men. They were put in charge of officials of the Y. M. C. A. and the good work has gone steadily on.

The train-men no longer frequent the saloons, they are always in the best possible mental and physical condition and prepared to discharge their duties in so prompt and efficient a manner that passengers traveling over the C. & O. are sure to receive the best possible care and attention and are as safe as at home.

The Chesapeake & Ohio's passenger equipment is the very best to be obtained by the most liberal expenditure of money. The dining car service is known as the best in the world.

The C. & O. passes through a territory not only noted for its beauty of scenery, but rich with historical incidents of two wars; the battlefields of the last one being still visible. Hot Springs, Natural Bridge, Richmond, Newport News, Charlottesville, Gordonsville, and many other points of beauty and interest are all on the C. & O. lines. The regular maintenance of the fast schedule is due to the proficiency and alertness of the trainmen and this is due to a very great extent to the efforts of the Railroad Branch of the Y. M. C. A.

CROP AND STOCK.

Army worms are appearing in large numbers in various parts of the State.

A new kind of worm is destroying some of the orchards in Hopkins county.

Philip J. Dwyer has bought of Milton Young six yearling colts by Hanover, for $8,500.

A Harrison county farmer took the trouble to count 1,163 cut worms that he found under one foot square of sod.

The proverbial early bird is not in it with Mr. Alvin Cornelison, who tells us he has corn up six inches and has set most of his tobacco crop.—Richmond Register.

At a recent public sale of saddle horses at Philadelphia by Russell Railey, of Woodford county, the average price was $245. Best prices, $420, $315, $310, $300.

The farmers are feeding their fattening cattle corn just the same as if it was winter time. The drouth has cut short the grass and made this necessary. Unless it rains soon feeders will be compelled to ship early in June, something very unusual in this locality.—Georgetown Times.

Information from Chattanooga indicates that the strawberry crop in that section this season will be double that of previous years. Over one hundred solid car loads are expected to move [illegible] that point to Cincinnati during May, commencing this week. Tne Cincinnati Sourthern has arranged a 13-hour schedule from Chattanooga to Cincinnati to accommodate the traffic.

The Portsmouth Press says: "Hundreds of acres of wheat that had a poor stand have been plowed up for corn this spring. The wheat acreage will therefore, no doubt be largely decreased, the production be less and the price ought naturally be better. Between Portsmouth and Columbus field after field of wheat has been plowed under, and the same conditions, in all probability, exists throughout the country."

STATE NEWS.

Five thousand people assembled at Catlettsburg Sunday, to witness a game of ball. After one inning had been played every interested person was arrested.

The Harrodsburg Democrat reports the sales of 100 barrels of corn at $1,25, several car loads of hogs at 3c that were sold in Cincinnati at $3,40 to $3,60, a number of mule colts at $40 to $45, and a lot of light cattle at 3½ cents.

John R. Gibson, of this place, owns a three thousand acre tract of land in Texas, but he does not know in what county, says the Richmond Climax. His father, the late William Gibson, took the farm for a debt. The deed has been lost. Texas is a thousand miles wide, and a little lot like a 3,000-acre farm would be hard to find.

The Blue Grass country has been holding up its hands in holy horror at the wickedness of the mountains, says the Winchester Democrat, but it seems that even Blue Grass morality gets a little out of plumb occasionally. Commonwealth's Attorney, John Smith, Paris, says that since November he has sent 75 persons to the penitentiary from his district, comprising Bourbon, Woodford, Scott and Franklin counties.

An Owingsville special says: Mrs. Lou Lansdowne, of this county, was to have been married to Perry Morrows Wednesday night. Everything was in readiness and guests began to arrive when it was said that Samuel Atchison, living near this place, had stolen the expectant bride during the afternoon. It was afterward learned that he took her to the residence of Hon. Thomas D. Shrout, where they were quietly married.

BIMETALLISM.

[By G. M. C., of Walton]

To the Editor of the Recorder:

From this it follows, as a matter of course, that in silver standard countries prices had not fallen and the purchasing power of silver was not affected, but gold was at a high premium, that is, gold was very dear.

The commission developed another fact of very great importance, yiz; That, while the farmers and manufacturers of England and America were in distress complaining of low prices and hard times, the export trade of India hed greatly increased and cotton manufacturing in that country had attained proportions of remarkable magnitude. In 1883 the total number of spindles in Bombay was 450,000; in 1886 they had increased to nearly 1,700,000.

In 1874 India had exported to China and Japan about 3,000 bales of cotton yarn; in 1886 it had run up to 220,000 bales. And while this great increase in progress was going on, the exports of England to those countries was in effect almost at a stand still. It may be as well to note that this astonishing increase of cotton factories is still going on.

At the close of 1894 the number of spindles being operated in India was nearly 4,000,000. These Indian mills supply markets formerly dependent upon England, and obtain all their raw cotton at home, while the English mills imported theirs chiefly from America, besides partly in England and partly on the continent of Europe, India was selling about 1,000,000 bales annually, and is yet doing so, even while supplying her rapidly increasing home demand.

The American cotton planters was brought into active competion with the cotton growers of India, while the English factory was competing with the Indian factory.

The great fall in prices not only depressed business, but made such a havoc of equities, that it cannot be defended bv any one who comprehends the question, and who also knows what is right and what is wrong. It injured the producer for the benefit of the non producer, and it fell with the greatest severity upon the agriculturalists and all other producers of raw material. The manufacturer could generally recoup and in a measure save himself by getting his raw material at lower rates; but the former, the miner and other producers had no one to whom their loss could be transferred. The burden of the debtor was increased for the benefit of the creditor, for every debt must be paid out of the price received for the products of labor, and when the price falls it is the same thing as an increase of the debt. If a man's property is mortgaged and the price of his productions falls one half it takes double the amount of it to pay the debt, in substance the debt is doubled. It may, however, result in something much worse than even this. Debts are paid out of profits and expenses must be met before the debt can be paid, and if the price be cut below the point of profit the debtor cannot pay at all.

Take the case of a farmer who has a $5,000 mortgage on his farm. With wheat at $1, corn at 50 cts, potatoes 50 cts and other things in proportion, his crop would be worth say $5,000. Suppose his total expenses to be $2,000; it leaves him $1,000 to pay on the mortgage, and in five years the debt can be paid. If prices are cut to one half his crop falls to $1.500 and his expenditures to $1,000. leaving only $500 to pay on his debt. Instead of paying the debt in five years it will take him ten. As a rule it does not work so favorably as that, for there are some things which fall very little and others that do not come down at all. Taxes, interest and many other things are practically stationary. It may easily happen that the value of a crop will fall below the cost of producing it, then nothing can be paid on the debt. As the value of the product falls the value of the farm itself declines, and upon a foreclosure the creditor gets it all.

The predominant characteristic of the last twenty two years has been the distress of the producing and debtor classes, while the non producing money lending and fixed income classes have grown richer and richer, until the aggregation of wealth at the great money centers is without a parallel in the history of the world.

The Sherman Law next demands some consideration. On the 4th of March 1889 the administration of President Harrison began. Complaints of hard times were loud all over the country, and, except in the extreme east, there was an urgent demand for free silver. The 51st Congress met on the 1st Monday in December, 1889, with a clear majority in both houses in favor of free coinage. But the administration, Speaker Reed and majority of the republicans of both houses were opposed to such a measure. The Senate promptly passed a free coinage bill and sent it to the House, but the administration had a favorite scheme, known as the Windom bill. The anti-silver republicans being in control of the House blocked the silver legislation nntil sufficient pressure had been brought to bear upon the less determined silver men in the Republican party to induce them to accept the Windom bill as a substitute for free coinage. That measure passed the House by about 30 majority, the pronounced free coinage men voting against it. The bill provided for the purchase of 4½ million ounces of silver bullion each month, to be paid for in treasury notes created for that purpose, which were to be legal tender except where otherwise stipulated in the contract and were made redeemable in gold at the option of the government in silver dollars or in silver bullion at the option of the holder of the note. Before passing it had been amended so as to admit of free coinage when the bullion was at par, that is worth 1.29 per ounce. The im portance of this amendment was not fully comprehended by many at the time.

The Senate refused to concurand the matter went to a conference committee, where the 4½ million of dollars was stricken out and the same number of ounces substituted; the provision for free coinage when parity was reached was dropped and the notes were made redeemable in "coin," which means either gold or silver. It received the name of the "Sherman Law" because Senator Sherman was a prominent member of the conference committee.

Had the free coinage clause been retained and the law fairly executed it is highly probable that it might have settled the silver question, for under its operation as it was, silver rose to $1.20 per ounce. It would have been natural for the owners of bullion, with free coinage in prospect, to hold it back, hoping by so doing to raise the price to $1,29 per ounce, when free coinage would have taken effect and in all probability held it at that point. But the gold men opposed it and for the same identical reasons. They foresaw the rehabilitation of silver to its pristine value and used every effort to and did defeat the amendment.

BIMETALLISM,

Its Effect on the Wage-Earner and the Farmer.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

It is only natural, as a Presidential and Congressional election approach, and the gold-monometallists have urgent need of the votes of the wage-earning and farming classes in support of the nefarious schemes for contracting values and rendering the purchasing power of gold greater, that they should evince great concern for the welfare of these hard working classes.

In urging the wage-earners to support the gold standard, the contractionists address themselves to their pockets. They brazenly assert that the opening of our mints to silver would result in robbing every wage-earner of the value of half his wages; that he would be compelled to take his pay in fifty-cent dollars; that prices of commodities would rise while wages would not, and consequently the purchasing power of wages earned would be greatly reduced.

Turning next to the farmers and stock-growers of the country, those unscrupulous gold-standard advocates reverse the argument, and undertake to fit it to an opposite situation. The wage-earner is a consumer, the farmer a producer. The first wants high-priced wages and cheap commodities; the last needs higher prices for his products than he is now receiving, and does not complain of high-priced labor if he can only afford to pay. The farmer is assured that the remonetization of silver and its restoration as redemption money, will drive the gold out of the country, reducing our money to about one-half its present per capita, and that this shrinkage in money supply will produce a corresponding reduction in prices which are already below the cost of production.

That these arguments are made, and are positively offered to the two classes referred to, with an air of confidence and effrontery unparalleled in political history, one need only to read the Courier-Journal, the New York World, or any other gold-monometallist organ to verify. That they are directly opposed to each other is easily seen, and that they are both absolutely untrue in whole or in part, the experience of the past abundantly proves.

We are asked to believe in effect, that the opening of our mints to silver would result in forcing upon the wage-earner a cheap dollar, and upon the farmer a dear dollar; that the dollar in the hands of the one would be worth but fifty cents, while the same dollar would purchase from the other, twice as much wheat, cotton and farm produce generally, as it now does. The absurdity of the argument is manifest.

Now the truth is that with the opening of our mints to silver, the demand for that metal would increase, while the demand for gold decreased. Consequently silver would rise, (or gold would fall in value) which is one and the same thing in effect. As the value of silver, contrasted with that of gold, approached nearer and nearer to a parity, which it would speedily reach, prices would rise, and the market for agricultural products as well as for manufactured articles would broaden. Our exports would go twice as far as they now do towards the payment of interest on our foreign indebtedness, and a large balance of trade would accumulate in our favor.

It is indisputable that a contraction of our currency results in depressing values of all commodities whether crude or manufactured. The contraction brought about by discarding silver has caused the constant fall in prices during the past twenty yeass. Such a contraction the gold-monometallist predicts as the result of opening the mints to silver, but he denies that this contraction of our currency, which he insists would lead to a further decline in farm prices, would result in lower prices generally. On the contrary he insists that the prices of everything bought by the wage-earner would be doubled. Why, if contraction causes a decline in the prices of farm products, it would not cause a fall in prices generally, he does not explain.

When the condition of the labor market, (as it is today) is such that two laborors are obliged to run after the same employer seeking to fill tho samo position, wages are low, the comforts of life are unknown in the laberer's home, and he is ever on the verge of starvation.

When a farmer, who, five or six years ago bought a ten thousand dollar farm, paying half the money down, the same being all he had, and executed a mortgage to secure the payment of the balance in five or six years, finds in that time that it has been impossible to pay taxes, make a very frugal living, maintain repairs, and have anything left to pay interest with, to say nothing of reducing the principal of his indebtedness, he surrenders, and then we are called on to witness that heretofore unheard of spectacle of the assignment and utter bankruptcy of an honest man who has followed legitimate farming exclusively and industriously. The foreclosure of the mortgage, or a deed of assignment, (which is just as terrible and fatal to his hopes) takes all he has, and he is turned out of his home without a dollar. His five thousand dollars have been absorbed by what he is told is contraction, and he looks about for a clearer definition of that word. He remembers the timo when he could pay his farm hand twenty-five dollars a month; when he could afford to buy hogs at ten cents a pound, and make money farming. It was during those silver days that he made the five thousand dollars which has just been swept away from him. And while he was making that money he was able also to clothe and educate his children, and to give them luxuries besides such luxuries and comforts as have, in these days of gold only, become things unknown with this unfortunate farmers, driven by the hard lessons in economy he was compelled to practice in the forlorn hope of paying off the debt which oppressed him. It was an economy practised in vain, and his self denial has all gone to the creditor.

He remembers how easy life was with him before these days of contraction tightened their hold upon him, in those earlier and happier days of bimetallism and he is ready new, yes and willing too, to aid in their restoration.

With the restoration of silver to the position it occupied prior to 1873, rising prices would encourage all our industries, stimulate production and lead to increased demand; higher prices for the farmer, and correspondingly better wages for the laborer. It is impossible to better the condition of the agriculturists, who by his labor is the fountain of all the wealth of our people, without at the same time improving conditions everywhere.

With a dollar that has steadily appreciated fifty per cent in five years, a dollar that by its appreciation has become a dishonest dollar, wages have fallen, manufactories are permanently closed, or are running on half time, farmers are failing, employment has become slack, and many of the laborers of our country have been reduced to enforced idleness. It is the two-hundred cent dollar that now stifles industry, and renders agriculture unprofitable. It is from low prices that we are suffering, not from the fear of high prices.

In Mexico, a distinctly silver using country, the farmer can produce as many pounds of coffee per acre as he ever could, and when it is ready for market he can haul it across the Rio Grande river into the United States and sell it for twenty cents a pound. When he gets back home, behold the twenty cents has become forty, and is really worth forty cents to him in his business. He does not care for gold. He would not care if he never saw any gold. He is prosperous and happy, and as civilization advances most rapidly among a people who are prespering, so the people of Mexico have made greater progress in all that marks the advance of civilization within the last five years, than in all her previous history. In every nation on the earth where silver is used and recognized as lawful redemption money, much the same state of affairs is found to exist.

During the past five years while the single gold standard has done its deadly work in the United States, the silver using countries have enjoyed unprecedented prosperity, while on the other hand, nothing but misery and suffering has come to us, if we except the very few of our people whose wealth has enabled them to speculate in the bonds of our government. This will go on forever, like Tennyson's Brook', under tho singlo gold standard. Prosperity has never come to the masses of a people any where under such a standard, and never can, nor will, until the gold production of the earth shall exceed the greedy demands of the gold gluttons.

In following up our present policy of buying gold on a written promise to pay in gold with interest, and using it to pay for our own paper money, which is turned out at once to be redeemed again and again and again forever, we are pursuing the most ruinous financial policy, and committing the greatest folly ever perpetrated by a so-called intelligent people. It is time to call a halt. Let us do so now. The opportunity is presenting itself this year in the form of a presidential election. There is no use to talk of waiting for an international agreement. It is not coming. The governments of Europe are not such fools as to cut off the tide of profit which our present financial policy sets flowing to their shores. By following our present policy we are like ostriches, hiding our heads in the sand while our bodies are exposed to the danger which is sure to overtake and overwhelm us. The elections this year will put into our hands the power to stop the foolishness now running riot at Washington, and we may yet save a remnant of our little wealth. Let it not pass without improving the opportunity to our lasting benefit.

J. FRANK GRANT.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In order to satisfy the minds of the curious and the inquisitive, and inform my friends who are interested with me in my trip, and to excite an interest in the minds of others I desire to have interested in an enterprise that I believe, now, will be successful beyond a doubt, and profitable to all who have invested or may invest, that I write you a sketch of a trip which was on business and not simply sight seeing although the latter was immense and would fully repay anyone to take the trip.

Fourteen of us, 12 gentlemen and 2 ladies, left Cincinnati, May 2nd, and arrived at Chicago where we spent five hours taking in the objects of interest the Windy City affords. At Chicago we took a Sante Fe train, crossing the Mississippi river into Iowa at Ft. Madison with which we were not much pleased on our short run through the State. Passing into Missouri we saw some very fine lands in a fine State of cultivation.

At Emporia Kansas, we saw of tho finest lands, and thousands of acres of petatoes in the Kansas river bottoms.

Leaving Emporia we saw no more of the country until we arrived at Garden City, 67 miles from the Colorado line. This is getting beyond the rain belt, and everything is dry and parched and the land seems to be poor, and population scant, and until near Las Animas the country is nearly an unbroken prairie, except a few irrigated spots where water can be had and they are beautiful.

Las Animas is a nice town of 3,000 inhabitants, and surrounded by mountains capped with snow.

At Trinidad we ascended the Rocky mountains, 2 engines drawing ten coaches and going very slowly a distance of 16 miles to top of the mountain, when we passed out of Colorado into New Mexico through a tunnel 2,011 feet long and 7,248 feet high. The mountain was descended at a rapid rate of speed, to Maxwell a town at its foot. This town takes its name from Lucien B. Maxwell who owns nearly 2,000,000 acres of land in a body. Here opens before you the great plains of New Mexico, dry and arid, and nothing green as far as the eye can see until you reach Springer where they are ditching and preparing to irrigate some very fine land.

Passing on we arrived at Las Vegas, where they receive moro wool than at anyother place in the United States. From there on yon see many Indians and Mexicans at every town.

From Albugeorde to Luna, a distance of 100 miles is a sandy desert surrounded by mountains, with nothing green to be seen as far as the eye can see. We passed on through the lava beds and a wild waste of lands seemingly of no value and inhabited by the Pueblos, who live in a village of adobe buildings with flat roofs and nothing in sight for anything to subsist on.

Arriving at Coolage on top of the divido 7,000 feet high, it was so cold we had to put on our overcoats.

Nearing the Arizona line we pass through some smooth land, covered with a growth of cedars that look like they had been planted out.

Passing through a pine forest into Arizona, we stopped off at Ashford for the night. Next morning we took tho train for Pheonix, a run of 196 miles, arriving there, with our party in good shapo and well pleased with the trip.

J. W. KENNEDY.

IF MAJOR McKinley is as weak a brother as some of the Republicans are saying ho is, the country can not afford to make him president.

By virtue of an order of the Democratic State Executive Committee, a mass meeting of the Democrats of Boone will be held at Burlington, on the 30th day of May, at 2 p. m., solar time, for the purpose of choosing delegates to the District and State conventions called to meet at Lexington the 3d day of June, 1896, Boone county will be entitled to 10 delegates in said convention.

D. E. CASTLEMAN,
Chairman Executive Committee.
B. L. RICE, Secretary.

ON the 6th day of June trustees will be elected in every school district in the State.

LITTLE Cuba, single handed and alone, is holding her own with the Spanish army in her contest for freedom.

THE Hoosier Democrats are booming Gov. Mathews for president and declaring in favor of the free coinage of silver.

IT is rumored that Miss Guy will not be permitted to take the office of State Librarian to which she was elected by the legislature last winter.

BOTH the gold bugs and the silverites are very uncertain as to which will have control of tho Chicago convention, and each are putting forth their best efforts to be in the majority.

DEMOCRACY believes in the majority ruling, and the Democrats of this State should bear this in mind, and let no kick be coming after the majority speeks through its delegates at Lexington.

JUDGE CANTRILL of the Scott county circuit court has decided that tho local option election recently held in that county is null and void. The Court of Appeals will be called upon for a final decision.

IF either the Democratic or Republican national convention, or both, declares for a single gold standard this year, it will be an occurrence that has never happened in a national convention in this county.

THOSE diposed to discuss the financial question have about captured all the available space in the RECORDER this week. The RECORDER has given space to every article offered on either side of the financial question.

THE Courier-Journal is ridiculing the free silver advocates who have come to this State to take part in the campaign, but when a gold bug from abroad mounts a Kentucky stump, it exhausts it svocabulary of praise in his behalf.

So far as heard the rain that fell in this county Monday morning did immense damage to the corn crop, the soil on many hillside fields being swept off down as deep as plowed, and some places gullies torn out to the depth of three or four lect.

THE trial of Alonzo Walling, for the murder of Pearl Bryan, was to begin in the Campbell circuit court yesterday. Considerable evidence that was not adduced in the trial of Scott Jackson it is said will be be forthcoming on each side in the trial of Walling.

THE Superintendent of Public Instruction has decided to make good the Kentucky school fund deficit, for the present year out of future funds. This will obviate the necessity of curtailing the terms of the common schools, which was at one time seriously contemplated.

NEXT Saturday a Democratic mass meeting will be held in every county and legislativo district in Kentucky to select delegates to attend the Democratic State convention which assembles in Lexington on Juno 3d for the purpose of selecting Kentucky's delegation to attend the Chicago convention. As both the "gold-bugs" and the silverites" are very much interested in the financial issue that is just now giving the Democratic party considerable trouble, both factions will whoop up in the primaries, each being exceedingly anxious to dominate the State convention, because the complexion of the Kentucky delegation in the national convention is likely to cut a great figure in determining the party's declaration on the money question. The financial question is the only issue to be passed upon next Saturday, and the Democrats should turn out and settle the question so decisively that hereafter there can be no doubt as to Kentucky's position on that question.

KANSAS CYCLONES.

No Lives Reported Lost, Much Damage to Property Resulted.

A Genuine Twister Passed Near Emporia, and One Man is, Perhaps, Fatally Injured—A Cyclone Passes One Mile West of Burlington, Kan.

ST. LOUIS, May 2.—Specials from various points in Kansas bring details of disasters by cyclones Wednesday night.

At Arkansas City, Kan., settlers living in the strip five or six miles southeast of this city Thursday reported that three different cyclone clouds swept their section of the country. No lives were reported lost, but much damage has been done to fences and crops, and on the Drury cattle ranch 20 head of cattle were killed.

At Emporia, Kan., about six o'clock Wednesday night a funnel-shaped cloud was noticed south of the city. Thursday morning it was learned that a genuine twister passed from southwest to northeast, about five miles south of here and near the town of Olpe, passing directly over the ranch of the Hughes Brothers, tearing a portion of their dwelling house to pieces and throwing it across the Santa Fe tracks. The barns, corn cribs and outhouses were all blown away. Wm. Hughes was caught in the wreck of the barn and it is supposed that he is fatally injured.

At Burlington, Kan., a cyclone passed one mile west of the city Wednesday evening, tearing down a building on the farm of W. H. Clark. The people here had a fine view of the cloud and watched it from the time it formed until it went to pieces north of the city. It was funnel shaped and moved with great speed.

THE CORONATION.

Thousands Witness the Triumphal Entry of the Czar and Czarina Into Moscow—The Carriages Are Built of Massive Gold.

MOSCOW, May 22.—The czar and czarina made their triumphal entry Thursday into Moscow from the Petrovsky palace, where they have been sojourning since Monday. Two thousand cavalry furnished the military escort, and the emperor and empress rode in the gilded coaches of state which had been transferred here from St. Petersburg. At intervals of a few feet, the country road and the city streets over which the procession passed, were arched with flowers and bunting, and relays of little girls dressed in white strewed flowers immediately in front of the royal chariot.

Upon entering the city the emperor and empress immediately proceeded to the Uspensky cathedral, in the Kremlin, where a grand Te Deum was sung in their honor. The service, including the celebration of the Greek mass, occupied three hours. Without any interval for refreshment the imperial party next visited the Archangel and Blagovestchensk cathedrals, where they venerated the relics and offered up prayers at the tombs of their imperial ancestors. Thursday afternoon the emperor and empress proceeded with the same state as in the morning to the Alexandrinski palace, on the southern outskirts of the city, where they will remain until the coronation next Tuesday.

The signal for the commencement of the day's movements was a salute of nine guns from a battery outside the city. This was followed by the dull booming of the big bell of the Cathedral of the Assumption and the assembling of the troops at their various mustering points.

Then the countless high dignitaries of the empire and of foreign countries began to gather at the Petrovski palace to take their places in the gala equipages or to escort on horseback the carriages of their imperial majesties. The grand dukes and grand duchesses, the prince and princesses, the Asiatic potentates, the innummerable representatives of every country under the sun assembled here to do honor to the czar of all the Russias, the ruler of the mighty empire which half circles the globe.

At 2:30 p. m. there was a further thundering of the cannon, coming from the direction of the Petrovski palace, and that living mass of men and women gave a great sigh of relief, for it was the sign that the czar had started on his journey to the Kremlin.

Eight hundred thousand people have come, some from enormous distances and by roads to see the sight, thousands of whom are content to camp in any open space available. They venerate the czar. If they catch a glimpse of him in the distance, and there are few of them who do more, they will be perfectly satisfied. The gilt carriages of the procession are of massive gold.

VIOLENT DEATHS.

Three St. Louis People Meet Death by Accident.

ST. LOUIS, May 22.—John Lambert, aged 35 years, of Boulder, Col., was run over and killed by a train in the railroad yards at Twenty-first street and Scott avenue Thursday afternoon.

Patrick Butler, aged 90, who was on the pension roll of the fire department, was run over and killed by an electric car in the southwestern suburbs Thursday.

Edward George, aged six years, was ground to death by an electric car at Seventh street and Russell avenue Thursday afternoon.

Two Violent Deaths at Gadsden, Ala.

GADSDEN, Ala., May 22.—In the Dwight cotton mill Thursday morning H. C. Nichols, of Boston, general manager of the mills, was caught under a dynamo that was being wired and killed. About the same time a young boy, name not given, fell three stories down a stairway and was killed.

DUN'S REPORT.

There is Nothing Like Reaction in Business—The Stock Market Refuses to Obey Orders for a Panic.

NEW YORK, May 23.—R. G. Dun & Co. says Saturday:

Failures for the week have been 227 in the United States against 207 last year, and 28 in Canada against 23 last year.

There is nothing like reaction in business, though the volume is small. The stock market refuses to obey orders for a panic. Manufacturers are not gaining on the whole, but very few are losing. The railroad stocks average a shade higher than a week ago and there is abundant evidence that men of money are watching for the right moment to buy at the bottom, certain that the good crops and definite political prospects will bring improvement in the fall. Men of all parties have faith that the American people will find the right way to maintain the soundness of their currency. There is no longer the threatened danger that both houses of congress will go wrong and the success of sound money men in both parties as far west as South Dakota is most significant. The business world has the best of reasons for refusing to go into a panic, and it looks hopefully forward to definite improvement as soon as political uncertainties is out of the way. The waiting conditions which seems to some people nothing better than stagnation still continues. But there is a difference. Thousands of orders and contracts are merely deferred because they can be more safely given a little later. There is nothing exciting in the speculative market for exportable products and the stories about damage to wheat have been numerous, but the general belief regarding the future supply is fairly reflected in the decline of 1.52 cent per bushel. Cotton speculation lifted the price a fraction for a day or two, but it declined again, and such movements are always easy at this season when stocks can be easily controlled. The European and American mill supplies, with commercial stocks, still exceed maximum consumption for the crop year and the promise for the coming crop is decidedly good. If the output of pig iron were always a reliable barometer of business conditions as some suppose, the returns of furnaces in blast May 1, according to the Iron Age, 188,319 tons against 187,451 April 1, would be convincing. But the increase of stocks unsold since January 1 has been 243,915 tons and this, deducted from the output of furnaces, leaves 2,978,348 tons for four months, which is certainly in excess of the actual consumption, because the stocks of the great steel companies are not included in the statement. Since the steel billet pool was formed these stocks have doubtless increased largely. There is scarcely any improvement in the demand for finished products, though the bar association has become strong enough to enable makers of steel bars to get a slightly higher price. The demand for nails is so light that a reduction of price is expected. [illegible] demand for structural work is less urgent, but yet orders are encouraging in number, although new contracts are for small quantities. Bessemer pig is a shade lower, and the ablest observers of the iron market notice there is glaring incongruity between pig at $12.50; billets at $20.25 and steel rails at $28.

The boot and shoe manufacturers have quite the best of it at present and the factories are nearly all employed full time, some of them having orders for some months ahead. A slight advance in women's grain shoes is the only change yet made in prices, but a general advance is expected because the market for leather is much stronger in tone, though this week unchanged in quotations, while the Chicago market for hides is quite excited because of scanty supplies and the average of quotations is nearly seven per cent. higher.

The textile manufacturers are still waiting, as they have been for months past, and the extensive curtailment of production does not strengthen prices in the least.

Fighting in Crete.

ATHENS, May 23.—The situation in Crete is very serious and daily becomes more threatening. A detachment of Turkish troops at Yoxaris has been besieged by the Christian populace for two weeks, and in the fighting that has occurred 18 men have been killed. It a fight at Drazu ten men were killed. The success of the insurgents has caused a panic among the Turkish rustic population, and large numbers are flocking into the towns for protection, fearing they would be massacred if they remained in their homes. Fifteen hundred Turkish men, women and children in the country about Retimo have taken refuge in that town.

Richmond, Va., Democratic Primaries.

RICHMOND, Va., May 23.—The result of the democratic primary election in this city for delegates to the state convention was: Sound money delegates, 65; silverites, 35; independents, 1. This makes the vote in this congressional district so far 87 for sound money and 76 for free silver. Twenty-four delegates are still to be chosen—17 in Chesterfield county and seven in King William. The gold men claim that they will secure enough of these to enable them to elect delegates to Chicago. The silver men are very positive to the contrary. The number necessary to elect is 94.

Quay Refuses to Talk of His Visit.

BEAVER, Pa., May 23.—Senator Quay was seen at his home Friday afternoon shortly after his arrival from Canton and was asked to say a few words about his visit, but no amount of persuasion could induce him to discuss it, though he seemed in a happy frame of mind and conveyed the impression that he must have something to say later.

Prince of Wales Mine Starts Up.

NEGAUNEE, Mich., May 23.—The Prince of Wales mine, which has been idle since 1893, has started up with a full force of miners and will be regularly worked from now on.

BUILDING COLLAPSES.

Four Persons Are Known to Be Dead and About a Dozen Injured.

The Building Was Undergoing Extensive Repairs at the Time of the Accident—Several Men Are Missing and it Is Believed They Are Under the Debris.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 22.—A section of the Seneca street front of Brown's building collapsed at 9:20 o'clock Thursday morning, burying a score of people in the ruins. George Metz, a barber, and Jennie Griffith, cashier in the barber shop, are dead; William P. Straub, a contractor, is known to be in the ruins, and a dozen others are more or less injured, one of whom will probably die.

Those at the hospital are: Jacob Laugdon, barber, scalp torn and body contused; Wm. Alexander, steam fitter, scalp wounds and body bruised; Jacob Rickman, barber, injured about the body and head; S. L. Hawke, carpenter, skull fractured, may die; James Adams, mason, 12 Chandler street, scalp wounds and injured hip; Michael Klien, carpenter, wrenched back and scalp wounds; Joseph Bullard, plasterer, injured internally; Edward Murphy, plasterer, injured internally, right arm injured; Fritz Format, German laborer, badly bruised.

Brown's building stood on the corner of Main and Seneca streets and for years the Western Union Telegraph Co. had occupied the ground floor corner as a business office and all of the fourth floor as an operating room.

The building was filled with offices, many of which were occupied, and on the ground floor on both Main and Seneca streets were stores occupied by merchants.

The Western Union left the building a few weeks ago and the owners of the block began the work of remodeling and strengthening it. On the Seneca street side, workmen were engaged in putting in place new columns and beams and new foundations for them.

Numbers 8 and 10 Seneca street were unoccupied, the principal alterations being made at that point. No. 12 was occupied as a barber shop by George Seinert and No. 14 by James Clegg's jewelry store and Thos. Jones' news stand. The offices on the floors above were nearly all tenanted, and altogether there were probably 50 people in the collapsed section. The walls fell with a crash taking down roof and ceiling with them.

Iron columns were twisted as though they had been soft wires. Heavy wooden beams were torn to pieces like paper. Pillars of brick crumbled to pieces, not strong enough to resist the strength of the weight that had fallen upon them. Here and there could be seen people who had not been caught in the falling debris, rushing to a place of safety. The outer wall fell into the street, burying those who had not had time to escape.

LATER—12:40 a. m.—The body of a man about 28 years old whose name is reported as DeEgler, a laborer, was found by the searching party in the rear of the building.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

Their One Hundred and Eighth General Assembly Opens at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, N. Y., May 22.—The 108th general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America opened its sessions here Thursday in the First Presbyterian church with the usual sermon from the retiring moderator. Nearly 700 commissioners, half ministers and half elders, occupied seats on the floor of the auditorium and as many more ladies and visitors were crowded upon the floor of the auditorium. Upon the platform were those who were to assist Moderator Rev. Dr. Robert Russell Booth, of New York, in the service, and in rear of the pulpit was the choir, greatly augmented from the local choirs for this occasion. The service, according to the book of discipline of the Presbyterian church, began promptly at 11 o'clock. Dr. Booth's sermon occupied more than an hour in the delivery. The committee on theological seminary and control, which has now been before three successive assemblies was in session all Wednesday night giving the last touches to the report which is to be made to this assembly.

The work of retouching is still incomplete and several more all night sessions may be necessary to get the phraseology in the desired form.

Part of the report is now in the printers' hands and the rest will be ready as soon as the former harsh language and severe recommendations is translated into soft words and velvety phrases.

Rev. Dr. John L. Withrow, the liberal candidate, was elected moderator by a large majority.

Ten Months' Internal Revenue Receipts.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Internal revenue receipts for the past ten months aggregated $121,660,370, an increase over the like period of 1895 of $1,008,196. As compared with the ten months of 1895 receipts from spirits show a decrease of $1,690,392; tobacco an increase of $1,051,216; fermented liquors an increase of $2,027,287; oleomargarine a decrease of $194,084; and miscellaneous a decrease of $185,219.

Won the Great Derby.

CINCINNATI, May 22.—Prince Lief won the great derby race at Oakley Thursday, with Ben Eder a good second. Ben Brush finished third. Fifteen thousand people were present.

The Milwaukee Street Car Strike.

MILWAUKEE, May 22.—The commission merchants of the city Thursday took the initiative in the movement to resent the boycott resulting from the street car strike, which is now in its third week. They issued a statement to the public, asserting their rights and that of their families, patrons and employes to do business with such persons, and patronize such conveyances as suited their convenience, and gave notice that such right would be defended by all lawful means. The boycott is having a serious effect on all business.

PRESBYTERIANS.

The Sabbath Observance Committee Makes a Report—Members and Other Persons Entreated to Uphold the Day.

SARATOGA, N. Y., May 23.—The general assembly began business promptly Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock, after the usual devotional exercises of half an hour.

The report of the committee on "the Church at Home and Abroad" magazine was read by Chairman H. John MacIntosh. The accounts of the year, for a circulation of 15,890 copies of the magazine per month, show a deficiency of $3,448. The report, with slight amendments, was received and adopted and the committee was continued.

The Sabbath observance committee of the Presbyterian general assembly, through Chairman Morrill, made its report Friday. Members and all other persons are entreated to discountenance whatever tends to break down the distinction between the Sabbath and other days; as, for instance, Sunday trading, buying, reading, or in any way supporting Sunday secular newspapers; social entertainments and visitations that dissipate serious thought and all self-indulgence on the Lord's day that tends to unfit them for God's worship and to impoverish their spiritual nature; declaring against the opening of theaters on Sunday.

Reference is made to the efforts that are being made through Sabbath-schools and young people's societies to educate the rising generation as to the claims, sanctities and obligations of the Sabbath.

It is recommended that the last Sunday in October of each year be set apart for the consideration of the obligation to "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it Holy." The American Sabbath union and Woman's National Sabbath alliance are indorsed.

DEACONESSES.

A Large Audience Witnesses Their Consecration at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—Over 2,000 people witnessed the consecration of 12 deaconesses and listened to the exercises of the anniversary of deaconess' work at the central armory Friday night. About thirty of the deaconesses occupied seats on the platform while a number of the black bonnets and white ties were observable scattered through the audience. Bishop Vincent presided. Dr. Lucy Rider Myer, of Chicago, was the first speaker of the evening. She defined deaconess work as "Woman's contribution toward meeting the problems which confront the church in the great cities." She outlined the growth of the work from the institution of Bethany society in Germany in 1872 and the first organization of the present work in Chicago in 1885.

After an anthem by a mixed quartette, Miss Durham, of Buffalo, described some of the incidents of the deaconess' work.

Mrs. Jane Bancroft Robinson, of Detroit, discussed the relations of the deaconess' work and the Woman's Home Missionary society. She was followed by Miss Durham who sang a solo, accompanying herself on the guitar.

After a brief address by Bishop Ninde, the consecration of three deaconesses was proceeded with. The services were conducted by Bishops Ninde and Thoburn, and consisted of hymns, prayers, responsive readings and address to the candidates, and the taking of the obligation in the answers to five questions, after which the bishops formally took the candidates into the office of deaconesses.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

Transportation Committees Make Arrangements for Rates to St. Louis and Chicago.

ST. LOUIS, May 23.—The convention transportation committee has arranged the following rates, date of sale, etc., etc., for the republican and democratic national conventions:

For the republican convention: From the territory west of the Mississippi river (except Colorado and Texas), and including the whole of Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern portion of Illinois tickets will be sold on June 13, 14 and 15, limited for return to June 21; from Colorado, tickets sold June 12, 13 and 14, limited for return June 23; from Texas, tickets sold June 8, 9, 13, 14 and 15, limited for return June 21; from southern portion of Illinois and from Indiana, Michigan and Ohio tickets sold June 12, 13, 14 and 15, good returning June 21, with corresponding dates of sale and return limits from territory further east. Similar arrangements will be made from territory south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi rivers.

The Buffalo Disaster.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 23.—All Monday night the workmen toiled in the ruins of the Brown building, searching for whatever bodies might still be buried in the wreck. At one o'clock Friday morning they came across the body of a Polish laborer and at 10:40 the body of Contractor Straub was found. The list of dead now numbers four and this is believed to be the total of the fatalities. The ruins will, however, be completely cleared and the search made thorough.

Bull Fighter Gored to Death.

MONTEREY, Mex., May 23.—At a bull fight here a picador, Jose Mata, was gored to death, and four other performers, including Silvero Chico, the matador, dangerously wounded by a vicious bull. The same bull also disemboweled and killed six horses. It was the most exciting bull fight that has occurred here for several years.

Senator Quay Calls Upon McKinley.

CANTON, O., May 23.—Senator Quay was met at the depot at 10:25 by Gov. McKinley and several Canton friends. Quay was accompanied by Attorney Brown, of Lancaster. The meeting was extremely cordial. The party drove at once to the McKinley home where the senator spent all the time he was in Canton. Except that he came for a friendly visit, Senator Quay would say nothing as to his trip. He left here at 1:21 for Beaver, having reversed his original plan of going there first. At the McKinley home the usual rule of silence was observed.

FARM VILLAGES IN AMERICA.

A Plan That Will Make Rural Life More Attractive.

Hon. John Bookwalter, of New York, a large land owner in Nebraska, Illinois and Ohio, proposes a plan to make life on the farm more attractive and perhaps to make farm work more remunerative. His idea was obtained from observations in the rural districts of France and Switzerland, and may be productive of much good. It is simply, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch, to concentrate the rural population in villages of 300 to 5,000 persons, to give them the advantages of social life and modern luxuries and amusements. Mr. Bookwalter will begin on a 60,000-acre tract he owns in Nebraska, and proposes to organize a town which is to have a theater, music hall, library and other advantages for amusement and instruction.

In France, as is well known, the rural population is grouped in villages, the farms radiating in narrow strips from the towns in the center. Mr. Bookwalter claims nothing new for his idea, but thinks the French villages may be improved upon in this rich, new country, where large acreage may be laid out with the village idea, instead of growing by subdivision. There is no doubt the centering of population in this way would add greatly to the attractiveness of life on the farm. The social contact is one of the chief attractions of the city. Neither can there be much doubt that such community of the rural population would give it greater influence in state and national affairs, in legislation and administration. It would naturally lead to better sanitary conditions, to conveniences, to police and fire protection that are now lacking in the widely-separated farmhouses, and all this without detracting from the advantages of rural surroundings, such as trees, flowers and the supply of the best and freshest that the garden, dairy, orchard and farm can produce.

That

Extreme tired feeling afflicts nearly everybody at this season. The hustlers cease to push, the tireless grow weary, the energetic become enervated. You know just what we mean. Some men and women endeavor temporarily to overcome that

Tired

Feeling by great force of will. But this is unsafe, as it pulls powerfully upon the nervous system, which will not long stand such strain. Too many people "work on their nerves," and the result is seen in unfortunate wrecks marked "nervous prostration," in every direction. That tired ing is a positive proof of thin, weak, impure blood; for if the blood is rich, red, vitalized and vigorous, it imparts life and energy to every nerve, organ and tissue of the body. The necessity of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for that tired feeling is, therefore, apparent to every one, and the good it will do you is equally beyond question. Remember that

HOLMES' RIVAL.

Rev. Francis Hermann, of Salt Lake City, Comes to the Front.

He Has a Record of Crime Little Less Than the Notorious Multimurderer.

No Less Than Seven Murders Are Laid at the Door of the Reverend Gentleman —He Also Confessed to Embezzling Church Funds—Villain at Large.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 25.—Further developments in the Scandinavian church tragedy in this city lead to the belief that Rev. Francis Hermann is a man with a record of crime little less than the notorious Holmes. His first wife died in England under suspicious circumstances. He was pastor of a Scandinavian church at West Superior, Wis., in 1890 and 1891, and there married a highly respectable lady, who in less than a year died very suddenly with her two weeks old baby. An inquest was held, but nothing beyond a suspicion of foul play was elicited. Hermann soon married again and came to Salt Lake in 1894 with his wife. Before long a baby was born and the mother and child died suddenly a few weeks after.

Then his acquaintance with Miss Clawson commenced and it is charged in the complaint which has been sworn to by John Sanson, a member of the church here, that he murdered and cremated the body in the heating furnace in the church basement.

He was engaged to marry Miss Samuelson in February of this year, but she disappeared and it is charged that he poisoned her after seducing her and carved up the body in the church cellar. As far as yet discovered it is believed he has murdered seven persons. Miss Clawson came to Salt Lake from Omaha seven years ago. She was a native of Sweden and as far as known had no relation in this country, but she had many friends here and was considered a respectable girl. Miss Samuelson was employed as a nursery governess in a family here, and left her place to be married to the preacher. She has an aunt and other relatives living here and was a member of Hermann's church. The church officers say that Hermann was suspended recently for embezzling church funds, confessed his guilt in that regard and was waiting a hearing before the annual Methodist conference. He was a fine looking man and very generally liked. He is represented as having a great liking for the study of medicine, anatomy and kindred subjects, and often delivered disquisition on the human form.

The Scandinavian church, where the murders of Miss Clausen and Miss Samuelson took place, has been visited by large numbers of people ever since the horrible discovery was made known on Saturday.

No services were held in the church Sunday. The human remains, together with the garter buckle and belt buckle which were found in the furnace have been so identified that there is now no doubt but that they are those of Miss Clausen. One of the razors and the butcher knife also found in the furnace have been positively identified by Rev. Mork as the property of Rev. Francis Hermann, who is accused of the crime.

Miss Samuelson's watch and ring have been found in a pawn broker's shop where they were pledged by Mr. Hermann just before he left for Kansas. The police here have so far no further clue to the whereabouts of Hermann.

OIL LANDS

In the Osage Indian Reservation Leased to a West Virginia Company.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 25.—During the past week there has been consummated the biggest oil lease made in recent years. After negotiations extending through two years, the Phoenix Oil Co. of West Virginia has secured a long lease on land in the Osage Indian reservation, comprising over 1,800,000 acres. Arrangements have been made to begin sinking wells at once. A few months ago the Osage Indian council finally gave assent to the lease and the contract was prepared and executed after the Indian affairs department at Washington had been consulted and the Indians assured a royalty on the output of any wells that might be struck. The president is N. G. Rend, of Boston, and Elvin B. Foster, of New York, is secretary. The company will maintain an office in New York city, one at Buffalo and the headquarters of the operations will be at Pawhuska, I. T.

Disastrous Cloudburst in Iowa.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., May 25.—A terrible cloudburst between this city and State Center swept away nearly a mile of Chicago and Northwestern tracks, doing great damage to growing crops and other property. Linn creek, a small stream flowing through the southern portion of Marshalltown suddenly became a rampant river. Bridges were swept away and large piles of lumber were carried down the stream. Only small buildings were wrecked, but the damage to property will be considerable.

New Railway Line.

SANTA FE, N. M., May 25.—The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Co. will Monday start a surveying corps west from Whitewater, Grant county, to run a line to Phoenix, Ariz., with a view to building an independent Pacific coast line in case it fails to buy the Atlantic and Pacific at the foreclosure sale July 8. A line from Victor, Cal., to Ashfork, Ariz., has already been surveyed.

A Jealous Husband's Deeds.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 25.—Joseph Kohuke, a well to do farmer near Trinagular lake, in Torrence township, set fire to his residence and barns, and killed himself by firing the load from a shotgun through his head, his body being partly consumed in one of the burning barns. Kohuke was insanely jealous of his wife.

NEW DYNAMITE GUN.

It is Claimed That it Will Revolutionize Coast Defenses.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—D. M. Hefford, of Toledo, the inventor of the original pneumatic dynamite gun, with the later development of which Lieut. E. L. Zalinski, U. S. A., had some part, is here to take out patents on an improved pneumatic gun which he believes will revolutionize coast defenses.

"With 1,000 pounds pressure to the square inch," said he, "I can throw a 15-inch shell, loaded with 500 pounds of high explosives, a distance of six miles. A battery of such guns will make New York harbor impregnable. No man-of-war can be constructed which can withstand the shock of such an explosion. Remember that while the best 13-inch guns have a range of 10 to 12 miles, their effective range against heavy armor is less than six miles, and they can hardly be said to have any effective range at all against properly constructed coast defenses.

"The pneumatic guns now at Sandy Hook are only limited successes. Their range is too short. A fleet of ironclads could stand off out of their range and in time silence them. Zalinski has failed to solve the problem which I claim to have solved. He gets his pressure all right, but in delivering air into the breech of his gun on the oblique lines he gets a 'cycloric action.' In my improved gun that is avoided, the air pressure is directed upon the shell."

Mr. Hefford has submitted his plans to Gen. Miles and to the committees on military affairs and fortifications. He is confident that the government will give his new gun an exhaustive trial.

THE MILLERS.

Their Fourth Annual Convention in Session at Cleveland, O.

CLEVELAND, O., May 21.—The fourth annual convention of the United Wheat Millers' league at the Hollenden Wednesday afternoon was the most largely attended in the history of the organization.

"The New Export Bill of Lading" was the subject of a paper read by C. H. Lane, of the Cleveland Milling Co. M. P. Davis, of Shelby, O., president of the league, followed with a paper on reciprocity.

Thomas A. Taylor, of Toledo, spoke of the need of a "Department of Commerce" in the executive branch of the government. "The Consular Service of the United States" was the subject of J. M. Turner, of Akron, O.

W. C. Edgar, of Minneapolis, read a paper on the trade press, and John J. McCann, of Nashville, Tenn., on "Poetry in Milling." "Sales and Contracts" was treated by D. F. Griffith, of Orrville, O. Hon. Chas. A. Pillsbury, president of the National Milling association, spoke of the "Advantages of Millers' Organizations." The convention will end with the night session.

At the late session the league passed a resolution to ask congress to re-enact the reciprocity bill. The league denounced the new export bill of lading. Chas. H. Davis, of Shelby, O., was chosen president.

VESSEL ON FIRE.

The British Steamer Horsa Arrives at Southport, N. C., in Distress.

WILMINGTON, N. C., May 21.—The British steamer Horsa, with a cargo of pineapples and bananas from Jamaica May 1[illegible] New York, arrived Wednesday afternoon at Southport, in distress, having been on fire, and is completely gutted from stem to midships. Capt. McIntosh, who brought [illegible] Southport, reports that on the 18th inst. Capt. Cook, the master, was missed between three and four o'clock a. m., and it is supposed he fell overboard. Capt. McIntosh, who was first mate, says the Horsa left Port Morant, Jamaica, on the 13th inst. with a full cargo and crew of 20 men. At six o'clock p. m. on the 16th a cry of fire was raised. All hands were mustered and went to work to extinguish the flames, but after an hour and a half's work the heat was unbearable on deck and Capt. Cook ordered all hands to the boats. The crew lay by until six a. m. on the 17th, when the inflammable part of the ship had been consumed. All hands were ordered on board again and after hard work succeeded in extinguishing the fire and she was brought into Southport.

When asked about the Horsa's last expedition to Cuba, Capt. McIntosh refused to talk.

DEAD BABIES.

The Famous Mayfield Quintet May Cause a Lawsuit.

PADUCAH, Ky., May 21.—The famous Lyon quintuplets are liable to get into the courts. Dr. Matthews, of Mayfield, who has arranged to exhibit the bodies of the five children, tried to get them from Undertaker Nance, of this city, Wednesday night, but the latter declined to deliver them until he had been paid $500 for embalming them. Mathews thought this too steep and will bring suit for delivery. Nance, it is said, wants to exhibit the ghastly wonders himself.

Kentucky "Good Time" Law.

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 21.—M. M. Britton a Pulaski county convict, brought habeas corpus proceedings to secure his release and for a construction of the "good time" law. He entered the penitentiary when the five day law was in force, but claims his release under the new law, which allows seven days off of each calendar month for good behavior.

For Tillman and Free Silver.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 21.—The state democratic convention met at noon Wednesday in the state capitol. The attendance was very large. Senator Irby, as state chairman, called the convention to order. S. A. Patterson was made permanent chairman. He spoke in favor of free silver. The platform will be anti-Cleveland, and will favor free silver coinage. A resolution calling on the democrats of South Carolina to vote for Tillman for president, was received with cheers. A resolution of sympathy with the Cuban patriots was also cheered.

A FORECAST

Of Business to Be Transacted in Congress This Week.

The General Deficiency Bill Likely to Be Pushed Through the Senate.

The Butler Anti-Bond Bill Will Probably Come to a Vote—The "Filled Cheese" Bill—Six of the Great Appropriation Bills Are Now Laws.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The senate committee on appropriations is surprised at the headway it has been able to make in the matter of pushing its bills through the senate. Of the 15 great annual budgets, all have now passed the senate but the general deficiency bill, and Mr. Hale, in charge of that measure, has given notice that he will call it up Monday. It is unusual for this bill to be reported so far in advance of the generally accepted date of adjournment, it being catch-all for appropriations and deficiencies that can not be got in until the last minute. Owing to the rapidity with which this bill has been acted upon it may become necessary before adjournment to pass a small urgent deficiency measure covering items that the treasury may yet call to the attention of congress. It is expected that an agreement will be reached that will result in a vote on the Butler anti-bond bill either Monday or Tuesday. The "filled cheese" bill which Mr. Sherman is urging is in "parlous" shape, owing to numerous proposed amendments. Now that the house has acted on the immigration measures before it, Mr. Lodge, of Massachusetts, will seek to pass one of the measures through the senate, so that out of the many conflicting plans some law may be secured that will remedy what are held to be existing evils in our present immigration statutes.

Six of the great appropriation bills are now laws—one, the agricultural, without the president's approval. The Indian bill has been agreed to with the exception of four items, the most important of which is that relating to appropriations for sectarian schools. The final report on the legislative bill was agreed to by the house Saturday, but the senate has not acted upon it. There has been no conference on the post office bill up to this time. When that occurs there will undoubtedly be a struggle between the two houses on the question of the subsidies authorized by the senate. The naval bill has been agreed to with the exception of the senate reduction in the number of battle ships, the provisions as to the price to be paid for armor plate and the prohibition of the employment by government contractors of Naval officers on leave. It is thought that the agreement will finally result in three new battleships as a compromise between the four authorized by the house and the two authorized by the senate.

Another partial report on the sundry civil bill was agreed to Saturday and one more conference will doubtless get this la[illegible] way. The District of Columbia and the fortifications bills are in conference.

The river and harbor bill awaits the president's approval or veto or nonaction.

The leaders of the house expect that congress will reach a final adjournment [illegible] two weeks from Monday, which will be June 8.

FOUR BURNED TO DEATH

And One Injured for Life by the Explosion of a Gasoline Stove.

CHICAGO, May 25.—Four people were burned to death and one injured for life by a fire which occurred Sunday morning at 148 Townsend street. At that number lived Otto Malm, a carpenter, with his wife and three children.

At eight o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Malm was preparing breakfast on a gasoline stove when the gasoline exploded and set fire to the building. The structure was of wood and the family were all on the second floor in bed with the exception of Mrs. Malm. The fire spread rapidly and cries of agony from the burning people was the first warning that outsiders had of the fire. Before the fire department responded to an alarm Otto Malm, the father, was burned to death. The children, Otto, aged eight, Allen, aged three, Hilya, aged six, were taken out alive but died a few hours later at the hospital. Mrs. Malm will recover.

NON-EFFECTIVE.

Bishop Taylor, the Venerable African Missionary, So Declared.

It Was Decided by the Committee That the Methodist Church Could No Longer Trust Its Work in Africa to a Man Who Was so Advanced in Age.

CLEVELAND, O., May 19.—Bishop John P. Newman presided at the session of the conference Monday.

Rev. Dr. Morris and A. B. Perkins, delegates from the church south, were presented to the conference. Dr. Morris is the gentleman who was ignored by the conference two weeks ago, and is now back that the conference may make amends. It was decided that no ballots should be taken until 10 a. m. on account of the absence of many delegates from the city. A great deal of time was consumed in an effort to exchange the discipline so as to do away with the leaders' and stewards' meetings. It was purposed by the committee on revisals to put their work on the official board. The objection raised was that the official board should not have anything to do with matters spiritual, but should attend strictly to temporal matters.

BISHOP C. C. M'CABE.

The report was adopted. The result of the ninth ballot was announced as follows: Necessary to choice, 334; H. A. Butts, 218; Earl Cranston, 236; C. C. McCabe, 238; J. W. E. Bowen, 17; T. B. Neeley, 57; J. W. Hamilton, 159.

CLEVELAND, O., May 20.—Bishop Bowman, the venerable senior bishop of the Methodist church, presided over the general conference probably for the last time Tuesday morning.

On the sixteenth ballot Rev. C. C. McCabe was elected a bishop, as follows: Necessary to a choice, 336; C. C. McCabe, 344; Earl Cranston, 328; H. A. Buttz, 112; J. W. Hamilton, 109; T. P. Neeley, 50; J. W. E. Bowen, 30.

Earl Cranston was elected bishop on the seventeenth ballot. The vote was: Necessary to a choice, 336; Earl Cranston, 366; H. A. Buttz, 82; J. W. Hamilton, 36; T. B. Neeley, 10; scattering, 10.

CLEVELAND, O., May 21.—Bishop Foster presided at the session of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church Wednesday morning. The feature of the session was the discussion of the amusement question.

Lewis Curts was elected on the first ballot as agent of the Western Book Concern, with headquarters at Cincinnati. He, with the other agent to be selected, will have charge of the Methodist book business at Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis.

A resolution was unanimously adopted, reciting that the sale of liquors in the national capital was a national disgrace, and asking in the name of 10,000,000 people that congress abolish the practice. The committee on state of the church drew the conference into an exciting discussion by recommending that the part of the discipline relating to specific amusements be not changed. Under the present law persons indulging in intoxicating liquors as a beverage, renting property to or becoming bondsmen for liquor dealers, dancing, playing at games of chance, attending theaters, horse races, and indulging in many other popular amusements, shall be expelled from the church, unless the offender exhibit real humiliation.

The conference, by an almost unanimous vote, refused to change the discipline on the subject of amusements.

CLEVELAND, O., May 22.—Bishop Merrill presided at Thursday's session of the general conference. The beginning of the end is at hand and a motion was adopted ordering that no more memorials or resolutions be sent to committees.

BISHOP EARL CRANSTON.

The two new bishops will be consecrated next Tuesday in Central Armory.

Rev. Dr. Morris, fraternal delegate from the church south, bid the conference good bye in a 15-minutes speech. He said that the two great churches should be united.

The table which has been used by the conference of the industrial school at Venice was auctioned off for the benefit of the Venice school. John E. Andrus paid $500 for the table. A. J. Kynet and W. A. Spencer were elected secretaries of the board of church extension on the first ballot. Rev. Dr. W. T. Smith, of Des Moines, was elected third secretary of the missionary society on the sixth ballot. The vote: W. T. Smith, 291; J. W. Hamilton, 205.

The report of the committee on Episcopal residences was read by Dr. Buckley. Boston and New York were made Episcopal residences. Then Cleveland was passed by.

The following is a list of the cities that will have Episcopal residences: Boston, New York, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Washington, D. C.; Chattanooga, New Orleans or Fort Worth, Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Topeka, Minnesota, Denver, San Francisco or Los Angeles.

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—Bishop Andrews, the senior bishop of the Methodist church, presided at Friday morning's session of the general conference. Portland, Ore., was selected as the place for the last of the Episcopal residences.

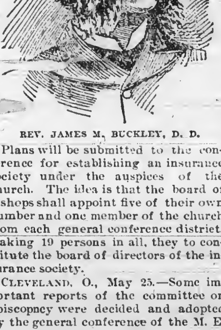
It was decided after much discussion that the bishops should select their places of residence in the order of seniority. Bishop Goodsell was granted a leave of absence in order to go to Europe on a tour of inspection. He will look after the consolidation of the two churches in Germany.

A memorial to 32 different nations and rulers on the subject of arbitration was adopted. When the election of Dr. Buckley as editor of the Christian Advocate was announced the delegates and galleries gave him an ovation. It was fully five minutes before the house could be quieted. Dr. C. W. Smith, of Pittsburgh; Dr. Levi Gilbert, of the First church, Cleveland, and Rev. Dr. Muller, presiding elder of North Ohio conference, were placed in nomination for editor of the Pittsburgh Advocate. The last two named represented two different factions in local church circles, and are not on very good terms personally. Dr. Muller withdrew.

C. W. Smith was elected on the first ballot. The vote: C. W. Smith, 376; Rev. Dr. Gilbert, 66.

The following officers were elected: Secretary of the Sunday-school Union and Tract society, Merritt Hulburd, of Wilmington; secretary of the board of education, Charles H. Payne, of Cincinnati; editor of the Methodist Review, W. V. Kelly, of New York; editor of the Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley, of New York; editor of the Western Christian Advocate, David H. Moore, of Cincinnati; editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, Arthur Edwards, of Chicago; editor of the Central Christian Advocate, Jesse Bowman Young, of St. Louis; editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, C. W. Smith; editor of the North Christian Advocate, J. O. C. Sawyer, of Syracuse; editor of the California Christian Advocate; W. S. Matthews, of San Francisco; editor of the Apologist, Dr. A. J. Nast, of Cincinnati.

The amusement question will again come up in the Methodist general conference. The committee on judiciary has adopted a report declaring the section of the discipline relating to amusements unconstitutional. A majority report will be presented.



REV. JAMES M. BUCKLEY, D. D.

Plans will be submitted to the conference for establishing an insurance society under the auspices of the church. The idea is that the board of bishops shall appoint five of their own number and one member of the church from each general conference district, making 19 persons in all, they to constitute the board of directors of the insurance society.

CLEVELAND, O., May 25.—Some important reports of the committee on episcopacy were decided and adopted by the general conference of the M. E. church Saturday morning. Bishop Warren, of Denver, presided.

Rev. Dr. Buckley, chairman of the committee on episcopacy, presented a report saying that it had carefully examined into the charges preferred by Rev. Dr. A. C. Bowdish against Bishops Fowler, Fitzgerald and Warren. The charges of Dr. Bowdish were that during the annual conference of the New York east conference in the spring of 1894 he was transferred without his judgmet or consent by Bishop Fowler to the New England conference, and he was told at the time by Bishop Fowler that Bishop Fitzgerald would take good care of him. By reason of the transfer, Rev. Mr. Bowdish said, he was thrown out of an appointment for 11 months, during which time he was at great expense.

The report exhonerated the bishops. It was adopted.

Bishop William Taylor, missionary bishop to Africa, was declared non-effective.

Dr. Buckley, in presenting the report, said that the committee had carefully gone into the retirement of Bishop Taylor and it had decided that the Methodist church could no longer trust its work in Africa in the hands of a man so old. It was a hard thing to do, he said, but it must be done.

Bishop Taylor objected to his retirement, but no attempt was made to prevent it on the floor. He was recommended to the generous consideration of the book concern. The discussion of the report of the committee on episcopacy, recommending additional missionary Bishops, was further participated in by Dr. A. J. Kiunet, of Philadelphia. He said that the great work of the church in foreign lands demanded more bishops.

Dr. Payne, of Cincinnati, opposed the report. He thought that the only solution of the problem was on the establishment of foreign Episcopal residences. "The matter of expense," he said, "should cut no figure. It does not cost any more for a full bishop to travel than a half one."

The committee on episcopacy of the general conference has decided to recommend the election of a missionary bishop for South America and an additional missionary bishop for India.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

First Session.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—SENATE.—The Cuban question was revived Saturday when Mr. Morgan (Ala.), who reported the original resolutions, spoke in favor of further and more decisive action toward the recognition of the Cubans as belligerents. The senator declared it to be the duty of congress to adopt joint resolutions on belligerency, which, unlike the previous concurrent resolutions, would require the approval of the president, and thus fix responsibility. At the close of his speech the senate adopted, without division, the resolutions introduced by him, directing the committee on foreign relations to inquire into, and report on the treaty relations between the United States and Spain relating to the Americans now under condemnation at Havana, also requesting the president for the recent diplomatic correspondence with Spain on this subject.

HOUSE—Not in session Saturday.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—SENATE—The senate Monday, by a vote of 6 yeas to 41 nays, defeated a motion by Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.) to proceed with the consideration of the resolution to investigate alleged election irregularities in Alabama, occurring at the time Gov. Oates was elected over R. F. Kolb, populist. With this flurry over, the senate took up the bill relating to the price of gas in the District of Columbia, and spent the rest of the day in its consideration. The senate committee on judiciary ordered a favorable report on the nomination of Pension Commissioner Lochren to be United States district judge of Minnesota.

HOUSE—The immigration bills were crowded out Monday, as the house had other work on hand. Bills were passed to expedite the delivery of imported goods in parcels and packages not exceeding $500 in value; to provide for the registration of trade marks on bottles, barrels, corks and other receptacles used in inter-state and foreign commerce; to incorporate the Ancient Society of Colonial Dames of America, and for the general distribution of condemned cannon by the secretary of war and secretary of the navy.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—SENATE—The senate gave its attention Tuesday almost exclusively to the District of Columbia appropriation bill, which was reported from the appropriation committee, appropriating about seven million dollars, of which about one-half comes from the treasury of the United States and the other half from the taxes collected by the district commissioner. The only two general appropriation bills remaining to be acted upon by the senate are the fortification bill and the deficiency bill. The senate at 6 p. m. adjourned until Wednesday.

HOUSE—The house passed the resolution reported by the committee on Election, No. 1, confirming the title of W. C. Owens, (dem.) to the seat he occupies as a representative from the Seventh district of Kentucky, which had been contested by George Denny, jr., (rep.). Messrs. Steele (rep., Ind.), Cousins (rep., Ia.) and McClelland (dem., N. Y.) were appointed visitors on the part of the house to the military academy of West Point. Nearly all the day was taken up by argument upon the several bills reported from the committee on immigration and naturalization to impose additional restrictions upon immigrants.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—SENATE—The last but one of the appropriation bills—the one which provides fortifications and other works of defense—occupied the attention of the senate Wednesday and was passed before adjournment. It carries nearly $11,000,000—about $5,000,000 more than it carried when it passed the house. The principal item of increase is one of $3,115,000 for gun and mortar batteries. Earlier in the day a conference report on the rivers and harbors bill was presented by Mr. Frye, of Maine, and an effort was made by him to get immediate action on it. That was resisted by Mr. Bacon, of Georgia, who had learned that the appropriation for the harbor of Brunswick, Ga., had been struck out in conference and who wanted time to argue the matter before the senate.

HOUSE—The house disposed of the immigration question Wednesday by passing the McCall educational bill, together with the Corliss bill, intended to protect the lake cities from Canadian competition. The latter was agreed to—121 to 45—and the amended bill was passed—195 to 26. A record of the vote by yeas and nays was refused, only 36 members rising to second the dem[illegible] by Mr. Fitzgerald (dem., Mass.) therefor. The consular pension bill, proposed by Mr. W. A. Stone (rep., Pa.) was rejected—73 to 131. He too was una[illegible] record. President Cleveland's message, vetoing the bill to pension Lydia A. Taft, the divorced widow of a deceased soldier, was referred. At 4:50 the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON, May 22—SENATE—A favorable committee report was Thursday made in the senate on house bill to grant an honorable discharge to Refus Betz, Ninth Ohio. Mr. Brice presented to the senate a memorial of the Toledo (O.) produce exchange, remonstrating against the passage by congress of any measure tending to relax the legal restraints of the interstate commerce commission; also, a memorial of the Civil Engineers' club of Cleveland, O., praying for the passage of a bill providing for the establishing of engineering experiment stations in connection with colleges in the several states.

HOUSE—So much of the time of the house was occupied Thursday in considering the president's veto of a bill to pension Francis E. Hoover, a private in the Sixty-fourth O. V. I., that the time for debate on the Phillips commission bill was extended until Friday at four o'clock. The bill provides for the appointment by the president of a nonpartisan commission of 21, seven representatives from labor, agriculture and business, to collect information and consider and recommend legislation to meet the problems presented by labor, agriculture and capital.

WASHINGTON, May 23—SENATE—An important and spirited debate took place in the senate Friday on the bill introduced several months ago by Mr. Butler (N. C.), prohibiting the issue of government bonds without the consent of congress. Mr. Hill spoke for nearly three hours in condemnation of the measure as an act of repudiation; and it was also denounced in most emphatic terms by Senators Sherman (O.), Hawley (Ct.), Lodge (Mass.), Baker (Kan.); while it was defended and advocated by Senators Mills (Tex.), George (Miss.), Clark (Wy.), Teller (Col.), Allen (Neb.), and Stewart (Nev.).

HOUSE—The Phillips labor commission bill, which was to have come to a vote in the house Friday under the special order, was crowded out by the conference reports on the river and harbor and sundry civil bills. The conferees reported on the river and harbor bill an agreement on all the items save that relating to the Santa Monica and San Pedro harbors, California. Mr. Hooker's motion to adopt the conference report was agreed to, 189 to 56. The speaker reappointed Messrs. Hooker, Herman and Catchings conferees. Mr. Cannon followed with the conference report on the sundry civil appropriation bill. It was defeated, 89 to 150. Conferees on the fortification appropriation bill were appointed. The evening session was devoted to pensions.

Ex-City Treasurer Bolln's Case.

OMAHA, Neb., May 22.—The supreme court has suspended the 19 year sentence of Ex-City Treasurer Bolln and fixed his bail at $5,000, pending the review of the case.

Granted a Divorce.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Louis Gaston Gottschalk, the noted composer, was granted a divorce from his wife, Louise B. Gottschalk, by Judge Gibbons Friday, on the grounds of desertion. The suit was not contested. Mrs. Gottschalk is living in New York with her two grown children.

A Vigorous Campaign.

PARIS, Ky., May 23.—"Sound money" democrats have effected an organization here, electing Henry Spears chairman and A. T. Forsyth, secretary. [illegible]mittees were appointed and a vigorous campaign decided upon.

The private school taught by Miss Quisenberry closed last Friday, and seldom has this community been more entertained than by the exercises held by her class at the residence of J. A. Huey.

The instrumental solos played by Misses Bertha Baker and Sarah Kennedy show skill and taste, and Miss Quisenberry delighted the audience with her sweet voice in an exquisite rendering of "Jesus Lover of my Soul."

Misses Nannie Dickerson and Sarah Kennedy debated the question: Affirmed—"That men make circumstances," and their papers were so thoughtful, and convincing, that it was decided that both were right.

Master Joseph Huey declaimed "Antony's Oration over the dead body of Ceasar," in so fine and impressive a manner, that his hearers declared a brilliant future for him as an orator.

Miss Bertha Baker delivered the valedictory so beautiful and tender a farewell that the hearts of all present were touched while bidding farewell to their teacher. The pupils have some hopes of her return to them next fall, from her home among the classic mountains of Virginia.

After the exercises closed we were invited to partake of a most elegant luncheon provided by the parents of the pupils, and thus was most pleasantly closed a term of school during which the pupils and teacher have done faithful work.

Those present were Mrs. John Baker, Mrs. C. P. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Conner, Mrs. John Garrison, Mrs. Oscar Huey, Mrs. Lizzie Huey, Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Huey, Mrs. L. B. The Petersburg and Lawrenceburg ball teams played an interesting game at Lawrenceburg, the score being 16 to 13 in favor of the latter.

Limaburg.

The Hebron boys have organized a base ball club, and it will be in the field in the near future.

Lewis Beemon caught a young, white coon a few days ago.

Milton Beemon and wife, of Pleasant Hill, were visiting at Henry Clore's Sunday.

James W. Utz, was the first one in this neighborhood to set out tobacco.

Quite a number attended the birthday dinner given by Angus Tanner and wife on the 21st.

Ezra Rouse was the first to put strawberries on the Burlington market.

John Poston is building a new kitchen.

The lightning struck the rod on Joe Brown's barn Monday. No damage was done.

This section was visited by a heavy rain, Monday, washing out crops and roads, doing a great deal of damage. The creek was past fording here.

Those who had concluded that it would never rain again were disappointed.

Beaver.

The rains, the last week, have put quite a different appearance on the outlook in this neighborhood.

The farmers are generally done setting tobacco in this section. The Sleet Bros. have 80 acres set.

Died on the 19th inst., Mrs. A. R. Underhill. The remains were buried at Hughes Chapel. Rev. Hoffman conducted the service.

Died, Mrs. Roda Justice, on the 20th. Her remains were the first to be buried in the new cemetery at Beaver.

Rev. Harney closed his meeting at Big Bone M. E. Church, Sunday morning with 5 additions. He drew large crowds and the people were well pleased with his preaching.

If Gen. Hardin has declared that he will bolt the Chicago convention if a free silver platform is not adopted, he is not the Democrat his friends have always considered him to be. The Democrats are slow to believe the charge, except those who want it to be so.

Turn out, Saturday, Democrats. The country's condition interests you.

About the handsomest and most substantial monument in the Big Bone cemetery is that erected on Joseph A. Huey's lot by F. W. Kassebaum & Son, of Aurora. It is certainly a very handsom piece of work, artistically executed.

The mass meeting here next Saturday bids fair to be a lively one. Both sides of the money question will have a large delegation on hand, and a lively tussel for supremacy in the convention will be the result if the forces are pretty evenly divided.

The sugar-coating on Ayer's Pills not only makes them easy to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity to an indefinite period. It dissolves immediately after reaching the stomach and thus permits the full effect of the physic to be speedily realized.

Viola Lodge I. O. O. F., had a very interesting meeting last Saturday night, attended by about 35 brethren. Five candidates were initiated. Among the brethren present were two who have been Odd Fellows, Bro. Hewitt, for 38 years, and Bro. J. W. Kite, for over 33 years.

J. M. Lassing was called to Big Bone last Wednesday to prosecute Thos. Ross and Joe Story for interrupting religious worship, by running a pig down the church aisle during services. The jury imposed a fine of $50 and 20 days in jail on Ross. The Constable had released Ross on his own recognizance and he was not present at the trial. Story was released.

Wm. Rogers, of Walton, was tried at Walton, last Friday before Judge Stephens and a jury, for lunacy. The jury returned a verdict under which Rogers would have to be sent to the Asylum, and Judge Stephens set aside the verdict, and ordered a new trial for next Monday. A maiden aunt with whom Rogers has lived for 20 years, desires to keep him at home, hence the action of the Judge.

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions will hold their annual District Convention, this year, at Point Pleasant Church on June 4th, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m. Mrs. W. S. Keene, State President, and Miss Susie Sublette, State Secretary, will assist Mrs. George Montgomery, District President, in the work of the convention. Dinner will be served on the grounds. Come one, come all.

The Sunday School Convention of the North Bend Association, decided recently, to hold their convention with the church at Burlington on June 18th. But later, it was developed that the first date fixed would conflict with the Baptist State Convention, which necessitated a change. The committee then, after consultation with the Burlington church, changed the date, to one week earlier, and the next Sunday School Convention will be held at Burlington on Thursday, June 11th. An interesting program will be arranged.

Dr. W. B. Grubbs submits the following as corrections of some inaccuracies, caused by the printer, in his article of last week:

"I question, with unlimited coinage of silver, redeemable, whether we could sustain the parity of 16 to 1. But by giving silver an unit of value, and irredeemable, I think that the ratio of 16 to 1 could be maintained with unlimited coinage.

"If international action could vary the value of silver or gold even to a small degree, the argument for intrinsic value is clearly set aside. If the intrinsic value argument is good, then international agreement would be futile."

Ready for the Jury.

Walton, Ky., May 21, 1896.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The arguments are all in.

Now for the plea before the jury—the people.

When the late civil revolution broke out (our northern friends called it rebellion), the Government, in order to conduct operations that became stupendous, issued bonds to raise money, and notes, called greenbacks from their color, as a circulating medium.

The situation was desperate—money lenders would not buy bonds, save at a heavy discount; and though the greenbacks were a legal tender, it took two or three dollars in currency to make a gold dollar.

With the success of the Union the greenbacks appreciated, but gold continued to command a fluctuating premium.

This was during the periods of war and reconstruction. The Government, from '65 to '78, when it succeeded, endeavored to make greenbacks worth their face value. Meanwhile, through these years, trade was disturbed, financial panics were frequent, and gold remained in Europe.

The resumption of specie payment rehabilitated the greenback, and the masses were protected; but the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act; the issuing of bonds in the of time profound peace, under a too liberal constrution, paying gold when the law said "coin" has placed the toiling millions again at the mercy of the money changer. The knife of the capitalist and monopolist is again at the throat of the Government, by what means I know not, to cheat its creditors, the people.

First, the pledge that greenbacks should be exchangeable with bonds, was broken.

Secondly, debts originally payable in paper, as Sherman openly confessed in the Senate, were made payable in gold.

Thirdly, silver was demonetized, and gold made the only tender, and Fourthly, and most infamously, because the powers were supposed to be the friends of the people, issued bonds to cover the fraud, and make Democracy a laughing stock and by-word.

Carlisle's logic seems fair, but it does not cover the facts. On paper it is all right, but among the suffering and downtrodden it is all wrong.

This nation is large enough to be considered separately from another. Internal industry is diversified. Other elements must be considered beside the mere sordid question of wealth.

Nations trans-Atlantic have about gained the whole world by the aid of sycophant American time servers, and may lose their own souls; certainly their washed out carcasses if this infamy goes on. Theorizing is a pleasing past time, and by them difficulties become beautifully ephemeral were it not for the facts, the condition.

Mr. Carlisle, as he thinks, argues from an abstract principle. Does he? Even admitting such is the case, abstract principles must be studied conjointly with existing conditions; causation taken as a starter.

Any boy can see an abstract proposition. Can he appreciate it relatively? Wisdom consists in perceiving, when human nature grown drunk with power and greed can and do make exceptions to abstract truths, sequentially made profitable by traitors. That faculty is wisdom—all else is tinsel or selfish Internal Revenue sophism.

The revenue contingent, "slenderly furnished with Greek and Latin but marvelously steeped in ignorance of life and public affairs, and delightfully satisfied with their per diem, anxious to please their masters at the expense of love of country, are flooding the nation with pitiful arguments for sound money, socalled, and asking for harmony at a ratio against them of about 22 to 1.

If all the world were under one law and every man was raised to the level of that matchless doctrine: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," monometallism would be easy and charming. But while nations are continually striving to take any mean advantage of eachother—the capitalist living upon the labor of the producer by and through vicious legislation—our hope, our only hope is an aggressive fight for equal rights under the constitution. Put none on duty but fearless, faithful soldiers. The watch-word should be, "a national currency to meet the demands of business—its issue based upon and secured by patriotism and national wealth.
G. F. Gaines.

Base Ball.

A very interesting game of ball was played here last Saturday afternoon between the local team and the Bartletts of Cincinnati. Brady had the visitors at his mercy, and not a hit is recorded against him, while on the other hand the Burlington team had three singles and one double, and they were scattered. Here is the score:

MERCER COUNTY LETTER.

Harrodsburg, Ky., May 15, 1896.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The Recorder comes to us a weekly, welcome visitor, teeming with interest relative to persons and places (hallowed by memories of the past), where we were once sojourners.

The joys of the birth and bridal with the sadness of the tomb, comes to us with ever varying effects on the senses.

We have been made doubly sorrowful, recently, in reading in your paper of the demise of two of my oldest [illegible] best tried friends, J. S. Huey and Hampton Adams.

They were men of the staunchest type of purity and noblest citizenship—men upon whom any friend could surely count in the darkest hour of trial.

Their lives will ever be an incentive to virtue. Their actions were always based upon the loftiest principles, and were void of fear.

The loss of such men to family, relatives, friends and society, is incalculable.

It was my good fortune, in my early professional life, to have the sires of these deceased friends (among others gratefully remembered) as neighbors, friends and benefactors when I most needed help and encouragement. The woof and warp of their general make-up were calculated to make men better in their surroundings by their every day life. Possessed of two elements, decision of character and integrity of purpose, they ever commanded and wielded untold influence.

I was not unaware, before leaving Boone, that her people compared favorably with, not only any county in the State, but any section in the U. S. The more I move around, the more I am impressed with that homely adage, "It takes all sorts of people to make a world." I find duplicates of character in every community. This community is composed, largely, of intelligent, social and cultivated ladies and gentlemen.

We are suffering, like you, with an excessive spring drought. I hear that we have a good stand of corn, but that the condition of the small grain is deplorable.

I heard Gen. P. Wat Hardin make one of his characteristic speeches on the currency question. It was full of earnestness, erudition and sledge hammer blows. But continued discussions on either side are calculated to disintegrate the Democratic party. I am a Democrat regardless of either silver or gold—better, I think, than either Hardin or Blackburn, who jumped the fence at Louisville, and much better than either of the five legislators who kicked out of the Senatorial caucus. There are wigglers in both camps, and that is what is the matter with Hannah. The party in Mercer is split all to atoms on this root of evil.
W. H. Blanton.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Ollie Wene was at home from the city Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Jesse Kirkpatrick has been dangerously ill for several days.

J. B Berkshire and wife visited in Petersburg Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. Fizer closed the protracted meeting here last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Bell Pace, of Indianapolis, was visiting Mrs. W. L. Riddell the first of the week.

Dr. H. H. Hayes, of Bullittsville; and David Haley, of Walton, called on the Recorder Monday.

Mr. Charles Kemble and wife, of Greensburg, Indiana, were guests of Messrs. W. F. and Charles McKim, a day or two, last week.

Dr. J. H. Walton, after spending several weeks in Boone, left last Saturday morning for New York, where he will attend a special hourse of lectures.

Special to the Recorder:

The communication I had published in your paper, last week, was written in great haste, and I had not time to review it. I find in reading it as published, that I omitted something that I fully intended to incorporate in it.

I find, also, that I neglected to attach my signature to the manuscript. As it was a plea for harmony in our mass meeting, to be held in the near future, this neglect on my part might lead some to suspicion political trickery back of it. I have heretofore attached my name to all the communications I have sent you, and I assure you and your readers that it was altogether an oversight in this case.

I am perfectly sincere in the advocacy of harmony in the coming mass-meeting, and expect to make a five minutes speech upon the subject just before the meeting is called to order. I place the principles of Democracy above any policy or opinion of our own as to that policy, and I publicly proclaim that whatever the future of the Democratic party may be, it is my purpose, in the future, as in the past, to share its fortunes. I can conceive of nothing likely to happen in the future that would cause me to seek other political affiliations. I see a great deal more in Democracy than the mere currency question.
G. C. Graddy.

Someone has started the report that an entrance fee will be charged at the gate at the Odd Fellows' picnic on June 6th. This is a mistake—no entrance fee will be charged.

Notice—Parties for whom I did work and sold paper and paint to on credit, and who have persisted in owing me balances of $1 to $5 for five years, are kindly requested to leave the same with W. M. Rachal & Co., Union, Ky., by June 15th, 1896, so I can settle up.
Respectfully, P. T. Fall.

COMMISSIONER'S NOTICE.

Boone Circuit Court.
John L. Henderson, &c., Plffs.
Ada McMullen, &c., Defts.

Notice is hereby given that I will begin my sittings at the Circuit Clerk's office in Burlington, Ky., on the 15th day of June, 1896, to hear proof of claims, under the order of reference in the above styled cause and will adjourn from day to day (Sunday excepted) to the 25th day of July, 1896. All persons having claims against J.L.Henderson's estate will present them to me proven as by law required.

STATE CONVENTION.

Lexington, Ky., the Place and June 3d the Day.

County Conventions, May 30th, 1896.

The Democratic State Convention to select delegates to the Democratic National Convention will meet in Lexington, Ky., June 3d, 1896.

Each county and legislative district will be entitled to one delegate for each 200 votes cast at the last presidential election or gubernatorial election (the highest being taken as the basis) and one delegate for each fraction over 100 votes so cast.

For the purpose of selecting delegates to said State convention, mass meetings of the Democrats shall be held on the 30th day of May at 2 o'clock p. m., solar time, in each county at the county seats thereof, and in each legislative district in counties having more than one legislative district at such places therein as may be fixed by the respective chairman thereof; and at such mass meetings of the Democrats of each county and legislative district they shall choose the respective delegates that they are entitle to upon the above basis of representation to said State convention. The respective chairman of each County Democratic Executive Committee and of each legislative District Democratic Executive Committee shall issue due and proper notices for said mass meetings and respectively call said mass meetings to order when assembled, and see that said meetings are fairly and properly organized and that the delegates therefrom be fairly and properly chosen by the expressed will of the majority of Democrats attending said meetings, and also see that the duly chosen chairmen and secretaries of said meetings properly certify to the list of delegates so chosen, which certificates shall be approved and signed by the respective chairmen of the Democratic Executive Committees for each county and legislative district.

The Hero's Grave.

THE fair day passed, the sun was low;
I stood enwrapped in its fading light,
And the west was touched with its warmth and glow,
As it welcomed the balmy night.

As I stood by the road in my dream of joy,
I was touched by the muffled tone
Of the funeral drum, while the soldier boy
Was borne to his rest alone.

I followed the bier to the lonely grave,
With a heart that swelled with pride
For the deeds of the noble hero brave
Who for his country died.

And I gathered the lilies for his winding-sheet,
Made wreaths of the flowers that grew by the way,
And laid them down at the hero's feet,
This sad Memorial day.

And every year as the time goes by,
And the evening sun lights the western sky,
I gather the flowers that grow by the way,
And weave into garlands fragrant with life,
And go to the grave Memorial day,
To give him his laurels he won in the strife.

—Lydia B. Walsh, in Home and Country.

MEANEST MAN IN PLUNKETT.

“MORNING,” said Mr. Blodgett, with an upward jerk of the chin. “So you're the new schoolma'am, hey? Come to tell me 'bout some bad conduct of Sammy's. Well, if you've got any fault to find with my grandson, out with it. I'll back ye every time.” Mr. Blodgett, who was plowing, while Sammy helped him by guiding the horse, turned round to his grandson as he spoke.

“Oh, I assure you, Mr. Blodgett, Sammy behaves beautifully. I called on an entirely different errand. Probably Sammy has told you about the flag we want to buy.”

“No, he hain't.”

“Well,” said little Miss Stanton quickly, “we want to provide a flag for our schoolhouse. Nearly every schoolhouse in the country has one. And we want you to help us.”

“A flag! What for?” demanded Mr. Blodgett.

“Why, don't you think,” she spoke with surprise, “that the daily sight of their country's flag will make the pupils better children now, and better men and women by and by?”

“I do' know about that,” responded Mr. Blodgett. “There's lots of foolish notions running round loose nowadays, and this strikes me as one of 'em. Hoisting a flag and making a Fourth o' July out of all the three hundred and sixty odd days in the year! Stick to writing, reading and 'rithmetic, and let the flummeries be!”

Miss Stanton, too shrewd either to show dismay or to wrangle with the farmer, simply looked as if she were amazed at and pitied his sentiments.

“How much do you calculate to put out for the flag?” he asked, forced by her demeanor to doubt whether he had not put himself in the wrong.

“Oh, something like $40.”

“Whew-ew!” Mr. Blodgett whistled his astonishment. “And how much do you lay out for me to give?”

Miss Stanton had an instinctive knowledge that it is often judicious to ask for more than one expects. “Well, I should like it if you and Mr. Simpson would give me ten dollars each to start the ball rolling. The minister tells me you are one of the richest men in Plunkett, and Mr. David Simpson is the other. So I came out this Saturday to ask you two to help us get the flag.”

Mr. Blodgett gave a little jump toward his plow. “I guess you don't know much about Plunkett!” he gasped. “Dave Simpson, did you say? Dave Simpson! The meanest man in Plunkett! Skin a flea for its hide! Ten dollars! Him!”

He considered a moment. “Look a-here!” he said. “You go and see Dave Simpson. Tell him Bill Blodgett sent you. Don't leave that out. He will know what I mean—he and I were in the war together. Tell him you want a $40-dollar flag for Plunkett schoolhouse. And I'll match you, cent for cent, dollar for dollar, whatever you get out of Dave Simpson. Come! there's an offer for you.”

“Why, that's a splendid offer, sir!” said Miss Stanton, rather sarcastically. “Thank you, Mr. Blodgett. Good-by—thank you so much! Good-by, Sammy!”

“Well!” muttered Blodgett, chuckling, “I got out of that neat. Get up, Sammy.” And yet, he felt, uneasily, that he might have given a dollar to the flag.

Miss Stanton, somewhat discouraged, walked over to Mr. Simpson's place. The first glance at him reassured her. Holding his little grandchild, Polly, by the hand, he cordially inquired how she liked Plunkett, and put a great many other questions. She could not get in a word about the flag. She began to suspect a method in Mr. Simpson's volubility.

“And how is this naughty Polly carrying on?” he asked.

Miss Stanton smiled on the pair. “Have you told grandpa about our flag, Polly?”

Dave Simpson squared his shoulders. His amiable expression vanished. His pocket was attacked.

“Well,” he faltered, “I'm sorry to disobleege you—really—'specially as little Polly here wants it. But—but—well—you see, in the matter of contributions for flags and such things you mustn't look to me to help you out. Hope you ain't over-much disappointed,” he added.

“Oh, not overmuch, for Mr. Blodgett warned me in season,” smiled Miss Stanton.

“Bill Blodgett!” exploded Mr. Simpson. “What's he know about it? Bill Blodgett! That's a good one! I'll have you to know Bill Blodgett's the meanest man in Plunkett! Splits his coppers for the contribution-box! What are you laughing at?” he asked in an aggrieved tone.

“I was only thinking what Mr. Blodgett said,” she replied demurely. “He told me you are the meanest man in Plunkett.”

Mr. Simpson stared furiously. “I'll pay Bill Blodgett for that! What else did he say?”

Though his tone was fierce, Miss Stanton noted that little Polly was not at all alarmed; so she kept her own courage undaunted, and slowly, as if she was teaching a lesson to a very dull pupil, replied:

“Mr. Blodgett said to me: ‘You go see Dave Simpson, and I'll match you, cent for cent, dollar for dollar, whatever you get out of Dave Simpson!’ Now, what do you say, Mr. Simpson? Of course he reckoned you wouldn't give a cent.”

Mr. Simpson flushed with anger. “I say this!” he said, emphatically, “I'll give you ten dollars—ten dollars for Bill Blodgett to match. Yes! for the sake of seeing Bill Blodgett shell out, I'll give you—I'll give you—Polly, girl, we'll give a clean $20! ‘Cent for cent, dollar for dollar,’ says Bill Blodgett. Ha, ha, ha! It's as good as a circus. Simpson gives $20, Blodgett matches it. And Blodgett and Simpson hain't spoke for years. Blodgett and Simpson go halves on a $40 flag for Plunkett school-house. Ha! I guess I've got Bill Blodgett this time!”

“Got to!” replied Mr. Simpson. “One thing about Bill Blodgett, he never goes back on his word in a financial transaction.”

So the little schoolmistress went back to Mr. Blodgett. When she told him that Simpson had given her $20 he turned pale, and without a word went with her to the house, took two ten-dollar notes out of a cupboard, and gave them to her. She thanked him earnestly, but he said not a word in response.

“WHAT ELSE DID HE SAY?”

Miss Stanton kept the secret for a whole week. Then all Plunkett was stirred with the news, marveling much that Plunkett was to possess the flag, but more that it should be the gift of the two men whose stinginess and mutual animosity had become notorious.

Sammy Blodgett, almost bursting with pride, placed in Miss Stanton's hands a copy of the County Oracle, in which the wonderful fact was told. The item ended thus: “We congratulate Plunkett on the possession of such generous citizens as William Blodgett and David Simpson, men who, like brothers, fought to preserve our glorious union, and who, still of one heart in time of peace, unite to unfurl the starry banner for which they bled, to float in proud benediction over the heads of the young men and maidens of Plunkett.”

“Ain't it grand?” whispered Sammy.

“Wonderful!” she whispered back. It certainly was wonderful. Who could have written it? When she put this question to Mr. Simpson that worthy laughed uproariously.

Mr. William Blodgett did not take the joke so philosophically. He grew glummer of face and shorter of speech than ever. The neighbors trembled a little, not knowing what the matter might come to.

Dave Simpson became very much interested in the flag. It awakened all his old patriotism. He fell to telling war stories to Polly, and he could not keep Bill Blodgett out of them—Bill and he had been such inseparable comrades in arms. Then he and Miss Stanton held many consultations regarding the flag-raising.

“What do you do in Plunkett on Memorial day?” she asked, one morning, excitedly.

“Do? Nothing at all.”

“Well, we'll do something this year, Mr. Simpson,” said the determined little schoolmistress. “I can't, at this short notice, clear the graveyard, get up a procession and all that, but I can manage the children and the schoolhouse.”

“What'll you do?” he asked.

“Why, plenty of things! We'll fly our flag for the first time on Memorial day. We'll invite the parents, the school committee, the minister—in fact, the town. The children will sing. And we'll have speeches—yes, speeches, Mr. Simpson, from Plunkett's two noble benefactors.”

Mr. Simpson pooh-poohed vigorously at the last idea; nevertheless she saw he was pleased.

Arrangements were made for a celebration, and Mr. Blodgett was asked to make an address.

“I won't have anything to do with such tomfoolery!” he thundered. “Dave Simpson's made a big enough fool of me now.”

“I'm sorry you won't make a speech, sir,” said Miss Stanton. “But, anyway, I hope you'll let Sammy take a part in the celebration.”

“Well,” said Blodgett, ungraciously, “if he does, see to it that he speaks up good and loud.”

So Sammy was selected to speak a piece in his grandfather's place. He had very little oratorical gift. Miss Stanton struggled with him faithfully and diligently. Yet each time, after he slipped from her presence, he reappeared with the sing-song inflection and abominable emphasis that made her blood run cold. She could not understand these persistent relapses.

“Sammy,” she cried, in despair, “what shall I do with you, if you will not speak it as I teach you to?”

Sammy burst into tears. “I wisht there wasn't ever any Memorial day, nor any flag, nor anything. I wisht I was dead—so, there!”

“Why, what's the matter, Sammy?”

“Before I'm out of bed in the morning, gran'pa he's after me to speak my piece,” sobbed the boy. “And the same every noon and after school at night. And he stands me upon a rock down in the back pasture where nobody can see or hear, and he goes off to the other end, and I have to holler it at him. And I begin your way, and he says he'll lick me if I don't say it his way. And between you both—boohoo!”

Here was a revelation. Mr. Blodgett, for all his surly manner, had become interested in the celebration. It lent a touch of pathos to what would otherwise have been ludicrous.

“You poor dear!” she said, finally. “You shall not be bothered any more by me. Say it just as your grandfather wishes.”

So the daily coaching in the back pasture went on without interruption. The cows chewed their cuds; the sheep lifted their dull heads and were not wise enough to wonder, though occasion for wonder grew. For, marvel of marvels! Mr. Blodgett, after the elocution lessons, fell to telling war stories to his grandson.

This was the first common interest of their lives. Sammy felt he was finding a place in his grandfather's heart. How “good and loud” he would speak that hated piece, for payment!

Mr. Blodgett, in his turn, tried his utmost to keep Dave Simpson's name out of his reminiscences. He fought against it all the more because he was conscious of strange and tender renewal of his old friendship; but Dave's name crept into almost every tale.

So it came about that one day he blundered on the story of that time when Dave Simpson had saved his life at the peril of his own. Then he faltered and finally broke down. He had put the incident out of his heart and mind.

What good friends they had been—he and Dave! Either would have died for the other as readily as for the dear old flag. And now they were enemies, though the veterans of Plunkett—her only soldiers left!

He strove to become angry again.

“'Twas a mean thing for Dave to do, anyhow to ketch me up so!” he was growling, just when Sammy interrupted with a burst he had long repressed: “O, gran'pa! how I wisht I could see you dressed up like a soldier!”

The old man thought a moment. “Well, come along,” he said. He did not understand why he humored the boy. He was more of a mystery to himself than to Sammy.

“Sh! Sh!” Blodgett led the way to the dusky, cobwebbed garret. He took from the old chest a faded army coat, a soldier's cap, a knapsack and a musket.

“Sh! Sh!” As stealthily as they had ascended they crept down the stairs, and so, with their precious burden, to the secluded back pasture

Then Bill Blodgett, with an expression on his face that was new to Sammy, put on the battered blue, placed the cap above his thin, gray locks, adjusted the knapsack, shouldered the musket.

Now, indeed, thoughts of Dave Simpson crowded to the front. How proudly he and Dave had tramped away together in their army blue! Others had gone with them. Who had returned? Only himself and Dave. How they had cheered each other on the toilsome marches!

“Now, Sammy,” cried Blodgett, trembling with awkward earnestness, “I'll show ye how Dave and me used to—”

A twig snapped. A stone fell from the wall. The flock of frightened sheep went cantering the length of the pasture. With a ringing cry, Dave Simpson leaped the wall like a boy.

“Hold on, Billy! I'll drill ye.”

“Dave!”

“Attention! Present arms!”

Bill Blodgett obeyed the old words of command instantly, and with true soldierly gravity. Sammy's delighted heart nearly burst its bounds, betraying its excitement in every tense muscle When the drill was ended, a nervous silence ensued till Simpson broke it: “Say, Billy, let's wear the old uniform to the flag-raising to-morrow.”

“Seem's if 'twould be the proper thing to do,” responded Mr. Blodgett.

That was all. Not a smile, not a hand-shake, not a word of repentance; yet the miracle of reconciliation had been wrought. And at the celebration on Memorial day the two veterans were present in their faded, eloquent uniforms. No speeches came from their lips, for their hearts were too full, but Sammy spoke up “good and loud” enough to redeem the loss, and the flag was raised by Blodgett and Simpson, pulling together on the rope. Then, at another pull from little Polly, it trembled, fluttered and flung its glory to the welcoming breeze, while the children cheered with a will, and their elders softly, with something tugging at their throats.—Emily J. Langley, in Youth's Companion.

INTERESTING RELICS.

The History of a Ring Found on the Battle Field at Manassas.

Although more than 30 years have elapsed since the first and second battles of Manassas, interesting articles are still found by the relic seeker. Only a few days ago friends found shells containing powder, pieces of canteens and whole bayonets. But I write to mention a most peculiar and interesting find. A young man, Laws Spencer, living on the old Logan farm (Catharpin P. O.) picked up a ring in the famous Deep Cut, which has a history. The ring is of good gold, with a bloodstone scroll intaglio. The motto on it is “Sic itur ad astra.” Around the scroll is V. M. I., and at the base a pen and sword crossed. Inside is engraved: “One of the 29—O. C. Henderson, July, 1859.” My friends tried to purchase it, but he refused several large bids. With some care we have tried to reach the owner. Gen. Scott Shipp, superintendent of V. M. I., says: “O. C. Henderson was a classmate of mine and was wounded in the hand at second Manassas.” He sends also the register of V. M. I., and it shows that O. C. Henderson was captain of a Virginia battery. This register also shows that there were just 29 in the class of '59. I have heard of the “fellow who found the needle in the haystack,” but this finding goes ahead of that. It is very strange that this ring should be found at all, but strikingly strange it should be found so near the anniversary of that terrible battle. Our supposition is that O. C. Henderson had a finger shot off, and probably if search were made he might find a long-lost bone. The Deep Cut witnessed bloody contests. An officer who was in the engagement writes about the fight on August 30, 1862: “Before the railroad cut the fight was most obstinate. I saw a federal flag hold its position for half an hour within ten yards of one of the confederate regiments in the cut, and go down six or eight times, and after the fight 100 dead men were lying 20 yards from the cut and some of them within a few feet of it. Some of the men fought with stones picked up out of the cut, after their ammunition gave out. Line after line surged up the hill, time after time led by their officers, but repeatedly dashed back on one another, until the whole field was covered with a confused mass of struggling, running, routed federals.”—Cor. Washington Star.

Not for the Dead Alone.

Not for the dead alone this day we cherish;
For all our brave deserve as well
As those who in the conflict fell—
Each risked his all—no one could tell
Who was to perish.

Not for the dead alone we bring these flowers;
But for their parents bowed with years,
Their children whom this day endears,
For wives and sisters yet in tears—
Their griefs are ours.

Not for the dead alone these ensigns gory;
But to impress on every eye
At what a cost we still may fly
That fabric fashioned from the sky—
Our nation's glory!

Not for the dead alone the drums are beating;
But listening ears shall catch the strain
And comrades join the sad refrain
Till heart to heart shall beat again
In solemn greeting.

Not for the dead alone commemoration;
But that our sons be taught to-day
The price their fathers had to pay
To keep and unto them convey
This mighty nation.

Not for the dead alone—Ah! truly not;
But for an object lesson grand
That all the earth may understand
The valiant saviors of this land
Are not forgot!

An Old Obligation.

While Frenchmen grumble that they still have to pay taxes in order to make up the war indemnity exacted by Prussia 25 years ago, the town of Koenigsberg, in Prussia, has only this year paid the last installment of the loan contracted to the war contribution imposed on it by Napoleon I.

TIME TO GO SLOW.

The McKinley Boomers Have Reached a Critical Point.

Among the most sagacious of Mr. Platt's remarks about McKinley and his canvass, is his suggestion that after the noise of the preliminary booming is over there will be an interval before the St. Louis convention long enough for the delegates to cool off and do some calm and serious thinking.

The republican conventions just held will complete substantially the roll of delegates; and unquestionably McKinley's nomination will be proclaimed by his boomers as a foregone conclusion. On the face of the returns of delegates there is every reason to believe that it will look that way. At any rate, his nomination on the first ballot will be made to appear inevitable, in the hope of silencing all opposition to him as futile and a political blunder in those who venture to make it. The plan from the first has been to rush him through; and so far as concerns the state conventions it seems to have worked pretty successfully. If the St. Louis convention were to be held this week or next week it might go through to the end not less satisfactorily. But will the booming continue to boom during all the weeks still remaining before the actual assembling of the body that is to make the nomination?

That is another matter, as Mr. Platt suggests. The delegates and the republican party will have time to do some thinking about the wisdom of going into the canvass with a candidate as to whom the sober sense of the whole union has the gravest doubts. The hysteries of the booming will give place to sane reflection.

The same may be said of the Chicago convention. It is still far enough off to enable the democratic party to get into a reasonable frame of mind before it is called to order. The silver crowd have often before startled the party with their boasting of the tremendous demonstrations they were about to make in conventions and elections; but when the time comes for the fulfillment what has been the result? Instead of making progress and winning victory, the silver faction has gone steadily backward and downward and has encountered only defeat. Every day's delay before the Chicago convention will increase the probability that the silver democrats will there be overcome finally. They are fighting for a humbug which will not stand calm discussion.

It is the same with the McKinleyites in the republican party. They are trying to put up a humbug to be run in a campaign of duplicity and false pretense.—N. Y. Sun.

PROMPTED BY GREED.

The McKinley Enthusiasm Springs from Selfish Instincts.

The enthusiasm for McKinley is a matter of neither brains nor heart. It is not based upon admiration of the man's ability or upon affection for one who makes tens of thousands regard him as a personal friend. It is purely a matter of the pocket. It is based upon the belief among the masses that McKinley's election in 1896—or, for that matter, Cannon's, if Cannon had been appointed chairman of the ways and means committee in 1889—will give them constant work with easy hours at high wages. In short, it rests upon the theory that the tariff is the most important thing in the country, and that the government can mark wages up or down. It is due to the spreading among the ignorant of the idea that prosperity is to be determined by votes.

The success of a campaign based upon an unreasoning enthusiasm of this sort must be followed by a disillusionizing and a disappointment which will provoke a tremendous revolution in public sentiment. Thoughtful republicans view with the greatest apprehension the prospect of McKinley's election. It is not simply that nobody knows where he stands on the financial question now, or how so weak-kneed a person would stand if he should become president. It is still more because, even if he were sound on this issue, he could not possibly satisfy the extravagant expectations that are entertained of the effect of his election. The enthusiasm for McKinley is due to the belief by the masses that he will usher in the millennium at noon on the 4th of March, 1897, and their indignation when they shall find how they have been deceived is something that is dreaded by many a republican who does not dare to resist the tide.—N. Y. Post.

McKinley's Weak Point.

The opponents of McKinley have one advantage, notwithstanding the major's great lead. They have him exposed at his weakest point with a full month in which to exploit and hammer it. Let the hammering be maintained with tireless vigor, and great things may yet be done. Just as the constant dripping of the water wears away the stone, so may a relentless and incessant attack upon McKinley's financial views wear away his cohorts of votes. His present position of silence upon the silver question is so cowardly that to hold it for four long weeks must weaken his strength in the east. If he declares for gold, he throws away the silver support he now receives in the west; and if he declares for silver, he ruins himself at a stroke. Meanwhile the panicky feeling grows as to where he is at. The position is awkward, and cannot long be maintained.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

——The clamor in the republican party for McKinley is based on the dangerous hypothesis that McKinley means prosperity. The candidate whose nomination seems inevitable to-day declines to state his position on the only important problem before the country, and this is not encouraging to republican business men who know that it is necessary for the national finances to be directed by a man whose convictions are sound and who is sure not to fail in courage when it becomes necessary to stand by them.—Indianapolis News (Ind.)

DISHONORABLE SILENCE.

A Candidate and Party Dominated by Greed for Office.

There is much speculation as to the outcome at St. Louis, the chief question being: Can McKinley obtain the coveted nomination without committing himself upon the dangerous question of silver?

We incline to the belief that he can. The average delegate to that convention will represent the hunger for office first and his own or his constituents' convictions afterward, if at all. The platform of Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, for a silver platform if he can get it, but, if not, then the next best thing, is likely to be a popular one when the convention assembles.

Why should it be expected that this convention will reverse all republican precedents by suddenly insisting upon principle first and the offices afterwards? Hon. Webster Flanagan, of Texas, was a representative and a popular republican when he exclaimed in 1880: “What are we here for but the offices?” A party that has fused with populism to secure power in the southern states, that to-day holds the United States senate by a similar fusion with the cranks and enemies of sound finance, is not likely to jeopard any electoral votes by insistence upon clear affirmation of the true principles of finance.

McKinley has probably judged his party aright. We have yet to learn of a delegate or a delegation lost to him by his straddling. Threats there have been, but threats hurt nobody, and most of them have had a string attachment.

But with the people it will be different. The mistake McKinley is making, and his party is about to make in nominating him, is in assuming that the people, like themselves, are an organized greed for office. Nine-tenths of the people care nothing for the offices, care little who holds them. What they do care, what they have insisted and will insist, is that their president shall be a man of convictions, with the courage of his convictions.

Mr. McKinley will find that the shibboleth of protection will not suffice to bring the presidency to a man who dare not speak his mind on the greater question of finanse. His silence of dishonor will be broken by the death-knell of his hopes.—Albany Argus.

ANOTHER SHOT FROM REED.

The Maine Man Again Shows His Contempt for McKinley.

Speaker Reed's disappointment in his canvass for the republican nomination has given a keen edge to his natural sharpness of tongue. He made McKinley chairman of the ways and means committee of the house which framed the so-called McKinley bill, and made the Ohio man a presidential possibility. Now McKinley has unmade him as a candidate.

Reed feels that the fates have been unkind, and that McKinley has been unjustly favored.

Reed spoke a day or two ago about McKinley being a straddlebug, referring to the latter's attitude touching the money issue. Later Reed told a reminiscence with as much pertinence. McKinley had been advertised as the “advance agent of prosperity.” What Reed thinks of this is made plain in this story:

“Advance agent of prosperity,” said he. “Humph! when I was a boy the advance agent of the circus would go through the country and cover the sides of barns and the fences with the most gorgeous posters of what the circus would be. There would be a long procession of knights in gold and silver armor, and ladies bedecked in silks and diamonds, mounted on beautiful Arabian steeds. There would be huge elephants, tigers, lions, camels, hippopotamuses and such, enough to stock a wilderness.

“When the circus came it was the usual little old one-ring affair, with one measly, flop-eared, slab-sided elephant, a mangy lion and a one-humped camel.

“It never came up to the show bills, but there was always at least one first-class acrobat who could ride two horses at once.”—N. Y. World.

TALMAGE'S SERMONS.

Many Disconcerted Actors Make Failures of Their Parts.

Hisses and Groans Drive Them From the Stage, and the Curtain Rings Down on Blasted Life—A Beautiful Parallel Between This Life and the Drama.

Rev. Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Job xxvii., 23: "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

The allusion seems to be dramatic. The Bible more than once makes such allusions. Paul says: "We are made a theater or spectacle to angels and to men." It is evident from the text that some of the habits of theater goers were known in Job's time, because he describes an actor hissed off the stage. The impersonator comes on the boards and, either through lack of study of the part he is to take or inaptness or other incapacity, the audience is offended, and expresses its disapprobation and disgust by hissing. "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

My text suggests that each one of us is put on the stage of this world to take some part. What hardship and suffering and discipline great actors have undergone year after year that they might be perfected in their parts, you have often read. But we, put on the stage of this life to represent charity and faith and humility and helpfulness—what little preparation we have made, although we have three galleries of spectators, earth and Heaven and hell! Have we not been more attentive to the part taken by others than to the part taken by ourselves, and, while we needed to be looking at home and concentrating on our own duty, we have been criticising the other performers, and saying, "That was too high," or "too low," or "too feeble," or, "too extravagant," or "too tame," or "too demonstrative," while we ourselves were making a dead failure and preparing to be ignominiously hissed off the stage?

Each one is assigned to a place; no supernumeraries hanging around the drama of life to take this or that or the other part, as they may be called upon. No one can take our place. We can take no other place. Neither can we put off our character; no change of apparel can make us any one else than that which we eternally are.

Many make a failure of their part in the drama of life through dissipation. They have enough intellectual equipment and good address and generally unbounded. But they have a wine closet that contains all the forces for their social and business and moral overthrow. So far back as the year 959, King Edgar of England made a law that the drinking cups should have pins fastened at a certain point in their side, so that the indulger might be reminded to stop before he got to the bottom. But there are no pins projecting from the sides of the modern wine cup or beer mug, and the first point at which millions stop is at the gravelly bottom of their own grave. Dr. Sax, of France, has discovered something which all drinkers ought to know. He has found out that alcohol, in every shape, whether of wine or brandy or beer, contains parasitic life called bacillus potumaniae. By a powerful microscope these living things are discovered, and when you take strong drink you take them into the stomach and then into your blood, and, getting into the crimson canals of life, they go into every tissue of your body, and your entire organism is taken posession of by these noxious infinitesimals. When in delirium tremens a man sees every form of reptilian life, it seems it is only these parasites of the brain in exaggerated size. It is not a hallucination that the victim is suffering from. He only sees in the room what is actually crawling and rioting in his own brain. Every time you take strong drink you swallow these maggots, and every time the imbiber of alcohol in any shape feels vertigo or rheumatism or nausea it is only the jubilee of these maggots. Efforts are being made for the discovery of some germicide that can kill the parasites of alcoholism, but the only thing that will ever extirpate them is abstinence from alcohol and teetotal abstinence, to which I would before God swear all these young men and old.

America is a fruitful country, and we raise large crops of wheat and corn and oats, but the largest crop we raise in this country is the crop of drunkards. With sickle made out of the sharp edges of the broken glass of bottle and demijohn they are cut down, and there are whole swathes of them, whole winrows of them, and it takes all the hospitals and penitentiaries and graveyards and cemeteries to hold this harvest of hell. Some of you are going down under this evil, and the never-dying worm of alcoholism has wound around you one of its coils, and by next New Year's day it will have another coil around you, and it will after a while put a coil around your tongue and a coil around your brain and a coil around your lung and a coil around your foot and a coil around your heart, and some day this never-dying worm will with one spring tighten all the coils at once, and in the last twist of that awful convultion you will cry out: "Oh, my God!" and be gone. The greatest of dramatists in the tragedy of "The Tempest" sends staggering across the stage Stephano, the drunken butler; but across the stage of human life strong drink sends kingly and queenly and princely natures staggering forward against the footlights of conspicuity and then staggering back into failure till the world is impatient for their disappearance, and human and diabolical voices join in hissing them off the stage.

Many also make a failure in the drama of life through indolence. They are always making calculations how little they can do for the compensation they get. There are more lazy ministers, lawyers, doctors, merchants, artists and farmers than have ever been counted upon. The community is full of laggards and shirkers. I can tell it from the way they crawl along the street, from their tardiness in meeting engagements, from the lethargies that seem to hang to the foot when they lift it, to the hand when they put it out, to the words when they speak.

Two young men in a store. In the morning the one goes to his post the last minute or one minute behind. The other is ten minutes before the time and has his hat and coat hung up, and is at his post waiting for duty. The one is ever and anon, in the afternoon, looking at his watch to see if it is not most time to shut up. The other stays half an hour after he might go, and when asked why, says he wanted to look over some entries he had made to be sure he was right, or to put up some goods that had been left out of place. The one is very touchy about doing work not exactly belonging to him. The other is glad to help the other clerks in their work. The first will be a prolonged nothing, and he will be poorer at 60 years of age than at 20. The other will be a merchant prince. Indolence is the cause of more failures in all occupations than you have ever suspected. People are too lazy to do what they can do, and want to undertake that which they can not do. In the drama of life they don't want to be a common soldier, carrying a halberd across the stage, or a falconer, or a mere attendant, and so they lounge about the scenes till they shall be called to something great. After a while, by some accident of prosperity or circumstances, they get into the place for which they have no qualification. And very soon, if the man be a merchant, he is going around asking his creditors to compromise for ten cents on the dollar. Or, if a clergyman, he is making tirades against the ingratitude of churches. Or, if an attorney, by unskillful management he loses a case by which widows and orphans are robbed of their portion. Or, if a physician, he by malpractice gives his patient rapid transit from this world to the next. Our incompetent friend would have made a passable horse doctor, but he wanted to be professor of anatomy in a university. He could have sold enough confectionery to have supported his family, but he wanted to have a sugar refinery like the Havemeyers. He could have mended shoes, but he wanted to amend the constitution of the United States. Toward the end of life these people are out of patience, out of money, out of friends, out of everything. They go to the poorhouse, or keep out of it by running in debt to all the grocery and dry goods stores that will trust them. People begin to wonder when the curtain will drop on the scene. After a while, leaving nothing but their compliments to pay doctor, undertaker, and Gabriel Grubb, the grave-digger, they disappear. Exeunt! Hissed off the stage.

Others fail in the drama of life through demonstrated selfishness. They make all the rivers empty into their sea, all the roads of emolument end at their door, and they gather all the plumes of honor for their brow. They help no one, encourage no one, rescue no one. "How big a pile of money can I get?" and "How much of the world can I absorb?" are the chief questions. They feel about the common people as the Turks felt toward the Asapi, or common soldiers, considering them of no use except to fill up the ditches with their dead bodies while the other troops walked over them to take the fort. After a while this prince of worldly success is sick. The only interest society has in his illness is the effect that his possible decease may have on the money market. After a while he dies. Great newspaper capitals announce how he started with nothing and ended with everything. Although for sake of appearance some people put handkerchiefs to the eye, there is not one genuine tear shed. The heirs sit up all night when he lies in state, discussing what the old fellow has probably done with his money. It takes all the livery stables within two miles to furnish funeral equipages, and all the mourning stores are kept busy in selling weeds of grief. The stonecutters send in proposals for a monument. The minister at the obsequies reads of the resurrection, which makes the hearers fear that if the unscrupulous financier does not come up in the general rising he will try to get a "corner" on tombstones and graveyard fences. All good men are glad that the moral nuisance has been removed. The Wall street speculators are glad because there is more room for themselves. The heirs are glad because they get possession of the long-delayed inheritance. Dropping all his plumes, every certificate of all his stock, every bond of all his investments, every dollar of all his fortune, he departs, and all the rolling of Dead March in Saul and all the pageantry of his interment, and all the exquisiteness of sarcophagus, and all the extravagance of epitaphology can not hide the fact that my text has come again to tremendous fulfillment: "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

You see the clapping comes before the hiss. The world cheers before it damns. So it is said the deadly asp tickles before it stings. Going up, is he? Hurrah! Stand back and let his galloping horse dash by, a whirlwind of plated harness and tinkling headgear and arched neck. Drink deep of his Madeira and cognac. Boast of how well you know him. All hats off as he passes. Bask for days and years in the sunlight of his prosperity. Going down, is he? Pretend to be near-sighted so that you can not see him as he walks past. When men ask you if you know him, halt and hesitate as though you were trying to call up a dim memory and say: "Well, y-e-s, yes; I believe I once did know him, but have not seen him for a long while." Cross a different ferry from the one where you used to meet him lest he ask for financial help. When you started life he spoke a good word for you at the bank. Talk down his credit now that his fortunes are collapsing. He put his name on two of your notes; tell him that you have changed your mind about such things, and that you never indorse. After a while his matters come to a dead halt, and an assignment or suspension or sheriff's sale takes place. You say: "He ought to have stopped sooner. Just as I expected. He made too big a splash in the world. Glad the balloon has burst. Ha, ha!" Applause when he went up, sibilant derision when he came down. "Men shall clap their hands at him and hiss him out of his place." So, high up amid the crags the eagle flutters dust into the eyes of the roebuck, which then, with eyes blinded, goes tumbling over the precipice, the great antlers crashing on the rocks.

Now, compare some of these goings out of life with the departure of men and women, who, in the drama of life, take the part that God assigned them and then went away honored of men and applauded of the Lord Almighty. It is about fifty years ago that in a comparatively small apartment of the city a newly married pair set up a home. The first guest invited to that residence was the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Bible given the bride on the day of her espousal was the guide of that household. Days of sunshine were followed by days of shadow. Did you ever know a home that for 50 years had no vicissitudes? The young woman who left her father's house for her young husband's home started out with a parental benediction and good advice she will never forget. Her mother said to her the day before the marriage: "Now, my child, you are going away from us. Of course, as long as your father and I live you will feel that you can come to us at any time. But your home will be elsewhere. From long experience I find it is best to serve God. It is very bright with you now, my child, and you may think you can get along without religion, but the day will come when you will want God, and my advice is, establish a family altar, and, if need be, conduct the worship yourself." The counsel was taken and that young wife consecrated every room in the house to God.

Years passed and there were in that home hilarities, but they were good and healthful; and sorrows, but they were comforted. Marriages as bright as orange blossoms could make them, and burials in which all hearts were riven. They have a family lot in the cemetery, but all the place is illuminated with stories of resurrection and reunion. The children of the household that lived have grown up and they are all Christians, the father and the mother leading the way, and children following. What care the mother took of wardrobe and education, character and manners! How hard she sometimes worked. When the head of the household was unfortunate in business she sewed until her fingers were numb and bleeding at the tips. And what close calculation of economies and what ingenuity in refitting the garments of the elder children for the younger, and only God kept account of that mother's sideaches and headaches and heartaches and the tremulous prayers by the side of the sick child's cradle and by the couch of this one fully grown. The neighbors often noticed how tired she looked, and old acquaintances hardly knew her in the street. But without complaint she waited and toiled and endured and accomplished all these years. The children are out in the world—an honor to themselves and their parents. After awhile the mother's last sickness comes. Children and grandchildren, summoned from afar, come softly into the room one by one, for she is too weak to see more than one at a time. She runs her dying fingers lovingly through their hair, and tells them not to cry, and that she is going now, but they will meet again in a little while in a better world, and then kisses them good-by and says to each: "God bless and keep you, my dear child!" The day of the obsequies comes, and the officiating clergyman tells the story of wifely and motherly endurance, and many hearts on earth and in Heaven echo the sentiment, and as she is carried off the stage of this mortal life there are cries of: "Faithful unto death!" "She hath done what she could," while overpowering all the voices of earth and Heaven is the plaudit of God, who watched her from first to last, saying: "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

But what became of the father of that household? He started as a young man in business and had a small income, and, having got a little ahead, sickness in the family swept it all away. He went through all the business panics of 40 years, met many losses, and suffered many betrayals, but kept right on trusting in God, whether business was good or poor, setting his children a good example and giving them the best of counsel, and never a prayer did he offer for all those years but they were mentioned in it. He is old now, and realizes it can not be long before he must quit all these scenes. But he is going to leave his children an inheritance of prayer and Christian principles which all the defalcations of earth can never touch, and as he goes out of the world the church of God blesses him and the poor ring his door bell to see if he is any better, and his grave is surrounded by a multitude who went on foot and stood there before the procession of carriages came up, and some say: "There will be no one to take his place," and others say: "Who will pity me now?" and others remark: "He shall be held in everlasting remembrance." And as the drama of his life closes all the vociferation and bravos and encores that ever shook the amphitheaters of earthly spectacle were tame and feeble compared with the long, loud thunders of approval that shall break from the crowd of witnesses in the piled-up gallery of the heavens. Choose ye between the life that shall close by being hissed off the stage and the life that shall close amid acclamations supernal and archangelic.

BACKACHE.

From the Press, New York City.

Few people have suffered more from pain in the back than Mrs. Lillie B. Newell of No. 2318 Second Avenue, New York City. For several years she was so afflicted with this distressing malady that she was hardly able to get around, and could do little to care for her children which made her suffering all the harder to bear. Her husband, Charles Newell, who is a well-known New York optician, tried in every way to find a remedy for his wife, but no medicine seemed to have the power to remove her pain.

Mrs. Glynn, a sister of Mrs. Newell, is a professional nurse, and was familiar with the symptoms of her sister's sickness. Mrs. Newell was away on a visit when a reporter called upon her, but Mrs. Glynn, who lives at No. 416 East One-hundred and-twentieth Street, told the story of her sister's recovery.

A doctor was called when Mrs. Newell's condition became serious and he prescribed small pink pills which, in a short time, relieved the woman's pain as no other medicine has done. "After awhile," Mrs. Glynn told the reporter, "we learned that the medicine the physician was giving my sister was nothing more than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Knowing by experience how excellent a remedy these pills were, Mrs. Newell bought some at a drug store and continued taking them. The effect was most gratifying, for in six months my sister was perfectly well and the pain in her back was nothing more than an unpleasant memory. Both she and I have recommended the Pink Pills to other people, who have not failed to find them all that is claimed. All doctors my sister had been treated by, before taking the pills, had done her no apparent good."

Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose form, by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. The price at which these Pills are sold makes a course of treatment inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

MATRIMONIAL AGENCIES.

Some Advantageous Alliances Effected by Their Assistance in France.

A very profitable form of swindling is that of the matrimonial agencies which are now worked in France in a manner entirely unknown, says the London Spectator, to M. De Foy, who was the real originator of marriage by intermediary. There are, of course, offices where preliminary fees are asked and where wife seekers and ladies yearning for lords are quietly swindled after having been told to go to the opera, the salon or the fashionable church of Sainte-Clotilde. The strange part of the matrimonial agency scheme is that you never know, when in society whether some banker, priest or old lady of fierce virtue and mystical tendencies may not be a husband or wife broker. There are young ladies not too thin-skinned, head waiters in certain restaurants, livery stable keepers, cloistered nuns, notaries and lady doctors of the obstetric school. These are only a portion of the army of workers in the interests of Cupid. There are at present in Paris two wealthy American girls who have married titles, upon the wedding day of each of whom a very handsome commission was paid to one of these intermediaries, of course without the knowledge of the wife.

EAGLES AS GAME DRIVERS.

Sometimes They Enable Gunners to Get Shots at Wild Ducks.

Eagles are sometimes of considerable service to a hunter, and this is especially true of the eagles of the Potomac river at Wide Water, where President Cleveland shoots. According to an American Field writer, eagles on a calm day often give the hunters shots which they would not otherwise get.

The eagle goes flying up and down the stream, and on seeing a flock of ducks goes toward them, hoping to get a cripple, being unable to capture ducks as the peregrine falcon does. When the ducks see the eagle coming they jump into the air and go looking for a safer locality, and this is where the gunner comes in. The gunner's place of concealment in a blind is not nearly so safe as the eagle's vicinity, but the ducks think it is safer till the shot goes through their feathers.

Three or four eagles will keep all the ducks on the move, and the gunners get good sport where they otherwise would not have dirtied their gun barrels. The eagles sometimes steal cripples from the gunner, but the knowing man does not hurt the birds, getting his pay back on calm days.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

The Hero's Grave.

THE fair day passed, the sun was low;
I stood enwrapped in its fading light,
And the west was touched with its warmth and glow,
As it welcomed the balmy night.

As I stood by the road in my dream of joy,
I was touched by the muffled tone
Of the funeral drum, while the soldier boy
Was borne to his rest alone.

I followed the bier to the lonely grave,
With a heart that swelled with pride
For the deeds of the noble hero brave
Who for his country died.

And I gathered the lilies for his winding-sheet,
Made wreaths of the flowers that grew by the way,
And laid them down at the hero's feet,
This sad Memorial day.

And every year as the time goes by,
And the evening sun lights the western sky,
I gather the flowers that grow by the way,
And weave into garlands fragrant with life,
And go to the grave Memorial day,
To give him his laurels he won in the strife.

MEANEST MAN IN PLUNKETT.

"MORNING," said Mr. Blodgett, with an upward jerk of the chin. "So you're the new schoolma'am, hey? Come to tell me 'bout some bad conduct of Sammy's. Well, if you've got any fault to find with my grandson, out with it. I'll back ye every time." Mr. Blodgett, who was plowing, while Sammy helped him by guiding the horse, turned round to his grandson as he spoke.

"Oh, I assure you, Mr. Blodgett, Sammy behaves beautifully. I called on an entirely different errand. Probably Sammy has told you about the flag we want to buy."

"No, he hain't."

"Well," said little Miss Stanton quickly, "we want to provide a flag for our schoolhouse. Nearly every schoolhouse in the country has one. And we want you to help us."

"A flag! What for?" demanded Mr. Blodgett.

"Why, don't you think," she spoke with surprise, "that the daily sight of their country's flag will make the pupils better children now, and better men and women by and by?"

"I do' know about that," responded Mr. Blodgett. "There's lots of foolish notions running round loose nowadays, and this strikes me as one of 'em. Hoisting a flag and making a Fourth o' July out of all the three hundred and sixty odd days in the year! Stick to writing, reading and 'rithmetic, and let the flummeries be!"

Miss Stanton, too shrewd either to show dismay or to wrangle with the farmer, simply looked as if she were amazed at and pitied his sentiments.

"How much do you calculate to put out for the flag?" he asked, forced by her demeanor to doubt whether he had not put himself in the wrong.

"Oh, something like $40."

"Whew-ew!" Mr. Blodgett whistled his astonishment. "And how much do you lay out for me to give?"

Miss Stanton had an instinctive knowledge that it is often judicious to ask for more than one expects. "Well, I should like it if you and Mr. Simpson would give me ten dollars each to start the ball rolling. The minister tells me you are one of the richest men in Plunkett, and Mr. David Simpson is the other. So I came out this Saturday to ask you two to help us get the flag."

Mr. Blodgett gave a little jump toward his plow. "I guess you don't know much about Plunkett!" he gasped. "Dave Simpson, did you say? Dave Simpson! The meanest man in Plunkett! Skin a flea for its hide! Ten dollars! Him!"

He considered a moment. "Look a-here!" he said. "You go and see Dave Simpson. Tell him Bill Blodgett sent you. Don't leave that out. He will know what I mean—he and I were in the war together. Tell him you want a $40-dollar flag for Plunkett schoolhouse. And I'll match you, cent for cent, dollar for dollar, whatever you get out of Dave Simpson. Come! there's an offer for you."

"Why, that's a splendid offer, sir!" said Miss Stanton, rather sarcastically. "Thank you, Mr. Blodgett. Good-by—thank you so much! Good-by, Sammy!"

"Well!" muttered Blodgett, chuckling, "I got out of that neat. Get up, Sammy." And yet, he felt, uneasily, that he might have given a dollar to the flag.

Miss Stanton, somewhat discouraged, walked over to Mr. Simpson's place. The first glance at him reassured her. Holding his little grandchild, Polly, by the hand, he cordially inquired how she liked Plunkett, and put a great many other questions. She could not get in a word about the flag. She began to suspect a method in Mr. Simpson's volubility.

"And how is this naughty Polly carrying on?" he asked.

Miss Stanton smiled on the pair. "Have you told grandpa about our flag, Polly?"

Dave Simpson squared his shoulders. His amiable expression vanished. His pocket was attacked.

"Well," he faltered, "I'm sorry to disoblige you—really—'specially as little Polly here wants it. But—but—well—you see, in the matter of contributions for flags and such things you mustn't look to me to help you out. Hope you ain't over-much disappointed," he added.

"Oh, not overmuch, for Mr. Blodgett warned me in season," smiled Miss Stanton.

"Bill Blodgett!" exploded Mr. Simpson. "What's he know about it? Bill Blodgett! That's a good one! I'll have you to know Bill Blodgett's the meanest man in Plunkett! Splits his coppers in the contribution-box! What are you laughing at?" he asked in an aggrieved tone.

"I was only thinking what Mr. Blodgett said," she replied demurely. "He told me you are the meanest man in Plunkett."

Mr. Simpson stared furiously. "I'll pay Bill Blodgett for that! What else did he say?"

Though his tone was fierce, Miss Stanton noted that little Polly was not at all alarmed; so she kept her own courage undaunted, and slowly, as if she was teaching a lesson to a very dull pupil, replied:

"Mr. Blodgett said to me: 'You go see Dave Simpson, and I'll match you, cent for cent, dollar for dollar, whatever you get out of Dave Simpson!' Now, what do you say, Mr. Simpson? Of course he reckoned you wouldn't give a cent."

Mr. Simpson flushed with anger. "I say this!" he said, emphatically, "I'll give you ten dollars—ten dollars for Bill Blodgett to match. Yes! for the sake of seeing Bill Blodgett shell out, I'll give you—I'll give you—Polly, girl, we'll give a clean $20! 'Cent for cent, dollar for dollar,' says Bill Blodgett. Ha, ha, ha! It's as good as a circus. Simpson gives $20, Blodgett matches it. And Blodgett and Simpson hain't spoke for years. Blodgett and Simpson go halves on a $40 flag for Plunkett school-house. Ha! I guess I've got Bill Blodgett this time!"

"But will Mr. Blodgett give his share?" asked Miss Stanton, anxiously.

"Got to!" replied Mr. Simpson. "One thing about Bill Blodgett, he never goes back on his word in a financial transaction."

So the little schoolmistress went back to Mr. Blodgett. When she told him that Simpson had given her $20 he turned pale, and without a word went with her to the house, took two ten-dollar notes out of a cupboard, and gave them to her. She thanked him earnestly, but he said not a word in response.

"WHAT ELSE DID HE SAY?"

Miss Stanton kept the secret for a whole week. Then all Plunkett was stirred with the news, marveling much that Plunkett was to possess the flag, but more that it should be the gift of the two men whose stinginess and mutual animosity had become notorious.

Sammy Blodgett, almost bursting with pride, placed in Miss Stanton's hands a copy of the County Oracle, in which the wonderful fact was told. The item ended thus: "We congratulate Plunkett on the possession of such generous citizens as William Blodgett and David Simpson, men who, like brothers, fought to preserve our glorious union, and who, still of one heart in time of peace, unite to unfurl the starry banner for which they bled, to float in proud benediction over the heads of the young men and maidens of Plunkett."

"Ain't it grand?" whispered Sammy.

"Wonderful!" she whispered back. It certainly was wonderful. Who could have written it? When she put this question to Mr. Simpson that worthy laughed uproariously.

Mr. William Blodgett did not take the joke so philosophically. He grew glummer of face and shorter of speech than ever. The neighbors trembled a little, not knowing what the matter might come to.

Dave Simpson became very much interested in the flag. It awakened all his old patriotism. He fell to telling war stories to Polly, and he could not keep Bill Blodgett out of them—Bill and he had been such inseparable comrades in arms. Then he and Miss Stanton held many consultations regarding the flag-raising.

"What do you do in Plunkett on Memorial day?" she asked, one morning, excitedly.

"Do? Nothing at all."

"Well, we'll do something this year, Mr. Simpson," said the determined little schoolmistress. "I can't, at this short notice, clear the graveyard, get up a procession and all that, but I can manage the children and the schoolhouse."

"What'll you do?" he asked.

"Why, plenty of things! We'll fly our flag for the first time on Memorial day. We'll invite the parents, the school committee, the minister—in fact, the town. The children will sing. And we'll have speeches—yes, speeches, Mr. Simpson, from Plunkett's two noble benefactors."

Mr. Simpson pooh-poohed vigorously at the last idea; nevertheless she saw he was pleased.

Arrangements were made for a celebration, and Mr. Blodgett was asked to make an address.

"I won't have anything to do with such tomfoolery!" he thundered. "Dave Simpson's made a big enough fool of me now."

"I'm sorry you won't make a speech, sir," said Miss Stanton. "But, anyway, I hope you'll let Sammy take a part in the celebration."

"Well," said Blodgett, ungraciously, "if he does, see to it that he speaks up good and loud."

So Sammy was selected to speak a piece in his grandfather's place. He had very little oratorical gift. Miss Stanton struggled with him faithfully and diligently. Yet each time, after he slipped from her presence, he reappeared with the sing-song inflection and abominable emphasis that made her blood run cold. She could not understand these persistent relapses.

"Sammy," she cried, in despair, "what shall I do with you, if you will not speak it as I teach you to?"

Sammy burst into tears. "I wisht there wasn't ever any Memorial day, nor any flag, nor anything. I wisht I was dead—so, there!"

"Why, what's the matter, Sammy?"

"Before I'm out of bed in the morning, gran'pa he's after me to speak my piece," sobbed the boy. "And the same every noon and after school at night. And he stands me upon a rock down in the back pasture where nobody can see or hear, and he goes off to the other end, and I have to holler it at him. And I begin your way, and he says he'll lick me if I don't say it his way. And between you both—boohoo!"

Here was a revelation. Mr. Blodgett, for all his surly manner, had become interested in the celebration. It lent a touch of pathos to what would otherwise have been ludicrous.

"You poor dear!" she said, finally. "You shall not be bothered any more by me. Say it just as your grandfather wishes."

So the daily coaching in the back pasture went on without interruption. The cows chewed their cuds; the sheep lifted their dull heads and were not wise enough to wonder, though occasion for wonder grew. For, marvel of marvels! Mr. Blodgett, after the elocution lessons, fell to telling war stories to his grandson.

This was the first common interest of their lives. Sammy felt he was finding a place in his grandfather's heart. How "good and loud" he would speak that hated piece, for payment!

Mr. Blodgett, in his turn, tried his utmost to keep Dave Simpson's name out of his reminiscences. He fought against it all the more because he was conscious of strange and tender renewal of his old friendship; but Dave's name crept into almost every tale.

So it came about that one day he blundered on the story of that time when Dave Simpson had saved his life at the peril of his own. Then he faltered and finally broke down. He had put the incident out of his heart and mind.

What good friends they had been—he and Dave! Either would have died for the other as readily as for the dear old flag. And now they were enemies, though the veterans of Plunkett—her only soldiers left!

He strove to become angry again.

"'Twas a mean thing for Dave to do, anyhow to ketch me up so!" he was growling, just when Sammy interrupted with a burst he had long repressed: "O, gran'pa! how I wisht I could see you dressed up like a soldier!"

The old man thought a moment. "Well, come along," he said. He did not understand why he humored the boy. He was more of a mystery to himself than to Sammy.

"Sh! Sh!" Blodgett led the way to the dusky, cobwebbed garret. He took from the old chest a faded army coat, a soldier's cap, a knapsack and a musket.

"Sh! Sh!" As stealthily as they had ascended they crept down the stairs, and so, with their precious burden, to the secluded back pasture

Then Bill Blodgett, with an expression on his face that was new to Sammy, put on the battered blue, placed the cap above his thin, gray locks, adjusted the knapsack, shouldered the musket.

Now, indeed, thoughts of Dave Simpson crowded to the front. How proudly he and Dave had tramped away together in their army blue! Others had gone with them. Who had returned? Only himself and Dave. How they had cheered each other on the toilsome marches!

"Now, Sammy," cried Blodgett, trembling with awkward earnestness, "I'll show ye how Dave and me used to—"

A twig snapped. A stone fell from the wall. The flock of frightened sheep went cantering the length of the pasture. With a ringing cry, Dave Simpson leaped the wall like a boy.

"Hold on, Billy! I'll drill ye."

"Dave!"

"Attention! Present arms!"

Bill Blodgett obeyed the old words of command instantly, and with true soldierly gravity. Sammy's delighted heart nearly burst its bounds, betraying its excitement in every tense muscle. When the drill was ended, a nervous silence ensued till Simpson broke it: "Say, Billy, let's wear the old uniform to the flag-raising to-morrow."

"Seem's if 'twould be the proper thing to do," responded Mr. Blodgett.

That was all. Not a smile, not a hand-shake, not a word of repentance; yet the miracle of reconciliation had been wrought. And at the celebration on Memorial day the two veterans were present in their faded, eloquent uniforms. No speeches came from their lips, for their hearts were too full, but Sammy spoke up "good and loud" enough to redeem the loss, and the flag was raised by Blodgett and Simpson, pulling together on the rope. Then, at another pull from little Polly, it trembled, fluttered and flung its glory to the welcoming breeze, while the children cheered with a will, and their elders softly, with something tugging at their throats.—Emily J. Langley, in Youth's Companion.

INTERESTING RELICS.

The History of a Ring Found on the Battle Field at Manassas.

Although more than 30 years have elapsed since the first and second battles of Manassas, interesting articles are still found by the relic seeker. Only a few days ago friends found shells containing powder, pieces of canteens and whole bayonets. But I write to mention a most peculiar and interesting find. A young man, Laws Spencer, living on the old Logan farm (Catharpin P. O.) picked up a ring in the famous Deep Cut, which has a history. The ring is of good gold, with a bloodstone scroll intaglio. The motto on it is "Sic itur ad astra." Around the scroll is V. M. I., and at the base a pen and sword crossed. Inside is engraved: "One of the 29—O. C. Henderson, July, 1859." My friends tried to purchase it, but he refused several large bids. With some care we have tried to reach the owner. Gen. Scott Shipp, superintendent of V. M. I., says: "O. C. Henderson, was a classmate of mine and was wounded in the hand at second Manassas." He sends also the register of V. M. I., and it shows that O. C. Henderson was captain of a Virginia battery. This register also shows that there were just 29 in the class of '59. I have heard of the "fellow who found the needle in the haystack," but this finding goes ahead of that. It is very strange that this ring should be found at all, but strikingly strange it should be found so near the anniversary of that terrible battle. Our supposition is that O. C. Henderson had a finger shot off, and probably if search were made he might find a long-lost bone. The Deep Cut witnessed bloody contests. An officer who was in the engagement writes about the fight on August 30, 1862: "Before the railroad cut the fight was most obstinate. I saw a federal flag hold its position for half an hour within ten yards of one of the confederate regiments in the cut, and go down six or eight times, and after the fight 100 dead men were lying 20 yards from the cut and some of them within a few feet of it. Some of the men fought with stones picked up out of the cut, after their ammunition gave out. Line after line surged up the hill, time after time led by their officers, but repeatedly dashed back on one another, until the whole field was covered with a confused mass of struggling, running, routed federals."—Cor. Not for the Dead Alone.

Not for the dead alone this day we cherish;
For all our brave deserve as well
As those who in the conflict fell—
Each risked his all—no one could tell
Who was to perish.

Not for the dead alone we bring these flowers;
But for their parents bowed with years,
Their children whom this day endears,
For wives and sisters yet in tears—
Their griefs are ours.

Not for the dead alone these ensigns gory;
But to impress on every eye
At what a cost we still may fly
That fabric fashioned from the sky—
Our nation's glory!

Not for the dead alone the drums are beating;
But listening ears shall catch the strain
And comrades join the sad refrain
Till heart to heart shall beat again
In solemn greeting.

Not for the dead alone commemoration;
But that our sons be taught to-day
The price their fathers had to pay
To keep and unto them convey
This mighty nation.

Not for the dead alone—Ah! truly not;
But for an object lesson grand
That all the earth may understand
The valiant saviors of this land
Are not forgot!

An Old Obligation.

While Frenchmen grumble that they still have to pay taxes in order to make up the war indemnity exacted by Prussia 25 years ago, the town of Koenigsberg, in Prussia, has only this year paid the last installment of the loan contracted to the war contribution imposed on it by Napoleon I.

TIME TO GO SLOW.

The McKinley Boomers Have Reached a Critical Point.

Among the most sagacious of Mr. Platt's remarks about McKinley and his canvass, is his suggestion that after the noise of the preliminary booming is over there will be an interval before the St. Louis convention long enough for the delegates to cool off and do some calm and serious thinking.

The republican conventions just held will complete substantially the roll of delegates; and unquestionably McKinley's nomination will be proclaimed by his boomers as a foregone conclusion. On the face of the returns of delegates there is every reason to believe that it will look that way. At any rate, his nomination on the first ballot will be made to appear inevitable, in the hope of silencing all opposition to him as futile and a political blunder in those who venture to make it. The plan from the first has been to rush him through; and so far as concerns the state conventions it seems to have worked pretty successfully. If the St. Louis convention were to be held this week or next week it might go through to the end not less satisfactorily. But will the booming continue to boom during all the weeks still remaining before the actual assembling of the body that is to make the nomination?

That is another matter, as Mr. Platt suggests. The delegates and the republican party will have time to do some thinking about the wisdom of going into the canvass with a candidate as to whom the sober sense of the whole union has the gravest doubts. The hysterics of the booming will give place to sane reflection.

The same may be said of the Chicago convention. It is still far enough off to enable the democratic party to get into a reasonable frame of mind before it is called to order. The silver crowd have often before startled the party with their boasting of the tremendous demonstrations they were about to make in conventions and elections; but when the time comes for the fulfillment what has been the result? Instead of making progress and winning victory, the silver faction has gone steadily backward and downward and has encountered only defeat. Every day's delay before the Chicago convention will increase the probability that the silver democrats will there be overcome finally. They are fighting for a humbug which will not stand calm discussion.

It is the same with the McKinleyites in the republican party. They are trying to put up a humbug to be run in a campaign of duplicity and false pretense.—N. Y. Sun.

PROMPTED BY GREED.

The McKinley Enthusiasm Springs from Selfish Instincts.

The enthusiasm for McKinley is a matter of neither brains nor heart. It is not based upon admiration of the man's ability or upon affection for one who makes tens of thousands regard him as a personal friend. It is purely a matter of the pocket. It is based upon the belief among the masses that McKinley's election in 1896—or, for that matter, Cannon's, if Cannon had been appointed chairman of the ways and means committee in 1889—will give them constant work with easy hours at high wages. In short, it rests upon the theory that the tariff is the most important thing in the country, and that the government can mark wages up or down. It is due to the spreading among the ignorant of the idea that prosperity is to be determined by votes.

The success of a campaign based upon an unreasoning enthusiasm of this sort must be followed by a disillusionizing and a disappointment which will provoke a tremendous revolution in public sentiment. Thoughtful republicans view with the greatest apprehension the prospect of McKinley's election. It is not simply that nobody knows where he stands on the financial question now, or how so weak-kneed a person would stand if he should become president. It is still more because, even if he were sound on this issue, he could not possibly satisfy the extravagant expectations that are entertained of the effect of his election. The enthusiasm for McKinley is due to the belief by the masses that he will usher in the millennium at noon on the 4th of March, 1897, and their indignation when they shall find how they have been deceived is something that is dreaded by many a republican who does not dare to resist the tide.—N. Y. Post.

McKinley's Weak Point.

The opponents of McKinley have one advantage, notwithstanding the major's great lead. They have him exposed at his weakest point with a full month in which to exploit and hammer it. Let the hammering be maintained with tireless vigor, and great things may yet be done. Just as the constant dripping of the water wears away the stone, so may a relentless and incessant attack upon McKinley's financial views wear away his cohorts of votes. His present position of silence upon the silver question is so cowardly that to hold it for four long weeks must weaken his strength in the east. If he declares for gold, he throws away the silver support he now receives in the west; and if he declares for silver, he ruins himself at a stroke. Meanwhile the panicky feeling grows as to where he is at. The position is awkward, and cannot long be maintained.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

——The clamor in the republican party for McKinley is based on the dangerous hypothesis that McKinley means prosperity. The candidate whose nomination seems inevitable to-day declines to state his position on the only important problem before the country, and this is not encouraging to republican business men who know that it is necessary for the national finances to be directed by a man whose convictions are sound and who is sure not to fail in courage when it becomes necessary to stand by them.—Indianapolis News (Ind.)

DISHONORABLE SILENCE.

A Candidate and Party Dominated by Greed for Office.

There is much speculation as to the outcome at St. Louis, the chief question being: Can McKinley obtain the coveted nomination without committing himself upon the dangerous question of silver?

We incline to the belief that he can. The average delegate to that convention will represent the hunger for office first and his own or his constituents' convictions afterward, if at all. The platform of Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, for a silver platform if he can get it, but, if not, then the next best thing, is likely to be a popular one when the convention assembles.

Why should it be expected that this convention will reverse all republican precedents by suddenly insisting upon principle first and the offices afterwards? Hon. Webster Flanagan, of Texas, was a representative and a popular republican when he exclaimed in 1880: "What are we here for but the offices?" A party that has fused with populism to secure power in the southern states, that to-day holds the United States senate by a similar fusion with the cranks and enemies of sound finance, is not likely to jeopard any electoral votes by insistence upon clear affirmation of the true principles of finance.

McKinley has probably judged his party aright. We have yet to learn of a delegate or a delegation lost to him by his straddling. Threats there have been, but threats hurt nobody, and most of them have had a string attachment.

But with the people it will be different. The mistake McKinley is making, and his party is about to make in nominating him, is in assuming that the people, like themselves, are an organized greed for office. Nine-tenths of the people care nothing for the offices, care little who holds them. What they do care, what they have insisted and will insist, is that their president shall be a man of convictions, with the courage of his convictions.

Mr. McKinley will find that the shibboleth of protection will not suffice to bring the presidency to a man who dare not speak his mind on the greater question of finance. His silence of dishonor will be broken by the death-knell of his hopes.—Albany Argus.

ANOTHER SHOT FROM REED.

The Maine Man Again Shows His Contempt for McKinley.

Speaker Reed's disappointment in his canvass for the republican nomination has given a keen edge to his natural sharpness of tongue. He made McKinley chairman of the ways and means committee of the house which framed the so-called McKinley bill, and made the Ohio man a presidential possibility. Now McKinley has unmade him as a candidate.

Reed feels that the fates have been unkind, and that McKinley has been unjustly favored.

Reed spoke a day or two ago about McKinley being a straddlebug, referring to the latter's attitude touching the money issue. Later Reed told a reminiscence with as much pertinence. McKinley had been advertised as the "advance agent of prosperity." What Reed thinks of this is made plain in this story:

"Advance agent of prosperity," said he. "Humph! when I was a boy the advance agent of the circus would go through the country and cover the sides of barns and the fences with the most gorgeous posters of what the circus would be. There would be a long procession of knights in gold and silver armor, and ladies bedecked in silks and diamonds, mounted on beautiful Arabian steeds. There would be huge elephants, tigers, lions, camels, hippopotamuses and such, enough to stock a wilderness.

"When the circus came it was the usual little old one-ring affair, with one measly, flop-eared, slab-sided elephant, a mangy lion and a one-humped camel.

"It never came up to the show bills, but there was always at least one first-class acrobat who could ride two horses at once."—N. Y. World.

TALMAGE'S SERMONS.

Many Disconcerted Actors Make Failures of Their Parts.

Hisses and Groans Drive Them From the Stage, and the Curtain Rings Down on Blasted Life—A Beautiful Parallel Between This Life and the Drama.

Rev. Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Job xxvii., 23: "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

This allusion seems to be dramatic. The Bible more than once makes such allusions. Paul says: "We are made a theater or spectacle to angels and to men." It is evident from the text that some of the habits of theater goers were known in Job's time, because he describes an actor hissed off the stage. The impersonator comes on the boards and, either through lack of study of the part he is to take or inaptness or other incapacity, the audience is offended, and expresses its disapprobation and disgust by hissing. "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

My text suggests that each one of us is put on the stage of this world to take some part. What hardship and suffering and discipline great actors have undergone year after year that they might be perfected in their parts, you have often read. But we, put on the stage of this life to represent charity and faith and humility and helpfulness—what little preparation we have made, although we have three galleries of spectators, earth and Heaven and hell! Have we not been more attentive to the part taken by others than to the part taken by ourselves, and, while we needed to be looking at home and concentrating on our own duty, we have been criticising the other performers, and saying, "That was too high," or "too low," or "too feeble," or, "too extravagant," or "too tame," or "too demonstrative," while we ourselves were making a dead failure and preparing to be ignominiously hissed off the stage?

Each one is assigned to a place; no supernumeraries hanging around the drama of life to take this or that or the other part, as they may be called upon. No one can take our place. We can take no other place. Neither can we put off our character; no change of apparel can make us any one else than that which we eternally are.

Many make a failure of their part in the drama of life through dissipation. They have enough intellectual equipment and good address and generally unbounded. But they have a wine closet that contains all the forces for their social and business and moral overthrow. So far back as the year 959, King Edgar of England made a law that the drinking cups should have pins fastened at a certain point in their side, so that the indulger might be reminded to stop before he got to the bottom. But there are no pins projecting from the sides of the modern wine cup or beer mug, and the first point at which millions stop is at the gravelly bottom of their own grave. Dr. Sax, of France, has discovered something which all drinkers ought to know. He has found out that alcohol, in every shape, whether of wine or brandy or beer, contains parasitic life called bacillus potumaniae. By a powerful microscope these living things are discovered, and when you take strong drink you take them into the stomach and then into your blood, and, getting into the crimson canals of life, they go into every tissue of your body, and your entire organism is taken posession of by these noxious infinitesimals. When in delirium tremens a man sees every form of reptilian life, it seems it is only these parasites of the brain in exaggerated size. It is not a hallucination that the victim is suffering from. He only sees in the room what is actually crawling and rioting in his own brain. Every time you take strong drink you swallow these maggots, and every time the imbiber of alcohol in any shape feels vertigo or rheumatism or nausea it is only the jubilee of these maggots. Efforts are being made for the discovery of some germicide that can kill the parasites of alcoholism, but the only thing that will ever extirpate them is abstinence from alcohol and teetotal abstinence, to which I would before God swear all these young men and old.

America is a fruitful country, and we raise large crops of wheat and corn and oats, but the largest crop we raise in this country is the crop of drunkards. With sickle made out of the sharp edges of the broken glass of bottle and demijohn they are cut down, and there are whole swathes of them, whole winrows of them, and it takes all the hospitals and penitentiaries and graveyards and cemeteries to hold this harvest of hell. Some of you are going down under this evil, and the never-dying worm of alcoholism has wound around you one of its coils, and by next New Year's day it will have another coil around you, and it will after a while put a coil around your tongue and a coil around your brain and a coil around your lung and a coil around your foot and a coil around your heart; and some day this never-dying worm will with one spring tighten all the coils at once, and in the last twist of that awful convultion you will cry out: "Oh, my God!" and be gone. The greatest of dramatists in the tragedy of "The Tempest" sends staggering across the stage Stephano, the drunken butler; but across the stage of human life strong drink sends kingly and queenly and princely natures staggering forward against the footlights of conspicuity and then staggering back into failure till the world is impatient for their disappearance, and human and diabolical voices join in hissing them off the stage.

Many also make a failure in the drama of life through indolence. They are always making calculations how little they can do for the compensation they get. There are more lazy ministers, lawyers, doctors, merchants, artists and farmers than have ever been counted upon. The community is full of laggards and shirkers. I can tell it from the way they crawl along the street, from their tardiness in meeting engagements, from the lethargies that seem to hang to the foot when they lift it, to the hand when they put it out, to the words when they speak.

Two young men in a store. In the morning the one goes to his post the last minute or one minute behind. The other is ten minutes before the time and has his hat and coat hung up, and is at his post waiting for duty. The one is ever and anon, in the afternoon, looking at his watch to see if it is not most time to shut up. The other stays half an hour after he might go, and when asked why, says he wanted to look over some entries he had made to be sure he was right, or to put up some goods that had been left out of place. The one is very touchy about doing work not exactly belonging to him. The other is glad to help the other clerks in their work. The first will be a prolonged nothing, and he will be poorer at 60 years of age than at 20. The other will be a merchant prince. Indolence is the cause of more failures in all occupations than you have ever suspected. People are too lazy to do what they can do, and want to undertake that which they can not do. In the drama of life they don't want to be a common soldier, carrying a halberd across the stage, or a falconer, or a mere attendant, and so they lounge about the scenes till they shall be called to something great. After a while, by some accident of prosperity or circumstances, they get into the place for which they have no qualification. And very soon, if the man be a merchant, he is going around asking his creditors to compromise for ten cents on the dollar. Or, if a clergyman, he is making tirades against the ingratitude of churches. Or, if an attorney, by unskillful management he loses a case by which widows and orphans are robbed of their portion. Or, if a physician, he by malpractice gives his patient rapid transit from this world to the next. Our incompetent friend would have made a passable horse doctor, but he wanted to be professor of anatomy in a university. He could have sold enough confectionery to have supported his family, but he wanted to have a sugar refinery like the Havemeyers. He could have mended shoes, but he wanted to amend the constitution of the United States. Toward the end of life these people are out of patience, out of money, out of friends, out of everything. They go to the poorhouse, or keep out of it by running in debt to all the grocery and dry goods stores that will trust them. People begin to wonder when the curtain will drop on the scene. After a while, leaving nothing but their compliments to pay doctor, undertaker, and Gabriel Grubb, the grave-digger, they disappear. Exeunt! Hissed off the stage.

Others fail in the drama of life through demonstrated selfishness. They make all the rivers empty into their sea, all the roads of emolument end at their door, and they gather all the plumes of honor for their brow. They help no one, encourage no one, rescue no one. "How big a pile of money can I get?" and "How much of the world can I absorb?" are the chief questions. They feel about the common people as the Turks felt toward the Asapi, or common soldiers, considering them of no use except to fill up the ditches with their dead bodies while the other troops walked over them to take the fort. After a while this prince of worldly success is sick. The only interest society has in his illness is the effect that his possible decease may have on the money market. After a while he dies. Great newspaper capitals announce how he started with nothing and ended with everything. Although for sake of appearance some people put handkerchiefs to the eye, there is not one genuine tear shed. The heirs sit up all night when he lies in state, discussing what the old fellow has probably done with his money. It takes all the livery stables within two miles to furnish funeral equipages, and all the mourning stores are kept busy in selling weeds of grief. The stonecutters send in proposals for a monument. The minister at the obsequies reads of the resurrection, which makes the hearers fear that if the unscrupulous financier does not come up in the general rising he will try to get a "corner" on tombstones and graveyard fences. All good men are glad that the moral nuisance has been removed. The Wall street speculators are glad because there is more room for themselves. The heirs are glad because they get possession of the long-delayed inheritance. Dropping all his plumes, every certificate of all his stock, every bond of all his investments, every dollar of all his fortune, he departs, and all the rolling of Dead March in Saul and all the pageantry of his interment, and all the exquisiteness of sarcophagus, and all the extravagance of epitaphology can not hide the fact that my text has come again to tremendous fulfillment: "Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

You see the clapping comes before the hiss. The world cheers before it damns. So it is said the deadly asp tickles before it stings. Going up, is he? Hurrah! Stand back and let his galloping horse dash by, a whirlwind of plated harness and tinkling headgear and arched neck. Drink deep of his Madeira and cognac. Boast of how well you know him. All hats off as he passes. Bask for days and years in the sunlight of his prosperity. Going down, is he? Pretend to be near-sighted so that you can not see him as he walks past. When men ask you if you know him, halt and hesitate as though you were trying to call up a dim memory and say: "Well, y-e-s, yes; I believe I once did know him, but have not seen him for a long while." Cross a different ferry from the one where you used to meet him lest he ask for financial help. When you started life he spoke a good word for you at the bank. Talk down his credit now that his fortunes are collapsing. He put his name on two of your notes; tell him that you have changed your mind about such things, and that you never indorse. After a while his matters come to a dead halt, and an assignment or suspension or sheriff's sale takes place. You say: "He ought to have stopped sooner. Just as I expected. He made too big a splash in the world. Glad the balloon has burst. Ha, ha!" Applause when he went up, sibilant derision when he came down. "Men shall clap their hands at him and hiss him out of his place." So, high up amid the crags the eagle flutters dust into the eyes of the roebuck, which then, with eyes blinded, goes tumbling over the precipice, the great antlers crashing on the rocks.

Now, compare some of these goings out of life with the departure of men and women, who, in the drama of life, take the part that God assigned them and then went away honored of men and applauded of the Lord Almighty. It is about fifty years ago that in a comparatively small apartment of the city a newly married pair set up a home. The first guest invited to that residence was the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Bible given the bride on the day of her espousal was the guide of that household. Days of sunshine were followed by days of shadow. Did you ever know a home that for 50 years had no vicissitudes? The young woman who left her father's house for her young husband's home started out with a parental benediction and good advice she will never forget. Her mother said to her the day before the marriage: "Now, my child, you are going away from us. Of course, as long as your father and I live you will feel that you can come to us at any time. But your home will be elsewhere. From long experience I find it is best to serve God. It is very bright with you now, my child, and you may think you can get along without religion, but the day will come when you will want God, and my advice is, establish a family altar, and, if need be, conduct the worship yourself." The counsel was taken and that young wife consecrated every room in the house to God.

Years passed and there were in that home hilarities, but they were good and healthful; and sorrows, but they were comforted. Marriages as bright as orange blossoms could make them, and burials in which all hearts were riven. They have a family lot in the cemetery, but all the place is illuminated with stories of resurrection and reunion. The children of the household that lived have grown up and they are all Christians, the father and the mother leading the way, and children following. What care the mother took of wardrobe and education, character and manners! How hard she sometimes worked. When the head of the household was unfortunate in business she sewed until her fingers were numb and bleeding at the tips. And what close calculation of economies and what ingenuity in refitting the garments of the elder children for the younger, and only God kept account of that mother's sideaches and headaches and heartaches and the tremulous prayers by the side of the sick child's cradle and by the couch of this one fully grown. The neighbors often noticed how tired she looked, and old acquaintances hardly knew her in the street. But without complaint she waited and toiled and endured and accomplished all these years. The children are out in the world—an honor to themselves and their parents. After awhile the mother's last sickness comes. Children and grandchildren, summoned from afar, come softly into the room one by one, for she is too weak to see more than one at a time. She runs her dying fingers lovingly through their hair, and tells them not to cry, and that she is going now, but they will meet again in a little while in a better world, and then kisses them good-by and says to each: "God bless and keep you, my dear child!" The day of the obsequies comes, and the officiating clergyman tells the story of wifely and motherly endurance, and many hearts on earth and in Heaven echo the sentiment, and as she is carried off the stage of this mortal life there are cries of: "Faithful unto death;" "She hath done what she could," while overpowering all the voices of earth and Heaven is the plaudit of God, who watched her from first to last, saying: "Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

But what became of the father of that household? He started as a young man in business and had a small income, and, having got a little ahead, sickness in the family swept it all away. He went through all the business panics of 40 years, met many losses, and suffered many betrayals, but kept right on trusting in God, whether business was good or poor, setting his children a good example and giving them the best of counsel, and never a prayer did he offer for all those years but they were mentioned in it. He is old now, and realizes it can not be long before he must quit all these scenes. But he is going to leave his children an inheritance of prayer and Christian principles which all the defalcations of earth can never touch, and as he goes out of the world the church of God blesses him and the poor ring his door bell to see if he is any better, and his grave is surrounded by a multitude who went on foot and stood there before the procession of carriages came up, and some say: "There will be no one to take his place," and others say: "Who will pity me now?" and others remark: "He shall be held in everlasting remembrance." And as the drama of his life closes all the vociferation and bravos and encores that ever shook the amphitheaters of earthly spectacle were tame and feeble compared with, the long, loud thunders of approval that shall break from the crowd of witnesses in the piled-up gallery of the heavens. Choose ye between the life that shall close by being hissed off the stage and the life that shall close amid acclamations supernal and archangelic.

BACKACHE.

From the Press, New York City.

Few people have suffered more from pain in the back than Mrs. Lillie B. Newell of No. 2318 Second Avenue, New York City. For several years she was so afflicted with this distressing malady that she was hardly able to get around, and could do little to care for her children which made her suffering all the harder to bear. Her husband, Charles Newell, who is a well-known New York optician, tried in every way to find a remedy for his wife, but no medicine seemed to have the power to remove her pain.

Mrs. Glynn, a sister of Mrs. Newell, is a professional nurse, and was familiar with the symptoms of her sister's sickness. Mrs. Newell was away on a visit when a reporter called upon her, but Mrs. Glynn, who lives at No. 416 East One-hundred and-twentieth Street, told the story of her sister's recovery.

A doctor was called when Mrs. Newell's condition became serious and he prescribed small pink pills which, in a short time, relieved the woman's pain as no other medicine has done. "After awhile," Mrs. Glynn told the reporter, "we learned that the medicine the physician was giving my sister was nothing more than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Knowing by experience how excellent a remedy these pills were, Mrs. Newell bought some at a drug store and continued taking them. The effect was most gratifying, for in six months my sister was perfectly well and the pain in her back was nothing more than an unpleasant memory. Both she and I have recommended the Pink Pills to other people, who have not failed to find them all that is claimed. All doctors my sister had been treated by, before taking the pills, had done her no apparent good."

Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose form, by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. The price at which these Pills are sold makes a course of treatment inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

MATRIMONIAL AGENCIES.

Some Advantageous Alliances Effected by Their Assistance in France.

A very profitable form of swindling is that of the matrimonial agencies which are now worked in France in a manner entirely unknown, says the London Spectator, to M. De Foy, who was the real originator of marriage by intermediary. There are, of course, offices where preliminary fees are asked and where wife seekers and ladies yearning for lords are quietly swindled after having been told to go to the opera, the salon or the fashionable church of Sainte-Clotilde. The strange part of the matrimonial agency scheme is that you never know, when in society whether some banker, priest or old lady of fierce virtue and mystical tendencies may not be a husband or wife broker. There are young ladies not too thin-skinned, head waiters in certain restaurants, livery stable keepers, cloistered nuns, notaries and lady doctors of the obstetric school. These are only a portion of the army of workers in the interests of Cupid. There are at present in Paris two wealthy American girls who have married titles, upon the wedding day of each of whom a very handsome commission was paid to one of these intermediaries, of course without the knowledge of the wife.

EAGLES AS GAME DRIVERS.

Sometimes They Enable Gunners to Get Shots at Wild Ducks.

Eagles are sometimes of considerable service to a hunter, and this is especially true of the eagles of the Potomac river at Wide Water, where President Cleveland shoots. According to an American Field writer, eagles on a calm day often give the hunters shots which they would not otherwise get.

The eagle goes flying up and down the stream, and on seeing a flock of ducks goes toward them, hoping to get a cripple, being unable to capture ducks as the peregrine falcon does. When the ducks see the eagle coming they jump into the air and go looking for a safer locality, and this is where the gunner comes in. The gunner's place of concealment in a blind is not nearly so safe as the eagle's vicinity, but the ducks think it is safer till the shot goes through their feathers.

Three or four eagles will keep all the ducks on the move, and the gunners get good sport where they otherwise would not have dirtied their gun barrels. The eagles sometimes steal cripples from the gunner, but the knowing man does not hurt the birds, getting his pay back on calm days.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

BIMETALLISM.

[By G. M. C., of Walton.]

To the Editor of the Recorder:

For a time the beneficial effects of the Sherman Law were very apparent. The monetary stringency existing in Wall Street was relieved by the monthly issue of treasury notes and business revived. But towards the close of 1890 the great banking house of Baring Brothers, in London, failed, imparting disaster to the whole commercial world. The bank of England was so hard pressed as to be compelled to borrow $15,000,000 in gold from the Bank of France, Large blocks of American securities were returned to this country and thrown upon the market, and in 1891 about $68,000,000 of gold were exported in excess of imports. Business, however, moved along monthly as the Sherman notes took the place of gold, and all the time financial storms raged in Europe, while everything in the United States was serene. And so matters stood until Mr. Cleveland was elected in 1892.

The gold standardists, at heart, have always been opposed to the "Sherman Law," and had intended to force its repeal at the earlist possible moment, and knowing that Mr. Cleveland was the most inveterate enemy the silver interest had among all the prominent men of the country, an effort was made immediately upon his election to repeal the only law that was keeping the country safe from the financial distress that prevailed in all parts of Europe and even in far away Australia.

In the 52d Congress this effort was made and failed. But trouble began to brew early in 1893. It seemed that some understanding might have existed between the Administration and the bankers. Mr. Cleveland used all the power of his office, and the great banks of New York refused to extend credit and exerted all their influence to have the law repealed. In many cases they called in their loans, forcing a large number of banks into liquidation and thousands of business houses to go down in ruin. This was the work of the bankers, aided and abetted by the Administration and its almost servile henchmen.

The greatest and most disastrous panic of history struck the country, and idleness, poverty and suffering cast their shadows of Cimmerian darkness over every quarter of the land.

It is one of the greatest of wonders that it was seriously claimed, and by many good people seriously believed, that a law, which up to the spring of 1893, had been unmistakably beneficial in its working, which had stood as a breakwater when the tides of financial trouble were running high in gold standard countries, was the cause of the disturbance which finally reached our shores.

The McKinley law was in force at that same time, yet the life long advocates of "tariff reform" forgot, for a time, their opposition to protection and loudly proclaimed that the "Sherman Law" was the "Jonah." Republicans, many of whom claimed to be bimetallists, joined in the tirade against the silver law, hoping to thus protect the McKinley Law.

Mr. Cleveland was elected upon the tariff reform issue, and yet so carried away was he with the gold craze as to urge in every possible way the repeal of the Sherman law as the one great and only important issue before the people.

We were afflicted with a dreadful money famine, and it was actually claimed that a law which was giving us $4,000,000 of new money each month was the cause of the famine. With as much reason it could have been said in the midst of a food famine, that food was scarce because there was too much of it. But it was argued, in all seriousness, that if the supply of "Sherman notes" was cut off money would be again abundant, and business would boom. It was by such mendacious arguments that the people have been led, step by step, until we have just about reached the "stepping off place." Is it not time for us to hearken to some other propositions than those coming from the treacherous parties, who, to accommodate their own views, seek the nation's confidence only to betray it? Have there not been enough betrayals to satisfy the most credulous? Shall we listen to the special pleadings from the men who have lured us to the verge of total temporal destruction?

In the month of June, 1893, the East Indian mint was closed to the coinage of silver on private account. In ten days silver dropped from 82 cts an ounce to 63. Then it rallied back to 70 or 72, and there it stood until the Sherman Law was repealed. This was done mainly for the purpose of sustaining the gold value of the rupee (a silver coin). As the gold value of the rupee fell, the East India Government, heavily in debt to England, had to turn over mose and more rupees to pay a given amount in gold. It was certain that the Sherman Law would be repealed, and in consequence silver would fall heavily, carrying the rupee down with it, and injuring the East Indian government in its remittances to England. So the mint of that country closed in the hope that the rupee by the limitatiom of its coinage would retain the value which it then had—about 16 pence in gold—with silver at par the rupee is worth 24 pence. This action was used as an argument in favor of the repeal and in addition the treasury department for the months of July, August, September and October, 1892, only bought two-thirds, the amount of silver that the law required to be purchased. The total amount bought was less than 12,000,000 ounces, when it should have been 18,000,000.

The excuse given for not buying more was that silver speculators had the market cornered, and were charging too much. All this time the price was close to 70 cts., and as a rule there was only a small fraction of a cent difference between the silver accepted and that rejected. The absurdity and even falsity of the claim is glaringly apparent.

Speculation is always rife in Wall street, when as in this case, the purcase is compulsory. The secretary had no more right to refuse to buy silver because he thought it was too high, than he had to go on the market as a bear and attempt to force the market down. "Bulling" a market is just as legitimate as "bearing" it.

This action was plainly intended to keep the price of silver down and make its repeal come easier. And right here it is pertinent to observe that this very action on the part of the autocrat of the treasury department, shows that he was willing to go some lengths to help the great New York bankers in their nefarious scheme. It was an open violation of a mandatory provision of the law, and was clearly impeachable as any official dereliction that ever occurred in the United States. There was at that time about 140,000,000 ounces of silver bullion in the treasury. Gold standardists always claimed that the "market price" was the true measure of the value of that bullion. It was, therefore, the interest of the government to raise the price rather than force it down. If the price fell 1c, and 1,000,000 ounces were bought, the government saved $10,000 on the purchase. But the 140,000,000 ounces in the treasury also dropped a cent an ounce, amounting to $1,400,000. Truly an object lesson in great financiering. Save $10,000 and lose $1,400,000 by the same transaction. And the law declared it to be the policy of the government to maintain the parity of the two metals, which could be done by raising the price of silver bullion.

The repeal did not restore prosperity. When the act was under consideration it was shouted all over the lands that prosperity would return within ten days after the Sherman Law was out of the way. This was the cry of the goldite Republicans, the cuckoo Democrats and the big bankers and business men at the great money centers. Their statements loom up in the history of these times as specimens of monumental mendacity that have never been equalled in this or any other age.

Ten days and ten months and twice ten months have passed away and prosperity seems to be a "dim ghost in the mists" of the clouded future. The fever heat of the panic has abated and the country has settled down into a comatose state with business apparently dead. It is doubtful whether any five previous years in the history of our country had ever shown as much actual destitution and suffering as was crowded into the year 1894.

But the business of the country cannot be always stagnant. Something had to be done. People had to live, and to a certain extent their wants had to be supplied. The most necessary and pressing repairs had to be made. So in the spring of 1895 the long promised revival took place. There was a moderate activity in business and prices rose. It was to the dead quietude of the previous 18 months very like a boom. But it was not substantial. New enterprises were not begun. The country was only making repairs and supplying its most pressing necessities. Nevertheless, according to the goldites, were making hops, steps and jumps toward prosperity, and nothing stood in the way of a glorious resurrection but the "wild eyed silver lunatics," who insisted on the restoration of the constitutional money of the country.

And here, as being pertinent to the propositions laid down by Ex-Speaker Crisp, the following from the Financial News, the highest Wall Street authority, may be interesting to those who shut their eyes and swallow everything that comes from that quarter. Presenting matter deserving the serious consideration of all thinking men, it says: "Some of our friends here advised us that the silver issue had been settled by the vote of the Lower House in Congress. In the minds of some people the hanging of John Brown settled the anti-slavery movement. It was also claimed, when the old abolitionists were driven out of the cities, and beaten and rotton-egged that their cause was killed.

The silver movement is more important than that great issue. It is not dead; it does not even languish; the people are awakening, and will be heard from very soon. The present bad times are due entirely to anti-silver legislation and will endure until the popular, erroneous impressions are changed, and silver remonetized.

Our American bankers and business men are honestly and practictically advocating monometallism, they think that the silver men are wrong. They believe that free coinage would prove commercially disastrous to us. We take the liberty of quoting the London Financial News on this point as follows;

"There is a plain moral in the remark, that if the United States would venture to cut herself adrift from Europe and take outright to silver, she would have all America and Asia at her back, and would command the markets of both continents. The barrier of a custom house. The bond of silver would be stronger than any bond of free trade. There can be no doubt about it that if the United States were to adopt a free silver basis to morrow British trade would be ruined before the year was out. Every American would be protected not only at home but at every other market. Of course the United States would have to suffer to a certain extent through having to pay her obligations abroad in gold, but the loss of exchange under this head would be a mere drop in the bucket compared with the profits to be reaped from South America and Asia, to say nothing of Europe. The marvel is that the United States have not, long ago, seized the opportunity. It has been a piece of luck that it has never to the Americans to scoop us out of the world's markets by going on a silver basis, and it might serve us right, if, irritated by the contemptuous apathy to the gravity of the silver problem, the Americans retaliate by freezing out gold. It could be easily done."

A Free Silver Republican.

Special to the Recorrer.

Great solicitude is manifested in high places about the depreciation of the currency. But what about the depreciation of everything else? The currency at best is not more than three per cent. of the entire worth of the country.

A man is a scamp who wants to pay his debts with fifty-cent dollars, and he is another who wants his debtors to pay him in appreciated dollars.

A gold dollar measured by itself never fluctuates in value, but measured by everything else in the earth, on the earth, and in the heavens above the earth, has gone up more than double, and the gold corner did it.

The farmer wants no set of men in this country, or elsewhere, to steal his bushel measure, make a new one of double size, and forbid him to use his old one measuring his grain.

The definition of sound money as now understood is money that the plain people never hear the sound of.

Half prices for farm product, two prices for taxes and trust prices for supplies. Down on your marrow bones to the European money changers and the gold corner to go right on.

The corner in gold means distressed farmers, bankrupt merchants, idle manufacturers, enslaved laborers and gorged money pinchers.

The gold trust is the daddy of all the other trusts.

When silver was demonetized in 1873 its ratio with gold was 15½ to 1; that is the silver in a silver dollar was worth more than the gold in a gold dollar. It was not, therefore, demonetized because it was plentiful or cheap, but because gold could not be cornered without degrading silver.

If gold had been demonetized instead of silver, the gold in a gold dollar would be worth less than fifty cents. If gold were not used as money at all, the metal itself would not be worth twenty-five cents on the dollar, so there are seventy five per cent, of fiat even in the gold dollar. Let American manhood from now on assert itself.

FREE SILVER REPUBLICAN.

IF the St Louis convention straddles the financial question, the Republicans will seek to make the tariff the issue in the next campaign, but should it make a clear declaration on the money question, and the Democrats again indulge in a meaningless, straddling platitude, on that subject, then the Republicans will bring the money question to the front. If the St. Louis and Chicago conventions adopt the same financial plank, the tariff is the only real issue that can be presented this fall, and the fight will cover the same ground that was gone over during the last presidential campaign.

R. F. HARRISON, for twenty-eight years clerk of the Carroll county court, died suddenly, one day last week, while serving on the grand jury. He was an ex-confederate, and was very popular in his county. He was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county clerk.

THE drouth this spring was very injurious to the fruit in many localities.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1896. NO. 32.

IN speaking of the result of last Saturday's conventions, the Courier-Journal says of the Kentucky Democrats:

"They have spit upon the fathers of the party whose name and organization they claim—have proclaimed Jefferson an ignoramus, Jackson a conspirator, Benton a knave, Cleveland a traitor."

It should have added, "and sat down most awfully hard on the Courier-Journal." The C.-J. is going to have the Democrats "walking through a slaughter house into an open grave," some more, like it said they were doing when they nominated Mr. Cleveland for the presidency the last time.

ALTHOUGH the number of the Judges of the Court of Appeals has been increased to seven, that court continues to drop behind with its business. Under the new constitution many new and perplexing questions arise, which to dispose of, requires much labor on the part of the Judges. That class of the court's business has been very much increased, while there has been no decrease in the other character of litigation that constantly flows towards that tribunal. Public interest demands that something be done by which the business of the court of last resort in this State can be expedited.

THE RECORDER is in receipt of the Democratic Hand Book issued by the Democratic State Central Committee. It is a useful manuel to those who take an interest in statistics relating to the Democratic party in Kentucky. Send fifty cents to R. H. Ingram, Secretary Democratic State Central Committee, box 684, Louisville, Ky., and secure a copy.

SENATOR BLACKBURN told the Louisville Commercial of the 27th inst., that he would support the nominee of the Chicago convention no matter what platform it adopts. No person can say, truthfully, that the Courier-Journal has ever made a like declaration. It will fall down again as sure as the gold bugs do not dominate that convention.

MAJOR MCKINLEY'S nomination for the presidency is assured if the delegates that are instructed for him carry out their instructions. If it required the votes of two-thirds of all the delegates in the convention to nominate, the Major might yet have a stormy voyage before him, but in the Republican convention a majority nominates.

THE silver men swept the State in the county mass meetings last Saturday. Of the 910 delegates that will compose the convention that meets in Lexington to-day, 520 are instructed for silver, and 300 for gold. All the counties in this Congressional District went for silver, except Campbell and Kenton—they did not instruct.

JUDGE HELM overruled Scott Jackson's motion for a new trial, and sentenced him to be hanged June 30th, which falls on Tuesday. After passing sentence the court granted a stay of judgment for sixty days, in which time the case will be taken to the Court of Appeals.

No matter what the result of next Saturday's canvention may be, the minority should yield gracefully to the majority, and strike hands in a united and determined march against the common enemy.—Winchester Democrat.

Right you are, on that proposition.

MR. HARRISON is, seemingly, not taking much interest in politics just now. Acting under the advice of some of his friends he is keeping himself in an attitude to become the most acceptable to all the factions in case the St. Louis convention should develop a rangle.

THE way to secure harmony in a party is for the minority to submit to the will of the majority. The faction that is defeated at Chicago should take its medicine without a squeel. That is just what the Republican minority in the St. Louis convention will do.

THE auditorium in which the Republican convention will be held in St. Louis was not damaged to any extent by the terrible cyclone that visited that city last week.

THE cyclone that visited St. Louis last Wednesday evening was the most destructive, to both life and property, of any that ever occurred in this country.

The Mass Meeting.

The Democrats of this county met in mass convention in the court house in Burlington last Saturday at 2 p. m. The meeting was called to order by D. E. Castleman, chairman of the County Democratic Executive committee, who stated its object to be to elect ten delegates and ten alternates to attend the Democratic State convention which meets in Lexington to day. J. G. Furnish was elected chairman, and W. L. Riddell, secretary of the meeting.

On motion and second the chair appointed the following committee to select the delegates and alternates: J. F. Grant, Owen Watts, T. F. Curley, W. B. Grubbs, and B. L. Rice. The committee reported the following delegates and alternates:

Delegates—	Alternates—
N. S. Walton,	J. Frank Grant,
J. G. Furnish,	J. C. Revill,
John Stephens,	O. S. Watts,
Omega Rogers,	E. L. Grant,
Reuben Conner,	John Byland,
W. B. Grubbs,	Milton Souther,
B. L. Rice,	J. W. Kennedy,
John Kennedy,	David Houston,
B. W. Adams,	W. W. Grimsley,
T. C. S. Ryle.	L. C. Cowen.

The report of the committee was adopted.

The following resolutions were adopted:

We hold that the paramount issue now before the people of the United States relates to the monetary system to be adopted by this country in the near future, and upon that issue we declare that the Federal Constitution names silver and gold together as the money metals of the United States. Duty to the people requires that the Democratic party shall continue to battle for bimetallism until its efforts shall be crowned with success. Therefore, be it resolved.

1. That we demand the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold into primary or redemption money at the ratio of 16 to 1 without waiting for the action of any other Government.

2. That we are opposed to the issue of interest-bearing bonds of the United States in time of peace, as especially are we opposed to placing the Treasury of the Government under the control of any syndicate of bankers either domestic or foreign and the issuance of bonds to be sold by them at an enormous profit for the purpose of supplying the Federal Treasury with gold to maintain the policy of gold monometallism.

3. That we favor the retirement from circulation of all Treasury notes, coin notes and greenbacks by supplying their stead silver and gold certificates.

4. That the delegates from this county are hereby instructed to cast their votes for the Hon. N. S. Walton for delegate from the Sixth Kentucky District to the National Convention at Chicago, with J. Frand Grant as alternate.

5. That we commend the manly and dignified course of Senator Blackburn in the contest for United States Senator in the last Legislature, and recognizing his right as a Democratic nominee, we condemn in unmeasured terms the action of those Democratic Representatives who withheld from him their support and thereby defeated the Democratic party and robbed it of a Democratic representative in the Senate of the United States, and we also condemn the action of Governor Bradley in calling out the state militia as an act that was unwarranted and wholly unnecessary, and we commend the action of those Democrats who could not be intimidated by the popular resort of the Republican party and would not permit the fraudulent election of a United States Senator even under bayonet rule.

6. That we recognize and heartily approve the manner in which our Representative, the Hon. J. G. Furnish, who has represented this county in the last two consecutive terms of the Legislature of this State, who has maintained his loyalty to the Democratic party and his faithfulness to his constituents. Therefore we indorse him as a representative of his people, and especially do we indorse his action in sustaining the Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn in his candidacy for reelection to the United States Senate.

Resolved, That we give the Louisville Courier Journal a much needed rest as a Democratic orgrn.

G. C. Graddy offered the following as a substitute for the first of the above resolutions:

"We indorse sound money, consisting of gold and silver, as the constitutional legal tender money of our government, and are willing to trust the national Democratic Convention of 1896 to decide our future as to the system of coining this money." The above was rejected by an overwhelming majority.

NOTES.

The circuit court room was well filled with Democrats. A few Republicans who anticipated a political scrap were on hand, and fooled.

The meeting was overwhelmingly in favor of silver, and the proceedings were harmonious.

Col. Graddy was the only gold man who proposed to take any part in the proceedings.

The convention was composed of Democrats from every neighborhood in the county.

Hon. N. S. Walton made a splendid speech following the introduction of the resolutions endorsing him for delegate to the national convention. He wanted to substitute the name of J. Frank Grant, but the convention would not have it that way.

Dr. Grubbs and B. L. Rice each made short and pointed speeches on the resolutions.

In response to the resolution endorsing his course as a representative, Dr. Furnish made a rattling good Democratic speech.

Hon. Reuben Conner was opposed to the resolution censuring those Democratic members of the legislature who refused to support the caucus nominee for United States Senator.

Judge Riddell's explanation of his opposition to the resolution denouncing Gov. Bradley for calling out the militia, created a big laugh.

STATE NEWS.

Scott county will take another vote on the local option law.

A prisoner in the jail at Liberty picked the lock with a wire nail and made his escape.

Two daughters and three sons of Frederick Deck, of Middleburg, were married in one week.

The separate coach law has been decided constitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The race mare Yo Tambien was accidentally killed at the McGrathiana farm near Lexington.

It is expected that the school census this year will show a material increase over that of five years ago.

Georgetown's new ice factory, and the electric car line are in operation. The Georgetownians are a get there people.

Near Moorefield, Nicholas county Mrs. Pauline Porter, quite an old lady, fell from a fence breaking one of her arms.

Miss Nora Teal, of Farmers, was rendered unconscious by a lightning shock, but recovered after one hour had elapsed.

It is thought that the Court of Appeals may be able to pass upon and decide the Scott Jackson case at the present term.

Judge Thompson, of Louisville, has decided that bicycles are vehicles, and are entitled to the rights and other privileges of other vehicles.

James A. McKenzie, the United States Minister, at Peru, is suffering from small-pox. The case is a mild one, and the patient is progressing favorably.

Five negroes have been arrested at Franklin, Ky., charged with starting the fire that recently destroyed business property in that place worth $30,000

About 5,000 witnessed the hanging of James DeWitt at Grayson last Thursday for the murder of his wife. He was aged 25 years and was a native of Rowan county.

Sixteen convicts in a body were released at the Frankfort pen. last week by reason of a recent decision in regard to good time giving the convict seven days per month instead of five.

A band of regulators waited upon J. Russell Maran near Greenup, and, after coating him with roofing paint pelted him with stale eggs. Stella Rutledge, his companion, escaped by climbing an apple tree.

The row in Rev. Hale's church at Owensboro is still in progress. An effort is now being made to expel Dr. Kembly, the richest member of the church, for renting a house to be used for the sale of liquor.

Bowling Green Advocate: "A silver extremist down in Western Kentucky withdrew from the church the other day because the choir sang 'On the Happy Golden Shore.' Politics and religion should never be mixed."

Rev. Peter Vinegar, Lexington's colored preacher has announced the following text from which he will preach during this month: "Thirteen Men Coming down the Dirt Road." "A Damn Hot Day." "Death in the Path." "Hell in Lexington, Ky." "Watch that Smoke."

At Ford's Crossing, Samuel Ryan shot and killed his brother-in-law, Mitchell Wise, during a quarrel ovsome property. Both are farmers. Ryan was arrested, but was released on bail. Mrs. Wise, who was a Ryan, had inherited some property, and over the distribution of this the quarrel leading to the killing arose.

Miss Christina Blackschmith, of Lexington, was found, one morning last week, dead on the side of the 'pike near Falmouth. There were two bullet holes in her breast, the other through the heart. By her side lay a revolver with two empty chambers. She would have become a mother in about three months. Some think she suicided while others believe she was murdered.

Paul E. Goetz, the Cincinnati baker who attempted suicide at Lexington, three weeks ago by hanging, filed suit for $25,000 against the city and J. R. Jewell, Judge of the Police Court. Goetz was arrested and held to keep the peace, his wife charging him with cruelly treating her. He was released on a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the Police Judge had no jurisdiction in Justice of the Peace cases.

The condition of Kentucky's credit away from home is deplorable. A New York firm from whom the State has been buying cane to be used in the prison chair factory has an old unpaid warrant of $800 against the State. This administration hasn't been paying the State's old debts, treating these as if they belonged to some one else, because made under Democratic rule, but has been paying cash or monthly for the cane it gets. The company grew tired of getting cash for present shipments and nothing for its old debt, and a car load worth 11,000 which came yesterday came not only C. O. D., but with it came a draft. The Warden had promised to pay for this particular car load at the end of the month, but had to hunt up the Auditor and provide for immediate payment.—Capital.

The long litigated and well-known case of J. F. McIlvain vs. M. Grubbs was finally decided last Thursday by the Kentucky Court of Appeals. In 1890 McIlvain sued Grubbs in the Kenton Chancery Court, alleging that he and Grubbs had been engaged for some years in the grocery business, under the firm name of M. Grubbs & Co., and that Grubbs had defrauded him and misappropriated firm proceeds. The trial of the case consumed several years, and it was a bitterly contested litigation. McIlvain won, obtaining a judgement against Grubbs for over $5000, on the charges set out in his petition. Grubbs took the case to the Court of Appeals, and that court in its decision reduces the amount of the judgment to $4000 with 6 per cent interest.

The editor of this paper is both surprised and gratified at the mark of esteem manifested by Gov. Bradley in appointing him to be one of the trustees, as will be seen in another column, of the $100,000 school of reform, which the last Legislature directed to be built. As the law requires that there shall be two Democrats in the Board, we do not suppose any objection can be raised to our accepting the position. If there is, it is all the same, for we have accepted it and sent the renewed expressions of distinguished consideration. For many years we have held Gov. Bradley in high, personal esteem and the appointment is the more gratifying as proof that this esteem is not entirely one-sided. Upon the trustees will devolve the selection of a site for the Reformatory and its supervision, there being more honor and work than emoluments attached to the office, however. It may be that we can get it located at Stanford and if no other locality can put up a better claim, we shall use our best endeavors to that end.—Stanford Journal.

THE Republican delegates of Kentucky who are pledged to name Gov. Bradley for President will be on hand at St. Louis to insist that the candidate nominated shall be a sound-money man, and that the platform shall declare for sound money in terms that can not be mistaken or misunderstood.—Louisville Commercial.

Then the Kentucky delegates will never insist on the nomination of Major McKinley, for there is no certainty as to his financial views, if he has any.

CAPSIZED.

Ferry Boat Katherine Wrecked by Wind at Cairo, Ill.

Eleven Persons Were Drowned—The Captain, Engineer, Clerk and One Passenger Make Their Escape—Bodies of Three of the Drowned Recovered.

CAIRO, Ill., May 27.—The most terrible accident in the history of Cairo happened Tuesday morning shortly after eight o'clock, when the ferry-boat Katherine capsized, and 11 persons were drowned.

The names of the lost are: Charles Gilhofer, Richard Thurman, Bertha Stanley, May Jones, all residents of Cairo; Mrs. Shannon and baby, of Bird's Point, Mo., and an unknown colored woman, all passengers on the boat.

Wood Rittenhouse, superintendent; George Davis, colored, employed in painting the boat; Louis Hall, colored, fireman; Asbury Alexander, colored, deck hand of the boat's crew.

The ferry left her landing at 8 o'clock and was near the Illinois shore about a mile below here when the storm struck. She turned completely over and remained in that condition for some time. Her cabin, chimneys and bodies were carried away, nothing remaining but her hull and engines.

The captain, John F. Hacker, Engineer George McGee, Clerk Stanley Posey and Joseph Curry, a passenger, escaped from the wreck, and they assisted Dr. Orr, of Wickliffe, Ky., another passenger, out from the debris, and they all climbed up on the overturned hull, which was partly submerged. They expected every minute it would sink, and Hacker, Posey and Curry swam ashore, while McGee remained with Orr, who could not swim.

NICOLAS CROWNED.

Scenes of Splendor That Defy Description—All Moscow Assembled at the Cathedral to Witness the Coronation.

MOSCOW, May 27.—Tuesday was the chief day of all those given up to the coronation ceremonies—the day up to which all the previous days have led—Coronation day.

At 9 o'clock the sound of cheers and roars from the waiting throngs outside announced that the royal party was approaching. All Moscow had come to catch a glimpse of the emperor and empress and their brilliant suit as they descended the red staircase from the Kremlin palace and crossed the inclosure to the cathedral.

The Metropolitan of St. Petersburg, as the hymn of the choir ceased, stepped forward and handed the emperor a missal, saying: "Gratias spiritus sancti sit semper tecum. Amen," and bidding him read aloud the orthodox creed, which he did in a voice audible to all. This was followed by the reading of the litany, with prayers for God's blessing upon the czar's government. The choirs then sang: "God is the Lord," with the response, "Lord, Save Thy People."

The Metropolitans of Kieff and St. Petersburg then assisted the czar to don the imperial mantle, made of cloth of gold, lined with ermine.

After donning the mantle, the emperor assumed the diamond collar of St. Andrew, the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg saying: "In nomina patria et filius et spiritus sancti. Amen."

Then turning to the altar the czar bowed his head to the prelate of Novgorod, who crossed his hands upon his majesty's forehead and said: "May the Lord anoint him with the oil of joy; may he clothe him with power and place upon his head a crown of precious stones of long life; may he give into his right hand the scepter of salvation; set him upon the throne of righteousness and preserve with his protection the established rule."

Immediately after this the czar received the crown from the Metropolitan, of St. Petersburg, and, standing in full sight of all the people, and still before the altar, with both hands placed the crown upon his head. Then, taking his scepter, in which blazed the famous Orloff diamond, in his right hand and the globe of the empire in his left, he ascended the dais and took his seat upon the throne, the empress still standing in her former place. This was the supreme moment of all, and, when gazing 'round the church and seeing representatives from nearly every district of this mighty empire, and beholding the czar sitting on his throne of state, with the symbols of power given to him by the highest authority in the land, one had a realizing sense of the great power wielded by the man in whose honor this great function was held.

At the moment of taking his seat on the throne, the cannon of the arsenal thundered forth, the bells rang and the bands massed outside played the national anthem. The emperor, after merely occupying the throne for a few seconds, rose and placing the sceptre and the globe on the table by his side, turned to the empress, and, taking off his crown, touched her forehead with it. She then knelt before him on a crimson velvet cushion, when the emperor placed upon her head her own crown, which is surmounted by a large sapphire. The empress' ladies of honor fixed the crown on her head with a gold comb, and robed her in a mantle of cloth of gold, ermine lined, like the emperor's. She was also invested with the collar of St. Andrew and was led to her throne by the emperor and remained seated at his side.

Nine People Killed at Groveland, Mich.

THOMAS, Mich., May 27.—A cross country rider has just reached here from Groveland. He reports that the cyclone did great damage in that village. Nine persons were killed, six in one family. Many persons were injured between here and Groveland.

Fair Grounds Will Not Be Sold.

WINCHESTER, O., May 27.—There is no truth in the report that the stockholders of the Winchester fair will sell their grounds. Officers have been elected, premium lists and speed purses revised and dates for the next meeting fixed.

SIXTY-TWO DROWNED.

Electric Car Goes Through a Bridge and Falls Into the Bay.

Some Twenty Escaped by Swimming—The Car Was Carrying Sight-Seers to the Scene of a Sham Battle in Honor of the Queen's Birthday.

VICTORIA, B. C., May 27.—The most terrible accident that ever took place in this vicinity occurred about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon when an electric car fell through the Point Ellice bridge into an arm of James bay.

A sham battle at MacAuley point was on the programme as part of the celebration of the Queen's birthday and nearly the whole of the population of the city had gone out to witness it. Victoria prolongs the celebration of the Queen's birthday, more than many of the older cities and celebrates it more enthusiastically. The day was practically a holiday in the city.

The electric cars running out to the scene of the battle had been overcrowded all the forenoon. Every car was full, not only inside, but as many as could do so clung on the outside as well.

The car to which the accident happened contained about eighty persons. Even the roof was occupied.

In crossing the Point Ellice bridge it left the track, crashed through the railings and fell into the water, 75 feet below. The fall was so sudden and unexpected that all the passengers were carried down with it.

The car floated for a moment and then was carried down by the weight of metal work attached to it. Those inside were unable to escape and were drowned like rats in a trap. Some of those on the outside escaped by swimming, but many, stunned by the fall or unable to swim, were drowned.

It is believed now that fifty or sixty persons were drowned, but it is as yet impossible to ascertain the real number. It is difficult to learn who was on the car when it took the fatal plunge, and it is equally difficult to learn how many escaped. It will probably be several days before the real extent of the disaster can be learned.

As soon as possible the work of recovering the bodies was begun and is now being pushed vigorously forward.

Up to 10:30 p. m. sixty-two bodies have been taken from the bay. Twenty persons known to have been on the bridge at the time of the accident are missing and it is supposed that they have perished. The car register shows 90 fares and it is probable that over 125 were on board.

THE WALLING TRIAL.

The Twelfth Juror Secured—Walling Is a Little Apprehensive as to the Outcome.

NEWPORT, Ky., May 27.—Alonzo Walling was brought in Judge Helm's courtroom by Sheriff Plummer and a deputy Tuesday morning. Over in the east part of the room the chairs were filled with citizens summoned as possible jurors. Aside from these, there were perhaps less than 75 people in the courtroom, including lawyers, court attendants and newspaper reporters.

The prisoner came into the courtroom with a smile. He says he is confident of an acquittal of the terrible charges against him. The following jury was selected, after much difficulty:

Henry Deitz, plasterer, Cote Brilliant; Chas. W. Peters, bricklayer, Dayton; Benj Hehmann, [illegible], Bellevue; John H. Krift, founder, Dayton; H. J. Quehl, bookkeeper, Newport; Frank Griffith, cigarmaker, Dayton; Robert H. Miles, teamster, Dayton; Peter Wern, ropemaker, Dayton; Charles Sederer, saloon-keeper, Newport; Jesse Batson, motorman, Glen Park; John Lang, carpenter, Newport; Frank McIlvaine, boilermaker, Newport.

NEWPORT, Ky., May 28.—Wednesday noon the second venire of 75 names was exhausted, leaving 11 jurors in the box. These men are still subject to 14 peremptory challenges—two from the commonwealth and twelve from the defense. Court adjourned at noon until 9:30 Thursday morning.

Attorney Will Collins has taken depositions which disclose the plan of Walling's defense. Five witnesses, it is said, whose names can not be learned, have deposed that during the night of the murder Walling was in their company.

NEWPORT, Ky., May 29.—At 11:20 Thursday morning the Walling jury was completed by the selection of James O. Ware, a flour and feed dealer of Newport. The jury was at once sworn in by the clerk of court. The court then adjourned to 9:30 Friday morning.

Alonzo Walling was not so cheerful when he was brought into the courtroom Thursday morning. The strain has begun to have some effect upon him. The source of his worriment is the frequent decided expressions of opinion as to his guilt, which have been given during the examination for jurors.

Col. Lockhart said to a reporter that the lawyers have agreed to abridge much of the old evidence which was heard in the Jackson trial. Both sides are anxious for Walling's hearing to be as speedy as possible.

NEWPORT, Ky., May 30.—Sheriff Plummer is a witness in the Walling trial, and the court, on application, relieved him of his office for the present, and Deputy Sheriff George Hindmand took charge of affairs at the sheriff's desk Friday. He will sleep with the jury, and Plummer will have little more to do than if he were a mere spectator.

The trial began with the opening statement of Col. M. R. Lockhart, who outlined what the state expected to prove.

After Lockhart's opening statement, Lieut. Atkinson, of Ft Thomas, was placed on the stand. He repeated the story of the finding of Pearl Bryan's body on the Locke farm.

Lieut. Saffarans, of Ft. Thomas, was the second witness, and described the finding of the body as he saw it.

Attorney Hayes, of Greencastle, conducted the examination for the state, and Lockhart and Nelson kept in the background.

Attorney Washington conducted the cross-examination.

Fred Miller was sworn in as deputy sheriff to accompany the jury to its room, and court adjourned at 12:20 o'clock until 2 p. m.

At the afternoon session the hair which Mr. Boyce found in cuts in the ground and the hairpins lying nearby were offered in evidence.

Reporter W. H. Newell described the bloody privet bushes. He said he was present in the undertaker's establishment when the body of the murdered girl was taken from the box in which it was brought to Newport.

Judge N. L. Bennett said he had served five years in the Rockies as a United States soldier, and he had seen many bodies of men murdered by Indians and "Greasers." It was blood which spotted the privet bushes at Ft. Thomas.

Jule White, the undertaker's assistant, said that he was one of those who went to Ft. Thomas and took charge of the remains. The arms were so stiff in rigor mortis that for a long time it was impossible to fold them across the girl's breast.

John White's testimony was much the same, but he said the woman's arms were not moved.

Court adjourned at five p. m. Friday with Coroner Tingley on the stand. He admitted on cross-examination that no microscopical examination was made of the lungs to determine the presence of air globules.

NEW TRIAL REFUSED.

Scott Jackson Sentenced to Be Hanged Tuesday, June 30.

A Stay of Execution Granted to Allow the Case to Be Taken to the Court of Appeals—Jackson Was Dazed When He Heard His Sentence.

NEWPORT, Ky., May 30.—At 9:45 Friday morning Scott Jackson, convicted of the murder of Pearl Bryan, was brought into Judge Helm's court, jauntily smoking a cigar. Judge Helm began to read his opinion deciding the motion for Scott Jackson's new trial.

The judge took up, point by point, the argument which Attorney Crawford had made.

"There are witnesses after witnesses who contradict the prisoner.

"The evidence is not only sufficient," said the judge, in conclusion, "but it proves the prisoner guilty of one of the most heartless crimes in the history of the country. The court, therefore, overrules the motion for a new trial."

A silence like that of death rested on the courtroom as the judge concluded the reading of his decision. Every eye was fixed upon the prisoner, who sat with glassy, staring eyes and a face flushing blood red.

"Is there anything you have to say before I pass final judgment upon you?" Judge Helm asked.

The prisoner arose and stood with one hand upon the rail of the witness box.

For a moment he could not find utterance.

"Do you have anything to say?" asked the court again.

"Well, I—I can only say that I am not guilty," said Jackson. His eyes were twitching nervously. "I think my attorney had better speak for me," he said.

Col. Crawford arose and went across to where the condemned man was standing. He bowed his head and talked earnestly with the prisoner.

He had nothing to add to what Jackson had said.

The judge suggested that the lawyer might take the benefit of a claim of insanity for Jackson.

"I understand," answered Attorney Crawford, but he did not act upon the suggestion.

"Then it becomes my duty to pass judgment on you," said Judge Helm to Jackson, and the prisoner stood with bowed head as the judge read:

"Scott Jackson, you have been indicted by the Grand jury for the murder of Pearl Bryan, and the court began a trial on the indictment. Your counsel aided in the selection of a jury and has been present during the evidence and argument of this cause. The jury has decided that you are guilty under the indictment, and I therefore pass judgment upon you that you be removed from here to the jail in this city and county and there confined until the 30th day of June in this year, when, in the inclosure of said jail, you will, by the sheriff of this county, be hanged by the neck until you are dead. May God have mercy on your soul."

Not a man moved.

The judge looked toward Attorney Crawford, who arose and asked for a stay of execution. The court granted a stay of 60 days from date, and Scott Jackson left the courtroom. The strain of the morning had told upon him, and he looked worse than upon the day the verdict was rendered.

VETOED.

The President Disapproves the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The president Friday sent to the house a message vetoing the river and harbor appropriation bill. In his message the president says that the bill contemplates the immediate expenditure of about $17,000,000 and continues:

"The most startling feature of this bill is its authorization of contracts for river and harbor works amounting to more than sixty-two millions of dollars. Though the payments on these contracts are in most cases so distributed that they are to be met by future appropriations, more than $3,000,000 on their account are included in their direct appropriations. Of the remainder nearly twenty million dollars will fall due during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and amounts somewhat less in the years immediately succeeding. A few contracts of a like character authorized under previous statutes are still outstanding, and to meet payments on these more than four millions of dollars must be appropriated in the immediate future."

Hailstones Three Inches in Diameter.

RENO, Nev., May 30.—The heaviest rain and hail storm in years visited Reno Friday morning. Hailstones three inches in diameter fell and hardly a whole skylight in the city remains. The Truckee river was the highest known in 15 years and the Truckee meadows about Glendale are under water. Vegetation was considerably damaged. Three men were drowned in the river at Prosser Creek. Their names can not be learned.

The Cyclone at Ambler, Pa.

AMBLER, Pa., May 30.—The destruction wrought by the cyclone Thursday is greater than was at first supposed. Below Ambler and Jarrettown, where the storm was the most severe, no less than 75 barns, houses and other buildings are either partly or completely destroyed. The loss will amount to over $100,000. Albert Moffatt and Winfield Emslie, who were killed at Jarrettown, were buried Friday. John Betz, who was injured in the wreck at the hotel stables, is not expected to recover. The loss will fall heavily on the property owners, as many of the buildings were not insured against storms.

CHURCH INSURANCE.

Report Organizing a Company Adopted by the Methodist Conference.

Bishops McCabe and Cranston Consecrated—One Thousand Dollars to Be Expended Toward Aiding the Publication of a Hymnal for Danish and Norwegian Congregations.

CLEVELAND, O., May 27.—The general conference was presided over by Bishop Ninde Tuesday morning. The judiciary committee reported and the conference acted on a large number of appeals.

When the celebrated Baltimore amendment was before the annual conferences the New York east conference refused to act on it.

Joseph Fullman thought the conference had no right to refuse to vote on the question and accordingly appealed to the general conference. A. J. Kynett said that this matter of refusal was a most important question. "A few of the annual conferences," he said, "might in the future succeed in defeating an amendment by refusing to vote on it."

The committee recommended that no appeal be entertained.

A committee of five was appointed on complimentary resolutions.

A dozen motions were made by chairmen of committees to supend the rules in order to present reports. They were voted down.

Several times the delegates became greatly excited, and at times it looked as though a row was imminent.

The committee on book concern wanted the conference to appoint a book editor. Dr. John Lanahan said that the multiplication of offices was one of the greatest evils of the meetings of the general conference. "There is now an office for every 11 members of this conference," said he. "I hope the report will not be adopted."

It was decided to have a book editor, just the same.

Charles Cardwell McCabe, Earl Cranston and Joseph C. Hartzell were consecrated as bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church at Central armory Tuesday morning. There was an immense congregation present, nearly every seat in the big auditorium being filled. The consecration was most impressive.

CLEVELAND, O., May 28.—The feature of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church was the adoption of the resolution providing for an immense church insurance company competing with the great companies of the world. The session was excited, and confusion reigned all morning.

The conference wrangled for a half hour over the adoption of resolutions providing for a constitutional committee. It will be composed of six ministers, six laymen and three bishops and will report to the general conference of 1900. It was decided to spend $1,000 toward aiding in the publication of a hymeneal for the use of the Danish and Norwegian congressions.

The committee on the state of the church reported in favor of organizing a mutual church insurance company, the affairs to be in charge of a board of insurance and the company to do a general fire, lightning and tornado business.

Then Gen. Rusting called for a vote by orders. This means a separate vote by the ministerial and by the lay delegates. A negative vote by either division defeats a proposition. It requires a third of either order to have a vote by orders. The call for a vote by orders was not sustained.

The report organizing an insurance company was then adopted amid great enthusiasm.

CLEVELAND, O., May 29.—The Twenty-seventh general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which for four weeks has absorbed the attention of the religious world, is a thing of the past. With the fall of the gavel in the hand of Bishop Morrill at 1:20 p. m., Thursday, the conference and its acts passed into history.

On the great questions which have absorbed the attention of the church, it has done practically nothing. The question of a woman's eligibility to sit in the general conference is exactly where it was before.

The constitutional revision has not proceeded a step beyond where it was eight years ago. The conference straddled most effectively on the matter of lay representation. It adopted a disciplinary clause providing for equal lay and clerical representation in the general conference, knowing that it would not, in all probability, receive the necessary three-fourths vote in the annual conferences, but gave them the right to sit separately in the general conference.

Dr. Mitchell, secretary of the committee on boundaries, presented a report fixing the boundaries of 123 conferences, and 20 missionary conferences at home and abroad and including 21 enabling acts. It was adopted without debate. A second report, fixing the number of members essential to the organization of a new conference at 30, instead of 20, was laid on the table.

At half-past 12 o'clock the final panorama was placed on the stage by Dr. Buckley, who rose to move that, according to custom, all further reports of committees be laid on the table and that the roll be called for the presentation of the usual vote of thanks.

The closing hymn, "Labors in the Vineyard," was then sung.

Bishop Bowman offered the closing prayer, Bishop Foster pronounced the benediction and the delegates filed out.

THE MINES.

Five persons are killed daily in the mines of England.

Cecil Rhodes' income as managing director of the Consolidated Gold Fields company last year was more than $1,650,000.

Not long since, in a mine in the Flenu (Belgium) district called "St. Henrietta des Produits," a rich vein of coal was struck at the extraordinary depth of 4,188 feet.

Three drops of a black cat's blood is said to be a cure for croup.

Summer Homes.

In the Lake regions of Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa and Dakota, there are hundreds of charming localities pre-eminently fitted for summer homes. Nearly all are located on or near lakes which have not been fished out. These resorts are easily reached by railway and range in variety from the "full dress for dinner" to the flannel-shirt costume for every meal. Among the list are names familiar to many of our readers as the perfection of Northern summer resorts. Nearly all of the Wisconsin points of interest are within a short distance from Chicago or Milwaukee, and none of them are so far away from the "busy marts of civilization" that they cannot be reached in a few hours of travel, by frequent trains, over the finest road in the northwest—the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. A description of the principal resorts, with list of summer hotels and boarding houses, and rates for board, will be sent free on application to GEO. H. HEAFFORD, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

A CALAMITY.

Worst Cyclone in the History of the Country.

St. Louis and East St. Louis Badly Torn by the Winds.

Over Three Thousand Houses Damaged and Wrecked in St. Louis.

The List of Dead in Both Cities Numbers Nearly Four Hundred.

The Great Eads Bridge Badly Damaged—Ghouls and Thieves at Work—Measures of Relief for the Sufferers Inaugurated—Many Steamers Wrecked.

East St. Louis, May 30.—East St. Louis is waking from its stupor of terror and things are beginning now to shape themselves to the amelioration of the condition of afflicted and preservation of the property left after the feast of the hurricane.

A relief committee has been formed with an auxilliary woman's corps. Money is being subscribed, the town is thoroughly policed with local constabulary and two companies of militia, streets are being cleared, homes made habitable and a feeble effort at being cheerful to the distress is being made by tho townspeople.

The bright sunshine has served to lighten somewhat the load of sorrow, but now in their sober moments this completeness of the disaster appears the more appalling.

Nothing had been done to clear away the wreckage which still lay piled as the elements had thrown it indiscriminately. Dead horses abounded, and already sickening odors arose into the night air. With the appearance of tho sun this feature became more obnoxious and the stench was frightful, but so busy and exhausted are the citizens that it is impossible to tell when tho carcasses will be removed.

Mayor Badger and the rest of the townspeople here feel that they are in most urgent need of all assistance they can get. The rich have suffered with the poor, and the resources of those who could ordinarily extend a helping hand to their more unfortunate brothers will be so strained in recovering their own positions that it will be difficult for them to do much more than help themselves.

The Eads bridge is once more open. Trains began running Thursday night and by Friday morning great long lines of cars were puffing across the dismantled structure, giving the hapless East St. Louisans a chance to get out of the city. The tracks from the relay depot up the bridgo incline were badly cluttered up with all sorts of stuff, but were not damaged. With the earlier train loads the passengers were pretty nervous, for fear that some of the piers might have been weakened by tho bombardment of wind and water, but they were safe enough.

The lists of dead which have been hitherto printed have of necessity been full of errors. Men were reported dead who were missing and have since turned up; false identifications were made, names confused by misinformation and misspelling, so that there have been already printed the names of more than have really been found.

There are unquestionably many persons who have been killed whose disappearance has not been noted. As yet very meager reports of the awful work done by the cyclone in Missouri and Illinois have reached this city. Enough is known, however, to show that many lives were lost and thousands of dollars damage done.

St. Louis, May 30.—Forgetting every personal interest that clashes with the work of mercy, the people of this city who escaped the fury of the storm have incessantly ministered to the suffering of the luckless thousands. Since the dreadful 20 minutes of disaster Wednesday evening no thought has been given to property losses. The worst is now known, however, and the work of computing material losses has begun. As the world knows, the greater number of sufferers are small property owners. These individual losses are small, but they aggregate the larger part of the whole. A survey of the district made Friday shows that over three thousand houses have been damaged or wholly destroyed. Theso were mainly residences of the middle classes, shop keepers and mechanics. The damage to church property was particularly severe.

In the territory along tho levee, Main, Second and Third from Washington to Market, the loss will figure up fully one million. From Main to Eighth and from O'Fallon south to Franklin, the loss is half a million. A class of hard working people occupy this territory.

In the territory south from Market to Chouteau, along Broadway and east to the river front, a million and a half will hardly cover the loss. Southward along Broadway from Chouteau avenue to Lafayette avenue and embracing tho territory eastward to the river property has been destroyed to the extent of $750,000. From the Lafayette Avenue bank south to Soulard the storm's fury wreaked awful vengeance. The loss sustained was $650,000. Hardly a building on either side of Broadway was spared. They were occupied by prosperous retail stores, representing the energy and thrift of a lifetime. Embracing all the district south of Soulard from the river, west to city limits, the loss to residences and business property is estimated at $1,000,000. Going north again and taking in all the territory, up to the city hospital the damage figures $1,000,000.

In the immediate vicinity of the hospital another million is represented. Northeast of the hospital property has been destroyed to the extent of $1,000,000, while Lafayette park and vicinity gives as much more. Westward from Lafayette park and north to Choteau avenue the loss is $3,000,000. Down Choteau from Jefferson avenue to Seventh street and north to the railroad tracks $3,000,000 is damaged. Along Park avenue from Tenth to Seventh and north on Seventh to Market, $4,500,000 will about cover the loss. The distress and disaster through this section are appalling. The remaining $4,150,000 is scattered through the central, western and northwestern portions of the city. It includes damages to crops and public buildings.

Damages to school property is $100,000. Nearly all south St. Louis is practically destroyed. Wrecked buildings and those partly damaged can not be repaired. It will be fully two years before tho effects of the hurricane are effaced.

Many hundreds of the homeless are already receiving assistance from the relief committee. The greatest demand is for food and clothing, as those who have roofs over their heads are sharing their homes with their less fortunate neighbors.

At two o'clock Saturday morning two floaters were picked up at the foot of Destrahan street, which are supposed to be members of the wrecked boat crews.

A family of four lived at 716 Barry street Wednesday morning. When the cyclone had passed there was but one survivor. The surviving daughter stood on the street wringing her hands, frantic with grief and refusing to be led away. Neighbors told the story Friday morning.

Shortly after midnight Father J. J. Head, of Annunciation church, Sixth and La Salle streets, died of the injuries received by falling timbers in the disaster Wednesday night. Father Head and his sister were sitting in the parochial residence when the roof of the church was blown on to the house. A falling timber struck tho pastor's head and he was otherwise seriously injured. He failed to rally.

Roy Claypool, son of Mrs. Daniel Claypool, who, with her two children, was killed by the storm, died at the Children's hospital Friday night. Young Claypool was not injured by the storm, but had been placed in the hospital Thursday to be treated for an ailment, but when he heard that his mother and two sisters had been killed, the little fellow began to grieve. It caused his death.

St. Louis, May 30.—It was possible Friday to make an intelligent estimate—for all figures are as yet estimates—of the loss of life and property in this city and vicinity by the storm on Wednesday night. It will be many days before the exact facts are known, if they are ever known at all. It is truo that in this city and East St. Louis, the records of the health department will show the number of interments. That the number of dead within the municipal limits will bo eventually ascertained, but no such verification is possible in the country districts where the loss of life was undoubtedly greater than was at first reported. The property loss, of course, is practically an unknown quantity, and figures vary greatly. Tho best that can bo done is to average the estimates of competent authorities. In St. Louis the number of dead reported to the authorities up to four o'clock Friday morning was 143, of which number 116 were identified and 27 unidentified. Of course the larger proportion were at the morgue or reported at the undertaker establishments. But there are undoubtedly many others awaiting burials at private residences and it is still more certain, unfortunately, that the removal of debris will disclose the bodies of other victims of the storm as yet unaccounted for. Still, there can be no doubt that the first rumors of scores crushed beneath falling buildings were largely exaggerated, and the number to be accounted for in this way will not be so large as was at first feared. A careful survey of the situation, therefore, justifies the belief that the unreported dead—those in private houses and those unrecovered from wrecked buildings—will not exceed 100. This brings the total dead in St. Louis up to about two hundred and fifty, and it is believed that eventual verification of the death roll will not show a variation of more than ten. The count of the wounded is a more difficult matter.

Taking the hospital and police reports as a basis for calculation, it is estimated that those who sustained injuries which may be called serious—that is, broken limbs, internal injuries, fractures of the skull and similar wounds—number about 400.

The telegraph wires are still in a demoralized condition, and, it may be added, so are the country correspondents. All sorts of rumors have yet to be sifted and deliberate "fakes" run down. There have been stories of loss of life and destruction at places which were untouched by the storm, and on the other hand it is altogether probable that there are many deaths and injuries in the country districts still unreported. A careful scrutiny of the data at hand, however, justifies the statement that the following figures will be found to be approximately correct when full reports have been received:

Vandalia, Ill. and vicinity, 13 killed, 15 injured; Centralia, Ill. and vicinity, 40 killed, 35 injured; Mt. Vernon, Ill. and vicinity, 6 killed, 20 injured; New Madrid, Ill. and vicinity, 7 killed, 30 injured; Richfield, Ill., 4 killed; Rushville, Ill., 4 killed, 26 injured; New Baden, Ill., 8 killed, 13 injured; Jefferson City, Ill., 4 killed; Harmony, Ill., 2 killed; Brinker Station, Ill., 8 killed, 30 injured; Breckinridge, Ill., 2 killed; Fairfield, Ill. and Mascontah, Ill., each 1 killed; Gratiot, Mo., 4 killed; Mexico, Mo. and vicinity, 6 killed, 30 wounded; Warsaw, Ind., 2 killed, five injured.

Gov. Altgeld is in personal command of the military companies called out to assist in the work of rescue and to protect the city from vandalism and being looted by swarms of thieves who are reported to be on their way to East St. Louis. One hundred special policemen were sworn in Friday morning and are now patroling the fire and wind swept territory.

The damage to church property in St. Louis is estimated at $250,000. The losses are about equally divided between these denominations: Presbyterians, Methodist, Baptist, Unitarian, Episcopal, Congregationalist, Christian, Evangelical, Lutheran and Roman Catholic.

Three boats of the Anchor line were in port. These were the City of Monroe, which was ready to leave for New Orleans. She had a large crew and about thirty-five passengers. She was badly wrecked in her upper works, taken across the river where she lodged at Choteau avenue. It was reported that her passengers and crew were safe. The other two boats were the City of Cairo and the Arkansas City. They were moored at the foot of Choteau avenue and Carroll streets respectively. They were torn loose and no intelligence was received from them up to midnight. Being temporarily out of commission, they had but few employes aboard. This company also had a number of barges torn away and probably sunk. The St. Louis and Mississippi Valley Transportation Co. had two boats, the Exporter and Harvester, the best of the line, set adrift. One of the boats was reported to be sunk at the foot of Arsenal street. The Henry Lowrey, of this line, was left at the wharf, but it is damaged. No information concerning the employes could be obtained. The tug Rescue No. 2, belonging to the Wiggins Ferry Co., was reported to be sunk at tho foot of Olive street.

Almost a reign of terror prevailed in East St. Louis Thursday night. Save for a tug and a few rowboats, placed at the service of officials, physicians, newspaper men and others whose duties called them to the scene, the place has been cut off from communication with this city since Wednesday night, a section of the upper or railroad portion of the Eads bridge having been carried away, while guards were stationed at either end to prevent pedestrians using the foot bridge. The thieves and toughs of the city, however, reinforced by scores from the country surrounding started in Thursday afternoon to pillage the overturned trucks in the streets and the freight cars on the sidings, and which were filled with valuable merchandise, groceries and provisions. The small police force had been detailed to aid the injured and assist in the task of searching the ruins, and realizing that they were powerless to preserve order or prevent pillaging, Mayor Bader called up Gov. Altgeld for aid. He responded by ordering two companies of militia to the scene. The first company arrived from Belleville at nine o'clock, and the second was en route from Greenville on a special train, and were on the ground at one a. m. The governor himself arrived late Thursday night, and directed the detailing of the troops about the various properties to be protected. Prior to his arrival a meeting of leading citizens was held in the First national bank building in response to a call hurriedly issued by ex-Congressman W. S. Gorman and others and, after a full discussion of the situation, it was decided to issue an appeal to the people of the United States for aid. Paul W. Abt, president of tho First national bank of St. Louis, was selected as treasurer, to whom all contributions can be sent.

St. Louis, June 1.—The thousands of men at work in the ruined district are bringing order out of chaos, and it will be but a few days before nearly every trace of the material wreckage caused by the tornado of Wednesday night has been cleared away. Saturday morning the following table was compiled for the United Press by the city coroner:

Known dead in St. Louis, 194.
Unknown dead in St. Louis, 8.
Fatally injured in St. Louis, 18.
Missing in St. Louis, 56.
Known dead in East St. Louis, 138.
Unknown dead in East St. Louis, 3.
Fatally injured in East St. Louis, 1.
Total fatality, 418.

Some mounds of ruins remain not fully explored, but those best acquainted with the localities express confidence that all bodies have been removed.

The injured are being cared for in a manner which should make every citizen feel proud of the hospital facilities of St. Louis. Some are under the immediate care of the city department. Others are in the college and church hospitals. All are receiving the best that surgical skill and professional nursing can give. St. Louis will not need the tents offered by the government. All along the path of the storm Friday boys distributed long lists of houses, flats and rooms to be had at the same rentals that prevailed before this new demand was created. There are fifty jobs awaiting every carpenter, bricklayer, roofer, plumber and glazier in the city. The supply of material will probably run short before the work of restoration is complete. But thus far no disposition to deal unfairly with the pressing demand has shown itself. A minimum of crime is reported. The precautions taken by the police authorities with the assistance of the national guard have spared the city's name from the disgrace of acts of vandalism and plunder.

The relief fund is swelling. It is now nearly $50,000. Instead of a rush to take advantage of charity, those having the matter in hand are pleased to note a strong and widespread disposition among the people in the path of the storm to help themselves. Among 10,000 families sorely stricken, there will be some hundreds that must be helped.

Energetic search of the ruins of the city hospital was made Saturday by firemen furnished by Chief Swingley.

A careful canvass of the situation in East St. Louis results in an estimate that the damage to property within the corporate limits will exceed $2,000,000 while the number of fatalities may not touch the citizens' executive committee calculation of 200. However, prominent citizens insist that the financial losses will aggregate $5,000,000, and that the list of dead will reach fully twice its present known number.

There have been inquests held over the bodies of 84 tornado victims in East St. Louis, and the coroner's office Saturday morning contained a list of nearly a score of dead for the officials to begin work on.

Four companies of militia are patrolling the devastated district and are protecting property from thieves and vandals who have flocked in on every train.

East St. Louis will be for several days to come a city of funerals.

In St. Peter's, St. Henry's and the city cemeteries, as well as the cemeteries of adjoining cities, graves are peing prepared for the victims of Wednesday's disaster, and solemn corteges of sad-faced people are traversing the streets of the devastated city, following their loved ones to the last resting places. There are funerals on all sides. Hardly a street or block was there which did not have one or more persons who were claimed as victims by the storm, and many of them were buried Friday in order to prevent rapid decomposition. This and the overcrowded condition of the morgue hastened many of the funerals.

In St. Louis Saturday there was an almost unbroken line of funeral processions enroute to Calvary and Bellefontain cemeteries.

Outside cities and surrounding towns have been called upon to furnish hearses and carriages to accommodate the demand for conveyances. Extra gangs of workmen are employed in preparing graves, and memorial day is surely a day of mourning in the Mound City.

Subscriptions to the fund for the relief of the homeless are pouring in at a gratifying rate, considering that the extent of the calamity has partially paralyzed the city. The Merchants' exchange funds amount to more than $50,000. President Donovan called a meeting of the Real Estate exchange Friday and nearly $2,900 was raised in a few minutes. Secretary Aull raised $500 in two hours at the fair grounds Friday afternoon.

The street car system is crippled, and the telephone and telegraph service in the city is practically useless. The streets in the southern portion of the city are littered with debris and broken and twisted wires. It will be weeks before all the marks of the storm are removed from the thoroughfares.

The St. Louis team owners came forward and placed their 15 heavy wagons at the disposal of the distressed. The noble hearted draymen will work all day Sunday gratis to relieve the distressed. The wholesale grocers of Cupples' station sent out 75 wagons and trucks on the same errand of mercy. By Sunday night every one in the wrecked district will be safely moved, difficulty has been found in securing laborers for the work of clearing away the wrecks, and those who are able and willing to work are demanding a rate of 50 cents an hour. Wages of bricklayers have advanced from 55 cents to $1.10 an hour.

The damage to residence property in St. Louis is estimated by real estate men at nearly three million dollars.

A report from Warrensburg Saturday morning says that the report that the Warrensburg Normal school was destroyed by the storm Wednesday night and 80 students killed, is wholly untrue.

The only addition to the death list Sunday was Carlo Alfonero, a peddler who died at the Alexian brothers hospital at 9 p. m. There are three unknown corpses at the city morgue. The stricken district was the mecca of 100,000 sightseers Sunday, and their sympathies went out to the homeless sufferers who clung to their dismantled homes. The steady mist of rain found hundreds of families unprotected, save by hastily constructed "lean-to's" against the few remaining walls. Some were provided with tents. Three hundred of these were sent up from the Jefferson barracks. The Provident association, the Business Men's league and the public relief committee have provided for 150 families, each receiving food sufficient for two weeks, and such shelter as could be secured. All the transfer and express companies have hauled free the few belongings of the sufferers who secured rooms.

Attendance at all the churches was unusually large and the services were memorial in character. Dr. Schuyler, dean of Christ church cathedral, held a special afternoon service, at which a large sum was contributed to swell the relief fund.

The two services at Pilgrim Congregational church yielded nearly $1,000. Contributions were made in all the churches and pledges made to continue the relief until the need ceased. Arrangements have been made by every society, church and guild, in the city for benefit entertainments.

A panic was prevented Sunday night at Union station by the prompt work of the special detail of 50 policemen.

The 50,000 visitors who had viewed the ruins gathered at the station about eight o'clock. The Midway, the grand hall on the second floor, the waiting rooms and every passage way was packed with humanity. It was impossible to open the gates. Assistant Chief Keiley marshalled his men at the Twentieth street entrance and began forcing the crowd through the baggage tramway to the train sheds. It took half an hour to relieve tho pressure. Women fainted, children screamed and men fought. Three women were injured and eight children were separated from their friends. There were probably a thousand strangers in the lower half of the city Sunday night wandering helpless in the dark ruins.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

First Session.

Washington, May 25.—Senate.—The river and harbor bill was adopted in its entirety by the house and senate Saturday, received the signatures of Vice President Stevenson and Speaker Reed and went to the president. It is one of the largest, if not the largest, river and harbor bills ever passed by congress. It carries nearly $80,000,000.

House—The sundry civil and Indian appropriation bills were sent back to conference by the house by a vote of 154 to 22. The house insisted on its provision in the latter bill relating to sectarian schools. The following bills for public buildings were favorable reported Saturday by a subcommitte of the House committee on public buildings and grounds Hopkinsville, Ky., $50,000; Mayfield, Ky., $50,000; Lebanon, Ky., $100,000; Bowling Green, Ky., $75,000. Congressman Hulick, of Ohio, Saturday introduced a bill in the house granting an honorable discharge to Charles Nailer, of the Tenth Ohio regiment. President Cleveland sent to the house his veto of the bill to amend the act fixing the fees of registration and receivers of land offices.

Washington, May 26.—Senate—The general deficiency appropriation bill, the last of the supply bills, was before the senate throughout the day, and passed just before adjournment. It temporarily displaced the bills to prohibit the issue of bonds. As passed, the bill carries about $10,500,000, an increase of $1,030,00 over the house bill. The most important amendment agreed to up to two o'clock was that of $1,502,979, to the Southern Pacific Co. for transportation of mails. Amendments appropriating $1,027,000, covering 341 French spoliation claims, reported from the court of claims, and appropriating $548,000 to 325 claimants under the Bowman act were agreed to.

House—On motion of Mr. Evans (rep., Ky.) the house went into committee of the whole to consider the bill to repeal the free alcohol clause of the existing tariff law. Mr. Evans opened the debate in support of the measure, explaining tho necessity for the legislation. Mr. Russell called attention to the fact that the McKinley law reduced the tax on alcohol 37½ per cent., and at the same time increased the import duties in goods in the manufacture of which alcohol is used. "Give us the McKinley law as a substitute, and we will forego the demand for free alcohol," he said. Mr. Hill followed in opposition to the bill. He said there were three advocates of the repeal: the whisky trust, from profit; the wood alcohol trust, for the same reason, and the democratic party, because it believed in large internal revenue taxes and low customs duties. No action was taken.

Washington, May 27.—Senate—The house measure known as the "filled cheese" bill came up before the senate Tuesday. Its object is to discourage the manufacture and sale of an adulterated article of food by imposing a heavy license on manufacturers and wholesale dealers, and its supporters advocated its passage, not as a revenue measure, but as a protection to dairymen. It had not been many minutes before the senate when it was converted from a merely nominal to an actual revenue measure by an amendment adding to it a section imposing an additional tax of 75 cents a barrel on beer, ale and porter.

House—The house Tuesday, by a vote of 165 to 69, passed a bill for the repeal of Section 61 of the present tariff law, providing for a rebate on alcohol used in the arts or medicinal compounds. An amendment was attached to the bill providing for a joint commission to consist of three members of each house, to examine and report on all questions relating to free alcohol at the next session. The senate amendments to the general deficiency bill (excepting the French spoliation claims and claims under the Bowman act) were disagreed to and the bill sent to conference.

Washington, May 28.—Senate—The filled cheese bill and the bill to prohibit the issue of government bonds without the consent of congress was up Wednesday. The first was closed during the morning hour—the bond bill coming up at two o'clock, as the unfinished business. The action of the senate Tuesday in voting down, by a majority of five, Mr. Sherman's motion to table an amendment to the filled cheese bill, which proposed to levy an additional tax of 75 cents a barrel on lager beer and porter and ale, was reversed Wednesday in the defeat of that amendment by a majority of seven. The partial conference report on the naval appropriation bill was concurred in and a further conference ordered on unadjusted matters, including the question of battleships.

House—After a vigorous and hotly contested fight, the house Wednesday concurred, by a vote of 111 to 97, in the senate amendment to the general deficiency appropriation bill providing for the payment of French spoliation and war claims under the Bowman act, adjudicated by the court of claims, amounting to about $2,000,000. The conference report on the bill for the relief of settlors on the Northern Pacific railroad indemnity lands was agreed to. A supplemental conference report on the sundry civil bill, showing an agreement upon everything of importance but the public building items, was presented and partly considered, when Mr. Kem (pop., Neb.) made a point of no quorum, and, only 142 members appearing, the house adjourned.

Washington, May 29.—Senate—A partial conference report on the Indian appropriation bill occasioned animated controversy in the senate. The bond bill displaced the Indian conference report without action. Mr. Daniel (dem., Va.) resumed his speech supporting the bill and arguing for free coinage of silver. Mr. Peffer (pop., Kas.) supported the bill. He arraigned the president for usurpation. Mr. Carter (Montana) gave notice of an amendment to the filled cheese bill, putting a tax and establishing regulations against adulterated beer.

House—The St. Louis disaster occupied the house Thursday. Two senate amendments to the sundry civil bill were adopted, and the bill sent back to conference on the rest. The Johnson-Stokes contested election case, from tho Seventh South Carolina district, was debated, but not decided.

Washington, May 30.—Senate—The senate agreed Friday to take a final vote on tho bill to prohibit the issue of bonds on Thursday next before adjournment, Mr. Hill reserving the right to move to postpone the vote. The bills repealing the law relating to rebates on alcohol used in the arts and amending the law concerning the distilling of brandy from fruits were passed. The latter authorizes the exemption of distillers of brandy made from fruits from the provisions relating to the manufacture of spirits, except as to the tax thereon. The senate adjourned until Monday.

House—The president Friday vetoed the river and harbor bill, saying that it was unnecessarily extravagant. The veto was read to the house and referred without debate. Congressman Herman said that action in a motion to pass the bill over the president's veto will probably be taken on Tuesday. Adjourned until Monday.

Alcohol Bill Passed.

Washington, May 30.—The bill repealing the section in the tariff bill for the entry fee of alcohol used in the arts and in medicine has now passed both branches of congress and goes to the president for his signature, which will be affixed to it as soon as it reaches the white house.

Fatal Fall Down an Elevator Shaft.

Nashville, Tenn., May 30.—John D. Wilson, a well known citizen of this city, fell through an elevator shaft in the Vanderbilt building, on Cherry street, Friday morning and was instantly killed. Mr. Wilson was formerly manager of the Presbyterian Publishing house in Nashville, but recently retired from that position.

The Fight Declared Off.

New York, May 30.—The Slavia-Maher fight, which was to have taken place Friday night, was declared off. The fight will take place next Friday night.

HUMOROUS.

—She—"You got the best of me when you married me." He—"The best was none too good, either."—Detroit Tribune.

—Bell—"Why did the old novels all end with: 'And they lived happily ever after?'" Nell—"Because the new woman was not known then."—N. Y. Herald.

—Johnny—"You're the meanest, hatefulest, spitefulest thing I know!" Tommy—"An' you're the crabbedest, uglist—" Father—"Boys, boys! You forget that your mother is in the room."—N. Y. Press.

—"Bobbie, you are perfectly awful to-day, and just when grandma is visiting us, too!" "Well, ma, it's only to please you. You told me the other day that you thought I kept my good manners for visitors only."—Harper's Bazar.

—Interesting Reading.—"What if I should cease to love you?" he asked in a moment of reckless abandon. "Then, dear, I should have your letters published as unique contributions to the literature of the century," was the soothing reply.—Detroit Free Press.

—"I guess I am stuck," said the answer-to-correspondents man. "What is it?" asked the rest of the force, in deep sympathy. "Girl writes to know which one of her fiances should have the preference in going with her to church—the first one or the second."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—Col. Carter was negotiating for the purchase of a farm, and the agent was commenting on the advantages of the property he had for sale. "One great feature of this farm," he said, "is the water. There is one of the best wells in the state there. The water has been analyzed over and—" "I have no doubt, suh," said the colonel, "that it is a good well. But I don't think I shall keep any live stock."—Washington Star.

ODDITIES OF ANIMALS.

Some Queer Features About Them Seldom Noticed by Observers.

Try it. Gather 10,000 of the threads spun by a full-grown spider, twist them together and see if they equal in substance the size of one of your hairs.

Oysters live ten to twelve years when they have the chance. In this country they don't get the chance.

Many horses are fond of beer, and to a tired horse a bottle of beer in his gruel is a great restorative. It acts as a "pick me up," and often makes a horse with no appetite eat freely. Brewers understand this, and that is one reason why their horses always seem to be in good condition.

The large horned beetle can carry 315 times its own weight. One has been known to walk away with a two and a quarter pound weight.

Live bees are sometimes shipped on ice so as to keep them dormant during the journey. This is particularly the case with bumblebees, which have been taken to New Zealand where they are useful in fertilizing the red clover that has been introduced into the colony.

The amount of light that can be obtained from fire flies is not generally known. These insects have two bright spots on their thorax and also brilliant wings on the abdomen, and give light sufficient to enable one to read at a little distance. Two or three placed in the center of a room will shed a soft light all over it. They are very common in Havana, Brazil, Guiana, Venezuela and Mexico. In those countries at night the natives affix the little creatures to their shoes, and thus obtain light to see the road and frighten away the snakes. Mexican women use them as jewels. They tie them in little gauze bags and put them in their hair or on their clothing. They keep them in wire cages and feed them on scraps of sugar cane.

Reynard is a knowing animal. The foxes are much tormented by fleas, but when the infliction becomes too severe they know how to get rid of the insects. They gather from the bark of trees moss, which they carry to a stream that deepens by degrees. Here they enter the water, still carrying the moss in their mouths, and going backward, beginning from the end of their tails, they advance by slow degrees till the whole body with the exception of the mouth is entirely immersed. The fleas, during this proceeding, have rushed in rapid haste to the dry parts, and finally to the moss, and the fox, when he has, according to his calculations, allowed sufficient time for all the fleas to take their departure, quietly opens his mouth. The moss floats off down the stream with its burden of fleas, and when it is out of jumping reach the fox finds its way to the bank much relieved.—N. Y. Herald.

Live Fish of Great Age.

"The age of the fish is almost unlimited," observed an official of the fish commission, in reply to a question. "Prof. Baird devoted a great deal of time to the question as to the length of life of fish, and he found that the ordinary carp, if not interfered with, would live 500 years. In his writings on the subject he stated that there are now living in the Royal aquarium in Russia several carp that are known to be over 300 years old; that he had ascertained in a number of cases that whales live to be over 200 years old. A gentleman in Baltimore has had an ordinary gold fish for 63 years, and his father informed him that he had purchased it over 40 years before it came into his possession."—Washington Star.

Lightning Is Not Zigzag.

The popular conception of the path of a flash of lightning is that it is a zigzag sharper in its outlines than the average Missouri rail fence. Photography, however, has exploded that notion, the plates showing that such flash tracks are perfectly devoid of angles, the blazing route taken by the fluid being more like the course of a sinuous river. The first observer to note this was James Nesmith, who, in 1856, before the British Society of Sciences, declared that to his naked eye it was a sinuous streak, without branches, zigzags or forks.—St. Louis Republic.

Enjoyable scarcely expresses the pleasure the young folks had at Miss Madge B. Holder's party on the evening of the 27th ult. The charming little hostess and her guests had a merry, joyous time, and every one felt that it was good to be there. Threatening weather prevented some from being present. "All went merry as a marriage bell," and the youths and maidens revelled in delight until the "wee small hours" of the next day "came creeping on apace," and oh, so rapidly to the young hearts so joyous and happy as to take no notice of time's never flagging footsteps. It will be seen that there were an even number of couples present by the following list; Misses Graham Roberts, Pearl Senour, Mary Rouse, Alice Laws, Iva Vanlandingham, Sarah Crisler, Maud Crisler, Alameda Durr, Edna Ransler, Stella Ballard, Lottie Holder and Hattie Edwards. The young gentlemen were, Eiza Vanlandingham, Leon Prior, Walton Rouse, Dudley Lawes, Robt. Byland, Walten Herndon, Raymond Byland, Jacob Cleek, Taylor Grubbs, Chas. Chambers, John Crome, Herman Arnold, Jas. McGee, Hugh Roberts. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Soule, of Hamilton, co, and others were there and joined in the festivities (Had the writer hereof been there he would have had as good a time as any of the other young lads.)

On last christmas day a lady friend who was poring over one of those specimens of periodical literature known as "McLean's Almanac," when she looked up with a sudden joy lighting her face and exclaimed, O I'm so glad we are going to have a good fruit year. Christmas comes in the light of the moon, and it is always a good year for fruit when it does so." It was information in folk lore to me, and I had been flattering myself that I knew it nearly all. However, the lady's prediction seems in a fair way to a verification. The early fruits are just ripening and are very abundant. The heavy yield of apples, last season, will almost necessarily cut off that part of the crop. It may interest lovers of fruit to know that next christmas will occur in the dark of the moon.

The workmen are busily engaged in raising the turnpike bridge over the C. S. Railway at the Waite Place south of the town. Up to last night it had been raised about two and one half-feet.

It is thought nothing will be done at the High Street Bridge this season.

All the Republicans have quit talking about free-silver. Their chat leans towards the tariff. They will stick to that as they did to "the bloody shirt" in days gone by. It will be terribly disappointing if they are compelled to join issue on the currency. They know all the tariff gags and it will put them out if they have to post up on those of the currency. There is no doubt that the sweep made by the silver men of Kentucky has disconcerted many of their schemes. Ohio will soon be in line and then—there will be "a high old time."

In this county there are 46 white and 9 colored school districts, in which the census but recently taken shows there are 3,472 pupils within the school age, being 48 less than the 1895 census showed. Walton is the largest district in the county, and has 197 pupils, while Hathaway is the smallest, having only 26. The amount of public school money paid in this county for services during the year, ending June 30th, will be $10,130 13. Last year there were nine white pauper and four colored pauper districts. This year of the white districts six are paupers, of the colored four are paupers. White male children this year 1,588; females, 1,513. Colored males, 197; females, 174. The interest on the bonds is now counted in and goes to make up the per capita as reported by the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Last Wednesday at the elegant and hospitable residence of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Huey, of Union, there was an unusually pleasant and happy gathering: the occasion being a farewell entertainment extended to Rev. O. M. Huey by his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Huey. Only the immediate relatives of the family were invited, all of whom responded so cordially to the invitation of Mrs. Huey that they thereby demonstrated the fact that her reputation as a hostess was most excellent. A day of happy, social intercourse, and a bounteous and tastily served dinner was indulged in, after which the guests departed, with the most pleasant memories of the occasion. Those present were Rev. and Mrs. O. M. Huey and family, who will soon depart for Carrollton; Mrs. Elizabeth Huey, of Union, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rice, of Florence, R. L. Huey, wife and daughter, of Big Bone, Dr. and Mrs. Crouch, of Union, Miss Pearl Quisenberry, of Virginia, Mrs. Sallie Huey, of Kentucky, Miss Lutie Gaines, of Bullittsville, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gaines and Mr. and Mrs. D. FOR PROHIBITION

The Pittsburgh Convention Side-Tracks Every Other Issue.

Joshua Levering Nominated for President —Hale Johnson for Vice-President—The "Broad Gauge" Faction Bolts the Convention and Nominate Another Ticket.

CONVENTION HALL, PITTSBURGH, May 28.—The seventh national convention of the prohibition party was called to order in this city Wednesday morning in Exposition hall. There was a large attendance.

Right at the opening of formal proceedings, when Mr. Dickie, the chairman of the national convention, presented the name of A. A. Stevens, of Tyrone, Pa., as temporary chairman, the free silver faction broke out.

Chauncey W. Dunn, of California, rose to a point of order and asked Mr. Dickie to rule upon it. He offered as a substitute a minority report, substituting the name of Edward J. Wheeler as temporary chairman in place of Mr. Stevens.

Mr. Dickie ruled the motion out of order and ordered Mr. Dunn to take his seat. Mr. Dunn refused to do so for some time and a scene of uproar ensued. Mr. Dunn appealed from the decision of the chair, and Mr. Dickie refused to entertain the appeal.

Mr. Stevens in the meantime had come forward, but had been met by such persistent cries for "Dickie" that he gave way. Mr. Dickie asked of Mr. Dunn whether if he ruled on the point of order this uproar would subside. Mr. Dunn replied that it was not an uproar, but simply a demand for their rights. Mr. Dickie repeated his ruling that the minority report which was signed by ex-Gov. St. John and others was out of order, and again refused to entertain an appeal from this decision, whereupon Mr. Dunn declared that all parliamentary precedent had been violated, and Mr. St. John took up the discussion with no better result.

He was followed by Mr. Woodbey, a colored delegate from Nebraska, and confusion continued. Chairman Stevens ordered him to be seated. Mr. Woodbey answered: "I shall not do it." "Then," said Mr. Stevens, "I shall order you to be removed from the convention."

Mr. Woodbey accentuated his rebellion by standing on his chair and shouting at the top of his voice, and Mr. Whirten, of Indiana, came to the rescue of the chair by asserting that Mr. Woodbey was not even yet entitled to the floor as a delegate.

Then the band was called upon to drown the uproar and to give the chairman time to recover his wind and his composure, both being considerably disturbed. Meanwhile, half the convention was walking the floor and a squad of policemen was ushered into the hall to keep order.

Mr. Wheeler, of New York, the gentleman named in the minority report as temporary chairman, rose and for the sake of harmony withdrew his name, although protesting against what he called an arbitrary and unjust rule.

Then at last Temporary Chairman Stevens was permitted to deliver his opening address. He gave an interesting historical sketch of the reign of the party, and claimed for Pittsburgh the credit of having originated in June of that same year the counter movement which had crystallized into the prohibition party.

Material political success had only been realized by the party within the past year, when prohibition mayors had been elected in Norfolk, Va., (in the state which was the "mother of presidents") in Williamsport, Pa., and in Albion, Mich., where the present chairman of the national committee of the prohibition party, Mr. Samuel Dickie, had been triumphantly returned.

Dr. J. B. Cranfill, of Texas, elected chairman of the committee on platform, which is a victory for the narrow gauge element of the party. Mrs. Helen M. Gougar has been elected chairman of the committee on permanent organization.

When the convention reassembled a resolution was passed expressing regret for the sudden death of Hon. J. B. Rock, one of the delegates from Massachusetts.

The committee on credentials reported 801 delegates present. A resolution pledging the convention not to abate its relentless war on the licensed rum power, was ordered telegraphed to various religious bodies now in conference, also to congress, and to Miss Frances Willard and Lady Somerset, in England.

Mrs. Gougar, chairman of the committee on permanent organization reported the name of Oliver W. Stewart, of Illinois, (one of the broad gauge faction) as permanent chairman.

Mr. Ferguson, of New York, presented a minority report in behalf of the narrow gauge men recommending the continuance of Mr. A. A. Stevens in the chair as the permanent chairman.

Much ill feeling developed, and Chairman Stevens himself was for a long time refused a hearing, but when at last he gained the attention of the disturbing elements, he said that though he believed he had been put forward as a representative of the element in the convention which believed in prohibition and non-divisive issues, and though he believed on a call of the states he would be sustained, he desired to withdraw his name. This announcement was received with cheers. The majority report of committee was adopted, and Mr. Stewart was escorted to the chair. Mr. Stevens retiring with the thanks of the convention. Mr. Stewart in taking the gavel said it was not part of his duty to outline the platform of the party and he promised fair treatment to all.

A motion made by Mrs. Gougar to hold a mass meeting Wednesday night in lieu of a business session was carried, after considerable opposition, and at 6:15 p. m. the convention adjourned until Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

CONVENTION HALL, PITTSBURGH, May 29.—One of the first acts of the prohibition convention when it reassembled in exposition hall Thursday morning was to send a telegram of sympathy to the mayor of St. Louis.

The women were first given a hearing in favor of woman suffrage and other reforms advocated by the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

A committee of five ladies was appointed to consider these requests and report on them.

Dr. J. K. Funk, of New York, chairman of the committee on platform, then reported the platform as agreed upon by the majority of the committee upon the lines heretofore indicated in the United Press dispatches.

The first six planks, denunciatory of the liquor traffic and proposing straight out prohibition, he said had been unanimously adopted. The seventh plank, which declared that no citizen should be denied the right to vote on account of sex, he said had been adopted by only a small majority. The other planks upon which there was some division in the committee were:

Clause 8. That all citizens should be protected in their right to one day's rest a week.

9. Non-sectarian schools to be taught in the English language.

10. Election of president, vice president and senators directly by the people.

11. Liberal pensions.

12. Exclusion of pauper and criminal immigrants.

13. The naturalized citizen not to vote until a year after naturalization.

14. Favoring arbitration.

15. Inviting co-operation of all persons favoring these views.

When Gov. St. John arose to present the minority report he was received with loud applause from the broad gauge faction, which increased as he read the minority plank as follows:

"Resolved, That all money be issued by the government only and without the intervention of any private citizen, corporation or banking institution. It should be based upon the wealth, stability and integrity of the nation and be a full legal tender for all debts, public and private, and should be of sufficient volume to meet the demands of the legitimate business interests of the country and for the purpose of honestly liquidating all outstanding obligations payable in coin. We demand the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at a ratio of 16 to 1, without consulting any other nation."

The other points on which the minority asked action were as follows:

17. Preserving public lands from monopoly and speculation.

18. Government control of railroads and telegraphs.

19. Favoring an income tax and imposing only such import duties as are necessary to secure equitable commercial relations with other nations.

And lastly, clause 20, favoring the adoption of the initiative and referendum as a means of obtaining free expression of popular will.

On the motion to make their recommendations part of the majority report, the fight began. Indiana delegates demanded that the vote be taken by a call of states, and New York and Pennsylvania delegates to a sufficient number seconded this motion. The vote was then taken on a motion to table Gov. St. John's proposition, and resulted, yeas 310, nays 492. So the convention refused to table the motion to make the minority report a part of the majority report.

The previous question was then ordered and Gov. St. John was recognized to close the debate amid a scene of much excitement. He explained that making the minority report part of the majority did not make the recommendation of that committee part of the platform, each plank could be voted upon separately.

The first five planks relating to prohibitory legislation for the suppression of the liquor traffic were read and unanimously adopted. An ineffectual effort was made to take up the sixth plank, calling upon the churches to support the prohibition ticket at the polls. When the woman suffrage plank was reached a hot debate arose. It ended in victory for woman suffrage.

The convention then at 12.20 p. m. took a recess until 2.30 p. m.

At the afternoon session the convention proceeded to the immediate consideration of the free silver plank proposed by the broad gauge faction which was discussed with great warmth on each side.

After three hours' hot debate the free silver plank was defeated by a vote of 387 yeas to 427 noes. Two of the Iowa delegation announced that they voted for the plank under instruction and against their conviction. Five of the Michigan delegation, under the leadership of Prof. Dickie, disobeyed instructions of the convention and voted "no." The chair declared the free silver resolution lost, and after the cheering and excitement which this announcement caused had quieted down, the convention proceeded to the consideration of other parts of the platform, against which there was no strong opposition. But before much progress had been made, Mr. Patton, of Illinois, upset the whole course of proceedings and precipitated a lively debate by opposing the non-sectarian school resolution as being the work of the American Protective union, and he appealed to the convention not to adopt anything which would prevent their enlisting all good citizens to aid them in fighting against the rum power. He proposed a substitute platform, which omitted mention of every subject (woman suffrage included), except straight prohibition.

Gov. St. John, his voice showing great emotion rose and said, as the single plank men had been successful and had induced the convention to dodge the greatest question of the day—the silver question—he was in favor of turning over the whole organization to them, and if they must have a single plank platform, he was inclined to think this was as good a one as could be had.

In a scene of intense confusion, the previous question was ordered by a rising vote, and Mr. Patton's substitute was declared adopted, and thus became the sole platform of the party. Its full text was as follows:

"The prohibition party in national convention assembled, declares its firm conviction that the manufacture, exportation, importation and sale of alcoholic beverages has produced such social, commercial, industrial and political wrongs and is now threatening the perpetuity of all our social and political institutions, that the suppression of the same by a national party, organized therefor, is the greatest object to be accomplished by the voters of our country; is of such importance that it, of right, ought to control the political action of all our patriotic citizens who desire the prohibition of the liquor traffic; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we favor the legal prohibition by state and national legislation of the manufacture, exportation, importation, interstate transportation and sale of alcoholic beverages.

"That we declare our purpose to organize and unite all the friends of prohibition into our party and in order to accomplish this end, we deem it but right to leave every prohibitionist to his own convictions upon all other questions and instruct our representatives to take such action upon other questions as the changes occasioned by prohibition and the welfare of the whole people shall demand."

The result seemed to take the broad gaugers completely by surprise, although it was intimated that an understanding had been between some of the leaders of the two factions that whichever side was successful on the silver question should have its way as to the rest of the platform.

The western men who favored the insertion of the populist features recommended by the minority of the platform committee, fairly yelled themselves hoarse in declarations that the prohibitionists were no longer a political party, but had become a mere temperance association.

The chairman pounding his gavel in vain efforts to quiet the din, shouted that Mr. Dickie, of Michigan, was recognized for the purpose of making a statement. That statement was not made, for Mr. Henry French, of California, who was one of the innumerable delegates standing on chairs and clamoring to be heard, shouted: "It is eminently proper that Mr. Dickie should be recognized for the prohibition party has been assassinated and he is the assassin."

In the hubbub that followed this remark Mr. St. John came forward and, changing his recently expressed opinion that Mr. Patton's single-plank platform was the best that could be had under the circumstances, moved to reconsider the vote by which it had been adopted.

The narrow gauge men then moved to lay the motion on the table, and by a rising vote, in which everybody seemed to be standing up for both sides of the question at the same time, the motion to table the resolution was declared adopted. A recess was taken at 6:45 until eight p. m., and the broad gauge men immediately went into caucus to consider their future plans.

About three hundred delegates attended the broad gauge caucus, including 60 women. Various bolting propositions were howled down, and the decision was reached to postpone all action until after final adjournment of the regular convention. As soon as the night session of the convention was called to order the roll was called for nominations for president and vice president of the United States. Mr. Tucker, of Maryland, nominated Mr. Joshua Levering, of that state.

Mr. Elisha Kent Kane, of Pennsylvania, nominated ex-Gov. L. C. Hughes, of Arizona.

No other nominations were made. Mr. Levering's nomination was seconded by Mr. Hipp, of Illinois; Mr. V. B. Cushing, of Maryland; Mr. English, of New York; Mr. McClennan Brown and delegates from Delaware, Georgia, Tennessee and other states.

No one having seconded ex-Gov. Hughes' nomination his name was withdrawn and Mr. Joshua Levering, of Baltimore, was nominated by acclamation.

With waving of flags and tumultuous demonstrations of applause the candidate was escorted to the platform and made a graceful address of acceptance.

Hale Johnson, of Illinois, was nominated for vice president, and at 12:30 a. m. adjourned sine die.

Mr. Dickie was re-elected national chairman.

The bolting delegates who withdrew from the prohibition convention held a meeting and organized "The National Party" with "Home Rule" their motto. A platform was adopted embodying the minority report which was submitted by the prohibition broad gauge faction, but rejected by the convention. C. E. Bentley, of Nebraska, was nominated for president; J. H. Southgate, of North Carolina vice president. A national committee, with L. B. Logan, of Ohio, chairman, was organized.

M'KINLEY'S POPULARITY.

The Ohio Napoleon Is Not the Choice of the People.

The opinions of some of the prominent London papers on the business situation and outlook are considered worth transmitting on this side of the Atlantic from week to week. The opinions transmitted and printed here Monday morning were to the effect that business—meaning speculation in American securities—was stagnant and would be stagnant until one William McKinley, of Ohio, should open his "ponderous and marble jaws" and deliver to a waiting universe his momentous opinion on the money question.

These sapient essayists on business affairs assume two things: First, that McKinley's ideas on the silver question are of the utmost importance to people who are interested in American securities; and, second, that Mr. McKinley may be induced any day to speak out and set the pertubed business mind at rest.

They are mistaken in both respects. If McKinley were the president-elect a plain and emphatic declaration from him, like Cleveland's strong letter before his inauguration in 1885, would be worth much. But McKinley is not president-elect. He is not even the nominee of his party, and he may never be. The $250,000 worth of manufactured enthusiasm may be completely exhausted in less than 24 hours after the assembling of the St. Louis convention. He is the logical candidate of his party and it now looks as though he would be nominated. But parties sometimes do very illogical things, especially when they are founded on the principle of greed and not upon any great principle of justice and humanity. And if he is nominated his election is not to be taken for granted. The American people are not all republicans, and a nomination by the republican party is by no means equivalent to an election. The democratic party is still alive, despite the efforts of rotten money men to stab it to death, and its candidates may be elected next November.

As to the second point, he knows very little of American politics who supposes that McKinley can be induced to express an opinion before election. He saw a bad picture of himself the other day upholding a banner on which were inscribed his own words: "No one need be in any doubt about what the republican party stands for. It stands now, as ever, for honest money and a chance to earn it by honest toil." Then "as his eyes wandered to the spread eagle in the background he smiled in approval and said: 'That's business.'"

The spread eagle in the background is copied from the silver dollar. It wears a shield for a dickey and spreads not only its wings but its beak as it yells: "I'm worth 50 cents; 'in God we trust' for the other 50."

"That's business," and it is all the business that can be got from McKinley before election. The banner with the meaningless inscription and the bird with the significant screech, perched upon a Rocky mountain crest, will have to serve for the enlightenment of the business world as to McKinley's opinion on the silver question.—Chicago Chronicle.

M'KINLEY AND THE PEOPLE.

A Policy That Has Never Been Popular With the Masses.

It is timely to recall that McKinleyism has never once been ratified by the people at the polls.

Garfield was a moderate protectionist—a protectionist for expediency's sake, distinctly suspected of free trade leanings. But for Hancock's "tariff a local issue" remark—a remark whose truth was less appreciated then than now—the tariff would have cut no figure in 1880.

The campaign of 1884 was one of personality and filth. Nobody discussed the tariff that year.

In 1888 the republicans directed their attack wholly against general reducing of tariff rates. Their war cry was the preservation of the system then existing. By fat fried from the protected manufacturers, they purchased a victory. The proposition that there would be a general advance of rates was not made to the people; on the contrary, the republicans admitted that the tariff in some of its schedules ought to be reduced, and pleaded that the reduction should be done by its friends.

Then came McKinleyism, as the ratification of a secret bargain between the republican national committee and those from whom the fat was fried. There was a general boosting of the rates all along the line. It is unnecessary to recall the accompanying scandals, or the opinion expressed by Blaine and other republicans in touch with the popular opinion. What of the campaigns that followed?

In 1890, the republican party, with the McKinley tariff as the issue, was all but annihilated. In 1892, with the McKinley tariff still the issue, it lost for the first time since the war control of all the departments of government. In 1894, returning to partial power by misrepresentation and falsehood as to hard times, themselves the heritage of McKinleyism, the leading republicans nevertheless distinctly denied that they were pledged to a reenactment of the McKinley law.

What is there in all this to delight republicans at a McKinley candidature, or to terrify democrats? The people have never yet countenanced the policy which will be endorsed when McKinley is nominated, and there is no reason to believe that they have changed their minds.—Albany Argus.

——It appears that Mark Hanna expects to dictate to the St. Louis convention both the platform and the nominee for vice president. In the words of a late humorist, if all Gaul is divided into three parts, Mark Hanna has three-thirds of it.—Kansas City Times.

——Mr. Quay's social visit to Mr. McKinley was of the sort that the cat pays to the cook when the latter is in the pantry.—Chicago News.

A TYPICAL REPUBLICAN.

Quay Always in Favor of Taxing the Many to Enrich the Few.

The Courier-Jouranl some time since suggested that Mr. Quay was the typical republican politician, and as such a very appropriate candidate for his party for the presidency. The Pennsylvania convention did not accept this estimate in so many words, but it described Mr. Quay as one of the party's foremost leaders—"wise in counsel and brilliant and able in action; at once the type of the American citizen, scholar, soldier and statesman."

This estimate is overdrawn. Mr. Quay is not the typical citizen, or scholar, or soldier, or statesman. All those positions are already filled by dead men, and among the living there are those who fit them better than Mr. Quay. The convention should have confined itself to characterizing Mr. Quay as the typical republican politician. His right to that cannot be disputed; and, after all, this is probably what the convention meant.

It is the theory of the republican politician that office is a private snap. It is his practice to devote his energies in office to rewarding those who helped to put him there, not out of gratitude, but in order that he may get back. The legislative power of the government, in his contemplation, is for use in transferring money from the ordinary citizen to certain privileged classes who have contributed large sums of money to put the party in power. The process of the courts must be stopped when a republican worker is in danger of punishment, and if this be impracticable, then the pardoning power must be used to save him from punishment. The people of this state understand how that is.

Now, see how well this fits the career of Mr. Quay. When he became a member of the board of pardons, about 1879, two of his henchmen were arrested for bribery in connection with an attempt to put through a $2,000,000 measure to pay for losses by a riot. One was convicted, and the other confessed, but both were immediately pardoned by the influence of Quay. About the same time Quay and Cashier Walters, of the state treasury, took $260,000 from the public vaults and lost it in speculation. Walters committed suicide and Quay talked about it, but Don Cameron and some one else loaned him the money to replace the sum abstracted, so that he determined to continue his career as a republican politician, "wise in counsel and brilliant and able in action." In 1885 he became state treasurer, abstracted $400,000 from the treasury, invested it so well as to be able to replace it and make a clear profit of $300,000. This showed such brilliancy in action that he was shortly afterward elected to the United States senate.

There are many other incidents in Quay's career of a similar tenor, all tending to show that no politician among his fellow republicans has so successfully worked public office for his own individual benefit and that of his aiders and abettors, as he has done.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

AN OVERRATED CANDIDATE.

McKinley's Chances Will Dwindle Before the Convention.

If business men realize the peril of their interests involved in the election of such a man as Mr. McKinley; if they are conscious that in times like those in which Mr. Cleveland came to the rescue of the country's credit, Mr. McKinley will be trying, in the words of his own Ohio platform, to concoct such "legislation as will secure the maintenance of the parities of value of the two metals;" if they will will recall the bargain which he made with the free silver men that gave to the country his tariff act and the panic of 1893—Mr. McKinley will not be nominated. We are convinced that his strength is greatly overrated, and that the exercise of common sense at St. Louis will scatter his forces and clear the political atmosphere. There are anti-McKinley delegates even in the states whose four delegates at large are instructed to vote for him. If the real friends of sound money in the St. Louis convention will unite against this candidate who dares not express an opinion on the most important subject of the campaign, his defeat will be assured on the first ballot. The republican party has spoken well so far as it has spoken at all; but its nomination must be the test of its sincerity, and if the candidate shall be Mr. McKinley, its professions will be flatly contradicted.—Harper's Weekly.

——A correspondent wants to know why McKinley hasn't as good a right to change his views on the monetary question as Carlisle had. He has; but the question is whether he has changed his views. Carlisle has declared frankly that he has changed his and clearly defines his present position. McKinley is dumb. Yet he permits one set of his followers to declare that he has not changed his views and another set to declare with equal emphasis that he has. That is the difference between the two cases.—Detroit Free Press.

STEEL-TRACKED ROADS.

Money and Labor-Saving Device of a Well-Known New Yorker.

Ex-Senator John O'Donnell, formerly a railroad commissioner of New York, has devised a system of steel-track highways which he hopes to see adopted by the rural communities of the country as a set-off to high freight rates by railways.

On an ordinary macadamized highway, two steel gutters, each five inches wide and half an inch deep, are laid on longitudinal stringpieces and cross wooden ties at a width of 4 feet 8½ inches from center to center. To insure perfect drainage, side channels are conducted at frequent intervals from these gutters to the outside of the road.

Mr. O'Donnell quotes from the December bulletin of the road department at Washington to show that 313,349,227 tons of farm products were hauled over country roads in one year at a cost of $663,869,000, or about 24 per cent. of the total value of the products. Nearly two-thirds of this amount could be saved by good roads.

The following example is quoted by Mr. O'Donnell to show the prospective advantage to be gained from the use of steel-track gutters:

"At a point on a connecting lateral road with the New York Central, 20 teams in the fall of the year delivered 20 loads of cheese from the factory 12 miles from the railroad. The average load was 1,600 pounds. It took all day to deliver the 32,000 pounds of cheese and return. On a steel-track road that cheese could have been delivered by one team in less time and in better condition, thereby saving 19 teams and 19 men, fairly worth $57. But this is not all. This cheese was shipped to the connecting point on the Central, 59 miles, at 20 cents per 100—$64. On a steel-track road three teams would have delivered it and returned in three days at $3.50 per day, or $31.50, saving $52.50, and, if loaded back at the same rate, the total saving would be $65. The market price of the cheese at 8 cents per pound was $256, and the loss by reason of roads and rail charges was over one-third the price obtained."

Mr. O'Donnell calculates the cost of making a single steel-gutter track road at from $3,000 to $5,000 a mile.

GOOD ROAD HINTS.

Some Things That Are Essential to Permanent Improvement.

Until we have a radical change in the system of highway laws and highway management much improvement would result in the condition of roads if the commissioners and overseers would see to it that the side ditch on the upper side of the road is opened to a proper depth to carry all the water in the spring and sluices put across at proper intervals to let the water away from the road, and especially that the roadbed be made higher than the ditch and not so wide and flat as in many cases they are. Many and many a rod of road is nothing but mudhole, and all because of carelessness in not lowering the side ditch and raising the roadbed. Again, many rods of road are sometimes made muddy by not making water bars across the road to turn the water off, and so it is allowed to follow down the entire slope for a long distance, when a bar of suitable height would prevent all and the public would be better accommodated by a few minutes' work of the overseer. But we shall never have good roads, in the strict sense of the term, until the rocks and stones which now lie dormant waiting the action of some master mind are broken into small fragments, and each year the time now devoted to "working" is utilized in drawing a plentiful covering of crushed stone. In other words, when our roads are macadamized and the water turned off and kept off, then, and not until then, will our roads be permanently improved.—G. W. Guernsey, in Orange Judd Farmer.

IS THIS CIVILIZATION?

You cannot find this type of road
In any heathen land,
But in our civilized abode
It's found on every hand.
—Good Roads.

How Deep to Plant Seed.

The depth at which seed is planted is important, and the smaller the seed the nearer it must be to the surface. If planted too low then the seed may not obtain oxygen, or, even assuming that it did, it will exhaust its cotyledon, or reserve food, before it is sufficiently above ground to live on the atmosphere; hence it dies. The larger seed containing a greater quantity of store food, can last longer before exhausting its cotyledon, and so may be planted deeper. The smallest seeds, such as grass seeds, are spread on the surface of the land; larger seeds, like mustard, are sown half an inch deep, and the depth will vary with increase of size and peculiarity of structure to two inches.—Farmer's Voice.

The Secret of Success.

The magnificent roads of Europe which traveling Americans find so wonderful are the result of scientific construction and a thoroughly studied system of constant repairs.

The Demand for Good Roads.

Good roads are likely to be more popular next summer than ever before.

GRAFTING MADE EASY.

How Wild Trees Are Changed Into Producers of Fine Fruit.

Scattered over rocky, sidehill pastures, along fences, fields and frequently in orchard rows, are to be found on almost every farm thrifty wild apple trees, whose fruit is seldom fit for anything but the cider press. Yet these very trees, with but very little outlay of time and money, can be changed into producers of fruit of the best varieties by cleft grafting. As soon as spring has really set in is the proper season to do this work, and almost anyone, by the exercise of intelligence, care and perseverence, can do his own grafting very successfully.

The Tools.—A full kit of grafter's tools consists of a keen, fine-toothed, stiff-backed saw, a thin, sharp knife for whittling, a light wooden mallet, a wax kettle and a grafting knife like the one shown in Fig. 1. The entire length of it is 12½ inches. Any blacksmith can make this knife from an old file. Have him taper the handle end down to a sharp point.

Cutting the Cions.—Many farmers have the notion that cions must be cut in February, but experience has taught me that the best time to cut grafts, if one does not need any great quantity, is at the time they are to be inserted, always provided that the buds are not too far advanced, in which case they should be cut in April and preserved in damp sand or sawdust. For cions, cut only the last year's growth from the end of a bearing branch.

FIG. 1.—GRAFTING KNIFE.

Sawing.—In sawing off a branch, the grafter should bear in mind the future shape of the tree, and not saw too close to the trunk, not saw off branches more than three inches in diameter, and not saw one limb above another, so that the growth will interfere. In case of a heavy branch, which is liable to split down, saw under a few inches above where you wish to leave your stub, until the saw begins to pinch, then saw from the top at the place selected, and there will be no splitting. Make a smooth, clean cut.

Whittling.—Cions should not exceed a lead pencil in size. Take the twig in your left hand, and placing the knife at the side of the bud, draw it toward the end, the cut terminating at the pith, the bevel being perfect. Serve the opposite side in exactly the same way, taking care that the wedge is a little the thickest in front. There should be about an inch of shank below the lower bud. Count off three buds and detach, when your cion will appear as shown on the right of Fig. 2.

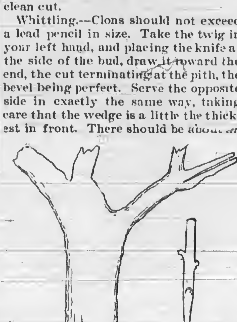

FIG. 2.—CLEFT AND CION.

Setting the Cion.—Place the curved edge of your knife over the end of the stub, splitting at right angles to the body of the tree. Split with one blow of the mallet if possible, the curved edge of the knife being calculated to make a clean cut before the bark begins to tear. Drive out the knife, and, reversing, drive the wedge lightly into the cleft. Now bear down on the handle enough to hold the cleft open, insert your cions so that their inner bark will either match with or cross that of the stub, leaving the lower bud a little above or on a level with the sawed surface, and drive—not pull—out your knife. The cleft ready for insertion of the cion is seen in Fig. 2.

Waxing.—Have your wax about the consistency of soft putty and your hands well oiled with fresh lard, so that it will not stick. Roll up sufficient wax to cover the stub, draw the wax with one motion over the cleft, shutting in the lower bud. Now cover the other cleft, and if you have used wax enough to exclude air and moisture success will be sure.

Grafting Wax.—To make a wax that will not crack in winter nor melt in summer, melt one part beeswax and one part tallow together, and five parts white resin separately; pour together while hot, stir briskly and dump into a tub of lukewarm water whose sides and bottom have been previously well greased with lard. Grease your hands with the same material and work your wax until it is a golden yellow and will float.—Orange Judd Farmer.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Peach trees do better when well cultivated.

Generally there is no advantage in cultivating the orchard deep.

The gooseberry flourishes best in deep, moist, but not wet, soil.

Pears need a rich soil. Lack of fertility is often the principal cause of failure.

With care raspberries may be grown in the same soil for years and yet produce good crops.

On the production of an overcrop it costs the tree more to ripen seeds than to make the fruit.

By planting in long rows and cultivating with cultivator, strawberries can be grown as cheaply as potatoes.

Grapes grown in a clayey soil are darker and more glossy than those grown on gravely land, but the sweetest grapes grow in a gravely soil.

Give trees plenty of room if you would have them thrifty and vigorous and bear large, well-matured fruit.—St. Louis Republic.

TOWER OF DAVID.

A Tribute to the Boys Who Wore the Blue and the Gray.

Their Bucklers Now Are Laid Away and the Brave Warriors Are Taking a Long Rest, Waiting for the Last Battle Call to Sound.

The text of Dr. Talmage Sunday was Solomon's Song iv., 4: "The tower of David builded for an armory, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men."

The church is compared to an armory, the walls hung with trophies of dead heroes. Walk all about this tower of David and see the dented shields and the twisted swords and the rusted helmets of terrible battle. So at this season, a month earlier at the south, a month later at the north, the American churches are turned into armories adorned with memories of departed braves. Blossom and bloom, O walls, with stories of self-sacrifice, and patriotism and prowess!

By unanimous decree of the people of the United States of America, the graves of all the northern and southern dead are every year decorated. All acerbity and bitterness have gone out of the national solemnity, and as the men and women of the south one month ago floralized the cemeteries and graveyards, so yesterday we, the men and women of the north, put upon the tombs of our dead the kiss of patriotic affection. Bravery always appreciates bravery, though it fight on the other side; and if a soldier of the federal army had been a month ago at Savannah, he would not have been ashamed to march in the floral processions to the cemetery. And if yesterday a confederate soldier was at Arlington, he was glad to put a sprig of heart's ease on the silent heart of our dead.

In a battle during the last war the confederates were driven back by the federals, who were in swift retreat, when a federal officer dropped wounded. One of his men stopped at the risk of his life, and put his arms around the officer to carry him from the field. Fifty confederate muskets were aimed at the young man who was picking up the officer. But the confederate captain shouted: "Hold! Don't fire! That fellow is too brave to be shot." And as the federal officer, held up by his private solder, went limping slowly off the field, the confederates gave three cheers for the brave private; and just before the two disappeared behind the barn both the wounded officer and the brave private lifted their caps in gratitude to the confederate captain.

Shall the Gospel be less generous than the world? Shall we stack arms, the bayonet of our northern gun facing this way, the bayonet of the southern gun facing the other way, and as the gray of the morning melts into the blue of noon, so the typical gray and blue of old war times have blended at last, and they quote in the language of King James' last translation without any revision: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will to men." Now what do we mean by this great observance?

First, we mean instruction to one whole generation. Subtract 1865, when the war ended, from our 1896, and you will realize what a vast number of people were born since the war, or were so young as to have no vivid appreciation. No one under 41 years of age has any adequate memory of that prolonged horror. Do you remember it? "Well," you say, "I only remember that mother swooned away while reading the newspaper, and that they brought my father home wrapped in the flag, and that a good many people came in the house to pray, and mother faded away after that until again there were many people in the house and they told me she was dead."

There are others who can not remember the roll of a drum or the tramp of a regiment, or a sigh or a tear of that tornado of woe that swept the nation again and again until there was one dead in each house. Now it is the religious duty of those who do remember it to tell those who do not. My young friends, there were such partings at rail-car windows and steamboat wharves, and at front doors of comfortable homes as I pray God you may never witness. Oh, what a time it was, when fathers and mothers gave up their sons, never expecting to see them again, and never did see them again until they came back mutilated, and crushed, and dead.

Four years of hostile experiences. Four years of ghastliness. Four years of grave digging. Four years of funerals, coffins, shrouds, hearses, dirges. Mourning! mourning! mourning! it was hell let loose. What a time of waiting for news! Morning paper and evening paper scrutinized for intelligence from the boys at the front. First, announcement that the battle must occur the next day. Then the news of the battle's going on. On the following day still going on. Then news of 30,000 slain, and of the names of the great generals who had fallen, but no news about the private soldiers. Waiting for news! After many days a load of wounded going through the town or city, but no news from our boy. Then a long list of wounded and a long list of the dead, and a long list of the missing. And among the last list, our boy.

When missing? How missing? Who saw him last? Missing! Missing! Was he in the woods or by the stream? How was he hurt? Missing! Missing! What burning prayers that he may yet be heard from. In that awful waiting for news many a life perished. The strain of anxiety was too great. That wife's brain gave way that first week after the battle, and ever anon she walks the floor of the asylum or looks out of the window as though she expected some one to come along the path and up the steps, as she soliloquises, "Missing! missing!"

What made matters worse, all this might have been avoided. There was no more need of that war than at this moment I should plunge a dagger through your heart. There were a few Christian philanthropists in those days, scoffed at by both north and south, who had the right of it. If they had been heard on both sides, we should have had no war and no slavery. It was advised by those Christian philanthropists, "Let the north pay in money for the slaves as property and set them free." The north said: "We can not afford to pay." The south said: "We will not sell the slaves anyhow." But the north did pay in war expenses enough to purchase the slaves, and the south was compelled to give up slavery anyhow. Might not the north better have paid the money and saved the lives of 500,000 brave men, and might not the south better have sold out slavery and saved her 500,000 brave men? I swear you by the graves of your fathers and brothers and sons to a new hatred for—the champion curse of the universe—war! O Lord, God, with the hottest bolt of thine omnipotent indignation, strike the monster down forever and ever. Imprison it in the deepest dungeon of the eternal penitentiary. Bolt it in with all the iron ever forged in cannon or molded into howitzers. Cleave it with all the sabers that ever glittered in battle and wring its soul with all the pangs which it ever caused. Let it feel all the conflagrations of the homesteads it ever destroyed. Deeper down let it fall, and in fiercer flame let it burn till it has gathered into its heart all the suffering of eternity as well as time. In the name of the millions of graves of its victims I denounce it. The nations need more the spirit of treaty and less of the spirit of war.

War is more ghastly now than once, not only because of the greater destructiveness of its weaponry, but because now it takes down the best men, whereas once it chiefly took down the worst. Bruce in 1717, in his "Institutions of Military Law," said of the European armies of his day: "If all infamous persons and such as have committed capital crime, heretics, atheists and all dastardly feminine men, were weeded out of the army it would soon be reduced to a pretty moderate number." Flogging and mean pay made them still more ignoble. Officers were appointed to see that each soldier drank his ration of a pint of spirits a day. There were noble men in battle, but the moral character of the army then was 95 per cent. lower than the moral character of an army to-day. By so much is war now the more detestable because it destroys the picked men of the nations.

Again, by this national ceremony we mean to honor courage. Many of these departed soldiers were volunteers, not conscripts, and many of those who were drafted might have provided a substitute or got off on furlough or have deserted. The fact that they lie in their graves is proof of their bravery. Brave at the front, brave at the cannon's mouth, brave on lonely picket duty, brave in cavalry charge, brave before the surgeon, brave in the dying message to the home circle. We yesterday put a garland on the brow of courage. The world wants more of it.

The church of God is in woeful need of men who can stand under fire. The lion of worldly derision roars and the sheep tremble. In great reformatory movements at the first shot how many fall back! The great obstacle to the church's advancement is the inanity, the vacuity, the soft prettiness, the namby-pambyism of professed Christians. Great on a parade, cowards in battle. Afraid of getting their plumes ruffled, they carry a parasol over their helmet. They go into battle not with warriors' gauntlet but with kid gloves, not clutching the sword-hilt too tight lest the glove split at the back.

In all our reformatory and Christian work the great want is more backbone, more mettle, more daring, more prowess. We would in all our churches like to trade off a hundred do-nothings for one do-everything. "Quit yourselves like men—be strong."

Thy saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer, though they die;
They see the triumph from afar,
And seize it with their eye.

Again, we mean by this national observation to honor self-sacrifice for others. To all these departed men home and kindred were as dear as our home and kindred are to us. Do you know how they felt? Just as you or I would feel starting out to-morrow morning with nine chances out of ten against our returning alive, for the intelligent soldier sees not only battle ahead, but malarial sickness and exhaustion. Had these men chosen they could have spent the last night in their homes, and to-day have been seated where you are. They chose the camp, not because they liked it better than their own house, and followed the drum and fife, not because they were better music than the voices of the domestic circle. South Mountain and Murfreesboro and the swamps of the Chickahominy were not playgrounds.

These heroes risked and lost all for others. There is no higher sublimity than that. To keep three-quarters for ourselves and give one-quarter to others is generous. To divide even with others is generous. To keep nothing for ourselves and give all for others is magnanimity Christ-like. Put a girdle around your body and then measure the girdle and see if you are 50 or 60 inches round. And is that the circle of your sympathies—the size of yourself? Or, to measure you around your heart, would it take a girdle large enough to encircle the land and encircle the world? You want to know what we dry theologians mean when we talk of vicarious suffering. Look at the soldiers' graves and find out. Vicarious! Pangs for others, wounds for others, homesickness for others, blood for others, sepulcher for others.

Those who visited the national cemeteries at Arlington Heights and at Richmond and Gettysburg saw one inscription on soldiers' tombs oftener repeated than any other—Unknown. When, about 21 years ago, I was called to deliver the oration at Arlington Heights, Washington, I was not so much impressed with the minute guns that shook the earth, or with the attendance of president and cabinet and foreign ministers and generals of the army and commodores of the navy, as with the pathetic and overwhelming suggestiveness of that epitaph on so many graves at my feet. Unknown! Unknown! It seems to me that the time must come when the government of the United States shall take off that epitaph. They are no more unknown! We have found them out at last. They are the beloved sons of the republic.

Would it not be well to take the statue of the heathen goddess off the top of the capital (for I have no faith in the morals of a heathen goddess), and put one great statue in all our national cemeteries—a statue of liberty in the form of a Christian woman with her hand on an open Bible and her foot on the Rock of Ages, with the other hand pointing down to the graves of the unknown, saying, "These are my sons who died that I might live." Take off the misnomer. Everybody knowns them. It is of comparatively little importance what was the name given them in baptism of water. In the holier and mightier baptism of blood we know them, and yesterday the nation put both arms around them and hugged them to her heart, crying, "Mine forever."

Again, by this national ceremony we mean the future defense of this nation. By every wreath of flowers on the soldiers' graves we say: "Those who die for the country shall not be forgotten," and that will give enthusiasm to our young men in case our nation should in the future need to defend itself in battle. We shall never have another war between north and south. The old decayed bone of contention. American slavery, has been cast out, although here and there a depraved politician takes it up to see if he can't gnaw something off it. We are floating off farther and farther from the possibility of sectional strife.

No possibility of civil war. But about foreign invasion I am not so certain. When I spoke against war I said nothing against self-defense. An inventor told me that he had invented a style of weapon which could be used in self-defense, but not in aggressive warfare. I said, "When you get the nations to adopt that weapon you have introduced the millennium." I have no right to go on my neighbor's premises and assault him, but if some ruffian break into my house for the assassination of my family and I can borrow a gun and load it in time and aim it straight enough, I will shoot him.

There is no room on this continent for any other nation, except Canada, and a better neighbor no one ever had. If you don't think so, go to Montreal and Toronto and see how well they will treat you. Other than that there is absolutely no room for any other nation. I have been across the continent again and again, and know that we have not a half inch of ground for the gouty foot of foreign despotism to stand on. But I am not so sure that some of the arrogant nations of Europe may not some day challenge us. I do not know that those forts around New York bay are to sleep all through the next century, I do not know that Barnegat light house will not yet look off upon a hostile navy. I do not know but that a half dozen nations, envious of our prosperity, may want to give us a wrestle. During our civil war there were two or three nations that could hardly keep their hands off us. It is very easy to pick national quarrels, and if our nation escapes much longer it will be the exception.

If foreign foe should come, we want men like those of 1812 and like those of 1862 to meet them. We want them all up and down the coast, Pulaski and Ft. Sumter in the same chorus of thunder as Ft. Lafayette and Ft. Hamilton. Men who will not only know how to fight, but how to die. When such a time comes, if it ever does come, the generation on the stage of action will say: "My country will care for my family as they did in the soldiers' asylum for the orphans in the civil war, and my country will honor my dust as it honored those who preceded me in patriotic sacrifice, and once a year at any rate, on Decoration day, I shall be resurrected into the remembrance of those for whom I died. Here I go for God and my country! Huzzah!

If foreign foe should come, the old sectional animosities would have no power. Here go our regiments into the battlefield: Fifteenth New York volunteers, Tenth Alabama cavalry, Fourteenth Pennsylvania riflemen, Tenth Massachusetts artillery, Seventh South Carolina sharpshooters. I do not know but it may require the attack of some foreign foe to make us forget our absurb sectional wrangling. I have no faith in the cry, "No north, no south, no east, no west." Let all four sections keep their peculiarities and their preferences, each doing its own work and not interfering with each other, each of the four carrying its part in the great harmony—the bass, the alto, the tenor, the soprano—in the grand march of union.

Once more this great national ceremony means the beautification of the tombs, whether of those who fell in battle or accident, or who have expired in their beds or in our arms or on our laps. I suppose you have noticed that many of the families take this season as the time for the adornment of their family plots. This national observance has secured the arboriculture and floriculture of the cemeteries, the straightening up of many a slab planted 30 or 40 years ago, and has swung the scythe through the long grass and has brought the stonecutter to call out the half-obliterated epitaph. This day is the benediction of the resting-place of father, mother, son, daughter, brother, sister.

It is all that we can do for them now. Make their resting places attractive, not absurd with costly outlay, but in quiet remembrance. You know how. If you can afford only one flower, that will do. It shows what you would do if you could. One blossom from you may mean more than the duke of Wellington's catafalque. Oh, we can not afford to forget them. They were so lovely to us. We miss them so much. We will never get over it. Blessed Lord Jesus, comfort our broken hearts. From every bank of flowers breathes promise of resurrection.

DANGEROUS BLUE HERON.

Hunters Have Been Hurt Trying to Capture a Wounded Bird.

"Some of these days," said the 'longshore hunter to a New York Sun man, "I expect to open my daily paper and see a headline something like this: 'Killed by a Blue Heron,' and I'll tell you why. The blue heron is a big, powerful bird, which has already disfigured the faces of several men. The men have wounded a bird, and then, thinking to capture it alive, they went up to it. Why, I'd as soon try to kiss a wounded grizzly. The birds grow as tall as six feet and have necks like a fish rod and just the kind of muscles to move it quickest with the most strength. They could drive their bill points through a quarter-inch panel.

"The hunter goes up to a bird and sees it lying there looking as innocent as a robin, with only a wing broken. 'What a fine pet it would make,' the fool hunter thinks. Then he picks the bird up and starts for home in a wagon or a boat, with the bird between his knees. The bird's neck is drawn back like a letter 'S.' All of a sudden the bill shoots up and gives the man a gash alongside the eye three inches long. That is what always has happened. The wounded bird has missed its aim, but some time, and you want to remember it, this feathered spearman will drive its bill into an enemy's eye, and, like a steel umbrella stick, the point of the bill will penetrate the man's brain. I guess the bird's aim has always been spoiled by the pain of its wounds, and so many a human life has been saved. I don't monkey with wounded hitterns, or cranes—well, scarcely."

Listen for Angel Music.

The children at Bethlehem are told by their mothers that on Christmas eve a choir of angels sings above the place where Christ was born. Travelers say that on this evening scores, and sometimes hundreds, of children may be seen in the open air, looking up into the sky, waiting to hear the angels sing.

Ancient Makers of Shoes.

Shoemakers were at first called sandal-makers, and there is little doubt that sandals and rough buskins, or socks (covering the legs like gaiters), were the first specimen of shoes.

Spectacles.

Roger Bacon was the first to suggest the use of spectacles. When they came into use in Italy, about the year 1285, on the recommendation of Alessandro di Spina, a monk of Pisa, women were forbidden to wear them, because it was thought that such facial ornamentations would make them vain.

A Free Press in Austria.

Austria's new ministry has sent a circular to all public prosecutors reminding them that the freedom of the press is guaranteed by the constitution, and warning them that the illegal practice of confiscating newspapers, on the ground that they incite to hatred and contempt, will no longer be tolerated.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

POLITICAL.

Uniontown Telegram: "As Kentucky goes so will go the National Convention at Chicago."

The Democratic Committee Chairman in Leslie says there is not a free-silver man in that county.

It is said that Hon. Evan Settle, of Owen county, will be a free silver candidate for Congress in the Ashland district.

Brothers-in-law George Denny and Woody Dunlap can console one another now. They could neither be elected nor steal into the halls of legislation.—Carlisle Mercury.

Lexington correspondant of the Louisville Post says there is but one thing certain in politics in the Ashland district, and that is that Breckinridge will be the next Congressman.

William Jett, of Union City, Madison county, has announced his candidacy for delegate from the Eighth district to the National Convention at Chicago. He is a free-silver man, and will oppose J. Stone Walker, the sound-money candidate.

The Garrard county Republican convention to select delegates to the Congressional convention brobe up in a row. It was the wildest and most disgraceful row that ever occured in either political party in that part of the State. It was Bradley and anti-Bradley factions.

Of the Fifth Appellate district the Richmond Pantagraph (Rep.) says: "Last election Gov. Bradley received 285 votes more than Hardin, but in the presidential election of 1892 the Democrats carried the district by nearly 7,000 votes. There are twenty-two counties in this district and the Republicans are hopeful of carrying it.

Will C. Owens retains his seat in Congress. The Election Committee reported unanimously in his favor. It was as much a tribute to the personal worth of the brilliant young representative from the Ashland District, as it was a verdict in favor of a contest honestly won. If Breckinridge will step aside now, and let Owens have the endorsement to which he is entitled, peace may yet dwell in the heart of the Blue Grass.—Louisville Critic.

The colored Republicans of Lexington held a mass meeting and passed resolutions denouncing the unfair make-up of the Fayette County Republican Committee. The negroes only got five out of the thirty-five members of the committee, while they claim to cast three-fourths of the votes. They demand that the white Republicans take steps to give them fair representation and say that in case the demand is ignored or refused, they will not feel bound by any action the committee may take with regard to nominations in the future.

Speaking of the candidates for Circuit Judge, if Judge Green is re-elected at the next election, he will be the first man who ever succeeded himself in that office in this district. The first election under the constitution of 1850, was in the year of 1856, when Judge Eljah F. Nuttall was elected. Before that time the judges were appointed by the Governor. In 1862 Judge G. C. Drane was elected. In 1868 Judge Wm. S. Pryor was elected. He resigned in the fall of 1871 to accept a place on the bench of the Court of Appeals, being appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Chief Justice Robertson, and Judge P. U. Major was appointed to succeed him on the Circuit bench. The later serving until the election in August, 1874, when Judge Geo. C. Drane was elected, having defeated Judge Major for the party nomination. In 1880 the contest was again between the same two men, and the tables were turned, Judge Major, winning the prize in the convention at Glencoe. In 1886 Judge Warren Monfort defeated Judge P. U. Major to be defeated himself in 1892 by Judge J. W. Greene, the incumbant, who is a candidate for re-election. Now Judge C. C. Cram, of Grant, appears before the high court of the people and asks them to wrap the ermine about his stalwart shoulders for a term of six years, while John S. Gaunt, Esq., of this place is listening with more or less interest to the buzzing of the judicial "bumble bee," but no aspiration has yet sprung full grown from his mind, as did Minerva from Jupiter's brain. What is true as to the Judges is true as to Commonwealth's attorneys; not one of them has ever succeeded himself.—Carrollton Democrat.

CROP AND STOCK.

Mrs. Wiley Steele, of Morgan county, gave birth to triplet girls babies.

An attempt will be made to raise rice in the Yellow creek valley in Bell county.

A great many American horses are now being shipped to Europe in the shape of "canned beef."

It is estimated that at least half of the wheat growing in Michigan will be destroyed by the Hessian fly.

A Casey county farmer sent to the North for a superior article of clover seed and sowed twenty acres. When it came up it proved to be a first class article of the ordinary black mustard and now his mustard crop promises to be large enough to blister the whole of Casey county.

There is more tobacco planted now in Bracken county and in a fair way to live than there has ever been at this time of the year; plants are coming on rapidly which insures a large acreage. Wheat is almost a failure, apples will be scarce, cherries and blackberries, plentiful.—Bracken Chronicle.

Swine were first introduced from Spain into Hispaniola by Columbus in 1493, into Florida by De Soto in in 1538, into Nova Scotia in 1553, into Canada in 1608, and into Virginia in 1609, Jamestown, in the latter State, had at one time to be protected by palisades to keep them out so fast did they multiply.

The other day a Kentucky woman gave birth to five boys. An Indiana woman goes her one better, and gives birth to six babies—four boys and two girls. And now an Owen county sow caps the climax and gives birth to seventeen pigs. If this thing don't stop, the earth will become over populated.—Ex.

Hanging in the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture in a few days will be a certificate of award to Kentucky by the World's Fair of the first premium for the best display of leaf tobacco. The big bronze medal which goes with the award has been just now received by Commissioner Moore, and the latter is having handsome steel engraving certificates nicely framed, and it will be a permanent ornament to the office.—Capital.

Representatives of Liggett & Meyers, the St. Louis tobacco manufacturers, have been working in the Bath and Fleming county districts with unusual vigor. In the past 10 days they have purchased in Fleming county alone 350,000 pounds of the crop of '95. In Bath their purchase will be equally heavy, while in Nicholas and Montgomery counties they are making heavy bids for all that can be had. The prices are moderate.

The truth of the matter is that there are not too many horses in the country. The so-called surplus is due to the fact that no one cares to purchase the class of animals offered for sale. There are not enough good horses in America today. The quality has been suffered to decline. A nation that has produced the World's wonder in the shape of the light harness horse, should not allow its general stock of horses to deteriorate so badly that buyers cannot find what they want without scouring a thousand square leagues of its most fertile section. If pursued along proper lines, the future welfare of the horse industry in America is as secure as any other branch of the live stock business, but breeders must produce what the market demands.

It is the opinion of a great many that there never was a better season in this locality for setting tobacco than that of last week. And when one contemplates the vast amount of it put out the mind is curious to know what is to be done with it all. The tobacco growers seem to have learned nothing from experience and indications point to this year's crop as the largest in years. Next winter a distressing spectacle will be witnessed. Thousands of farmers will have enormous crops of tobacco on their hands. The weed will be inferior in quality, owing to lack of care on account of size of crop. The market will be glutted, and many a man will sit down in sorrow and remorse to contemplate the proceeds of the sale on the wrong side of the books. Whereas the man who had but a small crop and well attended will have a nice bank account and will be correspondingly happy. This state of affairs exists every year, yet many do not seem to profit by it. Reason and common sense ought to make quality and not quantity the desired goal, but unfortunately the reverse is the case. Paste this in your hat and see if the prediction does not come true.—Henry Co. Local.

OWEN COUNTY
[News]

There are some things we can excuse, but when a fellow throws his arms around us and tells us that times are so very hard that he just can't possibly pay his $1.50 subscription, and at the same time is supporting a $2 drunk, we kick.

The Committee met Monday and by a vote of twelve to one refused to change the date of the primary from Nov. 3d to an earlier date. There was some objections on the part of a few of the candidates.

George Moore, one of our most popular young men, son of deputy Sheriff, Lige Moore, died very suddenly Sunday morning. He had been sick for several weeks with typhoid fever and about three weeks ago had recovered sufficiently to get out of bed and was thought to be rapidly recovering. He took a back set and had been quite sick ever since, but Saturday was supposed to be better.

[Herald]

Fine seasonable showers nearly every day during the past two weeks.

From a state of gloom ten days ago the prospect brightens for a fine crop of tobacco and corn, and gardens, though late, are now looking as well as could be desired.

The store of Wolf & Roberts was broken into by burglars last Monday night. They effected an entrance by breaking the lock of one of the rear windows, using for that purpose a coulter which was identified as having been taking from Mr. Maddox's blacksmith shop. A complete overhauling of the goods in nearly every department seems to have been made, and a number of articles the exact value of which can not be estimated, were taken. Mr. Wolf thinks probably they got about $75 worth.

It is now certain that no democrat will be foolhardly enough to try conclusions with Judge Wm. S. Pryor for the nomination for appelate judge and he will be declared the nominee of the party June 10 without the formality of a convention.

NOT A SICK DAY
For Over Thirty Years!
RESULT OF USING AYER'S PILLS

"Ayer's Cathartic Pills for over thirty years have kept me in good health, never having had a sick day in all that time. Before I was twenty I suffered almost continually—as a result of constipation—from dyspepsia, headaches, neuralgia, or boils and other eruptive diseases. When I became convinced that nine-tenths of my troubles were caused by constipation, I began the use of Ayer's Pills, with the most satisfactory results, never having a single attack that did not readily yield to this remedy. My wife, who had been an invalid for years, also began to use Ayer's Pills, and her health was quickly restored. With my children I had noticed that nearly all their ailments were preceded by constipation, and I soon had the pleasure of knowing that with children as with parents, Ayer's Pills, if taken in season, avert all danger of sickness."—H. BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1896. NO. 33.

THE Indiana Democrats will hold their State convention on the 24th of this month.

J. FRANK GRANT, of Petersburg, this county was made chairman of the meeting held by this Congressional District at Lexington. The financial plank as adopted by the convention was construeted, substantially, by him and J. C. Revill, of Burlington.

THE effort to get Mr. Reed to consent to take the second place on the Republican national ticket has proved fruitless, as he does not propose to play second fiddle to any man. Reed would be decidedly out of place with Major McKinley heading the ticket.

THE Republican people are going to have some fun at St. Louis because of the money plank for their platform. So far they have been able to call attention from the trouble in their ranks by pointing to the row that has been disturbing the Democrats, but this they can do no longer.

THE Louisville Post had lost its political bearing when it declared that "the entire delegation from Jefferson county will leave the convention in the event Toney Carroll is unseated as a delegate." Carroll was unseated and only one member of the delegation left the convention hall.

THE Kentucky Democratic convention, while it was overwhelmingly in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver, was not composed of a set of fanatics who regarded their opponents worthy of nothing but abuse and denunciation. The silverites surrendered no part of their victory, but they treated the gold men with consideration.

WHILE some of the leaders of the Republican party are demanding a national platform declaring for a single gold standard, no such a platform will be adopted by the St. Louis convention if it becomes clearly apparent that free silver will dominate the Chicago Convention. The Republicans will be frightened into a straddle of the worst sort.

As usual Kenton county sent two delegations to the convention at Lexington, and the committee on credentials made honors between them, easy, by giving each delegation one-half of the votes to which the county was entitled. It is a pity that the two factions in Kenton county can not get together. Both State and District convention refuse to settle the disturbance for them.

BLACKBURN'S speech before the convention while temporarily organized, last Wednesday, was the key-note for its proceedings. He counselled moderation, and by reading the platform adopted it is to be seen how faithfully his request along that line was carried out. The harmonious action of the convention was a surprise to the Kentucky Republicans, many of whom would have gone into ecstacies had it resolved itself into a mob, and the gold standard delegates bolted.

THE President vetoed the River and Harbor bill, and then it was passed over his veto by a overwhelming vote. That is a bill in which nearly every member of Congress tries to get a fat appropraition to be expended in his district, and is, therefore directly and personally interested in its success, and is willing to countenance many unnecessary appropriations in order to get what he wants for his constituents. President Cleveland's veto was strictly in accord with the Democratic doctrine of economy.

THE following is all that is left of the gold bug page of the Williamstown Courier: "The Populist gnat has swallowed the Democratic mule. For the first time in its history the Democratic party has denounced Jefferson, Jackson, Benton, Cleveland and Carlisle, and embraced populism, fiatism and repudiation. They honor everybody connected with the free coinage, and denounce everybody who pleads for the honor and credit of his country. The uncompromising ranters and financial and political wrecks have succeeded in hoodwinking the honest farmer, and they are now in the saddle riding over all who dare to oppose their idea or plead for pure Democracy. The end is not yet, and what the political cat will do in November no man is able to foresee. We have made a pure, honest, open and manly fight, and the rest is left with the people."

Bro. Points is evidently taking the gold bug knockout in Kentucky pretty hard.

ARIZONA LETTER.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We arrived in Phœnix, May 9th at 4 p. m. We found the people sociable, polite and courteous and ready to answer all inquiries, and no doubt, they thought us very inquisitive, as we were on a tour of investigation and called for many answers.

Phœnix is located in Maricopa county, near the center of the Salt River Valley. It is on a gently sloping plain, two miles north of the Salt River, surrounded by mountains 10 to 30 miles away. The town was laid out in 1872, but was of slow growth until connected with the outside world by rail in 1888. Since that time it has grown rapidly and now has a population of 15,000. The streets are wide and regularly laid out from north to south and from east to west, the latter being named for our presidents. Many of the streets are lined with Cottonwood, Pepper, Pomegranate and Umbrella trees, and they are so trimmed as to present an ornamental as well as a comfortable shade. Water flows in a small ditch on each side of every street from which trees, yards and gardens are supplied with water. The people are supplied with water for other purposes by a system of waterworks, drawn from a town well. Illumination is supplied by gas and electricity. Electricity is used in the principal stores and public buildings and also in many private dwellings. Telephone, electric and street car lines traverse all the principal streets. The buildings are of brick and stone, of new and modern design, and the business houses are of attractive design and pretentious proportions. There are 3 public schools, 8 churches and many charitable and secret organizations, 3 daily and weekly papers, 3 public halls, chamber of commerce, 4 large hotels, restaurants, 2 ice-factories, 3 planing mills and lumber yards, 1 iron foundry, 1 flour mill and 4 banks, several large buildings under way—among them a hotel to cost $150,000. Three miles from Phœnix is the Territorial Asylum and the Industrial School for Indians, where there are 350 Indian boys and girls in school, one-half the tim[illegible] working half time. The girls do house work—cuiting, basting, sew on machines and all kinds of fancy needle work, painting and making mats, everything used about the institution is the product of their labor. The boys were gardening, cutting Alfalfa with scythes and machines and hauling and stacking, and a few were testing their lungs on brass horns and making the day hideous.

Sunday, as all denominations were represented in our party, we divided and attended the church of our faith and order. We found good houses of worship and good congregations and were somewhat surprised at the interest manifested in church and Sunday-school work. The heads of families taking an active part in the Sunday-school lessons and exercises, as well as the children, young men and ladies, and this influence is I think apparent, for there are a number of saloons, you see their signs, but do not observe the effect. The town has a mayor but no police, when questioned about it the people say they have no use for them, that they have no disturbance nor disorderly conduct.

On Monday we took the Grand Cannon, a vehicle with seats for 21 with four horses attached and 16 in the seats and drove over the improved lands and visited orange, lemon, date, fig, almond, cherry, plum and apricot orchards. They are well cultivated and thrifty. Most of these orchards are 3 years old and just beginning to bear, but a 3-year-old here is equal to a 6-year-old in Kentucky. They calculate on one box of oranges from a 3-year-old tree. Apricots are just getting ripe and they are picking and delivering at 8½c per lb.; fruit trees are very full and seem to grow rapidly, and in a few years this valley will turn out an abundance of fine fruit. I saw some bananas, but it is not thought they will be a success; apples grow here but they are coarse and not good flavor; flowers everywhere, of all shapes, variety and color, attractive, fragrant and beautiful, palm trees and cactus as fine and large as they grow anywhere in the world. But the grandest sight of all is the extensive fields of green Alfalfa, with the rich, deep soil and plenty of water it seems to spring up as if by magic and is certainly very nutritious for hogs, cattle and horses are all fat and slick and seem to relish it green or dry. They feed nothing else except a little barley to work horses, and hogs just before they ship them to market. The number of cattle they graze on 40 acres of Alfalfa would astonish a Kentucky farmer, or the immense ricks of hay they get at one cutting, to say nothing of cutting a like amount six times in 12 months. It can only be realized when seen.

Large herds of cattle are seen on every hand, in weight from 1,000 to 1,800 lbs., and bring the same price in market as our Kentucky cattle. They buy them on the mountain ranges for $8 to $10 per head, taking the herd as they run from yearlings to 4-year-old. with all calves under yearlings thrown in, and pasture them on Alfalfa from 8 to 9 months, making them large and fat, but unfortunately there is not land enough watered and in Alfalfa to supply but a limited number with feed and they are shipping on an average 500 head a day from Phœnix to Kansas for grass, while from Prescott the official report shows 12,218 head shipped to Witchita, Kansas, this spring. and 3,000 more to be shipped.

Barley leads the grain crop. It is free from rust and smut and is reliably productive—yielding from 40 to 60 bushels per acre, and takes the place of corn, as corn does not do well. Wheat is a sure crop and about 8 to 10 thousand acres sown annually in the valley, and the yield, taken by the local mills, and made into flour and used in the valley and hauled to miners in the mountains. Oats are sown with Alfalfa for mixed feed. The bee industry is of some importance; there are from 30 to 40000 stands of bees in the valley and they ship honey by the carload, but it is thought here that the Salt River Valley will find its greatest wealth in its semi-tropical fruits when the trees reach an age for full bearing.

Tuesday we visited the Kentucky colony lands, and eat dinner on the town site which is the middle section of twenty five square miles or 16,000 acres entered exclusively by Kentuckians, and as a majority of our party were goldites they named our pseudo town Carlisle. These lands are west of Pheonix, smooth and rich and as level as a floor and with water they can be made to bloom and produce fruits and Alfalfa equal to any lands in the Salt River Valley. The San Diego and Pheonix R. R., is surveyed and will be built through this body of land. As all here are financially interested in these desert lands, and well pleased with the improved and unimproved lands and the general prospect for the future possibilities of this valley we will now examine the Rio Verde enterprise and prospect for water on lands.

Wednesday morning we sent a man with feed, provisions and bedding to Camp Creek, a distance of 45 miles into the mountains and we started with two surreys and one saddle horse and 9 men, guns, fishing tackles and canteens, as you have to carry water along, east through Paridise Valley for the storage dam and large reservoir. We drove 22 miles to where they are at work with dynamite, plows and scrapers opening a channel 50 feet wide at bottom and sloping up to top of bank to a width of 80 to 100 feet. and deep enough to float a good sized boat when filled with water and this is the canal that is to carry water to our land, and it will carry an immense volume with the fall that it has. We took dinner with the contractor, and after two hours rest and looking around we drove west in the canal for several miles and then east across the mountains 23 miles to camp where we found our man with a good fire and supper ready which we enjoyed after crossing the mountain.

Thursday we drove 22 miles across another mountain to the reservoir and then 4 miles further up the river to an old Aztlc ruin. It was built of stone 400 feet square and contained many rooms, some of them were large, but mostly of small and medium size; some of the walls stand 10 feet high above the pile and probably 20 feet from the ground. There is no timber about the ruins and seems to be no history of the people who built and inhabited them. We drove back and took dinner with the contractor at Storage Dam, and I assure you they have a good cook and live on the best the country affords. We found here that the mountain puts out into the Rio Verde River—to within 350 ft of the mountain on the opposite side. They have just completed a tunnel through the mountain to turn the river until they put in dams. It will be 350 feet wide at bottom and 450 feet broad at base and 175 feet high and 1100 ft long at top, it is to be built on bedrock and laid in cement. The material for the construction of dam will be taken from the mountain and handled on a wire cable, stretched from the top of one mountain to the other, by electricity. The valley above the dam widens out between the mountains 3½ miles and extends up the river 8 miles and when dam is completed will store a body of water covering 13,000 across of land from 75 to 150 feet deep, hemmed in by the mountains and will be the largest artificial body of water in the world. There is, when at its lowest stage, a good flow of water in the Rio Verde River. It is from ½ to ¾ miles wide between banks and during the rainy seasons in the mountains it is bank full, there is an immense flow of water, enough to supply any number of acres, and with the storage the Rio Verde Co., have and the natural flow of the river entrymen are assured of an ample supply of water for all land they may enter under this company. One can hardly realize, with out seeing, that nature has nearly completed an immense reservoir to meet an emergency just like the present, the watering of hundreds of smooth, rich and productive desert land, that otherwise could never have been utilized for any purpose. The river at this point seems to have cut its way between these two mountains of solid stone. The contractor says he can complete dam in 6 months, by working night and day, which they are preparing to do. All being satisfied with the prospect of plenty of water and the final completion of this huge piece of work and monument of civil engineering, we returned to camp, after shooting a mess of fish for breakfast.

Friday morning we broke camp at 4 a. m., one surrey going direct to Pheonix, making the distance of 45 miles by 9.30 a. m. The rest of the party going to the Union Goldmines. There we found a ten stamp mill crushing ore and taking out gold both by the dry and cyanide process—by the dry process the crushed ore passes over copper plates prepared with quicksilver, which catches the fine particles of gold, and by the cyanide process the tailings or what was formerly wasted, are put into large tanks and treated with cyanide and the gold is taken out in solution. The works have the appearance outside of a Kentucky distillery. We found a Kentuckian, superintending the whole business and a radical free silver advocate. Leaving the mines we drove around the mountain and through Dear Valley, claimed to be the finest body of desert land in the valley, passing a drove of 1,200 cattle, we arrived in Pheonix at 2 p .m. having drove in the 5 days 290 miles over some of the roughfest and some of the smoothest land I ever saw.

Now with a few general remarks on Arizona as I see it I shall close. Arizona is an arid of extremes, three times the size of Kentucky. Its typography like its history is rent, gashed and convulsed. There seems to have been at sometime in the past, a general upheaval of everything; the immense rocks are lying and standing in every position. The lava beds seem to have been burnt out volcanoes. In altitude it ranges from below sea level on the south to 13,000 ft. above on the north. You see the highest mountains and deepest chasms and cannons, high and arid plains and the most fertil valleys, mesas, buttes and deserts all over hung by a sky of the deepest blue, and enwrapped by a pure and cool atmosphere on the high plains and mountains and warmer as you decend into the valleys, where the thermometer registers as high as 115°, but the heat is not oppressive and sultry. The Territory has a population of 80,000, restricted to small areas, separated by mountain ranges rich in minerals and magnificent pine forests and open tracts of land too arid for culture, but valuable for grazing purposes. There are many valleys of rich land awaiting irrigation, but the Salt River Valley being the largest and more favored by nature and circumstances. When the Rio Verde Canal is completed, with the eight canals already completed, and furnishing plenty of water, there will probably be no more wonderful garden spot in the world than the Salt River Valley.

KENTUCKY DELEGATES

Instructed to Support Senator Jo Blackburn for President.

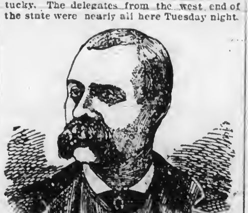
Senator Blackburn, John S. Rhea, P. Wat Hardin and W. T. Ellis Elected Delegates-at-Large—Alternates, Hallam, Carroll, Rothwell and Nelson.

LEXINGTON, June 4.—Wednesday was the day of days for the Kentucky democracy.

Wednesday morning it was conceded on all sides that Wednesday's democratic state convention would declare for the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1; that it would indorse Senator Blackburn as the democratic nominee for United States senator; that it would nominate him for president and ask that the democracy of the country support him, and that it would condemn the present national administration.

It was definitely settled Tuesday night that State Senator Charles J. Bronston, of Lexington, was to be temporary chairman and Hon. Charles K. Wheeler, of Paducah, permanent chairman. The slate for delegates from the state at large was made out as follows: Senator Blackburn, Gen. P. Wat Hardin, Hon. John S. Rhea and Hon. W. T. Ellis.

The lobbies of the hotels were crowded to their full capacity by seven o'clock Wednesday morning. The Chesapeake and Ohio train arriving here at 7:30 brought about two hundred delegates from northeastern Kentucky, from the counties of Clark, Morgan, Bath, Rowan, Carter, Greenup, Boyd, Lawrence, Elliott, Menefee, Martin, Johnson, Magoffin and Floyd, and the Lexington and Eastern, arriving at 10:30, was loaded with delegates from Knott, Letcher, Perry, Leslie, Breathitt, Wolf, Owsley and Powell, while while the L. & N. and the C. & O. trains brought the silverites from southern Kentucky. The delegates from the west end of the state were nearly all here Tuesday night.



SENATOR BLACKBURN.

Owing to his hard work Tuesday and Tuesday night trying to harmonize his friends, Senator Blackburn did not sleep well, and it was late Wednesday morning before he came down for breakfast. Col. Pepper, at whose country residence he was entertained, had a nice spring chicken broiled for his morning meal. The fresh air, the rest from the fights among his friends and the chicken rounded the senator to, and at 8:55 o'clock he stepped into the Pepper carriage and was driven to his headquarters at the Phoenix hotel.

Following is the action taken by the various districts at their conventions Wednesday morning. The first named are district delegates:

First District—A. M. Jones, of Crittenden county; Gus Thomas, of Graves; elector, J. C. Flourney, of Fulton; member of the state executive committee, Charles K. Wheeler; recommended for delegates from the state-at-large, Rhea, Ellis, Hardin and Blackburn.

Second District—E. P. Millet, of Daviess; J. F. Dempsey, of Hopkins; elector, C. W. Bransford, of Daviess; member of the state executive committee, Charles M. Meacham, of Christian; recommended for delegate from the state-at-large, W. T. Ellis; indorsed, Urey Woodson, for national committeeman.

Third District—Col. Ben T. Perkins, of Todd county, and J. N. Richardson, of Barren. Recommended for elector, Ed. B. Drake, of Allen; for delegate from state-at-large, John S. Rhea; for member of the national committee, I. H. Goodnight.

Fourth District—R. B. Lancaster, of Marion; D. R. Murray, of Breckinridge; elector, Gus Brown, of Breckinridge; recommended for delegate from the state-at-large, Harry Somers.

Fifth District—W. B. Holdeman, Zach Phelps; elector, Wallace McKay; member of the state executive committee, W. B. Hoke. No action on the state central committee or delegate at large.

Sixth District—N. S. Walton, of Boone; Dr. J. T. Scott, of Grant; elector, Harvey Meyers, of Covington; member of the state executive committee, R. Lewis, of Carroll; recommended for delegate from state at large, R. W. Nelson and Theodore Hallam.

Seventh District—R. F. Peak, of Oldham, T. E. Moore, of Bourbon; elector, W. B. Kimball, of Lafayette; member of the state executive committee, South Trimble, of Franklin.

Eighth District—R. H. Tomlinson, of Garrard, George G. Gilbert, of Shelby; elector, L. H. Carter, of Anderson; member of state executive committee, J. H. Morgan, of Anderson; state central committeeman, Jack Chinn, of Mercer; recommended for delegate from the state at large, William Smith, of Madison.

Ninth District—George R. Vincent, Lawrence; George Bramlet, Nicholas. Elector—Wm. G. Ramsey, Bath; no further recommendations. There was much wrangling in this convention, the Fleming county men trying to run it. Dr. L. V. P. Williams, of Rowan, was elected assistant elector before the delegates discovered he was a goldbug. He refused to withdraw when appealed to, and will insist on holding his place.

Tenth District—John E. Garner, of Clark; George B. Clay, of Pike; elector, Tom Wells, of Morgan; member of the state central committee, A. W. Hamilton, of Montgomery; member of the state executive committee, J. W. Hatcher, of Floyd; recommended for delegate from the state-at-large, Urey Woodson.

Eleventh District—Ben Smith, of Pulaski; C. M. Sallee, of Adair; elector, Henry Beauchamp, Metcalfe; member state executive committee, Charles A. Metcalfe, Bell; member state central committee, James Garnett, jr., Adair.

Silver men won in all the districts, excepting the Fifth, as had been expected.

At two o'clock, when the convention was called to order in the Chautauqua auditorium, there were about five thousand persons in the building. The proceedings were opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Bartlett.

Chairman Long, of the state central committee, called the convention to order. He made a short speech, in which he said the silver men were going to be badly disappointed. He praised Cleveland and Carlisle, and their names were roundly hissed by the silver delegates and their sympathizers.

John Rhea (silver) nominated C. J. Bronston for temporary chairman, and Col. B. H. Young (sound money) nominated Judge Alex Humphreys.

Bronston received 601 votes and Humphreys 296.

Mr. Bronston addressed the convention, after which Blackburn was called for. Nearly every man in the auditorium shouted for the senator until that worthy stepped forth. Then the cheering was renewed with vigor. He was given a tremendous ovation.

After his speech the convention adjourned until eight o'clock Wednesday evening.

The convention was called to order at eight o'clock, but the committee on credentials not being ready to report, the other two committees could not report.

The organization committee has a great deal of work to do in thoroughly reorganizing the party machinery of the state. It is for this reason that it could not report Wednesday night, and the convention will not be likely to adjourn before Thursday afternoon.

The time was taken up Wednesday night in speeches by Evan E. Settle, free-silver candidate for congress from the Ashland district, Gen. P. Wat Hardin and others. There was also some song-singing, in which Blackburn's troubles were told.

The platform agreed upon by the committee on resolutions indorses free silver and nominates Senator Blackburn for president.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 5.—The report of the committee on permanent organization made and adopted Thursday morning arrangements for a complete reorganization of the party machinery from precinct committeemen up. Every gold man is to be fired and free silver Blackburn men appointed in their stead. Maj. P. P. Johnson, of this city, is named as the chairman of the state central committee and it can be stated that only free silver men will be nominated for congress outside the Louisville district this fall.

The new state executive committee is named as follows:

First district, C. K. Wheeler, of Paducah; Second, C. M. Meacham, of Hopkinsville; Third, C. W. Roark, of Franklin; Fourth, G. S. Fulton, of Bardstown; Fifth, to be filled; Sixth, Robert Ellis, of Sanders; Seventh, South Trimble, of Frankfort; Eighth, Will Scroggen, of Danville; Ninth, J. M. Kehoe, of Maysville; Tenth, James Holcher, of Floyd; Eleventh, C. W. Metcalfe, of Pineville.

The democratic state convention was called to order at 9:20 o'clock Thursday morning with the number of delegates greatly thinned out, a number having returned to their homes.

The chair at once called for the report of committes but there was a long delay.

The following are named as the state central committee: First district, W. B. Gatlin, Murray; Second, S. A. Young, Henderson; Third, C. M. Lewis, Bowling Green; Fourth, G. W. Richardson, Guston; Fifth, to be filled; Sixth, T. E. Moore, Bourbon; Seventh, to be filled; Eighth, Jack Chinn, Harrodsburg; Ninth, Hanson Kennedy, Carlisle; Tenth, A. W. Hamilton, Mt. Sterling; Eleventh, James Garrett, jr., Columbia. From the state-at-large, Wm. Goebel, of Covington.

Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge was called on for a speech, and his appearance on the stage brought forth a torrent of applause. He was the first gold bug to be given a show by the silver beetles. He made a strong speech for sound money, and, strange to say, when he apologized for his lengthy remarks, free silver men yelled: "Go on."

The credentials committee reported shortly after ten o'clock. The majority report threw out the sound money delegation from Graves county and the Sixth and Seventh wards and half of the Eighth and Ninth wards of Louisville and half of those from Bourbon and Kenton counties.

It was followed by a minority report and a protest from sound money men.

After some discussion, the minority report was sent back to the credentials committee as not being regular.

Col. H. L. Stone, of Louisville, then made a scathing speech in defense of the Louisville delegation. He was very severe on Capt. Jim Williams, and when he referred to the captain's record as a bully, Williams, who was down in front, started for Col. Stone, but was pulled back. Jack Chinn then began to shout at Stone. He was wild with rage, but he was suppressed, and Col. Stone kept on. Blackburn's vengeance against Ex-Speaker A. J. Carroll, who prevented his election, he said, was the cause of the unseating of the Sixth and Seventh ward delegation, of which Carroll was a member.

T. T. Finn, of Franklin, defended the majority report, denying all of Col. Stone's charges.

The majority report was adopted by a vote of 678 to 214. The unseated delegates then left the hall.

The expected bolt of the remaining Louisville sound money delegates did not take place. The committee on permanent organization then made its report. The report named Hon. Chas. K. Wheeler, of McCracken, for permanent chairman.

W. B. Hoke was named member of the executive committee for the Fifth district and Will Head member of the central committee for the Fifth district.

The naming of Geo. S. Fulton and Gus Richardson as members of the state executive and state central committees from the Fourth met spirited opposition because the district went republican last fall. Richardson was also declared to be ineligible because he was an employe of Secretary Carlisle. The delegates from this district were sent out to effect a settlement.

The amendment to name Wm. Goebel, of Covington, a member of the state central committee from the state-at-large caused a spirited fight.

J. F. Hodges was named as central committeeman, Seventh district.

Mr. Goebel was finally elected by acclamation.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was adopted and Mr. Wheeler took the chair. He made a plea for harmony.

The Tenth district delegates replaced Gus Richardson in the state central committee with Finley Shuck.

Senator Blackburn, P. W. Hardin, John S. Rhea and Congressman W. T. Ellis were elected delegates at large to the Chicago convention by acclamation.

The majority report of the committee on resolutions was passed with a whoop after the minority substitute had been aired sufficiently by the silver humorists.

THE PLATFORM.

The first section affirms the principles of democracy.

Second—We are in favor of an honest dollar, a dollar worth neither more nor less than 100 cents. We favor bimetallism, and to that end we demand the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 as standard money, with equal legal-tender power, independent of the action or advice of any other nation.

Third—We hold that the secretary of the treasury should exercise his legal right to redeem all coin obligations in gold and silver, as may be more convenient, and we are opposed to the issue of bonds in time of peace for the maintenance of the gold reserve or for any other purpose.

Fourth—We are opposed to the national banking system and to any enlargement of its powers, and opposed to any contraction of the currency by the retirement of greenbacks or otherwise.

Fifth—We are for a tariff for revenue only.

Sixth—The democratic party has ever been the party of personal liberty and religious freedom, and is now and has always been opposed to any union of church and state. It is opposed to the enactment of all laws the purpose or design of which are to sustain or enforce any religious tenet or sect, and to any law, organization or society, religious or political, secret or otherwise, that tends to proscribe any citizen for or on account of his religious belief, or to apply any such test as a qualification for public office.

The seventh resolution condemns Gov. Bradley for calling out the militia during the session of the legislature.

Eighth—We declare the support of the party nominees to be the true test of party fealty, and that every nominee is entitled to the individual support of each member of the party.

Ninth—"Resolved, That the delegates chosen by this convention to the national democratic convention at Chicago, June 7, be, and they are hereby, instructed to cast the vote of Kentucky as a unit for Jo C. S. Blackburn for president of the United States, and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination."

A minority report was presented by A. J. Carroll, member of the committee from Louisville. It omits the indorsement of Blackburn and is the same on the currency and other issues. The financial plank in Mr. Carroll's report says:

"We insist upon a firm maintenance of the present legal standard of value, with such use of legal tender, silver coins and paper, convertible into coin on demand, as can be maintained without impairment or endangering the credit of the government or diminishing the purchasing or debt-paying power of the money in the hands of the people, and in the absence of an international agreement we protest against the free coinage of silver, or the compulsory purchase of silver bullion by the United States as injurious to the industrial and commercial interests of the country, and especially disastrous to the interests of the farmer and the laboring man."

The electors for the state at large are Hon. W. V. Smith, of Madison, and James P. Tarvin, of Kenton.

The convention adjourned at 1:57.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—SENATE.—The final conference report on the fortification appropriation bill was agreed to, and partial reports on the sundry civil appropriation bill and post office bill. Mr. Hansbrough (rep., N. D.) offered a resolution appropriating $6,000 to complete the frieze in the rotunda of the capitol. The nature of the picture to be inserted was not known till brought out in debate. Mr. Wilson (rep., Wash.) objected to the resolution and it went over. The final vote on the Butler bill, to prohibit the issue of bonds, will be taken in the senate Tuesday.

HOUSE—Monday was suspension day in the house, and a number of minor bills were passed under suspension of the rules. The Johnson-Stokes election contest from the Seventh district of South Carolina was settled by the adoption of a substitute for the committee reports, offered by Mr. McCall, of Massachusetts, chairman of the elections committee, which declared that there had been no election and that the seat was vacant. The house committee on rivers and harbors decided to recommend to the house the passage of the river and harbor bill over the president's veto.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—SENATE—An eight hours' session of the senate was wound up Tuesday by the passage of the bill to prohibit the issuance of interest-bearing bonds without the consent of congress. All amendments, with a motion to postpone, were voted down by a majority of seven, and the bill passed by a like majority—32 to 25. A speech was made early in the day by the chairman of the finance committee, Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, on the Dingley emergency tariff bill.

HOUSE—The house Tuesday passed the river and harbor bill over the president's veto, and unseated by a vote of 161 to 39 John J. Walsh, the democratic member from the Eighth New York district, whose place will be filled by John Murray Mitchell, republican. There was a full house to vote on the river and harbor bill. It was passed by 220 to 60, much more than two-thirds necessary to overrule a veto. Thirty-nine democrats voted to override the presidential objections, and 20 republicans stood by Mr. Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—SENATE—The senate Wednesday followed the example set Tuesday by the house and passed, by a vote of 56 to 5, the rivers and harbors bill over the president's veto. The five negative votes came from democratic senators, namely, Messrs. Bate, Chilton, Hill, Smith and Vilas. The debate preceding the vote occupied four hours. The conference report (partial) on the naval appropriation bill was presented and discussed and went over till Thursday, the vote to be taken at 1 p. m. The points in discussion were as to the number of battle ships and as to the contract price for armor plate.

HOUSE—The election case of Murray vs. Elliott from the Charleston (S. C.) district was the principal matter of business before the house. Elliott's election from that district had been contested three times—in the Fiftieth, Fifty-first and Fifty-fourth congresses. The majority report of the committee in charge of the case recommended the seating of the contestant. The minority found that Elliott was entitled to retain his seat. Without disposing of the contest, the house at 5.55 o'clock adjourned. A vote will be taken the first thing Thursday.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—SENATE—The conference report on the naval appropriation bill was disposed of. The motion to recede from the senate amendment reducing the number of new battleships from four to two was defeated—yeas 27, nays 8. The conference report was then agreed to and a further conference was ordered. This was followed by the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill. The report was agreed to—yeas 27, nays 20—so that when the Indian bill becomes a law those Indians will have lost their tribal relations and will have become citizens of the United States. The filled cheese bill was passed—37 to 13—just as it came from the house. The conference report (final) on the general deficiency bill was presented and agreed to.

HOUSE—By a vote of 153 to 33 Murray (colored, rep.) was declared to be entitled to the seat occupied by Elliott and he was sworn in by Speaker Reed amidst republican applause. The case of Martin (pop.) against Lockhart (dem.), from the Sixth North Carolina district, occupied nearly all of the rest of the session. The final report of the conferees on the general deficiency bill was presented and agreed to, and the following bills were finally disposed of: To pension Mrs. Mary C. Gregg, widow of Maj. Gen. John Irwin Gregg, at $50 a month; to pension Mrs. Wm. Loring Spencer, widow of ex-Senator and Brig. Gen. E. Spencer, of Alabama, at $50 a month; authorizing the restoration of John N. Quackenbush to his rank and place as commander of the navy and his retirement by the president.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—SENATE—The immigration bill was taken up with the understanding that a final vote should be taken on it before Monday. The proposed constitutional amendment to have United States senators elected by the people, instead of by state legislatures, was taken up informally and discussed by Senators Mitchell (Ore.), Perkins (Cal.) and Palmer (Ill.) in favor, and Hawley (Conn.) and Chandler (N. H.) in opposition. A joint resolution for final adjournment on Monday next at 2 p. m., was offered by Mr. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, and was referred to the committee on appropriations, after adverse remarks by Senators Allison (Ia.), George (Miss.) and Warren (Wyo.).

HOUSE—Gen. Rinaker's right to the seat was affirmed by a vote of 167 to 51. This wiped out the democratic membership in the Illinois delegation and reduced the democratic strength in the house to ninety-five. The day began with a two hours' struggle over the adoption of a resolution introduced by Gen. Grosvenor, calling upon the heads of several executive departments for a statement in detail of all removals and changes in their departments since March 4, 1893. The democrats endeavored to have the scope of the resolution enlarged so as to include the changes made under the Harrison administration, but failed.

SPANISH SOLDIERS

Commit Horrible Crimes in the Province of Santiago de Cuba.

HAVANA, June 3, via Key West, Fla., June 5.—Information of a horrible crime committed on a Cuban woman and two girls of eight years by Spanish soldiers near the town of Arroyaguerra, province of Santiago de Cuba, has just been received in this city. The woman and children were ravished by the soldiers, then killed and burned to hide the crime.

Near the same village a company of Spanish soldiers met five Negroes with a cart load of fruit. They were ordered to dismount and were immediately bayoneted and left in the road.

At Minas de Firmesa a party of ten men and boys were held up by a Spanish soldier, and after subjecting them to all sorts of indignities they were strung up, some by the waist, others by the arms, and shot. After several hours they were discovered. Some time later they were cut down.

Trampled to Death By a Horse.

FARMLAND, Ind., June 6.—Chester Hiatt, the 11-year-old son of W. S. Hiatt, late candidate for the republican nomination for county recorder, was thrown by a runaway horse. He clung to the lines and the horse trampled him so badly that he died in less than a half hour.

Pillaging in Crete.

ATHENS, June 5.—A number of Cretan refugees arrived at Piraeus Wednesday evening. They report that all business in the towns on the island of Crete is at a standstill, and that the entire country districts have been pillaged.

DUN'S REPORT.

Active Business is Expected After the Conventions, and the Safety and Sufficiency of the Crops Have Been Assured.

NEW YORK, June 6.—R. G. Dun & Co. says Saturday:

Failures for the week were 234 in the United States against 195 last year, and 29 in Canada against 25 last year.

It is highly suggestive that with as little help as there is now from new business, markets are so nearly maintained. The opinion gains ground that more active business is to be expected after the conventions have been held and the safety and sufficiency of crops have been assured.

Decline in wheat and cotton has helped marketing the surplus, so that exports have been more liberal; estimates entitled to most confidence point to a probable yield of 500,000,000 bushels of wheat. Estimates of cotton acreage by the best authorities indicate a crop of 10,000,000 bales if weather is favorable and the surplus from the past crops is certain with only a fair yield to be large enough to prevent any harmful rise, as a yield exceeding the maximum world's consumption of American would probably cause some decline. Even fair crops will mean better business for railroads, which report earnings for May thus far only 2.6 per cent. more than last year.

The boot and shoe industry is still the most active. The hardest problem of the day is whether iron and steel prices can be maintained as they have been during the past week. The nail associations have failed thus far to win over competitors who undersell them, and are able to manufacture 75,000 kegs against every 100,000 by concerns in the combination. The bar association asks for iron more than the selling price of steel bars. Open hearth billets are more freely sold at Pittsburgh below the price asked for Bessemer, and middle men are still selling Bessemer billets about one dollar below the price fixed by the pool.

The textile manufacturers are halting with some cotton goods reduced still further in prices and ginghams to the lowest point ever known while no increase appears in the demand. Sales of wool still fall below half the quantity required for a full consumption and prices have further declined.

AT GETTYSBURG

The Monument to the Memory of Gen. Winfield S. Hancock Unveiled.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 6.—When Gen. Gobin opened the exercises at the Hancock monument Friday afternoon, the whole western face of Cemetery hill in front of a large platform was a mass of people. Capt. H. W. McKnight, president of the Gettysburg college made the prayer and after the band had played "Hail to the Chief," the statue of Gen. Hancock was unveiled by Miss Eulnor L. Nicholson, a United States battery firing the major general's salute. Gen. Gobin then, in a few words, transferred the statue from the state commission to the state through Gov. Hastings. Gen. Gobin spoke feelingly of Hancock and eulogized him as a corps commander and a Pennsylvanian.

Gov. Hastings accepted the monument, saying that he did so not for the commonwealth of Pennsylvania alone, but for the greater commonwealth of 70,000,000 people, that stretches from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf.

The oration was then delivered by Brig. Gen. Henry H. Brigham, of Hancock's staff at Gettysburg.

Will Meet Next in St. Louis.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 6.—The convention of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers closed Friday evening. The executive committee recommended the payment of $45,000 to widows and orphans and $15,000 for salaries, etc. Grand Chief Arthur's parting address was full of words of good counsel and he was loudly applauded. The convention adjourned to meet on the second Wednesday in May, 1898, at St. Louis, Mo.

A German Criminal Beheaded.

BERLIN, June 6.—A criminal named Oehlmann was beheaded at Brunswick early Friday morning for the murder of his cousin. At the place of execution he attempted to commit suicide by throwing himself over the prison staircase, dragging with him the warden who had him in charge. The warden was frightfully hurt and is dying.

The Campos-Barrero Duel.

MADRID, June 6.—The government has submitted the matter of a duel between Marshal Martinez Campos and Gen. Barrero to the supreme court of military and naval appeals. The excitement occasioned by the threatened duel continues to grow. The affair has restored much of Marshal Campos popularity.

Landslide Destroys an Electric Light Plant.

HOT SPRINGS, S. D., June 6.—A landslide Friday at the powerhouse used for the generation of electricity for the incandescent light system, almost completely destroyed the plant, burying the dynamo and the building in which it is located. The workmen escaped. It will require two months to repair the damage.

Missouri Populist Convention.

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—Chairman Roselle, of the state committee of the People's party, has issued a call for the state convention, to be held at Sedalia July 30. Seven hundred delegates will be present.

Train Reported Blown Up by Dynamite.

HAVANA, June 6.—A train which left San Nicolas with a number of workmen on board to repair damages along the line of the railway is reported to have been blown up by dynamite. The locomotive and cars composing the train were thrown into a culvert and the trainmaster and a number of workmen were more or less seriously injured.

The Nomination Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The senate has confirmed the nomination of Wm. Churchill of New York to be consul general to Apia, Samoa.

REGISTERS HIS BOY'S NAME.

Man Displays His Grief in a Queer Sort of Way.

"Did you notice that man register," asked the clerk of an uptown hotel of a Washington Times writer, as a sad-faced man turned away from the desk. He had written his own name and another on the record. "He has been coming here for four or five years that I remember," continued the clerk. "The name that follows his own is that of his son, though the latter has been dead for three years.

"It is a case full of sadness. That man makes regular trips to the city, and he used to always bring his boy, a bright-looking youth of about 16. The father was very devoted to him, and the boy did seem to be a rattling good fellow. They always shared the same room, always went out together, and seemed chums more than father and son. But the boy died. The next time the father came to the hotel there was a marked change in his appearance. He walked silently up to the desk and registered. After writing his own name, he placed that of his son beneath it, just as he formerly did. I called his attention to it, but a tear came to his eye, and he said nothing, so I immediately changed the subject. Ever since that day he has registered in that manner when he came to the city. Once in awhile he will order an extra dinner and have it set on the table beside him, just where his boy used to sit. He never speaks of the boy."

ARMY BULLETS FOR GAME.

Objected to on Account of Their Great Penetration.

Something for sportsmen to consider seriously, if they intend to get one of the new 30-caliber army rifles, is the great penetration of the bullets. One of the bullets would kill a man through a four-foot spruce tree, or a cow a mile and more away. No ordinary tree can be depended on to stop one of these bullets, and it might easily travel half a mile through dense woods and hit a man far out of sight with deadly effect.

Field and Stream says that the next legislatures of our great game states should pass a law prohibiting the use of a jacketed bullet, because of the danger to human beings. Another argument it offers in favor of such a law will have great influence on the men who do not wish to wound without killing the game. "This class of bullets is useless for large game unless soft pointed," it says, "as it rarely kills instantly, but allows the game to die from internal hemorrhage and in terrible agony out of reach."

When such a rifle is used for big game a bullet that mushrooms should be employed. The mushrooming bullet will kill anything, as it goes clear through an elk, moose, or deer, and the force of the impact would knock a running grizzly down.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

STORM ECHOES.

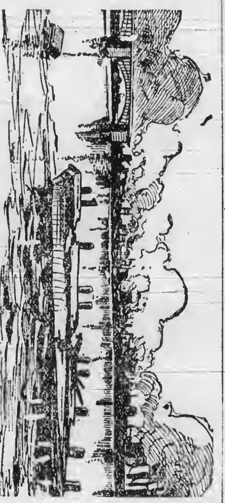
The Corrected List of the Number of Fatalities at St. Louis.

Relief Measures—Nearly 800 Families Provided With Provisions, Clothing, Furniture, Etc.—The Eads Bridge Open for Traffic—Burial of the Dead.

ST. LOUIS, June 2.—Shortly before two o'clock Monday morning the two stricken cities, St. Louis and East St. Louis, received a thorough scare. A storm came up from the southwest, accompanied by low rumbling thunder and almost continuous flashes of lightning. Then a few minutes later big black clouds appeared on the northern horizon and rolled up until they covered the city. There was considerable wind, though nothing approaching a hurricane or tornado. The elemental disturbance lasted for nearly an hour and then became a slow, drizzling rain, which had increased to a downpour at ten o'clock Monday morning.

The work of clearing away the ruins is being carried on in a more systematic manner, but the rain makes the work all the more difficult.

Prof. Bauman, an expert insurance adjuster, of Chicago, is in the city and, after looking over the field, he said the total loss will foot up over $20,000,000. Prof. Bauman adjusted the losses caused by the Louisville tornado about five years ago.



BURNING OF EAST ST. LOUIS—VIEW FROM ST. LOUIS SIDE OF RIVER.

One of the peculiar features of the storm is the appalling list of missing persons reported to police headquarters. Up to Monday morning 124 persons are reported missing. The police are inclined to believe that many of these will be found with relatives in other portions of the city.

The situation in East St. Louis is one of gloom and misery. There is some fear of an epidemic of disease among the homeless near the river. Under the ruins is a vast quantity of decaying animal and vegetable matter which is sending pestilential clouds up through the debris. The sufferers are weak from exposure and exertion and are in no condition to fight the malaria that is breeding on the island. Another problem is the almost unanimous refusal of the sufferers to leave their belongings and occupy the military tents which have been pitched at Brighton. In spite of the presence of the militia they fear that their goods are not safe and refuse to leave unprotected all their earthly belongings.

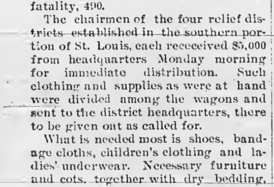
Chief of Police Ganey has taken extreme precautions to prevent vandalism, and early Monday morning 150 tramps were rounded up and driven out of town.

Known dead in St. Louis, 196; unknown in St. Louis, 8; fatally injured in St. Louis, 18; missing in St. Louis, 117; known dead in East St. Louis, 145; unknown dead in East St. Louis, 3; fatally injured in East St. Louis, 2. Total fatality, 490.

The chairmen of the four relief districts established in the southern portion of St. Louis, each rececived $5,000 from headquarters Monday morning for immediate distribution. Such clothing and supplies as were at hand were divided among the wagons and sent to the district headquarters, there to be given out as called for.

What is needed most is shoes, bandage cloths, children's clothing and ladies' underwear. Necessary furniture and cots, together with dry bedding, are also much called for. The additional damage of continuous wet weather resulted in the issuing of another order prohibiting the operation of any electric lights in the district south of Elm and west of the levee.

The funerals of 127 tornado victims in St. Louis have taken place so far, and it is estimated that at least twenty more were interred Monday afternoon.



REMAINS OF A BUSINESS HOUSE IN HICKORY STREET.

The extent of the tornado's disastrous work here and in East St. Louis has overshadowed the losses sustained in adjacent towns in Missouri and Illinois, and no accurate lists of the killed has been made. A careful compilation from all sources made Monday gives the following losses in outlying towns by the tornado:

Missouri, outside of St. Louis:

	Killed.	Injured.	Estimated Property Loss.
Renick	—	10	$ 50,000
Clark	—	10	35,000
Laddonia	2	18	15,000
Farber	1	15	15,000
Dye School House	5	30	5,000
Curryville	1	5	8,000
Vandalia	—	10	30,000
Bear Creek	7	35	5,000
Total	16	133	$163,000

The total losses in Randolph and Audrain counties will amount to $300,000 additional. Loss on crop and farm property in entire state will swell total beyond $2,000,000.

Illinois outside of East St. Louis:

	Killed.	Injured.	Estimated Property Loss.
Breckinridge	3	2	$18,000
Birkner	6	20	20,000
Mascoutah	1	5	25,000
New Minden	5	20	75,000
New Baden	15	30	50,000
Mt. Vernon	5	29	50,000
Fairfield	2	10	15,000
Richview	3	25	75,000
Irvington	5	30	20,000
High Hill	1	7	7,000
Total	46	179	$355,000

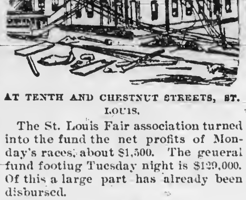
Losses at scores of other points, including farm property and crops, may raise the total to over $1,000,000.

ST. LOUIS, June 3.—No additional deaths as a result of the storm of last Wednesday have been reported either in this city or East St. Louis since five o'clock Monday afternoon. The city rescue corps started digging for bodies Tuesday in the ruins of the buildings at Seventh and Rutger streets and at the ruins of the Sawyer manufacturing plant, at 1819 Chouteau avenue. The buildings on three corners of the former location were totally wrecked, and it is said that several bodies are buried in them. One of these structures, at the southeast corner, was a tenement house. The work of rescue will be carried on until all of the larger ruins have been searched. Additional gangs of laborers were placed at work in the ruined districts of St. Louis Tuesday morning, and order is rapidly being brought out of chaos.

Up to 10 o'clock Tuesday morning a carefully revised list of the dead from the storm in St. Louis foots up 141 names and 88 persons are at present unaccounted for. In East St. Louis the death list has crept up to 99 and 27 persons are reported missing.

ST. LOUIS, June 2.—The lower house of the municipal assembly Tuesday passed the bill appropriating $100,000 for the relief of the tornado sufferers. The bill provides for a commission of five, with the mayor as chairman, to disburse the money. The objection to the bill on the grounds that it was illegal because it did not provide that those given relief should render some service in return, was overcome by City Counselor Marshall, who inserted an amendment to the effect that those receiving aid should render such return as was within their capabilities. The people being unable to do anything, the legal clause would be nullified.

Mayor Walbridge has not refused to accept money sent from outside cities and has turned over $15,000 thus secured to the relief committee. The mayor, however, believes that St. Louis should be equal to the task of caring for the afflicted, and is opposed to soliciting aid from outside channels until absolutely necessary.



AT TENTH AND CHESTNUT STREETS, ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis Fair association turned into the fund the net profits of Monday's races, about $1,500. The general fund footing Tuesday night is $129,000. Of this a large part has already been disbursed.

James Campbell, Dan Catlin, Wm. J. Lemp, Charles Parsons and other capitalists Tuesday took initial steps to raise $250,000 to lend to tornado sufferers at low rates of interest to rebuild their homes. No interest will be charged for 12 months. At the Noon Day club $35,000 was raised Tuesday for this purpose.

Destitution in East St. Louis is hourly increasing. People who at first refused assistance, have found their own resources inadequate. Prices of clothing, furniture and eatables are double what they were before the storm. The relief committee is straining every resource to get supplies, and are doing noble work. The ladies made a tour of the ruined territory Tuesday and report 570 families absolutely homeless and destitute.

ST. LOUIS, June 4.—The body of an unknown man was found floating in the river Tuesday. It is believed the man was a victim of last week's tornado. This is the only addition to the death list in the past 24 hours. The following summary of fatalities in St. Louis was made up Wednesday morning.

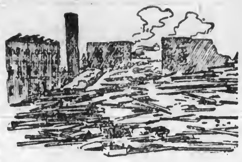
Burial permits issued to date, 127; killed, bodies not recovered, 18; wounded in hospitals, 90; missing people, 80; grand total, 319.

So far nearly 800 families have been provided with provisions, clothing and furniture. A fair estimate places the number of individuals assisted at 4,000, and the work will be systematically carried on while money lasts. Nearly every public school is reopened and the damage to churches is being repaired as fast as laborers can be secured. The roadway across the Eads bridge was opened for traffic Wednesday morning.

The revised list of tornado victims in East St. Louis shows the following figures: Identified dead, 99; unidentified dead, 2; missing, 26; fatally injured, 7; total, 134.

The work of relieving the sufferers still continues and all immediate wants are being supplied. The relief fund Wednesday morning aggregates $44,000 and in addition $5,000 is expected Wednesday.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—East St. Louis makes an appeal for assistance for her storm-stricken people. All checks and other contributions from persons outside of St. Louis will be gratefully accepted by the relief committee and applied as their judgment directs to improve the condition of the homeless. The total relief fund now foots up $161,658.41.



WRECKAGE IN THE COURT OF THE CITY HOSPITAL, ST. LOUIS.

All checks sent to Mayor Walbridge are at once turned over to the relief committee.

The burial permits issued in St. Louis to date number 127; inquests held, no permits issued, 1; killed, bodies not recovered, 13; wounded in hospital, 90; missing people, 83; total probable fatality, 314.

No bodies were recovered from the ruins Thursday morning. Those reported missing are: James T. Gurk, of Cincinnati, O.; George Mallory, 28, of 60 South Sixth street, worked for the Missouri Car Foundry Co.; Wm. Nolan, 31, of 1006 Howard street; Julius Gohring, 45, machinist, of 2537 Cherokee street; Gustave Dertling, 36, of 3524 North Broadway. Nothing has developed to account for the persons who are supposed to have been swept away on board the shanty boats which lined the river shore when the storm came. There were probably 50 of these boats. They have entirely disappeared. The identity of the persons on board is not known. Many of them were certainly drowned, but how many will never be known. It is impossible to accurately estimate the number of persons who were on the crafts.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—The general relief fund for the tornado sufferers Thursday night foots up $191,000. There are many independent relief undertakings that would swell the amount to $220,000. There is no abatement of zeal in those who have volunteered their services in personally aiding the needy. The money total probably represents only one half of the actual relief, as food, clothing, medicines, furniture, building material, the use of teams and wagons and many other aids in the merciful work are not considered in the summing up. The task of giving the tornado sufferers a new start in life seems as big as ever to the committee at work at the south side relief stations, but they have become experts in the art of learning wants, and they believe that now as never before they are doing the greatest good to the greatest number. One branch of the relief committee is proving the appeals of the needy and exposing imposters, and the success of the latter class in getting undeserved aid is almost at zero. There are six distributing stations in the tornado section, with general headquarters at the Merchants' exchange.

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—The general relief fund for the tornado sufferers touched the $200,000 mark Friday. Of this $40,000 has been expended. The fund committee will close its work next Wednesday, after turning over the fund to the relief committee. The latter will continue to act until after every one deserving aid is past want. In one particular the storm was not without some good, as building is actively resumed and millions of dollars will be given workmen.

About $40,000 has been received by the East St. Louis relief committee, principally from outside sources.

Mrs. J. H. Ramsey, sister-in-law of D. G. Ramsey, ex-chief of the order of railway telegraphers, and William Cogan, a Baltimore and Ohio engineer, died Thursday evening, as a result of the tornado.

Mrs. Ramsey died at her home, 317 St. Louis avenue. Her death was due to the heroic efforts she made in rescuing her husband from the ruins of the Vandalia freight house. Her body was shipped to Vinton, Ia., for burial. Mr. Ramsey is in a precarious condition.

Wm. Cogan, an engineer, died at the residence of John M. Sullivan. He was 41 years of age and resided with his family at Vincennes. He was injured by a telegraph pole falling on him. The body was shipped to Vincennes, Ind., for burial.

With these two names added to the list of tornado victims the deaths in East St. Louis number 105.

DESTRUCTIVE WINDS.

They Make Wreckage of Men's Precious Souls, or Level

The Tallest Growths of Human Vanity—Pestilence That Comes on the Wings of the East Wind—Dr. Talmage's Lesson of the Tornado.

Rev. Dr. Talmage chose for his text Sunday Exodus x., 13: "And the Lord brought an east wind upon the land all that day and all that night."

The reference here is not to a cyclone, but to the long-continued blowing of the wind from an unhealthful quarter. The north wind is bracing, the south wind relaxing, but the east wind is irritating and full of threat. Eighteen times does the Bible speak against the east wind. Moses describes the thin ears blasted by the east wind. The Psalmist describes the breaking of the ships of Tarshish by the east wind. The locusts that plagued Egypt were blown in on the east wind. The gourd that sheltered Jonah was shattered by the east wind, and in all the 6,000 summers, autumns, winters, springs of the world's existence the worst wind that ever blew is the east wind. Now, if God would only give us a climate of perpetual nor'wester, how genial and kind and placid and industrious Christians we would all be! But it takes almighty grace to be what we ought to be under the east wind. Under the chilling and wet wing of the east wind the world's villainies, frauds, outrages, suicides and murders have been hatched out. I think if you should keep a meteorological history of the days of the year, and put right beside it the criminal record of the country you would find that those were the best days for public morals which were under the north or west wind, and that those were the worst days for public morals which were under the east wind. The points of the compass have more to do with the world's morals and the church's piety than you have yet suspected. Rev. Dr. Archibald Alexander, eminent for learning and for consecration, when asked by one of his students at Princeton whether he always had full assurance of faith, replied: "Yes, except when the wind blows from the east." Dr. Francia, dictator of Paraguay, when the wind was from the east, made oppressive enactments for the people; but when the weather changed, repented him of his cruelties, repealed the enactments and was in good humor with all the world.

You say that men and women ought not to be so sensitive and nervous. I admit it, but I am not talking about what the world ought to be. I am talking about what the world is. While there are persons whose dispositions do not seem to be affected by the changes in the atmosphere, nine out of ten are mightily played upon by such influences. O Christian man! under such circumstances do not write hard things against yourself, do not get worried about your fluctuating experience. You are to remember that the barometer in your soul is only answering the barometer of the weather. Instead of sitting down and being discouraged and saying: "I am not a Christian because I do not feel exhilarant," get up and look out of the window and see the weather vane pointing to the wrong quarter and then say: "Get thee behind me, Satan, thou prince of the power of the air, get out of my house; get out of my heart, thou demon of darkness horsed on the east wind. Away!" However good and great you may be in the Christian life, your soul will never be independent of physical condition. I feel I am uttering a most practical, useful truth, here, one that may give relief to a great many Christians who are worried and despondent at times.

Dr. Rush, a monarch in medicine, after curing hundreds of cases of mental depression, himself fell sick and lost his religious hope, and he would not believe his pastor when he told him that his spiritual depression was only a consequence of physical depression. Andrew Fuller, Thomas Scott, Wm. Cowper, Thomas Boston, David Brainard, Philip Melancthon were mighty men for God, but all of them illustrations of the fact that a man's soul is not independent of his physical health. An eminent physician gave as his opinion that no man ever died a greatly triumphant death whose disease was below the diaphragm. Stackhouse, the learned Christian commentator, says he does not think Saul was insane when David played the harp before him, but it was a hypochondria coming from inflammation of the liver. Oh, how many good people have been mistaken in regard to their religious hope, not taking these things into consideration! The dean of Carlisle, one of the best men that ever lived, and one of the most useful, sat down and wrote: "Though I have endeavored to discharge my duty as well as I could; yet sadness and melancholy of heart stick close by and increase upon me. I tell nobody, but I am very much sunk indeed, and I wish I could have the relief of weeping as I used to. My days are exceedingly dark and distressing. In a word, Almighty God seems to hide His face, and I intrust the secret hardly to any earthly being. I know not what will become of me. There is doubtless a good deal of bodily affliction mingled with this, but it is not all so. I bless God, however, that I never lose sight of the cross, and though I should die without seeing any personal interest in the Redeemer's merits, I hope that I shall be found at His feet. I will thank you for a word at your leisure. My door is bolted at the time I am writing this, for I am full of tears.

What was the matter with the Dean of Carlisle? Had he got to be a worse man? No. The physician said that the state of his pulse would not warrant his living a minute. Oh, if the east wind affects the spleen, and affects the lungs, and affects the liver, it will affect your immortal soul. Appealing to God for help, brace yourself against these withering blasts and destroying influences lest that which the Psalmist said broke the ships of Tarshish shipwreck you.

But notice in my text that the Lord controls the east wind: "The Lord brough the east wind." He brings it for especial purpose; it must sometimes blow from that quarter; the east wind is just as important as the north wind, or the south wind, or the west wind, but not so pleasant. Trial must come. The text does not say you will escape the cutting blast. Whoever did escape it? Especially who that accomplished anything for church or state ever escaped it? I was in the pulpit of John Wesley, in London, a pulpit where he stood one day and said: "I have been charged with all the crimes in the catalogue except one—that of drunkenness," and a woman rose in the audience and said: "John, you were drunk last night." So John Wesley passed under the flail. I saw in a foreign journal a report of one of George Whitefield's sermons—a sermon preached a hundred and twenty or thirty years ago. It seemed that the reporter stood to take the sermon, and his chief idea was to caricature it; and these are some of the reportorial interlinings of the sermon of George Whitefield. After calling him by a nickname indicative of a physical defect in the eye, it goes on to say: "Here the preacher clasps his chin on the pulpit cushion. Here he elevates his voice. Here he lowers his voice. Holds his arms extended. Bawls aloud. Stands trembling. Makes a frightful face. Turns up the whites of his eyes. Clasps his hands behind him. Clasps his arms around him and hugs himself. Roars aloud. Hollos. Jumps. Cries. Changes from crying. Hollos and jumps again." Well, my brother, if that good man went through all that process, in your occupation, in your profession, in your store, in your shop, at the bar, in the sick-room, in the editorial chair, somewhere, you will have to go through a similar process; you can not escape it.

And you will have trial of some sort. You have had it already. Why need I prophesy? I might better mention an historical fact in your history. You are a merchant. What a time you had with that old business partner! How hard it was to get rid of him! Before you bought him out, or he ruined both of you, what magnitude of annoyance! Then, after you had paid him down a certain sum of money to have him go out, and to promise he would not open a store of the same kind of business in your street, did he not open the very same kind of business as near to you as possible, and take all your customers as far as he could take them? And then, knowing all your frailties and weaknesses, after being in your business firm for so many years, is he not now spending his time in making a commentary on what you furnished as a text? You are a physician, and in your sickness, or in your absence, you get a neighboring doctor to take your place in the sick-room, and he ingratiates himself into the favor of that family, so that you forever lose their patronage. Or, you take a patient through the serious stages of a fever, and some day the impatient father or husband of the sick one rushes out and gets another medical practitioner, who comes in just in time to get the credit of the cure. Or, you are a lawyer, and you come in contact with a trickster in your profession, and in your absence, and contrary to agreement, he moves a nonsuit or the dismissal of the case; or the judge on the bench, remembering an old political grudge, rules against you every time he gets a chance, and says with a snarl, "If you don't like my decision, take an exception." Or, you are a farmer, and the curculio stings the fruit, or the weevil gets into the wheat, or the drought stunts the corn, or the long-continued rains give you no opportunity for gathering the harvest. Your best cow gets the hollow-horn, your best horse gets foundered. A French proverb said that trouble comes in on horseback and goes away on foot. So trouble dashed in on you suddenly, but oh, how long it was in getting away! Came on horseback, goes away on foot. Rapid in coming, slow in going. That is the history of nearly all your troubles. Again and again and again you have experienced the power of the east wind. It may be blowing from that direction now.

My friends, God intended these troubles and trials for some particular purpose. They do not come at random. Here is the promise: "He stayeth his rough wind in the day of the east wind." In the Tower of London the swords and the guns of other ages are burnished and arranged into huge passion flowers, and sunflowers, and bridal cakes, and you wonder how anything so hard as steel could be put into such floral shapes. I have to tell you that the hardest, sharpest, most cutting, most piercing sorrows of this life may be made to bloom and blossom and put on bridal festivity. The Bible says they shall be mitigated, they shall be assuaged, they shall be graduated. God is not going to allow you to be overthrown. A Christian woman, very much despondent, was holding her child in her arms, and the pastor trying to console the woman in her spiritual depression, said: "There, you will let your child drop." "Oh, no," she said, "I couldn't let the child drop." He said: "You will let the child drop." "Why," she said, "if I should drop the child here it would dash his life out!" "Well, now," said the Christian minister, "don't you think God is as good as you are? Won't God, your Father, take as good care of you, His child, as you take care of your child? God won't let you drop."

I suppose God lets the east wind blow hard enough to drive us into the harbor of God's protection. We all feel we can manage our own affairs. We have helm and compass and chart and quadrant. Give us plenty of sea room and we sail on and sail on; but after a while there comes a Caribbean whirlwind up the coast, and we are helpless in the gale, and we cry out for harbor. All our calculations upset, we say with the poet:

> "Change and decay on all around I see:
> O Thou who changest not, abide with me!"

The south wind of mild providence makes us throw off the cloak of Christian character and we catch cold, but the sharp east wind of trouble makes us wrap around us the warm promises. The best thing that ever happens to us is trouble. That is a hard thing perhaps to say: but I repeat it, for God announces it again and again, the best thing that happens to us is trouble.

When the French army went down into Egypt under Napoleon, an engineer, in digging for a fortress, came across a tablet which has been called the Rosetta stone. There were inscriptions in three or four languages on that Rosetta stone. Scholars studying out the alphabet of hieroglyphics from that stone were enabled to read ancient inscriptions on monuments and on tombstones. Well, many of the handwritings of God in our life are indecipherable hieroglyphics; we can not understand them until we take up the Rosetta stone of divine inspiration, and the explanation all comes out, and the mysteries all vanish, and what was before beyond our understanding now is plain in its meaning, as we read, "All things work together for good to those who love God." So we decipher the hieroglyphics. Oh, my friends! have you ever calculated what trouble did for David? It made him the sacred ministrel for all ages. What did trouble do for Joseph? Made him the keeper of the corncribs of Egypt. What did it do for Paul? Made him the great apostle to the Gentiles. What did it do for Samuel Rutherford? Made his invalidism more illustrious than robust health. What did it do for Richard Baxter? Gave him capacity to write of the "Saint's Everlasting Rest." What did it do for John Bunyan? Showed him the shining gates of the city. What has it done for you? Since the loss of that child your spirit has been purer. Since the loss of that property, you have found out that earthly investments are insecure. Since you lost your health, you feel as never before a rapt anticipation of eternal release. Trouble has humbled you, has enlarged you, has multiplied your resources, has equipped you, has loosened your grasp from the world and tightened your grip on the next. Oh! bless God for the east wind. It has driven you into the harbor of God's sympathy.

Nothing like trouble to show us that this world is an insufficient portion. Hogarth was about done with life, and he wanted to paint the end of all things. He put on canvass a shattered bottle, a cracked bell, an unstrung harp, a signboard of a tavern called "The World's End" falling down, a shipwreck, the horses of Phoebus lying dead in the clouds, the moon in her last quarter, and the world on fire. "One thing more," said Hogarth, and my picture is done." Then he added the broken palate of a painter. Then he died. But trouble, with hand mightier and more skillful than Hogarth's, pictures the falling, falling, moldering, lying world. And we want something permanent to lay hold of, and we grasp with both hands after God and say: "The Lord is my light, the Lord is my love, the Lord is my fortress, the Lord is my sacrifice, the Lord is my God."

Bless God for your trials. Oh, my Christian friend! keep your spirits up by the power of Christ's Gospel. Do not surrender. Do you not know that when you give up others will give up? You have courage and others will have courage. The Romans went into the battle, and by some accident there was an inclination of the standard. The standard upright meant forward march; the inclination of the standard meant surrender. Through the negligence of the man who carried the standard, and the inclination of it, the army surrendered. Oh! let us keep the standard up, whether it be blown down by the east wind, or the north wind, or the south wind. No inclination to surrender. Forward into the conflict.

There is near Bombay a tree that they call the "sorrowing tree," the peculiarity of which is it never puts forth any bloom in the daytime, but in the night puts out all its bloom and all its redolence. And I have to tell you that though Christian character puts forth its sweetest blossoms in the darkness of sickness, the darkness of financial distress, the darkness of bereavement, the darkness of death, "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Across the harsh discords of this world rolls the music of the skies—music that breaks from the lips, music that breaks from the harps and rustles from the palms, music like falling water over rocks, music like wandering winds among leaves, music like carolling birds among forests, music like ocean billows storming the Atlantic beach: "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat: for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." I see a great Christian fleet approaching the harbor. Some of the ships come in with sails rent and bulwarks knocked away, but still afloat. Nearer and nearer the shining shore. Nearer and nearer eternal anchorage. Haul away, my lads! Some of the ships had mighty tonnage, and others were shallops easily lifted of the wind and wave. Some were men-of-war and armed of the thunders of Christian battle, and others were unpretending tugs taking others through the "Narrows," and some were coasters that never ventured out into the deep seas of Christian experience; but they are all coming nearer the wharf—brigantine, galleon, line-of-battle ship, long boat, pinnace, war-frigate—and as they come into the harbor I find that they are driven by the long, loud, terrific blast of the east wind. It is through much tribulation that you are to enter into the kingdom of God.

You have blessed God for the north wind, and blessed Him for the south wind, and blessed him for the west wind; can you not in the light of this subject bless Him for the east wind?

The king of Saxony is seriously ill with renal calculs.

Neighborhood News.

Hathaway.

Several of our people attended the picnic at the Harvest Home ground Saturday.

A. J. Utz and family, E. D. Utz and family and David Clements and wife were guests of Mack Neal and wife, last Sunday week.

Pink Neal and wife spent Sunday with Mrs. Cynthia Mason.

A horse belonging to John Rollins, our log hauler, fell into a big spring, and it took considerable work to extricate it.

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Marshall entertained a number of friends last Saturday day at their charming home on Gunpowder.

Richwood.

Chas. Fulton, of Florence, was here Sunday.

Miss Virginia Southgate will spend the summer in Europe.

Senator Conner and H. A. Hicks have some heated debates on politics.

John Robinson while riding horse back on the Lexington pike near here, ran over a man on a bicycle, doing considerable damage to the wheel and bruising the rider about the head and body.

We had a good rain Monday.

In traveling around the county last week I found J. H. Craven cultivating the best garden in the county.—Scott Myers passing a jug of very fine spring water around to all his friends in Verona.—A buzzard flying over the Mudlick hills with a bell tied to its neck.

There is an ancient mound on John M. Power's farm near Verona, from the summit of which you can see for 17 miles in any direction. This mound is in range with the Ft. Ancient mounds near Lebanon, O., and is supposed to have been used by the Mound Builders for a signal station. As the U. S. Government is going to erect a number of signal stations, from which they will send up rockets at night to give the farmers information concerning the condition of the weather, this would be the best point in the county for such a station.

Gasburg.

Eugene Withem was elected to take the place of the outgoing school trustee in this district.

Melon vines are growing rapidly and are more forward than usual at this date.

The picnic season is now on in earnest. Two boat loads of pic-nickers were at Split Rock and vicinity Sunday.

The Aurora schools close this week. Lizzie Parker of this place is one of the graduating class.

A very sad affair happened at Split Rock last Saturday. A party of about twenty students from Moores Hill, Indiana, college, came down to have a day of recreation and enjoyment, and while in bathing Fred Friedley, of Madison, in walking backward stepped into deep water, and being unable to swim Thomas Scull went to his assistance when a desperate struggle ensued, but Scull, in order to save his own life, let go of Friedley, who sank to rise no more. Scull was rescued in a dying condition but was saved by hard work, but several hours elapsed before he was able to speak or be moved to Aurora. Another one of the party had a narrow escape in trying to reach the drowning ones. Friedley's body was recovered Sunday afternoon, and sent to the home of his parents. At last accounts Scull was still in a precarious condition.

Petersburg.

The iron for the front of Gordon Bros' new store building, has arrived.

Miss Patterson, of Cincinnati, was registered at the Loder House, one day last week.

The band has received some of the latest music. Give the boys a chance when you want music, neighbors.

The protracted meeting at the Christian Church closed last Wednesday night. There were five additions, Mrs. Haste, Mrs. Drue, Miss Ione Buchanan and Master Raymond Tilly.

Contractor Rardin, of Cincinnati, has six masons laying brick for the Gordon building.

Nat Carpenter, wife and mother and Mrs. Sarah Carpenter, of the Burlington neighborhood, were here one day last week.

William Weindel has returned from Louisville medical college. We congratulate him on the progress he made in his studies.

Mrs. M. J. Day and Misses Ethel and Mylvia Day and Schray, of Cincinnati, were visitors here Sunday.

Jos. Snelling has been annoyed very much by hemorrhages of the nose. In two nights he lost over six pints of blood, which weakened him very much.

J. P. Olds is having his house painted.—Fred McCool has moved to C. N. Graves' house.

Col. G. R. Berkshire is all smiles because of the silver victory in this State.

Hon. A. S. Berry distributed many packages of garden seed here, recently.

Harry Bahn has been appointed town marshal by the city dads. He will be paid a salary (none of the other marshals were ever so paid) and will be expected to protect the citizens and their property. He is a fearless young man and will take care of the duties of the office, and go after the lawbreakers ever time the opportunity offers.

Some 15 or 20 took in the Workum's moonlight excursion.

Thomas Hynes and John Weindel were elected trustees for this school district.

Pearl Jarrell has gone to live with Mrs. Steve Gaines.

We have an invitation to the Coyle–Elstie wedding, which will take place in Pittsburg, Pa., at the home of the bride on the 10th inst. The bride's parents were residents of this place at one time.

Ed Alcorn, who has been south for about two years, is home again and expect to go into business nearer home.

Henry Hoffman and Steve Houze had a "set-to," in which each received a "black eye."

There is no use concealing the fact Mr. Alden's Pauline is doing a good business.

The Children's Day exercises at the christian church were very interesting. A large crowd attended.

The Workum had a fine trip below Saturday. Among other frieght were 87 hogsheads of tobacco.

Miss Nannie Lineback, of Warsaw, is the guest of Miss Stella Fenton.

Mrs. Lou Craig, of East Bend, visited her mother and attended church here Sunday.

Billy Casey's mother is quite feeble.

It is reported that the early potatoes will be almost a faliure in these parts.

Bellevue.

Fine rain at this place on the 5th.

Mrs. James Conner and son, of Cincinnati, are visiting here.

T. L. Utz occupied the pulpit at Beaver church, last Sunday.

Mrs. Kate Corbin recently returned from Louisville, where she spent a week with her sisters.

Oats that were sown on good land are looking fairly well. Early corn is doing well—James Rogers has 50 acres of the finest in the bottoms.

Mrs. T. L. Utz is the guest of her parents, near Florence.

Frank Cook and his bride, of Patriot, Ind., are the guests of relatives here.

Tim Sandford has lost two horses since he moved among us, both having their leg broken by another horse.

J. K. Corbin, of Aurora, was the guest of his brother at this place, Sunday. He was on his way from Union, where he had been visiting relatives.

The Kelly family had a reunion at the residence of Albert, one of the six brothers, on the 8th inst. Sixty pounds of fish, soups and other things in proportion constituted the provisions for the day. There were five of the brothers present, and for statue in size, can hardly be excelled. They average over six feet in height.

But few from here attended the I. O. O. F. picnic, last Saturday.

The Baptist Sunday School here is making preparation to attend the convention at Burlington, on the 11th.

J. W. Kite and wife and Miss Maggie, were guests of Will Rice and wife, last Sunday.

Mr. S. P. Brady and wife, of Burlington, were visiting R. B. Huey and wife, Sunday.

M. J. Corbin has one of the best croquet grounds in the county. No mud nor shade to encounter.

Phelix Arnold was visiting his brothers and sisters, last Saturday and Sunday.

J. J. Lillard, S. P. Brady and J. J. Walton spent the day, last Friday, with James Rogers and family.

W. H. Stamper's store was broken into last Friday night and $96 in cash taken. He was at a fish fry and placed his money in a bolt of dry goods on the shelf for safe keeping, but the parties succeeded in finding it. Nothing else was taken as yet reported.

Dump has been waiting since January 1st, for some of the ladies to come around with a horse and buggy, but none came, so he purchased a horse and buggy, and rides around alone. We do not know whether he is selfish or has gone back on the girls.

Erlanger.

June 6.—About 75 of the most prominent citizens of Erlanger assembled at the school house, last night, to attend a meeting called by Col. Geo. Schaepfel in the interest of the Cincinnati and Erlanger electric railway. Engineer Weaver submitted a blue print of the routes as surveyed and estimated the costs of same, and stated that the route by Lexington pike, distance 6 6-10 miles would cost $240,000. This would include $85,000 for a new power house, also a double track from Pike St., in Covington to first toll gates while the other route by Ludlow and Crescent Springs, distance 6 2-10 miles would cost $214,000, including $85,000 for a new power house.

The first route had only been surveyed from Covington to the Southern railroad in Erlanger, while the Crescent Springs route would strike Erlanger at the north end of town and run 1 mile down Commonwealth Avenue to the Lexington pike.

Capt. Baker, as treasurer, turned over to Engineer Weaver $89.50 with the $75 already paid him toward surveying the route. A committee consisting of Messrs. Baker, Morell, Shoepfel, Buchanan, Price were appointed to confer with a like committee from Crescent Springs, consisting of Messrs. Anderson, Crisler and Graff, to wait on Col. Shippard of the Cincinnati, Covington and Newport electric road and see what bonus it would require to build the road.

WHAT THEY SAY:

Engineer Weaver—It will cost $50 a day for each car run on the road.

Capt. Baker—I will give $500 towards it. I favor the Crescent Springs route and when it is built you will see houses going up on all these vacant lots.

Dr. Scott—I am opposed to all corporations, most especially banks.

L. Moreli—I will raise a subscription.

T. D. Finnell—Our road can accommodate all the people.

Albert Price—If the road increases taxes I will have to stand it.

Dr. Dulaney—I will give $5,000 for it.

Tom Stevenson—I will give what is right—it depends on the price of tobacco.

Geo. Menday—I will patronize the road.

Will Buckner—I will sell them a lot for the power house.

Dr. Slater—I will be surgeon for the road.

ROSEBUD.

Our school board organized by electing J Cody, chairman, and Dr. C. M. McCullum, secretary. The election of teacher was laid over for one week.

Grand Lecturer, J. A. Williams, of the Masonic order, of Harrodsburg, instituted a Lodge of the Eastern Star on Thursday afternoon in the Masonic Hall here. There were 21 candidates, composed of 6 Master Masons and 15 ladies belonging to the Master Masons' families, who took the degrees. The following officers were then elected: Matrons, Mrs. Arabella Coe and Miss Mattie Talbott; Secretary, Miss Hattie Dulaney; Treasurer, Mrs. Ida Schoepfel. The next meeting will be on June 13 at Masonic Hall.

Two games of ball were played at Woodside, last Sunday. Florence, 25, Union, 13. Florence, 7, Erlanger, 20.

Mrs. John Morelli and daughter, Miss Clara, leave to-day for New York to be gone for three weeks. They will stop over at Philadelphia.

LaFayette Lodge K. of P. conferred the rank of Knight on Bros. George Haag and B. C. McCormick on Tuesday evening of last week. The work of the team was excellent, and the visiting Lodges, Burlington and Guiding Star, enjoyed it. After the work the visitors and local members enjoyed an excellent lunch set by Bros. Herman Placke, J. A. Wyss and John Souther.

Big Bone.

The colored "delegation" headed for the "Temple" at Normansville last Sunday night passed through the Springs acting in a very unbecoming manner and so enraged the citizens of Big Bone that they request this notice to the boisterous gentlemen of color. If a reptition of your conduct is indulged in again your case will be given to to the grand jury for investigation.

Mrs. Robert Ficklin, with her two pretty daughters are visiting C. A. McLaughlin at the Clay House. Mrs. Ficklin resides in Maysville and spends the summer generally with C. A. McLaughlin her father, at the springs.

A very fine horse of F. L. Gordon ran a nail in his foot one day last week, and Frank is fearful of losing the animal.

W. J. Reib is very poorly at this writing, and fears are entertained by his friends that he is in a dangerous condition.

Mr. Sam Anderson, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., was visiting Geo. S. McIntire, his father-in-law, at the springs last week.

The farmers are jolly at the present prospect of good crops; they are looking promising at present.

The past week has been one of the hottest on record at the Springs within the history of the signal service for this season of the year.

F. M. Moore is adding much to the beauty of his store by applying a fresh coat of paint.

Everybody is proud of the action of the Democratic Convention at Lexington, last week, and several believe if the National Convention at Chicago will adopt the platform as laid down by Kentucky and nominate a candidate for the presidency in perfect harmony with it, victory is assured us this fall.

SAM HARRIS,

No. 6520. Record, 2:29¼.

He will make the season of 1896, at my stable on the Dry Creek & Bullittsville pike, between Hebron and Constance, at $10 to insure a colt, the money due when the mare is known to be in foal or parted with after being bred.

SAM HARRIS' get always sells for fancy prices. Forty of his colts sold at an average of over $400—no other horse that ever stood in this county has made such a showing. If desired the names of those making above sales will be furnished.

Those desiring to breed mares can leave them with me and they will receive attention and be furnished pasturage at $2 per month. The excellent breeding qualities of Sam Harris are well known in this county.

J. L. RILEY.

THE SADDLE AND HARNESS STALLION,

JIM CROW,

Will be found this season at Geo. E. Rouse's farm on the Florence and Burlington pike at $3.00 for a living colt.

A CARD.

I take this method to inform your Florence correspondent, that I will be under everlasting obligations to him or her, as the case may be, if he or she will kindly drop my name entirely; but if they do have to use it, please stick strictly to the truth. In the last three months there has been no less than a half dozen lies told on me through the Recorder by the Florence correspondent. Now I can stand a little of anything, but this has grown monotonous and I think it is time it was stopped, so I will just say to the editor, I think it would be a pretty good idea if he would get a more reliable correspondent from Florence, as this one, either isn't very well posted or can't tell the truth, and will ask him as a special favor, if my name appears any more in the Florence news, written by the same correspondent, to please cancel it before going to press, and oblige

Harri Fisk, Florence, Ky.

The neighborhood news is the leading feature of the Recorder, and it hopes to continue it as such; but that can not be done unless the communications it receives are strictly reliable, and it desires no other kind.

THE STATE CONVENTION

Captured By the Silvorites.—Senator Blackburn Endorsed for President.

A 16 to 1 PLATFORM.

The State Democratic Convention held at Lexington, last week, was captured completely by the silver element, and the representatives of the white metal were rewarded by all of the places of prominence.

Charles J. Bronston, of Lexington, was made temporary chairman, and Charles N. Wheeler, of Paducah, was made permanent chairman.

The credentials committee's report, which was adopted, threw out the sound money delegation from Graves county, and those from the Sixth and Seventh wards and half of those from the Eighth and Ninth wards in Louisville. Half the sound money delegations from Bourbon and Kenton shared the same fate. In lieu of the displaced half from Kenton, Harvey Myers and some of his faction were seated.

The platform on the money question is as follows:

"The Democracy of Kentucky in convention assembled do reaffirm their allegiance to the principles of the party as enunciated by Jefferson.

We are in favor of bimetallism, and to that end we hold to the use of both gold and silver, without discriminating against either metal, at the ratio of 16 to 1, independent of agreement with any other nation We favor the immediate repeal of all laws by which silver was demonetized, and demand its unqualified restoration to the right of free and unlimited coinage in the mints of the United States as money of final redemption.

The delegates from the State at large are Senator Jo Blackburn, Hon. P. Wat Hardin, Hon. John S. Rhea, and ex-Congressman Will Ellis. From the 6th district, Dr. J. T. Scott, of Grant county, and Nathaniel S. Walton, of Boone county, were selected as delegates to the National Convention to be held at Chicago, July 16th. D. S. Morris, of Pendleton county, and Anton Beck, of Campbell county, were named as the alternate delegates. Harvey Myers, of Covington, was named as the Presidential Elector, and B. L. Rice, of Boone county, assistant elector.

John T. Hodge, of Newport, was re-elected as State Central Committeeman from the Sixth District, and Robt. Ellis, of Sanders, retains his position on the State Executive Committee from this district. The other appointments from this district to positions in the convention were M. L. Downs, of Carrollton, on credentials; Judge John J. Orr, of Carrollton, on resolutions; Capt. J. W. McCain, of Trimble county, as vice-president, and Otto Wolfe, of Campbell county, on organization.

The delegates were instructed to vote as a unit for J. C. S. Blackburn for President.

The above corrects several errors in the report in detail as appears on the second page of this issue, and presents the financial plank as actually adopted by the convention.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Dr. Duncan, of Walton, was in town last Thursday.

Miss Ollie Kirkpatrick has been at home several days.

Noah Clore was elected trustee in this school district.

Rev. Hoover and wife are boarding with W. E. Vest and wife.

H. G. Blanton, of Erlanger, was calling in Burlington Sunday.

W. J. Rieb, of Big Bone, was a visitor to Burlington, last Thursday.

Circuit Clerk J. W. Duncan spent last week with his son, Dr. Duncan, at Walton.

Miss Mary Lassing, of Union, is the guest of her brother Atty J. M. Lassing and family.

J. M. Conner and daughter, Miss Lulie, of Cincinnati, attended the picnic last Saturday.

T. A. Huey, of Union, E. S. West, of Berkshire, and R. E. Moore, of Beaver, were in town Monday.

J. W. Berkshire and daughter, Mrs. Stephens, of Petersburg, were guests of J. B. Berkshire and wife, Thursday.

Arthur Rouse returned to Hanover College, last Wednesday, where he will graduate this week, after a four year's course.

F. D. Kirkpatrick and wife, of Covington, have been here several days on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Jesse Kirkpatrick.

Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Dr. Edwards and Miss Jane Orr, of Covington, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Hogan last Saturday and Sunday.

O. J. Ryle was circulating in the Hathaway neighborhood most of last week. Some accuse Oscar of being out looking after his political fences.

Mrs. Elijah Herndon, of Covington, has been visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jessie Kirkpatrick, who has been dangerously sick for some time, the past last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Rouse are at Hanover, Indiana, this week, attending the graduating exercises at the college, their son, Arthur, being one of the graduating class.

"John G. Carlisle, Jas. B. McCreary, Jim McKenzie, A. S. Berry and William Lindsay are not in this convention," said J. M. lassing, last Thursday. "I'm the only one here. How the great men of the party have not appeared."

Woman's Board of Foreign Missions M. E. Church South, Washington, D. C., June 5-15, 1896; Grand Lodge Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Tennessee, Nashville, Tenn, June 15-20, 1896. Reduced rates via the Queen and Crescent Route on the certificate plan for the above occasions. Kentucky Pharmaceutical Association, Irvine, Ky., June 16, 1896. 1⅓ fare from points Williamstown to Somerset. Kentucky Educational Association, Newport, Ky. June 23-26. Half rates from points in Kentucky. Ask agents for particulars.

A good crop of blackberries is now predicted.

The I. O. O. F., picnic at the Harvest Home grounds, last Saturday, was attended by a large crowd, and all had a most enjoyable time. At noon an excellent and abundant dinner was spread, of which all partook most heartily. Immediately after dinner brother J. Frank Grant, who is ready at all times to aid in any effort to advance the interest of Odd-Fellowship, delivered a neat address which was given excellent attention by those present. At the conclusion of brother Grant's address the dancing pavillion was surrendered to the young people, who tripped the light fantastic in time to strains of sweet music until a late hour in the afternoon.

NOTES.

The prospective candidates were not very much in evidence.

Ben Norman, of Union, did not put in his appearance until late but he made up for all lost time before adjournment.

Henry Quick dances like he plays ball—all the time.

Jack Sandford was a great favorite, and he started in nearly every dance.

Temp Graves, an old time tripper of the light fantastic, is away up in G on the most fashionable and popular dances.

The day was very warm.

There were scores of handsome young ladies and gallant young men in attendance.

Mr. Porter took a photograph, in a group, of all the members of Viola Lodge, who were present.

S. C. Johnson, of Walton, was present, forming acquaintances with a view to the race for assessor.

The old people seemed to enjoy the day very much.

It was the first picnic of the season, and the young people made good use of the time at their disposal.

From two o'clock until night the floor presented a lively scene of enjoyment.

The custodian of the grounds had everything in good order for the picnic.

John T. (Dump) Marshall arrived on the scene at an early hour, and never tired feasting his eyes on the handsome young ladies who were flitting about in every direction.

It never gets too hot for young people to dance. The warmer the weather the more they enjoy the exercise, seemingly.

Mrs. Austin Beemon, an aged lady of the Limaburg neighborhood, died last Sunday, after several months' illness. She was burried Monday.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

Quite a number from here attended the picnic, which was a great success.

Willie Graves was bitten on the hand by a cat, last Saturday, producing a very painful wound.

Robert Bradford brought out three new buggies, last Friday—one for Spencer Aylor, one for Irwin Baker and one for Jacob Rouse.

I wish to correct an item that appeared in my communication last week. It was Willie Tupman instead of his father, Chris Tupman, who was hurt by a horse.

We have heard of persons having snakes in their boots, but we never before heard of a case like that reported by your Constance scribe last week.

Chester Davis' fast horse trotted a mile on James Riddell's tract in 2:40.

A ball team will be organized here this week, and, in a short time, it will be ready to meet all comers.

The Children's Day exercises for the benefit of the Tressler Orphans' Home at Loysville, Pa., was a success in every respect. The anthem sang by the choir was grand, for which the leader, Walter Crigler, deserves much credit. Dr. Rouse deserves credit for the interest he is taking in the school. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity. The following is the report of the school by classes:

WEDDED THREE TIMES.

Marital Experience of Richard H. Carter and Mrs. N. Carter, of Alton, Ill.

Richard Henry Carter and Mrs Nellie Carter, of Alton, Ill., enjoy the distinction of having been three times married to each other without having ever been separated or divorced. They belong to the best colored society of that community and are very highly esteemed. When, therefore Mr. Carter applied to Deputy Clerk Quarton for a license to marry his wife the official was duly astonished and refused to furnish the paper until the matter was explained. The couple were married as slaves nearly 40 years ago and after the promulgation of the emancipation proclamation they were again married according to the laws of Virginia. But the papers in this union were lost in a fire. This fact was painfully brought home to Mr. and Mrs. Carter by a late decision of the supreme court which holds that slave marriages are not recognized as legal by the inheritance laws of Illinois. As they have children and property they concluded to make everything safe and were therefore wedded the third time.

FOOT IN ITS MOUTH.

One of Perry Rank's Horses Found in a Curious Predicament.

Employes of Perry Rank, the liveryman, heard a terrific commotion the other afternoon in one of the stalls at the stable and rushed in to see what had happened. They found one of the best horses owned by Mr. Rank lying on its side with its legs and head in a seemingly inextricable tangle. At first they thought the horse was having a fit, but upon investigation, when the animal's struggles exhausted its strength, they found that one of the hind feet was stuck in the horse's mouth. How it got there none could explain, and how to get it out seemed an insurmountable problem. Finally ropes and pulleys were rigged up and the hoof and mouth reluctantly parted company. In the operation one tooth was knocked loose and the horse's tongue was lacerated. No horseman in the vicinity ever heard of a similar circumstance.

BLOW TO CIGARETTES.

Members of the Trust Indicted Under the New Law.

The grand jury in New York found another indictment against members of the cigarette trust, who were indicted before under the common law for conspiracy. The new indictment is found under the new antitrust law which was enacted April 16 last and which makes it a misdemeanor to contract, agree or conspire to prevent competition in the price or supply of articles or commodities in common use, or to restrict or restrain trade or commerce, or to carry on business under such contract, agreement or conspiracy. Each violation of the new law is punishable by imprisonment of not more than one year or by a fine of not more than $500, or both. There are in the indictment two counts for misdemeanor in conspiring to restrict and restrain commerce and to unlawfully control and monopolize the cigarette business and to raise the price of cigarettes. Those indicted were not placed under arrest, but were notified to appear in court and plead to the indictment.

DAMAGING EVIDENCE.

Walling, Jackson and Pearl Took Supper at Hayden's Restaurant.

They Were Seen There the Night of the Murder or the Night Before—Chief Deitsch Swears Walling Admitted He Advised Jackson to Use Medicine.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 2.—The trial of Alonzo Walling for the murder of Pearl Bryan was resumed in the circuit court of Campbell county Monday morning.

Walling, smiling and cheerful, was brought in court by Jailer Bitzer and took his usual seat near his attorneys, Col. Washington and Mr. Shepherd. Court was called to order shortly after 9:40 o'clock.

It is about settled that Col. Washington will put Walling on the stand to testify in his own behalf, and it is thought the witness can throw much new light on the murder of poor Pearl Bryan.

Dr. Corothers said the girl's death could not have occurred from violence before the severing of the head and the same conditions be found which were present. Health Officer Jenkins, the next witness, described the severed neck and the wounded hand of the dead girl. The cuts on the hand were made during life. There was no evidence of an attempted operation. "If a body lying as this one was found at Ft. Thomas, were decapitated, the blood would spurt six feet eight inches. I have arrived at the conclusion mathematically, from the records of two decapitations in Paris," said the doctor.

Judge Helm made an order for Scott Jackson's removal to the Covington jail. He said: "I am dissatisfied with the condition of the jail, and find that it is insecure. I therefore order that the defendant, Scott Jackson, shall be taken by the sheriff of this county to the jail in the city of Covington."

Jackson made strong objections to his removal, but to no avail, and at two o'clock the start from the jail to Covington was made in a surrey.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 3.—At Tuesday's session of the Walling trial Druggist Foertmeyer, of Bellevue, testified that Alonzo Walling was in his drugstore the last week of January with a young man whom he has since identified as Scott Jackson, and a blonde young lady. The two young men came into the drug store. Walling purchased cigars and inquired about a skiff ferry across the river. The young woman did not come into the drug store. Foertmeyer caught only a side glimpse of her face. She was a blonde and plumply built. She wore a flat, dark hat and a cape, which the witness said he could not describe accurately.

Half an hour later he saw them walking down Washington avenue.

The day was either Thursday or Friday, and he believed it was the latter. It was 11 o'clock when he first saw the trio.

Allen Johnson, the colored porter at Wallingford's saloon, took the witness stand. He began to testify without being sworn, but the lawyers stopped him. Said he knew Walling well enough to borrow money from him. Witness then related his previous testimony. Jackson brought Pearl Bryan to Wallingford's saloon between six and seven o'clock on Friday evening. They remained there about fifteen minutes. While they were in the saloon the girl sitting in a chair in the wine room Alonzo Walling came to the door. "I opened the door for Jackson when they left. He helped the girl into a cab on the Plum street side of the saloon, and the three drove south on Plum street."

On cross examination the witness said that Jackson and Walling may have been in the saloon the Monday before Friday night, but did not see them again that week until Friday.

The porter said the curtains are always drawn across the window of Wallingford's wineroom. There are electric lights in the stalls. Attorney Shepherd made him describe minutely the surroundings at the saloon. Witness never said it was Thursday night that the trio were in the saloon; he denied attempting to bribe Attorney Allen Andrews.

Col. Shepherd grew earnest in his cross-examination. He wanted to know all that was said when the porter served a glass of sarsaparilla to Pearl Bryan. He asked what Pearl did, where she sat, in what direction the porter turned. Shepherd attempted to trip the witness with questions about Pearl Bryan's cape, but the witness only answered: It had some fur on it. It might have been a fur cape."

Witness said he thought Fred Albion was driving the cab when it left the saloon with Jackson, Walling and Pearl Bryan.

Chester Mullen was the next witness, and told of a young man who came to his stable and hired the gray horse and rockaway for three silver dollars. He said Walling resembled the man; was built like him. Court then took the noon recess.

At the session Tuesday afternoon Chester Mullen was again put on the stand. "It was ten or fifteen days after I hired the rig," said Mullen on cross-examination, "before I tried to refresh my recollection. I can not remember very well the man who hired the rockaway." Witness had no railroad iron or iron weight about his place with which Coachman Jackson says he hitched the gray horse at Ft. Thomas on the fatal night. Mullen gave the time card of the night car running between Peebles' corner, Walnut Hills, and Cincinnati. The carriage was returned to Mullen's stable at four o'clock Saturday morning. The night car had then stopped running, and the man who returned the vehicle would be compelled to walk back to the city.

W. C. Martin, a waiter at 31 W. Fifth street, was called. The witness testified that he knew Walling when he took his meals at Heider's restaurant. He also repeated his story of Walling having come to the place about three o'clock, and of having taken Walling to a room at that time. On cross examination the witness denied having said that it was on Friday morning, and the defense produced the register, showing that Walling had registered on Friday, January 31.

Dave Wallingford, the saloon keeper, was next called and repeated the story of Jackson, Walling and Pearl Bryan having been in his saloon on the night of Friday, January 31. The cross-examination failed to shake the witness in the least, and he was permitted to go.

Judge Helm announced at the conclusion that at the request of counsel for both sides and by consent of the jury, the further hearing of the case would be postponed until Thursday morning. This was done to give the gentlemen a chance to attend the convention at Lexington Wednesday.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 5.—The Walling trial was resumed Thursday morning. Druggist Foertmeyer and John Foster were re-called and testified to Jackson, Walling and Pearl Bryan being in Bellevue January 31.

Coachman George Jackson was called, but could not be found, and Cabman John Belli was called. Belli was the man who drove Pearl Bryan from the depot to the Indiana house, but he could not be found. Al. Stegner was called, but he, too, was missing. Then John Legner, but he did not respond. Col. Lockhart, in desperation, called Mrs. Alice Stiefel, who took the stand.

She testified as to the vehicle passing her house on the Three Mile Creek road on the night of January 31. Her testimony was about the same as in the Jackson trial. She said: "It was a very dark night, but I could tell that the vehicle was going toward Fort Thomas. I know it was after midnight, but how much I can't tell. It was not daylight, I know."

Lieut. Renkert testified to the finding of the bloody trousers at the dental college. "I got the key from Walling," said the lieutenant, "and unlocked the locker with it. The trousers were wrapped up in a newspaper." Col. Nelson here offered the bloody trousers in evidence and each juror examined them intently.

John Belli, the cab driver, was again called, and being present, took the stand: "Sometime during the latter part of January I met a young lady at the Grand Central depot and drove her to the Indiana house. I first took her to the dental college to see Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling. I first noticed her at the depot and talked to her in order to get the job of driving her somewhere. She told me whom she wanted to see. I saw in her hand a Palace hotel letterhead. After I took her to the college I drove her to the Indiana house. Next morning I saw her again at the Indiana house. I then took a note from her to Scott Jackson at the dental college and delivered it to Jackson. I never saw Walling at all, and I never saw Jackson and Walling together. Jackson gave me the answer to the note and I took it back to Pearl Bryan at the Indiana house and gave it to her."

Edward Anthony, the next witness, said: "I first saw Walling on the night of his arrest at his boarding house on Ninth street. I went to his room and told him that he was wanted at the mayor's office. We talked together for about five minutes. He told me that he knew Pearl Bryan was murdered and I think told me then that he had gone to the C. H. & D. depot to meet Pearl Bryan. I sent for Lieut. Corbin and Walling was taken to the station-house and locked up. Before, however, I asked him why he didn't tell the mayor all he knew of the murder and he said he had answered all questions.

"After Walling was locked up at the station-house I had several conversations with him. He denied any connection with the murder, but stated that Jackson told him two weeks before that he (Jackson) intended to bring Pearl Bryan to Cincinnati and murder her, giving her a quick poison."

At the conclusion of Mr. Anthony's testimony Col. Washington moved to have what Walling told the witness stricken out. Judge Helm reserved his decision.

Coachman Jackson was called and repeated his story of driving the cab to Ft. Thomas containing Jackson, Walling and Pearl Bryan as told in the Jackson trial.

Mrs. Bowers, a new witness, testified that she heard the cab on the night of January 31. She lives at Third street and Central avenue, Newport. Mrs. Bowers testified that later she heard some one running toward the Licking river. He seemed to be very much exhausted. He sank down just under my window, gasping for breath. I heard him say: 'If I don't go on, they will catch me sure!' I though some one was chasing him, and I became very much alarmed. I looked out of the window and said: 'Yes, they will catch you if you don't hurry.'

"As soon as I said that he started to run again as hard as he could. I think the man was a colored man."

NEWPORT, Ky., June 6.—Judge Helm ruled that all of Walling's damaging admissions, as related by Reporter Anthony Thursday, should be admitted. This was a blow to the defense, for a part of the testimony admitted was Walling's confession that he knew Pearl Bryan had been murdered.

Elizabeth Ware, who lives at the first tollgate out of Newport on the Licking Pike, testified Friday that a carriage passed through the tollgate without stopping on the night of January 31. It was drawn by one horse. She called out three times to the driver to stop and pay toll, but he paid no attention. It was after 12 o'clock.

Watchman Pat Kinney, of the Grand Central station, was then called. He said that on the afternoon of January 31 he saw Alonzo Walling and a young woman answering Pearl Bryan's description. The girl was weeping. She was constantly talking to Walling, who seemed to turn a deaf ear to her entreaties.

Kinney's identification of Walling was intensely dramatic. Turning around in the witness box he pointed out Walling's reddening face and declared: "I can never forget that man nor that girl." Walling eyed the witness and attempted to smile.

Police Surgeon James M. French, of Cincinnati, said that he examined Scott Jackson's coat found in a sewer and discovered evidences of blood stains.

Al Schroeder was an important witness. He swore that he was on the Licking pike on the night of the murder. He also saw the one-horse carriage driven rapidly away from Newport. He could not tell the color of the horse.

Detective Crim was called. Crim swore that he had talked with Walling after the defendant was arrested, in which he stated that Jackson told him early in January that murder was planned. At first Jackson told Walling he would bring the girl to the city. Later he said he would take her to a room and poison her, leaving the public and the police to believe that she had committed suicide. He changed his mind, and said he would cut the body into bits and dispose of it. Afterward he said he would bury the corpse in the Dayton sandbar.

Crim heard Walling say that he would not have warned Pearl Bryan if he had met her at the depot on the night of her arrival, although he said he knew her murder was planned.

Attorney A. T. Root was sworn. He said: "One afternoon my wife and I were over in Cincinnati shopping. It was one day in the last week of last January. About half-past six o'clock or a quarter to seven o'clock my wife and I went to Hayden's restaurant, at the northwest corner of Race and Seventh streets for lunch. We found the first room filled and we went into the rear room. We sat at a table near the back. While we were there two young men and a young woman came into the restaurant and sat down at a table only five or six feet away from us.

The young lady sat down at the table, and the two young men sat down at the other side. My attention was called to the young woman because she seemed to be in distress. She was the very picture of misery.

The young men gave her no sympathy, and I noticed them because they seemed so heartless. They were sitting within five or six feet of me, and I had full opportunity to observe them for about an hour. At least I saw the larger man and the young lady at least that long. The smaller man went out and did not come back while my wife and I were there. By the smaller man Root said he meant Jackson. Root identified Walling as the larger man. Pearl Bryan's hat and picture were shown the witness and he said that was the young woman.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 8.—The deputy clerk threw the valises and bloody garments of Pearl Bryan at the feet of the state's attorneys Saturday morning. With Detective Jack McDermott in the oak witness chair, the trial of Alonzo Walling for his life was resumed.

McDermott answered questions positively. For a time the attorneys kept him busy identifying Pearl Bryan's belongings found in Walling and Jackson's room. Attorney Shepherd examined two handkerchiefs in the lot, and threw them back to Attorney Hayes. They went floating through the air.

The solemn scene in Epply's undertaking establishment, when Walling and Jackson were taking to view Pearl Bryan's corpse, was brought to view again by the state. McDermott was present when Walling was accused of the murder, and the prosecution sought to show Walling's conduct.

Police Superintendent Deitsch was the next witness. He answered the questions with military precision. In conversation in the chief's office Walling told Deitsch that he had met Pearl Bryan on the last Wednesday afternoon of her life at Fourth and Race streets. Jackson sent him there. Deitsch said that Walling admitted having advised Jackson to give Pearl Bryan ergot of rye; that he knew she was coming to the city; that he did not know what had become of her.

Walling, Jackson and Pearl Bryan were seen together in Hayden's restaurant the Thursday night before the murder. The entirely new testimony of Attorney A. T. Root in the Walling trial into Friday afternoon was to this effect. Had the prosecution called Mrs. Root instead of her husband to the witness stand, her evidence would have been even more sensational. She would have sworn that it was the Friday night of the murder when she and her husband saw Pearl Bryan in the company of Walling and Jackson in Haydon's restaurant. This testimony would have carried the connection of the girl with her believed murderers down to a later time than any other witness, save Coachman Jackson has fixed.

"It was Friday night, and not Thursday, as my husband thinks," says Mrs. Root, "when we saw the three young people sitting in the restaurant. I am able to fix the night because of a party which was given that Friday evening on our side of the river. My two daughters attended, and I think my husband and I hastened home in order that I might help them complete their arrangements."

This was the party which Judge Helm's son attended. After the party the young man says he crossed the Newport Bridge in his father's carriage. Attorney Root did not retire that night until after two o'clock. From his residence he had a good view of the Newport bridge. As he looked out of the window, waiting for the young people to return from the party, he says he saw many carriages crossing the bridge.

WOMEN FARMERS.

They Must Be Practical and Self-Sustaining.

"There is no reason in the world why a woman should not run a farm successfully, and no reason why she should hesitate to undertake agricultural pursuits," said a veteran farmer, who was noted for keeping abreast of the times. "In the course of my life I have known half a dozen women who were left with farms on their hands, and who finished paying for them, put up buildings and handled their varied interests admirably. In later years I have known a number who bought farms just as men would have done, and who have laid up money, some of them a considerable amount.

"But the woman farmer, to be successful, needs to do two or three things. First of all, she must be practical, and must be thoughtfully slow in accepting the advice of people who want her to try new things too extensively. Women are a wee bit inclined to be progressive, and many of them are rather more adventurous than men. To yield to this impulse is the first step towards failure. Conservatism is a most excellent sheet anchor, and is a faculty that all women and a great many men would do well to cultivate.

"The help question is, of course, one of the greatest points to be looked after. In emergencies the man can himself turn in and fill gaps, but the woman can not always do this; therefore it is necessary for her to look ahead and manage her affairs with prudence, in order not to be caught and involved in disaster.

"There are many men who will not work well with what they call a 'woman boss.' They seem to feel that there is something wrong in taking orders from femininity, and are often so disagreeable that the only way to get along with them is to give them their way as much as possible. This is always a mistake, as such men grow worse with time, and soon become domineering. If the man will not take orders from the proprietor of the establishment, the only thing is to get rid of him forthwith. He demoralizes all the other help and has a bad influence in the neighborhood.

"Women may very successfully conduct farms if they turn their attention to grass and fruit. The raising of flowers and poultry are occupations especially appropriate for women, and, with good markets, are exceedingly profitable if well managed.

"There is no reason why a woman should not be just as efficient in a greenhouse or a poultry-yard as a man. Indeed, her habits of carefulness and disposition to look after little things are never better placed than in such pursuits."—N. Y. Ledger.

Eighteen Babies at a Ball.

M. and Mme. X——, when they returned to their residence earlier than they were expected the other night from the ball at Elysee, found, to their astonishment, that their three servants and two children had disappeared. On questioning the concierge and threatening to send for the commissary of police the parents learned that in their absence the servants had gone off to a popular dancing room and taken the children with them. M. and Mme. X——, still in evening dress, immediately drove in their carriage to the address given. At the door of the dancing salon they met the man who receives the money, and he evidently took in the situation. "Reassure yourselves, monsieur and madame," he said, "and kindly step this way." The man led the way to a large, well-lighted and warm room, in which were 18 babies fast asleep upon benches. They were under the care of an old woman, and M. and Mme. X—— had no difficulty in picking out those which belonged to them.—Paris Poste.

Perfume of Flowers.

It is claimed that the perfume of flowers disappears as soon as the starch in the petals is exhausted: and it may, it is said, be restored by placing the flower in a solution of sugar, when the formation of starch and the emission of fragrance will at once be resumed.

A GLOOMY JOURNEY THAT LASTED TWO YEARS.

A Turn in the Lane at Last Brings Health and Gladness—An Interesting Narrative with a Happy Ending.

From the Gazette, Baldwinsville, N. Y.

The Gazette recently called attention in these columns to the case of Herbert Spencer, of this village, and his release from suffering after long bondage. Interested in all things pertaining to the betterment of the moral and physical welfare of our community, we had no sooner given to the readers of this paper one article for their perusal and thought when we sought information regarding more such. Our south side druggists, Gardner & Davis, reported that Mr. Frank Williams, of Warner, N. Y., a flourishing hamlet four miles south of this village, had been greatly benefited by the use of that widely-known and highly-regarded medicinal preparation known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. To fully set forth the facts concerning the case at Warner, we drove to that village one pleasant July evening. Mr. Williams was not at his pleasant little home in the suburbs of the village on our arrival, but we found him just entering the store of George Burr, in the center of the town, near the N. Y. C. tracks. Mr. Williams is a tall, pleasant-looking man, six feet and one-half inch in height, with a face which at once impresses you with a belief in his candor and honesty. In response to our inquiry as to whether he had ever used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and his willingness to publish abroad his opinion of this medicine, Mr. Williams said:

"I am glad of the opportunity to let my friends and the public generally know of the results of my taking this widely-advertised remedy. I want people to know there is an escape from the evils of some diseases, at least, and that there is reliability and virtue in one of the many advertised remedies now before the people."

We stepped over to a show-case near by where we could write with ease and Mr. Williams continued:

"I have resided in Warner and vicinity for twenty-one years. Am forty-six years of age, and by occupation a carpenter and general utility man, finding employment nearly, if not quite all of the time. In January, 1891, I was attacked with a severe nervous trouble, which greatly weakened me and continued to grow gradually worse, with pains everywhere, sometimes in my fingers, again in my toes, but mostly in the heart region. For a year and a half I was unable to do a full day's work. For over three years I tried the skill of the physicians and grew worse under their care. Also tried some well-known proprietary medicines, and while, perhaps, relieved for a time, yet the nervous twitching continued, and for two years I felt that there was no help for me. One day I read in a newspaper a testimonial from a man whose case seemed to resemble mine, and he claimed to have been cured by a medicine advertised under the name of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Before I forget it, I desire to say that there was no shaky trouble in my hands, only a quivering of the muscles, sometimes showing in my face. I resolved to try these pills and first purchased a box at the drug store of Gardner & Davis, in Baldwinsville. I felt so much better at once that I continued their use until I had taken eighteen boxes, when I felt entirely well again, and have never had a return of the disease, excepting after a period of severe, hard labor, when I feel a bit of the old nervous twitching, but no pain, and when these come on, which is very seldom, I take a few pills and I am all right again. I might also add that my daughter was troubled with palpitation of the heart, and used two boxes, which gave her instant relief. Regarding my present condition I am able to work every day, and my neighbors attribute my cure to something akin to the miraculous."

Mr. Williams was more than willing to make affidavit of the truth of his statements, and we drove to the residence of Justice of the Peace Charles T. Fowler, where the following acknowledgment was recorded:

FRANK S. WILLIAMS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 26th day of July, 1895.

CHARLES T. FOWLER,
Justice of the Peace.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50)—by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

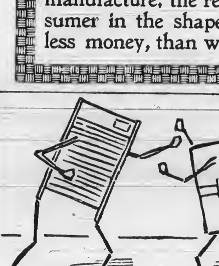
Battle Ax PLUG

"BATTLE AX" is the most tobacco, of the best quality, for the least money. Large quantities reduce the cost of manufacture, the result going to the consumer in the shape of a larger piece, for less money, than was ever before possible.



They don't agree—your pocket-book and your wash-board. One tries to keep your money—the other wastes it. You'd better consult your pocket-book, do your washing with Pearline, and put the wash-board out of the house. There's no room or place for it with Pearline (use no soap), nor for any of its wearing-out, tiresome rubbing. You'll be doing your pocket-book a good turn, and help toward making it fatter and sleeker, if you'll do all your washing and cleaning with Pearline. 506

POLITICAL.

A Republican club has been organized at Bromley.

The Chicago platform will be free trade, free silver and simply invincible.—Commonwealth.

The Eastern Democrats threaten not to put an electoral ticket in the field should the National Convention declare for free silver.

The Lexington convention does not favor silver-plated politics, but objects to anything that has not got the solid silver ring to it.—Kentucky Post.

The gold standard men are sore but we are sure they will soon see the folly of trying to control the majority and line up for a grand victory in November.—Carrollton News.

Whatever may be the result at Chicago we propose to abide its action and support its nominee until the voters of the United States determine the result. This is Democracy, and every Democrat should do likewise.—Argus.

Vice President Stevenson's boom for the Democratic nomination for President was given an impetus by the free silver victory in Kentucky. It is reported that the free silver politicians of this State will support him.—Kentuckian.

Ex-Governor Campbell says there is no doubt that the free-silverites will control the Chicago convention. He thinks a platform will be adopted on which all Democrats can stand, and his party is in good fighting trim for this year's battle.

Mr. Beard, of Carroll county, who is willing to give his whiskers to be nominated for assessor, says in his announcement: "Believing that the work can be done for less money than the law allows, if elected I will obligate myself to donate to the county $100 each year out of my salary for the benefit of the people.

The Louisville Post has declared with emphasis that it will not support the nominee of the Chicago Convention should he be a silver man on a silver platform. Of course not; nobody expected the Post to do anything of the kind. The Post is a Republican paper and has been ever since it refused to support the Democratic nominee for Governor.

Governor Bradley is quoted as saying that in his next message to the Legislature he would recommend the creation of a non-partisan Board of Commissioners to have sole charge of the penitentiaries and eleemosynary institutions of the State. It is known that the new Auditor and Secretary of State are also early weary of their ex-officio duties, and are in accord with the Governor's plan.—Capital.

Governor Bradley has pulled his finger out of the Presidential bucket of water, and marvels there is no trace of the outpull. The recent and most emphatic Democratic victory in Kentucky is given out as his reason. It is of small moment any way the Governor puts it. But the greater probabilities are he was told of some truths to be fired at him that would not only take him out of politics, but out of the circle of decency.—Commonwealth.

The Republican platform at St. Louis must not show the shadow of a shade of a straddle. It must declare without evasion or equivocation against the free and unlimited coinage of silver. If the delegates from the mining States, or the mining States with their delegates, want to leave the party, let them go. The victory for sound money can be won without them, and will be and the more a finality. The Republican party must make no compromise with principle.—Louisville Commercial.

The Democratic Convention held in Lexington this week was one of the most remarkable ever held in the State, and at no time have we ever seen a body of men so terribly in earnest. The gathering was a large one, every county of the 119 being represented and by new men at the helm. The bosses have been turned down, the people at last thoroughly awake have taken charge of the old ship and propose to steer her safely into port.—Falmouth Guide.

The newspapers are filled with speculation as to how the free silver wing of the Democratic party will use their authority recently acquired. We hope they will use it for the best interests of the Democratic organization. Whenever it is agreed that there is nothing more in either party, Democratic or Republican than the question of currency refrom, it is then about time for a new alignment in politics and the creation of new political parties, upon lines embracing more comprehensive views of governmental policy.—Capital.

The Democrats of Kentucky spoke Saturday in no uncertain terms as regards to how they stand on the money question. The deed is done and it cannot be helped. The free silver element are entiteled to the fruit of their victory, be they sweet or be they bitter. While the News does not believe as doth the majority; but it cordially acquiesces in the voice of the people and will march with the Democratic column as a high private, either to victory or to defeat. If to victory, we will then know that we were wrong. If to defeat, we will then have the right to adhere to our former opinion with more tenacity than ever.—Owen News.

CROP AND STOCK.

Missouri is going to have a big crop of politics this year.

John Paxton, of Owen county, has a cow with six legs and two sets of ears.

There are over one hundred different varieties of tobacco cultivated in the United States.

The largest acreage of tobacco has been set out this season thas has been planted for years.

Australia's wool clip will be about 150,000 bales less than last year and New Zealand's about 40,000 less.

The weather in Southwest Missouri the past month has been as near perfect for growing crops as it would be possible to make it if made to order.

A prominent horse dealer declares says the Lexington Herald, that depreciation in horses has about reached the bottom, and now that the old plugs turned out to grass by street railways have been disposed of, the reaction is setting in. Good horses command good prices.

We have the startling statement made by Edward Atkinson, the noted statistician, that the product of the hen in the United States is of greater value than all the iron products of the furnaces; that is twice the value of the wool, and three or four times the value of the silver products of the United States.

STATE NEWS.

The colored people around Junction City are very much worked up over the performances of James Holley, one of their own color, who hails from Lexington. Holley, by rubbing any diseased portion of the body with his hands, produces remarkable cures. Rheumatism, neuralgia and the like are cured almost instantly. The lame, the halt and the blind are flocking to him for treatment, and many of them profess a cure and claim to be improving. Holley does not charge anything for his work, but many contributions are made by his patients.

It has been finally decided that no encampment of the state guards shall be held this fall, and the soldier boys will have to get along with out their outing.

William H. Gayle, of Newport, claims to be the oldest mason in America. He is in his 96th year and has been a mason for 74 years.

OWEN COUNTY
[News]

The farmers have had a splendid tobacco season, more tobacco has been set than expected.

The residence of Mr. John Sebree, on Stamping Ground pike, 3 miles from Owenton, was consunmed by fire last Thursday morning about 7:30 o'clock. Most of the contents was lost, including nearly all of the clothing. The total loss wat about $2,400, insured for about $1,200. Several of the family made narrow escapes, the whole upper story being ablaze before they knew it.

Wolf & Roberts are on hot trail after the robbers who broke into their store last county court night. On Wednesday morning two tramps were seen in the barn at Ben Cammack's, about 9 miles below town, which they had entered to escape from the rain. The next day a lot of old clothes was found in a field near by which bore their private mark. Tuesday a letter was received from a man by the name of Lumpkin, from Patriot, Ind., saying that he had bought a lot of goods of tramps who claimed to be peddlers among which was some neck-ties on which was the name of Wolt & Roberts.

CARROLL COUNTY
[News]

Everybody who had plants got out their tobacco crop.

It is said that the Mail Line will put in an extra boat between Cincinnati and Louisville during the peach shipping season.

Our two distilleries, Jett's and Block's, closed down for the season last Saturday, and it is probable that they will not make another run until the fall of '97.

Wm. Hartman, in discussing the washout said, he has a piece of bottom land on Mill Creek that has been continously cultivated since 1824, and is as fertile as it ever was. Of course he gets the rich soil that washes from the hillsides.

Mr. Orville Williams, who left Sanders a year ago to make his home at Harriman, Tennessee, with his daughter, died in that city last Friday, of Bright's disease. He was one of Carroll's most estimable citizens, and his death is greatly regretted. His remains were brought to Ghent, Monday, and buried with Masonic honors.

[Democrat.]

At nearly 85 years of age Judge Hezekiah Cox, of Ghent, was in the Democratic convention here last Saturday, taking an active part.

We are glad to report that Rev. Dr. Hiner seems to be improving, slowly though it be. He is up and about the room much of the time and recognizes people as they pass.

The accident to S. G. Williams in Boston was a bad affair. He was showing his beautiful horse in the market place, and bids on him were lively. After he had reached $800 a tack in the saddle began to gouge his back, and the hitherto docile creature simply became furious. Mr. Williams was thrown to the ground after much lunging by the horse, and then the animal turned upon him and kicked him about the head, chest and arms. Fortunately the kicks on the head were glancing licks or Mr. Williams would have been killed on the spot; as it was, he was badly gashed, to say nothing of bruises on the body and arms. He was taken to the hospital and had his wounds dressed, and in a few days was able to start home, arriving here Saturday. He is considerably disfigured but still in the ring. The horse, all nerve and excitement, cut many capers—jumping high fences, plunging down steep steps, going through one or two glass windows, etc, etc; and then standing on two legs, was put up and sold for $175. Of course this meant a heavy loss to Mr. Williams.

GALLATIN COUNTY.
[Independent]

Early home grown vegetables are getting plentiful and there is a fine prospect for a full crop.

The protracted meeting at the Warsaw Christian Church closed last Sunday night after an enthusiastic session of two weeks during which time 26 accessions to the church were obtained.

Ira Wingate, a popular and pleasant gentleman of Petersburg, Boone County, is the new clerk on the steamer Levi J. Workum, making his first trip last Saturday. The boat makes the trip as far down as Carrollton every Saturday and appears to have a fine business, getting a full load every trip.

The marriage of Harry Adams of Hamilton, Boone County, to Miss Katie Hance is announced to take place at the beautiful home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hance, at Jackson Landing, next Wednesday, June 10th; at high noon. The wedding will be a very quiet affair owing to the recent death of his father, Hamp Adams, and his sister Miss May. The uncle of the groom, Rev. Samuel Adams, of the Baptist Church, will perform the ceremony. The young couple will take a short trip to Cincinnati, and then return to Boone County, where they will make their home.

GRANT COUNTY
[Courier]

The fight for Prohibition will be on in earnest from now until the 15th when the vote will be taken. Prominent speakers will be engaged and a thorough canvass of the county made. The canvass will close on Sunday night at 10 o'clock June 14.

Joe Calander, of Stewartsville, happened to a very distressing accident one day last week. He and a work hand were tearing down an old stable, throwing the logs off, Mr. Calander was thrown from the pen of logs, on which he was working, and one of the logs fell on him crushing his stomach, injuring his back and cutting his head. He is a very badly injured man, but will probably recover.

Last week Mr. Karl S. Frank made a deed of assignment, conveying all of his stock of groceries to D. C. Points for the use and benefit of his creditors. The assets will amount to about $800 above his legal exemptions and his liabilities about $1,600. His real estate consists of about $900 in two town lots covered by a mortgage to the Grant County Building Association for $600, which real estate and mortgaged debt are not included in the assignment of property.

Committee on Arrangements:

ELMER BEALL, J. F. BLYTH, J. M. LASSING.

THE Democrats of Kentucky want to be doing some get-together work from now on. The two wings should flop together in November, no matter what are the financial views of the nominee of the Chicago convention. The fight on the money question ought not to disrupt the party organization, unless a minority decides that the Democratic party has no milsion to perform in this government other than the adjustment of the maney question. No party can sustain its organization where a minority discards party fealty and assists to defeat the will of the majority.

THE reunion of Confederate veterans will take place at Richmond, Va., on June 30 and July 1 and 2. Business of importance will be brought before the reunion, and the presence of every old confederate, who can possibly attend, is desired. It will be the greatest reunion of ex-confederates ever held.

GOV. BRADLEY lead the country to believe that he was in a position to, and would, explode a bomb in the McKinley camp; but when the anticipated bomb was let off, last week, it proved to be no competitor to even an ordinary parlor match. Bradley proved a failure again.

IT is claimed that a member of the committee on resolutions in the last Republican State convention has made statements, which if true, proves that Gov. Bradley was opposed to the single standard platform on which he was compelled to make the race.

WITH T. B. Mathews and Richard P. Ernst both candidates for the Republican nomination for Congress in this district, that party will experience an unusually lively campaign until the nomination is made. They are both very popular in their party.

THE St. Louis hotels that were objecting to entertaining the colored delegates to the Republican convention in session there this week, reconsidered and are giving the negroes the same attention as that extended the white delegates.

THE Virginia Democracy, through the State convention, declares that no man should be eligible to the Presidency for a third term. The mother of Presidents is serving notice on the incumbent of the White House.

THE Louisville base ball club is the only one in the league that has proven able to maintain its position with out a change since the championship season opened.

THE North Carolina Populists will not fuse with either of the old parties this year. They fail to see wherein they would be benefitted by such action.

THE effort to get Thomas B. Reed to accept the second place on the Republican national ticket is not likely to win.

THE Republican national powwow began at St. Louis yesterday.

A Gold Standard Bimetallist

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In the Democratic mass meeting, recently held in this county, I stated that I was a gold standard-bimetallist, opposed to the free coinage of either gold or silver.

It seems that many who were present could not grasp the idea of a gold standard advocate being a bimetallist. The object of this communication is to show that I was perfectly consistent in taking this stand. I shall attempt to prove that it is not only consistent, but that it is the monetary system of our government to-day, and has been since 1878. It was inaugurated by James B. Beck, that grand old Scotchman whose memory should be revered by every Democrat in Kentucky. It is the platform upon which Grover Cleveland, John G. Carlisle and all other sound money Democrats stand to-day.

In order to render this plain to the incomprehensible mind, I will have to analyze and define the terms used. A standard, as applied to currency, is the unit of value, as in the United States, a gold dollar weighing 25.8 grains, 1-10 of which is alloy. In England a sovereign, a gold coin 123.274 grains troy in weight, of the value of $4.87, 1-12 of which is alloy. In France, where gold is the only legal tender money, the unit of value and unit of account is a franc, a silver coin worth about 20 cents.

Now since a standard of value and a unit of value are synonymous terms, you can no more have a double standard of value than you can have a double unit of value. Hence, when you hear men proclaiming that they want a double standard of value in our monetary system, you can safely conclude that they don't know what they are talking about.

Bimetallism is a compound of the two Latin works, bi, which means two, and metallum, a metal. Bimetallism as applied to currency is "the legal obligation of a national mint to coin both gold and silver at a fixed ratio between the two metals, coupled with a law giving debtors the power, unless prevented by special contract, to satisfy their creditors by payment in either of the metals thus coined." This definition of bimetallism was copied, verbatum from the American Encyclopaedie Dictionary. If you will examine it carefully you will find no reference made to standard of value nor to coinage—neither have anything to do in establishing bimetallism in any monetary system. Any government that will make silver and gold legal tender in payment for all debts, both public and private, is established on a bimetallic basis. This is the case in our government to-day, and has been since 1878. The silver dollar possesses the same functions as the gold dollar. It is as much final redemption money as gold. Every bond outstanding is redeemable in either silver or gold. Every greenback and treasury note is redeemable in either metal. If this is not bimetallism in the strictest sense, I must confess I am ignorant of what bimetallism is.

The only distinction our government has made between the two coins was the selection of the gold dollar as the standard or unit of value. The government strengthens its claim to a bimetallic system by declaring it to be its policy to maintain a strict parity between the two coins. This parity has been strictly maintained by John G. Carlisle, notwithstanding all the false charges by the Populist to the contrary. I stand ready and prepared to prove thls fact to any who may dispute it.

We hear a great deal about the great crime of 1873 in demonetizing silver. This great crime consisted in Congress closing the mints against the coinage of standard silver dollars and divesting them of their legal tender character. This was done because the government had expended a great deal of money in coining these dollars and none were in circulation. This was owing to the fact that speculators shipped them to France and sold them as bullion, making a profit of 3½ cents on each dollar.

In 1878 they were remonetized by Congress, through the Bland act, by reopening the mints to their coinage and making them legal tender without limit in payment of all debts both public and private. This act has never been repealed and is in force to-day with the exception of a single clause requiring the government to purchase a given number of ounces each month. This clause was amended in 1890 and repealed in 1893. All the other features of the bill are still in force.

You may ask why this great uprising of the people, clamoring for the restoration of silver to the position it occupied prior to 1873? Why this great tidal wave that is rolling over our country, destroying all business relations, disrupting old party organizations and threatening bankruptcy to every man who is in debt? I answer that it is attributable, in agreat measure, to the shrewdness of a little Yankee who, having failed in every thing else, conceived the idea of writing a little "yellow back" book on finance. He took advantage of the panic of 1893 and filled his book with false premises and great promises, making a great howl about the great crime of 1873, and clamoring for the restoration of silver to primary money—final redemption money and giving forth a wail over the fact that silver had been placed in the ranks of token money. His little book found a ready sale and Bill Harvey became a very rich man in a very few months. The silver kings who control the mines of our country got together and formed a syndicate—employed agents and sent them into every State, proclaiming the false doctrine of Harvey, deluding the minds of honest men, and aroused them to action by vilifying and abusing officials who were striving to serve their country to the best of their ability.

I am a Jeffersonian Democrat. I believe in sound-money, for tariff for revenue only, and am zealously opposed to class legislation in any form.

Silver coined free at a ratio of 16 to 1 could never be sound money and would be class legislation in its most aggravating form. Hence my opposition to the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

G. C. GRADDY.

[Ciucinnati Enquirer]

Hon. Richard Ernst is not to have an open field for the Republican congressional nomination. Hon. T. B. Mathews was in Newport Saturday night to fix his fences for that same nomination, and his language as to his candidacy is not to be mistaken. An Enquirer reporter saw Mr. Mathews right after his consultation, and had an interview with him.

"Mr. Mathews, will you be a candidate for Congress this year?

"Yes, I am a candidate for the nomination, and hope to be successful."

"What effect will the candidacy of Mr. Ernst have?"

"Well, that is yet to be determined. In fact, I can hardly believe that he will allow his name to go before the convention. You remember that two years ago the nomination was offered to Mr. Ernst, and I was among the number who urged him to accept it. He positively refused to accede to the wishes of his friends on the grounds that he could not sacrifice his legal business for politics, and I was given the nomination. The fight I had to make against Colonel Berry was against fearful odds, but I cheerfully went to the front, and the result was that the Democratic majority in the Sixth District was nearly wiped out."

"Do you think you could defeat the Democratic candidate if given the nomination this year?"

" I certainly do. From advices received from every county in the district, I feel quite confident that I could be elected. My friends claim (and I think very justly) that I am entitled to the nomination."

"What are your financial views?" asked the scribe.

"To be short, I am opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, except at a ratio that would maintain each dollar in silver upon a par with the standard gold dollar of the United States."

"Will the tariff question cut much figure in the coming campaign?"

"I think it will. The industries of the country have been paralyzed during the last three years, and the people are demanding a tariff that will maintain the credit of the Government, and protect home labor and home industries. I have always been a workingman, and believe in giving the laborer an opportunity of earning an honest living, and that he be paid the highest wages in good, honest money of equal purchasing power with any other money."

Congressman Owens has written that he will return to Georgetown as soon as Congress adjourns, and begin his campaign for reelection at once. It is said that Mr. Owens' experience in Congress has taken some of the rough edge off of him, and he is really a splendid orator.—News.

THE opposition to McKinley soon disappeared when the delegates to the Republican convention began to head towards St. Louis.

A CONVENTION

Of State Boards of Health in Chicago—Important Sanitary Measures Discussed.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The Eleventh annual national convention of state boards of health was called to order in the south parlor of the auditorium Wednesday by the president, Dr. J. N. Taylor, of Crawfordsville, Ind. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Gov. Altgeld and Mayor Swift and responded to by President Taylor. Dr. C. O. Probst, of Columbus, secretary and treasurer of the conference, read his report, which stated that all the states, with the exception of three, and the province of Ontario and Quebec, were members of the conference. Fifteen states were represented at roll call, most of the delegates being secretaries of the state boards. Quebec was represented by Dr. La Chappelle and Ontario by Dr. Peter H. Bryce, of Toronto.

Dr. Gardner T. Swarts, of Rhode Island, chairman of the committee on vaccine farms, submitted a report as to his investigations, his treatment of the subject being purely technical.

The question of safety to the public in transporting corpses and the possibility of uniform laws relating thereto was fully discussed and a committee appointed to submit a report to the conference as to a uniform code of rules and the danger of holding public funerals in contagious cases.

Dr. J. W. Scott, secretary of the Illinois board, opened a discussion of the proposition: "What should be done with immigrants who arrive on vessels infected with smallpox?"

Dr. Scott, Dr. Chas. N. Hewitt, of Minnesota, and Dr. Benj. Lee, of Pennsylvania, were appointed a committee to prepare a report on the subject to be forwarded to congress.

At the evening session Lyman E. Cooley, the eminent civil engineer, delivered an address on the sanitary aspect of the Chicago drainage channel.

A FATHER

Shoots His Two Step-Daughters While Under the Influence of Liquor.

CHICAGO, June 11.—William Otter, of 469 McLean avenue, shot his two stepdaughters Wednesday night while under the influence of liquor. He came home drunk and walked into a room where were sitting his two step-daughters and their mother. He asked the eldest girl, who is 17 years old, to go after a can of beer for him. This she refused to do and the father becoming enraged and drawing a revolver began a promiscuous shooting. The older girl was hit in the breast and the younger one, aged seven, received a bullet in the abdomen. Mrs. Otter was not struck. Both girls were sent to the hospital where it is said the young lady will recover but that the little girl will probably die. The father was arrested.

LETTER CARRIERS' PAY.

Bill Passed by the Senate Fixing Their Salaries in Cities of More Than Fifteen Thousand Inhabitants.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The senate Wednesday passed a bill increasing the pay of letter-carriers, which was sent to the house for action. It fixes the salary after July 1 next of carriers in cities of more than fifteen thousand population for the first year $600, for the second year $800, for the third year $1,000, and for the fourth year and thereafter $1,200. In cities of less than fifteen thousand, the pay for the first year is fixed at $500, for the second year $800, and for subsequent years $1,000.

Petition for Capt. Wiborg's Pardon.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The petition for the pardon of Capt. J. H. S. Wiborg, master of the steamer Horsa, recently convicted for his connection with a filibustering expedition to Cuba, was presented to the president Wednesday. The petition was indorsed by nearly all the members of the senate and house irrespective of party, and by newspaper men and ship owners along the Atlantic coast. The latter speak very highly of Capt. Wiborg's character.

Negroes Can Stop at the Southern.

ST. LOUIS, June 11.—At the meeting of the national committeemen Wednesday forenoon, Chairman Carter announced that he was authorized by the manager of the Southern hotel to say that he would carry out his contract by receiving and entertaining each and every delegate who had reserved accommodations in the house, no matter what his color. This was received with applause. No other reference to the trouble was made.

American Locomotive Plant in Russia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—The formation of a company for the establishment of a locomotive plant in Russia by American capitalists was announced Wednesday. The company is to have a capital stock of $500,000, and a capacity of 200 engines a year. The firm of Edmund D. Smith & Co., of Philadelphia, and Walter F. Dixon, formerly connected with the Rogers Locomotive Works, are the prime movers in the enterprise.

Gen. Kosciusko's Land.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—In response to a request from the secretary of state, the secretary of the interior informs Secretary Olney that on April 28, 1800, the United States gave Gen. Thaddaus Kosciusko 500 acres of land in Ohio in consideration of his valuable military services for this country. The Russian minister desired the information in behalf of heirs of Gen. Kosciusko.

Armenian Spy Assassinated.

The President Approves Several Bills.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The president has approved the act amending the act providing for the protection of the Alaska salmon fisheries and a number of pension bills.

CONGRESS CLOSES.

The Last of the General Appropriation Bills Disposed Of.

Pension Granted to the Widow of Gen. Gibson, of Ohio—The Usual Resolution of Thanks Passed—Both Houses of Congress Adjourn Sine Die.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—If the first session of the Fifty-fourth congress has been a "do nothing session," as had been predicted, the closing day of the senate furnished a fitting culmination to the session. It was a day of inactive drifting, a laborious effort to kill time by doing nothing until four o'clock, when, according to the concurrent resolution agreed to on Wednesday, the two houses were to adjourn. The senate was called to order at 11 o'clock, when the District of Columbia appropriation bill was received and immediately signed by the vice president, thus disposing of the last of the general appropriation bills so far as the legislative branch was concerned. A bill was passed granting a pension to the widow of Gen. W. H. Gibson, of Ohio. The senate then drawled along until 1:20 o'clock, the only business transacted being the appointment of a committee to wait on the president and inform him that congress was ready to adjourn, and the appointment of another committee provided for in the District of Columbia appropriation bill to investigate the charitable and reformatory institutions in Washington.

At 1:20 a recess was taken until three o'clock, when the usual resolutions of thanks to the vice president and president pro tem. were offered by Senator Allison, of Iowa, and Harris, of Tennessee, respectively, and unanimously agreed to. The galleries were almost deserted during the early hours of the session, but knots of visitors continued to come in slowly until the hour of adjournment, so that when that hour arrived and the vice president delivered his valedictory he had a good sized audience in the galleries, a large number of whom were ladies, even though there were but 25 senators present at that interesting moment. As the vice president uttered the last words and the gavel fell for the last time there was a faint outburst of applause, after which senators gathered in knots in the aisles and before the vice president's desk bidding each other good-by. Then the senators on the floor and the visitors in the galleries melted away and the chamber which has been the scene of so many stirring incidents was left to the pages and attendants until the first Monday in December next.

A BUSY DAY.

The Rush of Bills Through Congress Gives the President Plenty of Work.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—President Cleveland was a busy man Thursday, considering and signing bills rushed to the white house from both houses of congress. His cabinet officers were with him to give advice on measures connected with their several departments, and Private Secretary Thurber was also called into the hasty consultations necessary in each case. A number of bills were not signed and therefore failed to become laws. These and those approved will be announced from the white house Friday.

How soon the president will leave Washington for Gray Gables can not be ascertained. It was stated Thursday at the white house that he had made no plans and that public business would keep him here for some time at least.

BLAND'S BOOM.

It Was Inaugurated in St. Louis Amid the Booming of Cannon and Blare of Trumpet Thursday Night.

ST. LOUIS, June 12.—The candidacy of Hon. Richard P. Bland for nomination as the democratic nominee for president at the Chicago convention was launched amid the booming of cannon and the blare of trumpets here Thursday night. A serenade and reception was given Mr. Bland at the Planter's hotel by his admirers here and he responded in a brief speech. The members of the campaign committee have appointed sub-committees to visit various states in which the democratic conventions are to be held and advocate the adoption of instructions to delegates to vote for Bland for president.

Fatal Fall From a Chimney.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 12.—John Wood and Ben McCalla, workmen engaged in removing scaffolding from the interior of the new big chimney of the Street Railway Co.'s power house, fell 75 feet at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The men gave the wrong signal to the hoisting engineer, and were drawn to the top with great force and then fell to the earth. Wood died at the hospital and McCalla is dying. Both are men of families.

The Gold Men on Top.

ST. PAUL, June 12.—The democrats of Minnesota did a most unexpected thing Thursday, declaring emphatically for gold when a count of noses Wednesday night seemed to indicate that the declaration would be for free silver. The silver men made their opening fight on the chairmanship by nominating E. T. Chaplin. The gold men nominated O. M. Hall, ex-congressman from the Third district. The latter won by a comfortable majority.

Miners at Star City Evicted.

SHELBURN, Ind., June 12.—The Star Mining Co. gave notice to their miners to remove their tools from the mine by noon Thursday, but the men failed to comply with the company's demand, and it resulted in the company bringing the tools out. Notices are also posted on the company's property demanding that the miners vacate the company's houses.

Kansas Bank Closes Its Doors.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The First national bank, of Larned, Kan., capital $50,000, closed its doors Thursday.

ROSWELL P. FLOWER,

The Ex-Governor of New York, is in Favor of a Gold Platform.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 13.—Ex-Gov. Roswell P. Flower arrived in this city Friday morning on the steamer Northwest and left for Watertown in the afternoon.

"Who is your choice for a democratic candidate for president?" was asked of him by a United Press reporter.

"No man who would run on a free silver platform," was the response.

"You see," continued the ex-governor, "democratic chances this year are not as glowing as they were four years ago, and candidates are scarce. In fact, there is no democratic candidate. It is my opinion that the democrats had better wait until the republicans finish at St. Louis; and then, when we are all assembled in Chicago, will draft a good man, a third term being out of the question of course."

"What effect will the free silver agitation have upon the democracy?"

"Disastrous," answered Mr. Flower. "It will hurt the party terribly in the east. I know democrats who would rather vote the republican ticket than vote for a man running on a free silver platform."

"It is said that free silver men will control the Chicago convention?"

"If the published estimates are correct, may be they can. Of course, my hope and wish is that they will not. This threatened condition is the only menace to democratic success in New York this fall. On state issues the democrats ought to carry New York state by one hundred thousand, and they will, too, providing the question raised in national issues can be kept out. There are plenty of good men in the democratic party in this and other states who can be drafted to carry the banner when we meet in Chicago."

"What do you think of the attitude of McKinley in refusing to express himself on the question of finance?"

"In that respect Mr. McKinley is a very wise man, a very wise man indeed. What on earth has he got to talk for? Why should he express himself? He is absolutely certain and sure of the nomination. A half dozen more St. Louis cyclones could not stop it. He is as certain of the nomination as the sun is to rise in the morning of June 16. That being the case, what has he to gain by talking? He could not help himself any. He could only injure himself. He is very wise in keeping silence and allowing the republican platform to talk for him. Of course, if he were not sure of the nomination and could gain anthing by talking it would be all right for him to go ahead and talk."

COAL WORKS BURNED.

Eight-Five Men Were in the Mine When the Flames Broke Out—All Escaped Except Three.

TAYLORSVILLE, Ill., June 13.—The Taylorville Coal Mining works were entirely destroyed by fire Friday morning and 85 men were in the mine. The fire originated in the oil room, situated in the shaft, 500 feet below. A miner unconsciously left a lighted torch near the oil rooms, which ignited the oil and caused an explosion. From this the fire started and swept with terrific speed to the top of the main shaft and soon the entire structure was enveloped in flames. All the men except three were rescued through shaft No. 2, after three hours of suffering. The three remaining are undoubtedly dead from suffocation. Twenty mules perished. Loss, $75,000; fully covered by insurance. The mine is still burning below.

GOV. BOIES.

His Prospects for the Nomination for the Presidency Are Good.

OTTUMWA, Ia., June 13.—Chairman S. B. Evans, of the Iowa Democratic delegation to Chicago, was asked Friday evening as to his honest opinion regarding the probable nomination of Horace Boies, of Iowa, for the Presidency of the United States. He said:

"He will be nominated without a doubt." Continuing, he said: "So soon as the nomination of Boies is made there will be such a movement in his favor, headed by men prominent in great industrial enterprises, that will startle the machine politicians. It has become imperative in their opinion to do something to start the wheels of business and restore industrial prosperity to the country, and to open up the market for agricultural products."

A GANG OF TRAMPS.

They Attack and Rob a Freight Train on the Lake Shore Road.

ERIE, Pa., June 13.—A telephone message from Northeast Friday called for police assistance to a Lake Shore freight crew whose train was in the hands of a gang of tramps. At Westfield, N. Y., a gang of 40 went aboard the train and refused to leave it. When near Northeast they made a general attack on the train, breaking open and robbing cars at will. New suits of clothing were taken for old ones; valuable property was done up in packages and thrown out of the cars. About half the train was looted. When near Erie the gang set the brakes and left the train. Thirteen were captured after a running fight in the woods.

An Epidemic of Rabies.

FT. RECOVERY, O., June 13.—There is great excitement here. Four mad dogs were killed here, and three on Monday. Four cows have gone mad, and were killed, as also were several hogs.

Warships and Naval Militia Organizations.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The designation of the warships that will take out the several naval militia organizations was made by Secretary Herbert Friday. The Michigan will be at Detroit from July 6 to 11, at Saginaw from July 13 to 18 and at Chicago from July 27 to August 10.

Cholera Decreasing.

CAIRO, June 13.—The official cholera statistics show that since June 1 there have been in Egypt 761 new cases of cholera and 633 deaths, including 249 cases and 230 deaths in this city. The disease continues to decrease.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Both Senator Allison, chairman of the appropriations committee of the senate, and Mr. Cannon, chairman of the appropriations committee of the house, agreed Monday night that the situation indicated a final adjournment on Wednesday. The house agreed to the final conference on the post office appropriation bill Monday, and the senate passed the general deficiency bill as it came from the house. When the announcement of the passage of the general deficiency bill by the senate was made to the house the members cheered. Mr. Dingley said the action of the senate assured an adjournment Tuesday. This leaves but four of the great supply bills still unsettled—the District of Columbia, the Indian, the naval and the sundry civil bills. Although neither house has yet acted on the report the conferees of the naval bill have agreed on a report which it is thought will prove acceptable to both houses.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—SENATE.—Tuesday the final conference reports on the naval appropriation and on the Indian appropriation bills were presented and agreed to. In the naval bill a compromise was made reducing the number of battleships to three and directing that no contracts shall be made for armor plate until after the secretary of the navy shall have inquired into the cost of manufacture and shall have made a report to congress. The question of contract schools in the Indian bill was compromised on the basis of allowing them (where there are no other schools to take their place) an appropriation during the fiscal year 1897.

HOUSE.—On the day before that on which congress is confidently expected to finally adjourn for the session, the house spent six and a half hours in the consideration of a contested election case—Aldrich (rep.) vs. Underwood (dem.) from the Ninth Alabama district. There was considerable republican opposition to the recommendations of the committee, and the resolution declaring Aldrich entitled to his seat was agreed to by less than ten majority, the vote being 116 yeas, 107 nays. Mr. Aldrich was sworn in.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—SENATE.—The senate has disposed of the last of the appropriation bills, and has fixed 4 p. m., Thursday as the time for final adjournment. After being in session throughout the day, a night session was determined upon in order to adjust the many minor differences between the two houses. A number of bills were passed during the day, including the important bill giving trial by jury, and other safeguards in prosecution for contempt of court. A bill was passed authorizing the secretary of the treasury to lease certain Alaskian islands for the propagation of gold and silver foxes. A bill was passed to prevent the shipment of liquor under false labels. At the night session, Mr. Hale (Me.) gave notice of a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill increasing the pay of letter carriers was passed.

HOUSE.—There was a grand rush in the house to pass bills under suspension of the rules. With 75 or 80 members in the space in front of the speaker's desk clamoring with uplifted arms, the house resembled nothing so much as a wheat pit during a panic. The senate amendment fixing the time of final adjournment at four o'clock Thursday was agreed to.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The last of the appropriation bills was signed by the president and at four p. m. both houses of congress adjourned sine die. Excepting the case of Savannah, Ga., the western congressmen from the four new states—Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Utah—are the only delegations which have succeeded in securing public buildings bills from this session of congress. The house policy has been to report no bills for new buildings, but the western men, led by Senator Dubois, won their battle in the senate. The final session of the house was devoid of public interest. To Gen. Wheeler (Ala.) belonged the distinction of securing the passage of the last bill.

Two Men Brutally Murdered.

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 12.—A special to the Chronicle from Harlem, Ga., says: A. T. Verdoy and George Edmunds, of Columbia county, living six miles from Harlem, were brutally murdered at the home of Edmunds. They were both attacked while asleep in bed, the murderer using a large stick which was found in the room. They were both horribly beaten in the face. No clue as yet has been obtained concerning the identity of the guilty parties, and the crime is wrapped in mystery. Parties are out looking for the murderers and if found they will undoubtedly be summarily dealt with.

Have Given Up Hope.

BALTIMORE, June 11.—The families of the crew of the tug Mascot, which left here November 27, with arms and ammunition for the Cuban insurgents, have given up hope of ever seeing the men again. The Mascot was a large and staunch sea-going tug, destined, it was stated, for duty along the coast of Cuba, in the landing of supplies from vessels and other work. She passed out from Cape Henry November 29. Within a few days one of the most terrific gales that has occurred in recent years, swept the ocean, and the tug is supposed to have foundered.

Pool Championship of the World.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Champion Alfred DeOro, of Havana, Cuba, defeated Grant Eby, of Springfield, O., in the second game of 200 points in the match of 600 points for the pool championship of the world at Hardman Hall Friday night. DeOro made 200 points to Eby's 146. The grand total now stands, DeOro 404, Eby 333.

Wheat Outlook.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Agricultural department crop report: Average condition winter wheat, 77.9; spring wheat, 99.9. Total winter area, 22,794,000; total spring, 11,825,000. Percentage winter and spring wheat acreage is 101.7 and condition all wheat is 87.6.

Solid for Silver.

Three Killed by an Explosion.

KINGSTON, N.Y., June 9.—A telephone message to the Freeman states that at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon a horrible accident occurred at the Horton Cement works at Bennewater, a small hamlet about five miles from this city. A blast exploded prematurely and killed instantly the following men: Aaron Twilliger, Thomas Rich and Fred Charles. George Early was badly injured but is expected to recover. The dead men were all married. Their bodies were terribly mangled by the explosion. The Hamlet is wild with excitement over the unfortunate accident.

One Thousand Farmers Wanted

To settle on one thousand choice farms on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in Dakota

These lands are located in twenty different counties, and are to be had now at prices ranging from $7 to $15 per acre; a few months hence their value will be doubled.

For a home or for investment no luckier chance in the West has ever before been offered. Now is the time to invest. No better farming land exists anywhere. No greater results can be obtained anywhere.

Schools and churches abound everywhere. Nearby markets for all farm products. South and North Dakota are the banner diversified farming and stock-raising states of the West. Everything grows in Dakota except ignorance and intemperance. A new boom is on. Take advantage of the tide which leads to Dakota and to fortune.

Most of the Big Republican Leaders in St. Louis.

The Four Leading Candidates Have Established Their Headquarters.

The Maine People Are Making the Finest Display for the Man of Their Choice—Hon. C. W. Fairchild, of Indiana, Selected Temporary Chairman.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—St. Louis now looks like a convention city. It has hung out its bunting in tasteful profusion to bid welcome to the big republican gathering. A little slow in starting the demonstration, it has landed it in good form at last.

All four of the leading candidates, McKinley, Reed, Morton and Allison, have their headquarters at the Southern hotel. McKinley's headquarters are designated by an allegorical representation of "Protection"—a marvelous work of art.

It represents in the foreground five female figures, fat and florid, one of them standing and holding aloft in one hand the stripes and starry shield, labelled "Protection," and holding in the other hand a naked sword, on which she leans. The other females are standing around in rather ungraceful attitudes, one of them appearing to be seated on a texan steer which looks as if it would like to get up on its feet, but was too heavily laden to do so. In the background of the picture is a wild prairie, with no sign of life or human habitation, so that it puzzles even an Ohio man to determine where the "protection" is meant to come in.

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE.

But in the Ohio headquarters on the first floor corridor, where Mr. Mark Hanna presides, there is a graceful array of festoons and flags and state shields, and every one of the big crowd of visitors constantly passing in and out is made welcome to a McKinley badge.

While it appears to be conceded that McKinley has the votes, it is quite certain that the Maine people have made the finest display of the man of their choice. The Reed quarters are in the parlors of the Southern, a magnificent suite of rooms that have been elaborately decorated with tri-colored bunting, festooned from the chandeliers. Banners bearing the seal of the state and other flags have also been utilized. The most imposing effect, however, is made on the outside of the building. The edge of the porch over the main entrance bears the words, "Reed headquarters," and at each end "Reed" appears in incandescent electric lights, which at night throw a brilliant glare upon a banner suspended across the street containing a fairly good picture of the speaker and the inscription "For president, Thomas B. Reed."

The largest room on the parlor floor—at the head of the stairs, and at normal times the "Ladies Ordinary"—is the temple sacred to the governor of New York. The walls and ceilings are profusely draped with bunting, and at one end of the room, the serene and tranquil countenance of Mr. Morton—rejuvenated a decade or two by the artist—beams upon all who enter those precincts.

The era of brass bands and marching clubs has set in. About two o'clock Sunday afternoon a battalion of Reed men from Massachusetts, headed by a local band, marched down Fourth street to the north front of the Southern hotel and saluted the Reed flag. This first arrival was soon followed by a republican club from Alton, Ill., and it carried the McKinley banner. It was headed by its own band, in very handsome Hungarian uniform, and the men cheered lustily for their candidate as they passed the Southern.

SENATOR HENRY M. TELLER.

At the Planters hotel, two squares further up, Senator Quay is sole monarch of candidates. His pictures hang on the pillars and staircases, and a row of incandescent lamps kept constantly lighted show at the head of the staircase to the parlor floor, the name of "Matthew Stanley Quay." His headquarters there consist of a suite of rooms, in one of which stands on an easel a large, handsome oil painting of himself, the gilt molded frame of which is now wreathed in evergreens. In the same room a visitor's book is open at which the delegates and visitors from the Keystone state are requested to record their names. All these are unmistakable indications, if they do not amount to a positive announcement that Mr. Quay is to be considered as regularly entered on the list of runners on the presidential race course.

Members of the national committee are pluming themselves on their success of disposing of the immense mass of work thrust upon them, without holding a Sunday session, against which the conscientious scruples of several of the members strongly rebelled. True, it was nearly five o'clock Sunday morning before the last contest was disposed of and the tired and worn out committeemen crawled away to their neglected beds. But inasmuch as the session began at 10 a. m. Saturday, and was continued without adjournment and with only brief recesses, until all the cases had been disposed of. The extra hours after midnight are regarded as merely an extension of Saturday's legislative day and not as a violation of the Sabbath. The committee disposed in all of 168 cases, only remitting to the convention for settlement the delegates-at-large from Mississippi, Delaware and Texas and the delegates from two of the New York districts and one California district. The number of cases was so great, that, as one of the members of the committee frankly admitted, it was a physical impossibility to give all of them a careful judicial consideration; and many were decided almost at haphazard. A very large proportion of the cases will be fought over again before the committee on credentials when the convention is organized, and may delay the nomination until late in the week.

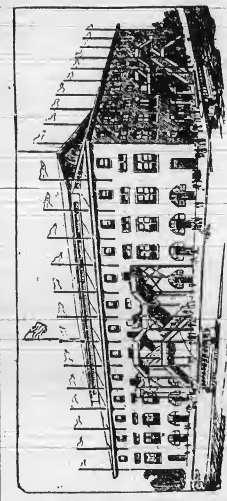
Ex-Judge J. Franklin Fort, one of the New Jersey delegates, who has been selected to present Hobart's name to the convention, is enthusiastic over the bright outlook for New Jersey's favorite son.

The supporters of the vice-presidential aspirations of Henry Clay Evans, of Tennessee, resumed their efforts in earnest Sunday afternoon. Every newly arriving delegate was taken in tow and plied with arguments concerning the expediency of placing a distinct representative of the south upon the ticket. Particular attention was paid to those delegates who had been previously approached in the interest of Gen. Hobart, of New Jersey, and to these the arguments was directed that New Jersey was safe for McKinley without any special inducements being offered to secure its support; that New York was in the same position; while that, on the other hand the nomination of Col. Evans would insure the vote of Tennessee in the electoral column for the republicans, and possibly Alabama also. The friends of the Tennessee candidate claimed Sunday afternoon that they were making very satisfactory progress.



THE CONVENTION HALL.

The national committee elected C. W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, as temporary chairman of the convention, and C. W. Johnson, of Minnesota, was selected as temporary secretary. Each committeeman will name an assistant. Rabbi Samuel Sale, of St. Louis, was chosen chaplain. Senator Thurston will be the permanent chairman.

Senator Henry M. Teller, of Colorado, the leader of the silver forces at the republican convention, spent the day very quietly at the residence of a friend in the suburbs of the city. He will not come into town until Monday by which time the Colorado delegation will have arrived, and the senator will have a conference with them at their headquarters in the Southern. The only instructions given by the Colorado convention to the delegates-at-large were simply to act in accordance with the views of Senator Teller. For that reason it is very desirous that this conference should be held at the earliest practical moment and after it is over Senator Teller will [illegible] discuss the general situation with the silver delegates from all the states. Until that is done he does not care to talk for publication except in the most general manner.

Mr. Hanna since coming to St. Louis has received letters and telegrams from all parts of the country from representative business men, giving him, frequently in detail, their ideas as to what the financial plank should be and how it should be expressed. These have been collected and arranged. The various platforms adopted by republican state conventions have also been carefully analyzed and considered. Since the arrival of prominent leaders Mr. Hanna has availed himself of the opportunity of personal converse with them on this important subject.

The result of all this is that early Snnday Mr. Hanna made a rough draft of the platform, which he has submitted to almost every prominent republican in St. Louis except the free silver men and Mr. Platt and those immediately connected with him in his fight against McKinley. This platform as far as the financial plank is concerned, is a combination of the sentiment expressed in the platforms of the New York and Indiana state conventions, but so framed as to omit the words "gold standard." It will declare for the "existing standard," and strongly condemn the free coinage of silver. This financial plank will be preceded (if Mr. Hanna's programme goes through), by a strong and vigorous declaration for a protective tariff and reciprocity, coupled with a brief history of tariff legislation and the disastrous effects upon the country of the Wilson bill, with its attending depletion of the revenue and its constantly growing deficit.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION GAVEL AND ITS INSCRIPTIONS.

Mr. Fairbanks, of Indiana, who will be the temporary chairman of the convention, was with Mr. Hanna the greater part of the day, and among his visitors were Mr. Depew and Mr. Bliss, of New York, Mr. Quay, of Pennsylvania, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, and very many others. Of all the prominent leaders in St. Louis, Platt alone was conspicuous by his absence, but it is understood that he was made cognizant of the purport of the proposed financial plank by others who discussed it with Mr. Hanna.

While it is true that many of the eastern delegates preferred a declaration outright for gold, not one criticised the proposition submitted to them as having a "straddle," or considered it other than as a gold standard platform diplomatically expressed. One well-known New Yorker who is identified with the moneyed interests of that city, stated to Mr. Hanna that the plank was strong, even if it did omit the word "gold." He argued that to use the words "gold standard" would be misleading to the people at large.

Gov. Hastings, of Pennsylvania, and his party arrived Saturday.

There continues to be much gossip respecting the adoption of a gold standard plank by the McKinley men without any substantial basis of fact beyond the incident mentioned in these dispatches of Mr. Hanna taking under consideration the suggested Kohlsaat modification of the Indiana platform.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, who it is thought may be made chairman of the committee on resolutions, is expected to reach here Saturday, and upon his arrival it is possible that something more definite than the prevailing rumors may be arrived at as to the probable financial trend of the platform. The discussion of the matter in Mr. Hanna's room, which lasted all Friday afternoon, was renewed after the arrival of ex-Gov. Charles Foster, of Ohio, whose experience as secretary of the treasury under Harrison, gave weight to his views.

A CONFIDENTIAL CHAT.

Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, who arrived in St. Louis Saturday morning, makes public the following telegram from Gov. Morton, declining in advance the nomination for the vice presidency:

"RHINE CLIFF, N. Y., June 15.—To Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, St. Louis, Mo.: Please announce that I stated to you before you left New York that I would not under any circumstances accept a nomination for vice president.

"LEVI P. MORTON."

WALLING TESTIFIES.

Tells the Story of His Acquaintance With Jackson and Pearl Bryan.

Judge Helm Excludes the Evidence of Chief of Police Deitsch and Reporter Anthony as to Admissions Made to Them by Walling, in Conversing.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 9.—Monday marked a turning in the Walling trial. The defense began the introduction of its evidence. Judge Helm ruled out all the evidence given by Col. Deitsch and Reporter Ed Anthony as to conversations had with Alonzo Walling.

A little woman in black sat in the courtroom patiently waiting for two o'clock. She was the prisoner's mother, and she had come to hear him tell his story—a story which she will believe if all the world doubt. Her face was pale and wrinkled. Dark glasses hid her eyes and shut out the glare of the electric lights overhead.

When the prisoner entered he sat down and then, leaning over to his mother's chair, kissed her.

With Mrs. Walling was her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Clint Walling, a good-looking young woman, and Mrs. Shepherd, wife of the attorney.

The prisoner, Walling, took the stand in his own defense Monday afternoon. "I am 20 years old," he said in answer to the question which Col. Washington asked.

He told of his family, saying that his home was in Hamilton. He had once lived in Greenfield, Ind. He attended dental college in Indianapolis a year ago. Did not know Jackson there. We were in the same class; I saw him there, but we were not companions.

On Wednesday I met Pearl Bryan at Fourth and Elm and said that Jackson would see her later. I went to Wallingford's saloon that evening to keep an engagement with Jackson, who went out of there with some young lady. On Thursday I was at the college in the afternoon; eat supper with Jackson at seven o'clock. He asked me to go to the post office and meet Pearl Bryan.

"I saw her but did not speak to her.

"I was with Albion that night at the Atlantic Garden and registered at Heider's hotel about two o'clock in the morning.

"I went there because I did not want to stay with Jackson. I had become suspicious of him."

"I was at the college Friday morning, but did not see Scott Jackson. In the afternoon I drew three or four teeth and made one amalgam filling."

(Col. Washington had the record of this filling and introduced it as evidence.)

The state objected.

Witness said he went to the college Wednesday morning and at noon took lunch with Jackson. In the afternoon he went to Fourth and Elm to meet Pearl Bryan. Told her Jackson could not meet her until four o'clock. He met Jackson per request in Wallingford's saloon in the afternoon; was playing cards when Jackson came into the rear entrance. He came to the front room and ordered two drinks. Jackson and a young woman left the saloon; Walling followed them down to Longworth street; didn't know who the girl was. Walling then went to his room on Ninth street and went to bed. "Jackson came in late, and I heard him muttering to himself. He said: 'You're a beaut.' I did not pay any attention to him. He did not seem to be talking to me, and I did not pay any attention to him."

On Thursday evening Walling met Jackson in Heider's. He asked the witness to meet Pearl at the post office. He passed by and saw her standing in the corridor, but did not speak to her; then went to the Dennison house. Only saw Pearl Bryan once to speak to her. First knew of Pearl the last week in January. Jackson told the witness of his trouble with the girl Thursday night. He went to the barber shop and stayed with Albion until the shop closed at 9 o'clock; was with him until two o'clock, at different places; then went to Heider's to spend the night; went there because he did not want to stay with Jackson; from what he said, was suspicious of him.

Friday morning Walling says he went to the college as usual, but did not see Scott Jackson. After dinner he went back to the college and attended the clinic held there. He had three patients that afternoon, pulling three or four teeth and making one amalgam filling.

After supper Walling went to the dental college to see Mr. Hackleman, who was a student there. I wanted to get into the dissection class, and he was going to help me. They had a subject for dissection at the college that night. Stayed there with Hackleman until 7:30 o'clock, and then went walking until nine o'clock.

After that went to the McNevin house and was with Albion in his room a while. He wrote a letter for Albion and took it to the post office. After he came back they played poker until 12 o'clock.

The witness swore that he had never seen George Jackson before he was taken to the jail; that he did not know Chester Mullen and had never hired a vehicle from him; that he had never been in Bellevue, on College street or in Hayden's restaurant.

The witness said that Scott Jackson told him one day in January that he had a girl in trouble at Greencastle. He said he would bring her here and poison her or else he would cut up her body and dispose of it in manholes. He did not believe he was in earnest. He asked Walling to help him perform a criminal operation. Said he would help him every way he could. Witness did not get a room for Jackson or have anything to do with the case.

The next subject was the disposal of Pearl Bryan's clothes. Walling said that on Saturday afternoon he went to the room and Scott Jackson was there. He seemed to have just finished rolling up three bundles which were on the bed.

"Jackson gave me one of them and he took the others. 'Come on,' he said, and I followed him out of the door. That was all he said then. He told me on the street that he wanted me to get rid of the bundles. I did not know then what it was. I know now. It contained Scott Jackson's pants. I put the package in the locker so I could get it again if Jackson ever wanted it."

Witness says he never wore the pants and did not then know about the murder of Pearl Bryan. He first learned Pearl was dead about six o'clock Saturday evening at the supper table. He learned it from the papers. Was not positive at that time that it was Pearl.

On cross-examination witness said he went to the depot to meet Pearl out of friendship for Jackson. At that time he intended to perform an operation. Witness became suspicious of Jackson from what he said Thursday evening—that he wanted him to talk to the girl while he went to the room to get some things.

Col. Nelson got the witness to swear that he had roomed and ate for months with Scott Jackson and yet suddenly became suspicious on Thursday.

Witness swore he did not kill Miss Bryan; neither did he know who did. Did not tell Deitsch, Crim and others that he knew Jackson killed her. He also denied the testimony of Sarah Seither, that he was on the Licking pike before the murder; of Dr. Foertmeyer, John Foster, Miss Holmes, who saw him in Bellevue; of Pinkard, who saw him on College street; of William Tegeler, who saw him with Pearl Bryan at Elm and Baker alley on the Thursday before the murder; of Watchman Kinney, of the Grand Central depot, who saw Walling and Pearl Bryan in the station on Friday afternoon; of Allen Johnson and Wallingford that he was in the latter's saloon with Jackson and Pearl Bryan on the night of the murder, and entered a cab with them; of W. C. Martin and Charles Rogers, who said he stopped at Heider's hotel on Saturday morning at three o'clock; of Geo Jackson, who swears that he drove to Ft. Thomas.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 10.—The strike of the attorneys in the Walling trial has been declared off. The demand for "shorter hours at the same wages" was of no avail, and the lawyers resumed work at the usual hour Tuesday morning.

The state's lawyers took offense Monday night when Judge Helm announced that he would hold court in the mornings until 12:30 o'clock and in the afternoons until 5:30 o'clock. [illegible] refused to ask another question of Walling when the hour of adjournment was reached Monday night.

The court said that the examination of the witness must be conclusive before court adjourned. Thereupon the state's lawyers went on a strike. As the state would not proceed, Judge Helm himself finished the examination of the witness, and after a question or two by Col. Washington, court adjourned.

Tuesday, when court opened, Judge Helm refused to allow Walling to go on the stand, and an exception was taken by Col. Lockhart. The witnesses examined Tuesday were mostly as to the good character of Alonzo Walling and as to the position of the dead girl's body when found.

Several expert physicians were called by the defense and testified that they believed Pearl Bryan was dead when the head was severed.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 11.—Col. Washington is very ill, and it is doubtful if he will be able to again appear on behalf of his client. Col. Crawford will assist Mr. Shepherd, and there will be no delay.

Evidence was introduced Wednesday endeavoring to overthrow Coachman Jackson's story.

Conductor Ben McGraw, of the Queen & Crescent, said that he was in the Grand Central station on the Friday afternoon of the murder. Watchman Kinney, of the station, pointed out a young man and young woman who were in the lower waiting-room. The girl seemed to be in distress. McGraw swore that to the best of his knowledge the man with the girl was not Alonzo Walling.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 12.—The trial of Alonzo Walling for the murder of Pearl Bryan, which was resumed in the Campbell county circuit court Thursday morning, is in its closing days. The defense hopes to rest its case some time Friday.

Dr. W. H. Crane, of Cincinnati, the physician who examined the stomach of Pearl Bryan, was the first witness called. He testified to finding positive traces of cocaine in the stomach, and thought that there must have been enough of the drug taken by the person whose stomach he examined to have caused her death.

Frank Brannan, a barber in the same shop in which Albion worked on Sixth street, said that he was positive Jackson had his beard shaved off Friday morning, January 31. He said he was Fred Albion's roommate on the Friday in question and that Albion came to bed about one o'clock in the morning and remained there until morning.

A number of deposition were read attacking the character of Coachman Jackson as to truth and veracity.

Col. Washington, with great difficulty, was able to be in court Thursday, took the stand, and was questioned by his colleague, Col. Shepherd. The colonel told of his conversation with Mrs. Ware, the tollgate keeper, and testified that she said she knew nothing of what transpired after 11 o'clock on the night of the 31st of January. Col. Washington also told of the positive manner in which Attorney Root maintained that he saw Jackson, Walling and Pearl Bryan in Hayden's restaurant.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 13.—Friday the defense in the Walling murder trial introduced a few witnesses, and then rested its case. Few people attend the trial. Neither the defense nor the prosecution has let any competent testimony that will tend to clear away the mystery of the murder of Pearl Bryan get away. Their ammunition has all been fired off, and instead of the roaring sound of real, destructive missiles, the learned counsels for both the defense and prosecution are contenting themselves with firing off insignificant fizzles, while a slim, but impatient audience looks on in anxious but bored expectation. The prosecution will next introduce rebutal testimony and the case will probably go to the jury early next week.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 15.—The prosecution and defense in the trial of Alonzo Walling for the murder of Pearl Brynn have virtually concluded. But one more witness is to be introduced. He is Mr. Allan Andrews, and his testimony is more to vindicate an attorney in the case than defensive of Walling. The prosecution Saturday concluded its adduction of rebuttal evidence, and the defense its sur-rebuttal testimony. Instructions will be given the jury Monday, and will be exactly the same as were given the Jackson jury, except that the name of Alonzo Walling will be substituted for that of Scott Jackson.

FATAL FIRE.

An Explosion of Oil in the Basement of a Bakery Causes an Ugly Blaze.

PITTSBURGH, June 13.—At 2:30 o'clock Friday morning a barrel of oil in the basement of a bakery owned by Kubugunde Garische, at No. 83 Spring Garden avenue, Allegheny, exploded with a frightful report and scattered flames in every direction. Several persons were sleeping in the second floor of the building but before they could escape the structure was enveloped in flames. Mrs. Garische, aged 74 years, leaped from a window, striking squarely on her head on the stone pavement and was killed instantly. The firemen made a rush into the building and lying on the floor found Mr. Garische unconscious from heat and smoke. A grandchild aged five years, was found dead in his crib. Lottie, aged twelve years, was badly burned about the head and hands, and will probably die. Mrs. Garische, jr. escaped by aid of the firemen, with slight injuries. Two other occupants of the house were also rescued by the firemen.

The bakers were working in the basement but at a distance from the scene of the explosion. The cause has not yet been ascertained.

MASKED MEN

Attempt to Hold Up a B. & O. Train—They Became Frightened and Decamped.

HUNTINGTON DEPOT, W. Va., June 13.—Forty miles east of Charleston, at Cotton Hill, on the C. & O. road, masked men attempted to hold up the Washington & Cincinnati express train at midnight. They boarded the train at Thurmond and crawled over the tender of the engine into the cab. With revolvers drawn the engineer was forced to stop the train, and he was commanded to cut loose the express car.

This was done, but by this time all the passengers were awakened and the lights were extinguished. After ten minutes the bandits became frightened and escaped to the mountains.

MONTGOMERY, W. Va., June 12.—Jack Maynard, of Seary, W. Va., and L. M. Martin and George F. Stringer, of Richmond, Va., were arrested later near the scene of the C. & O. hold-up and are in jail here.

California Murderer Executed.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—John Craig was hanged in Folsom prison at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Craig murdered his wife, her father and mother, and nearly killed young Hunter, his brother-in-law, at Los Angeles, about two years ago. The crime had been long premeditated. Craig's wife was obliged to leave him on account of his quarrelsome temper.

A FEATHER bed on which they were sleeping saved the lives of two women at Bonne Terre, Md. Lightning struck the house, hit the bed, set the shuck mattress in a blaze, but the feathers diverted the electricity from the women.

THREE DROWNED.

During a Storm a Boat Capsizes in the Delaware River and the Occupants Are Thrown Into the Water.

GLOUCESTER CITY, N. J., June 15.—Early Sunday morning during a severe storm a row boat containing five persons capsized in the Delaware river off here and three of the occupants were drowned. The dead: Mrs. Hannah Richter, Mrs. Kate McCne, John Brewer.

Besides the three drowned the boat contained John McCue and Wm. Richter, husbands of the two women. Mrs. Richter sang in a concert hall here and her husband rowed her nightly across the river to their home in Philadelphia. In some way the boat containing the party overturned Sunday morning and in the swift current and heavy sea that was on Brewer and the woman could not hold on to the boat and were swept to their deaths. Richter and McCue, after a desperate struggle, were carried ashore on the upturned boat. Richter and his wife were only married last Tuesday.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 15.—A northeast storm of unusual severity started in about 10 o'clock Saturday night, and before it had spent its fury did tens of thousands of dollars' worth of damage along the coast and inland. All night long the wind howled and blew with the velocity of a hurricane. Trees were uprooted and their branches torn off, signs were wrecked, awnings blown down and other damage sustained that littered the streets with miscellaneous articles. The fishing interests suffered a loss estimated at $40,000.

At Long Branch the principal damage was done to the iron pier. The outer guard piling were all torn up and washed on the beach.

Between Galilee and North Long Branch many pound nets were completely destroyed. This is the largest fishing section along the coast. No boats were run to the pier or the docks along the south shore of the Asbury river on account of the storm.

Atlantic Highlands many small craft were washed up on the beach and wrecked.

Sea Bright escaped with but little loss. South of Asbury Park the damage was also light. At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon the storm subsided.

DOW LAW.

The Liquor Dealers Preparing to Test Its Constitutionality.

COLUMBUS, O., June 15.—The recent decision by Attorney General Monnett, in which he holds that all wholesale dealers in malt or spiritous liquors sending traveling representatives over the state to solicit orders for their goods would be compelled to take out a license in each county visited by the agent, has caused a great deal of comment among dealers.

The members of the State Liquor league have determined to fight the matter and test the constitutionality of the Dow liquor law. A meeting of a large number of the members of the association was held here Saturday, when the course referred to above was determined upon. Circulars have been sent to the members of the league throughout the state, apprising them of the course decided upon, and what further action is had in the matter will depend upon the outcome of a suit to be tried at Cleveland the coming week, in which the constitutionality of the Dow law is involved. If the case is decided against the liquor men it will be carried.

FIVE TO ONE.

That is the Way it Stands in Indiana Between Silver and Gold.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 15.—Reports received at the headquarters of the free silver democrats Sunday show that there have now been one-third of the delegates to the democratic state convention selected, and of these not more than one-fourth are for sound money. The county of Spencer is the only one that has instructed for the gold standard, but a number of townships which selected delegates as such, have not made the question an issue, and some sound money men have been chosen on the state delegation. The managers estimate that of the 500 delegates already selected less than 100 will support the gold standard or men for nominations who are supposed to lean thereto.

PRESS SEATS AT CHICAGO.

Two Thousand Applications Made and Only Four Hundred Seats.

LOGANSPORT, June 15.—The Hon. S. P. Sherin, secretary of the national democratic committee, said that there were 2,000 applications now on file for seats in the section reserved for the newspaper men at the democratic convention, while there were but 400 seats provided. He said further that there were many of the leading metropolitan papers which had not yet made application for seats, and which would undoubtedly wish them. In the latter part of May he sent out word that all applications for seats must be filed not later than June 15, and Friday night said that no applications would be regarded which are received later than that date.

Firebugs' Bad Work.

MASSILLON, O., June 15.—C. O. Olson's foundry and machine works were totally destroyed by fire at noon Sunday. It was undoubtedly fired by incendiaries. There has been no fire in the works since Friday, and the back door had been forced open. The loss is estimated at $15,000. The insurance will amount to $9,000 or more.

Louisville Distillery Burned.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 15.—Warehouse A, of the White Mills Distilling Co., in the southwestern portion of the city, was destroyed by fire at 6:10 o'clock Sunday morning, entailing a loss of about $125,000. Seven thousand and three hundred barrels of whisky were burned. Five thousand and six hundred barrels belonged to the W. S. Hardin estate and the rest to Hoffheimer Bros., of Cincinnati, owners of the distillery. The loss is fully covered by insurance. Val Schwab, a fireman, was fatally burned by falling in a stream of blazing whiskey.

Bullittsville.

June 11.—Mrs. Carrie Gaines has gone to Georgetown to attend the commencement exercises of the college, her beautiful and accomplished daughter, Miss Zayda, being one of the graduates.

Mrs. Lillie Garr, nee Watts, and Mrs. Dasie Kendall, of Louisville are visiting at the home of Mrs. Garr's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wash Watts, near here.

Miss Ettie Graves has returned from Lebanon, Ohio, where she has been attending school.

Dr. Hays and Temp Graves attended the Walling trial at Newport, one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stephens visited their son at Delhi, O., last Sunday.

Miss Sadie Kirtley spent last week at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Gaines. Miss Sadie is slowly recovering the use of her arm.

The festival given by the Ladie's Aid Society, of Bullittsburg, was a success, not only financially but in every respect. The most delightful cake and berries were served, after which the entertainment, under the able management of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Riley, was enjoyed by the large crowd present.

The entertainment consisted of music, dialogues, recitations, &c. The first on the program was a song, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," beautifully rendered by some of our best singers—piano accompaniment by Mrs E. L. Riley. Then followed a dialogue, "A Kiss in the Dark," in which Mr. Estin Snyder played the part of the jealous husband, and from the energetic way in which he played it, one would think he had had experience in jealousy. Miss Fannie Willis, as wife of the Jealous Husband, performed her part perfectly. Miss Bertha Gaines was a success as a Serving Maid. Mr. Garnett Riley did his part well as the "Handsome Lover." "The Dutchman's Ghost," was played by Misses Bernice Duncan, Lacy Kirtley, Elmo and Liman Gaines, Edgar Graves and Elbert Riley. The parts were all acted well. Mr. Riley as the Dutchman, was very funny.

No part of the exercises was enjoyed more than the song, "Joe and Neil," sung by Master Duncan Riley.

Everybody seemed to have a good time.

Bellevue.

Fine rain on the evening of the 13th.

Noah and Charley Clore, of Burlington, were the guests of their Uncle Jonas, last Saturday.

Riley & Co., of Patriot, Ind., have moved into this vicinity and are hauling logs to the landing.

The society will meet with Miss Olga McWethy next month.

DEL VECHO.

Quite an enjoyable time was passed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Jarrell, last Sunday. It was in commemoration of the birthdays of Mr. Jarrell and Miss Carrie Craig, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., a relative of Mrs. Jarrell. There were present uncle Noah Sebree, Willie Sebree, and family, of Woolper creek, Mrs. Emma Pease and children, Miss Oda Ryle, of Gunpowder, Tom Hynes and family and John Sebree and family. To say that ample justice was done the heavy laden table of rich things, which Mrs. Jarrell certainly knows how to prepare, would be putting it very mildly. After dinner was over most of the party visited the cattle pens and distillery. Taken all in all, the event was one that will long be remembered with pleasure.

Mr. Kittle and 3 of his boys took in the excursion on the Nisbett to the city, Sunday.

Another of Mr Levi Spencer's horses died a few days ago.

A fine rain fell here late Saturday evening, which will almost insure the potato crop.

Gunpowder.

Farmers have commenced plowing their corn the fourth time.

B. A. Floyd was elected to succeed W. P. Utz as school trustee in district No. 9.

Aaron Rouse and family were visiting at Hartwell, Ohio, last week.

Croquet playing is all the go around here. A croquet party and ice cream supper were given by Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn, last Saturday evening. After several very interesting games of croquet were played, a sumptuous supper was served. Although James Brown was considered the champion, no one was afraid to play against him. Among those present were Misses Susie Rouse, Dora Baker, Linnie Tanner, Eva Tanner, Hattie Tanner, Ettie, Lillie and Laura Beemon, Hattie Rouse, Eunie Borders, Rosa Garnett, Ruth Lentz and Kittie and Ethel Tanner. The gentleman were: Messrs. Frank Rouse, M. I. Baker, Wm. Kirkpatrick, H. C. Beemon, J. C. Beemon, A. G. Beemon, Irvin Tanner, W. N. Long, Ed Borders Prof. S. J. Orem, Jeff Rouse, W. R. Rouse, Jas. Brown, S. L. Rouse, Geo. Collins, Arthur, Harry, and Sam Tanner, and Rev. H. Max Lentz. Every one had a splendid time and the party ended with many thanks to the host and hostess for the very pleasant occasion.

The Children's day services were held at Hopeful church last Sunday, and as large a crowd has not been seen there for many a day. Those in the primary grade did especially well, as also did Misses Kittie Tanner, Eva Smith and Ella Tanner. The two anthems sang by the choir were splendid. E. O. Rouse, who sang the solo in one of the anthems, was complimented very highly. E. K. Tanner, our worthy superintendent deserves much praise for the success of the day. The collection for the benefit of Tresster's Orphans' Home, amounted to $15.

People should procrastinate their political arguments and croquet playing, and attend the Sunday school which meets every Sunday afternoon.

Hurrah for J. C. S. Blackburn for President.

Limaburg.

A very large crowd witnessed the Childrens's day exercises at Hopeful, last Sunday. A great many persons could not get into the house.

It is rumored that there will be a wedding at Hebron soon.

The Harvest Home directors did not complete the business before the meeting last Saturday.

The Hebron base ball team is now organized and ready for business.

Richwood.

John Delhanty has a new buggy.

Wade Bedinger has returned from Richmond, where he has been attending college.

S. W. Adams, of Chicago, was here Monday. He intends to locate at Erlanger.

Fred Botts, of Cincinnati, was the guest of Jerry Carpenter, Sunday.

The school teachers of this county will have an excellent opportunity to attend the K. E. A. at Newport, June 23, 24 and 25.

Fibtown.

We had a nice rain Saturday evening.

There is going to be a heavy peach crop in this vicinity.

Some of the people of this place attended the commencement of the Aurora High school Thursday night, and reported it grand.

Claud W. Holton sold a fine saddle and driving horse last week.

Jackie Jarrell has sold his tobacco. He received a good price for it.

Rosebush parties are all the go here. They are equal to a 10 cent show.

Erlanger.

Col. L. F. Kramer and bride, of Oklahoma City, were the guests of Capt. Harry Baker, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Graves and daughter, Elizabeth, are the guests of W. A. Price and family.

The Williams' Eastern Star Lodge held their meeting at the Masonic Hall Saturday afternoon and appointed a committee on by-laws. The next meeting will be on the 4th Saturday at 3 pm.

J. E. Tanner has organized a class of 30 members into a singing chorus.

H. B. Buckner, who recently moved to Lake Providence, La., where he invested in a cotton plantation of 5,500 acres, returned here on a visit to his folks, and is the guest of his father.

The Erlanger Building Association declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. at their last meeting. This shows that the association in these hard times is in a prosperous condition.

Several bicycle clubs made runs to this place last Sunday, and one of the clubs is now camping on the Straub place.

Verona.

Boone Roberts is spending his vacation at home.

Robt. L. Ransom was looking unusually happy a few days since. On enquiry it was learned that a strange little girl had arrived at his home on the 5th of June.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson on the 4th inst., a fine girl.

Claud Powers, who got his leg broken by a falling horse, is going on crutches.

Rev. Lafe Johnson will lecture on his Arizona trip, here, Saturday, June 20th.

Samuel W. Simpson, of Virginia city, Ill., spent a few days with his cousin, Natt Hind, returning home Thursday to see that fine, young boy of which he is the very proud father.

J. R. Johnson is preparing a beautiful croquet grounds in this vicinity and will have some scientific games played during the summer.

We learn that the little 13 years old boy of J. Spilliman, who disappeared last Monday a week, has not been found yet, although there is a reward offered for his recovery.

Misses Kate and Eva Roberts, Willie Sturgeon and John Roberts, were pleasantly entertained by Misses Effa and Ida Craven, last Sunday.

Some of our farmers have commenced laying by their corn. Tobacco is growing nicely.

Harry Adams and Miss Kate Hance were married at the bride's parents on the 10th inst. We wish them a bright, happy and prosperous life.

We don't hear anything adout the RECORDER picnic of late.

Robert Stone is the accommodating clerk at Geo. Johnson's store.

Farmers are not grumbling for rain at present.

Big Bone.

Harry Adams went down to Gallatin county, one day last week, and took Rev. S. M. Adams along with him, and on arriving at the hospitable home of William Hance, they alighted, and soon a wedding was transacted between Harry and Miss Katie Hance, Rev. Sam Adams officiating. Harry then excused his Uncle Doc. and he and his pretty little bride visited Cincinnati and returned to their cozy home at Hamilton Thursday. We hope for Harry and wife a long, happy and prosperous life.

The road overseers of the Big Bone and Beaver voting precincts could not find a prettier time than the present in which to repair the roads under their care, and people who pay taxes to have said roads kept in good condition are going to see that it is used to the best advantage; hence let us all join in and have good roads.

Geo. L. Miller and James M. Baker were in Cincinnati, one day last week, and report things in a business way, dull.

"Fiddler" Curtley is running a bread wagon from Rising Sun to the Springs each Saturday, much to the pleasure of the good housewives along his route.

R. L. Willis is preparing to build him an elegant residence on his farm near the Springs. We love to see the spirit of enterprise manifesting itself in our midst.

Miss Maud Moore's school closed last Friday, and after a nice treat of cake and lemonade, the little scholars bid their kind teacher a sweet good-bye for another season.

Miss India Hance, who has been attending college at Lexington during the past winter and spring, has returned home.

Mr. Boone Rice, of Cincinnati, is visiting relatives here.

There is a fine prospect for a good crop in this vicinity, consequently the farmers are happy.

If anybody thinks there is a scarcity of circulating medium, let him visit the national convention at St. Louis and keep his eyes open.

T. G. Graves will be glad to have you not forget his picnic next Saturday at the Harvest Home grounds.

Three colored applicants for teachers' certificates were examined last Friday and Saturday. Two of them passed.

R. A. Brady had a good horse to get frightened and run through a barbed wire fence, almost ruining the animal.

The advertisement of the K. P. picnic and barbecue shows for itself in this issue. It will be the event of the season.

The K. P. Lodge at this place had nearly an all-night session at its last meeting. The lodge appears to be on a boom.

Mr. Legrand Gaines, supervisor of roads, has done considerable good work on the street that leads to the Petersburg pike.

Don't forget that next Saturday is the sale of the personal property of the late John S. Huey, of the Locust Grove neighborhood.

The Boone County Sunday School Convention will meet with the Hopeful Church to-morrow (Thursday.) It will be a very interesting meeting.

Very few acres of wheat in this county, will be worth harvesting. The meadows are very short, the recent rains coming too late to give the grass length.

Noah Tanner, of the Union neighborhood, was in town early Monday morning. He reported a nice rain in his neighborhood Saturday evening. To supply the deficit in his grass crop, Mr. Tanner has sowed both corn and millet.

If the people living along the route from Burlington to Hathaway hear spoken the words "spin, spin," and can not discover the speaker, they can set it down that it is O. J. Ryle passing on a bike; and further, should they discover a mass of mangled flesh and crushed bones lying by the road side they can with reasonable certainty call that Oscar. We say this because of a biking exhibition he gave in Burlington last Sunday.

Miss Laura A Baker, daughter of Tom Baker, of Union, was tried before Judge Stephens and a jury, Monday, and adjudged a lunatic, and she will be taken to the Asylum at Lakeland, to which institution she has been sent five times in the last 18 years. Her insanity is supposed to result from a spell of typhoid fever she had 18 or 19 years ago. She has never been detained at the Asylum as long as a year at a time before being discharged.

H. W. Smith, proprietor of the Burlington Hotel, S. E. Corner Third and Broadway, Cincinnati, writes us: "I wish you would say to the good people of Boone county through your paper, that they can take the electric car at the Grand Central Depot and ride to the door of The Burlington Hotel. The best hotel in the city for the money. They can also take the car at Anderson's Ferry, get a transfer to the 3d St., line and ride direct to The Burlington."

It may be of interest to our teachers to know that a contract made before the first day of July, to teach a school is illegal, as the trustees elected cannot begin his official duty until July 1st, and then a contract to teach cannot be made except at a meeting of the board called for that purpose of which each member of the board had due notice. If teachers would avoid future trouble they had better make a note of these points, and also see when a contract is made that it is duly recorded in the record books as the law requires.

The following is the new toll law which is now in effect: "The managers of any turnpike, gravel or plank road shall permit ministers of the gospel to travel on the road without pay when on ministerial duty, and shall charge no toll against scholars going to or from school, or to persons who are going to or from any place of religious worship, and funeral processions going to or from any place of burial; but if any other person than scholars going to or from school, and the driver shall occupy a vehicle, full toll shall be charged and collected for such vehicle."

Mr. D. E. Lawell, of Rabbit Hash, showed us, last Thursday, the diploma and bronze medal awarded his wool exhibited at the World's Fair, he having received them only a few days before. The medal and blue ribbon were awarded the fleece taken from a Southdown buck. The diploma was awarded the fleece of an Oxford-Southdown ewe. This fleece was tested, the result being set out in the diploma, and was as follows, the first figures showing the highest number of points possible, while the second show the points scored by Mr. Lawell's wool: Density, 16—14.1; evenness and fullness, 20—18.9; brightness and softness, 14—13.5; strength and elasticity, 14—12.8; evenness of quality of wool all over, 20—19.5. It will be seen by this that Mr. Lawell's wool scored 94.3 points out of a possible 100, and all wool growers recognize this as about as close to perfection as it is possible to reach. Mr. Lawell is a great fancier of sheep, and is justly proud of the excellent stock he produces.

The Sunday School Convention.

A Delightful Day, a Large Attendance and a Pleasant Time.

The District Sunday school convention held with the Burlington Baptist church, last Thursday, was attended by a very large crowd. The convention was called to order by T. Z. Roberts, temporary chairman, and Rev. N. J. Hoover was elected permanent chairman, and Dr. B. A. Dulaney, secretary.

The exercises were opened by a song service, which was followed by an excellent welcome address by D. E. Castleman, superintendent of the Burlington school.

On motion of Rev. T. L. Utz all visiting brethren and Sunday-school workers were welcomed. Songs were sung by the Burlington, Bullittsville and Bellevue schools in the order named, each school acquitting itself with credit. The singing was followed by praise invocation by Rev. O. M. Huey.

D. M. Snyder's essay on the "Qualifications of Superintendent, his Duty and Work," was a well prepared paper which opened up a fruitful field for the discussion, which was participated in by Messrs. Huey, Utz, McGlasson and Roberts. Nathan Walton, Elbert Riley, Mrs. Riley and Mrs. Grant, of the Bullittsburg school, sang a quarette that was one of the pleasing features of the morning session.

This was followed by songs by the Bellevue and Burlington schools.

Rev. T. L. Utz was programmed for an essay on "The Effect of Teaching Children the Bible," but in its stead he made a very nice talk, suggesting many points that were considered in the general discussion by Revs. Huey and Hoover, J. C. Revill and N. S. Walton.

Songs by the Bellevue and Burlington schools and prayer by Dr. J. A. Kirtley closed the morning session.

A song by the congregation and prayer by T. Z. Roberts opened the afternoon session, and then came another round of music, an Anthem by Burlington; Solo by Bullittsburg; Quartet by Bellevue.

Instead of an essay Dr. J. A. Kirtley made one of his characteristic talks, his subject being, "Work Undone." This brought out the most extended discussion of the day, the participants being Messrs. B. F. McGlasson, Gilbert Estes, John Cropper, Thos. Roberts, D. E. Castleman, John Stephens, J. C. Revill and Rev. O. M. Huey.

Each of the schools that was represented by a choir delighted the congregation with another song, after which Dr. B. A. Dulaney read a carefully prepared essay on "Responsibility of the Church." The programme was then completed by J. C. Revill's essay that was replete with information in regard to the Sunday School, its institution and progress.

On motion of Rev. O. M. Huey the people of Burlington were extended a vote of thanks for their kind and hospitable treatment, and the convention then adjourned, having spent a most pleasant and profitable day.

NOTES.

The seating capacity of the church was not sufficient to accommodate the crowd.

A more delightful day could not have been selected for the occasion.

At noon an abundant dinner was served from the tables that had been erected for the occasion, in the church yard.

There was no drag in the exercises at any time during the day, and they were enjoyed by all present.

Among those present and assisting in the singing were Mr. and Mrs. George French, of Indiana. About thirty years ago Mr. French taught singing school at the old Middle Creek Church, in the neighborhood of which he wooed and won his wife, who was Miss Annie Roberts. Mr. and Mrs. French sang with the Bellevue school.

The next District Convention will be held with the Union church some time in July, probably.

In the matter of music each school acquitted itself most creditably, and as to which one excelled deponeth sayeth not.

The crowd that attended the convention was much larger than was anticipated, but it was taken care of in a manner entirely satisfactory to all concerned.

In the preparation of the dinner, the good cooks who contributed to that feature of the convention, almost excelled themselves, and the tables looked like they had been prepared for a wedding feast.

PERSONAL MENTION.

J. J. Rucker, of Constance, was among the visitors to town Monday.

Atty. A. G. Winston, of Hebron, was in town one day last week.

J. B. Berkshire and Harry Blythe spent last Sunday with uncle Alfred Cason.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Riley, of Bullittsville, were guests at J. M. Lassing's, Sunday.

Mont Slayback got one of his fingers pretty badly hurt while playing ball last Saturday.

Gordon McKim arrived home from Hanover, Indiana, last Thursday to spend the vacation.

Leonard Sandford, of Covington, spent a day or two last week here on the scenes of his childhood.

H. G. Blanton, of Erlanger; and Miss Orie Conner of Cincinnati, were visiting at O. P. Conner's, last Sunday.

Miss Mary Lassing, of Union, returned home last Saturday, after a visit of several days with her brother at this place.

Dr. Tilley and wife, of Petersburg, were in town one day last week, the doctor having business with the county court.

Leslie Clutterbuck came out from the city Saturday evening and remained over Sunday.

Messrs. Willie Daverraluville and Phil Jenkins, of Newport, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Ryle, last Saturday and Sunday.

Messrs. Henry Childress and Tom Tupman, of Erlanger, came over Saturday to witness the game between the Franklins and the Burlington team.

The Y. M. C. A. summer school meets June 19 to 28. Round trip tickets via the Queen & Crescent on sale from all points June 18 to 20, good until June 30 to return.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Walton.

Mr. Lum Snow is expected to live but a short time.

L. V. Menefee has moved his family to Falmouth, where he expects to engage in the butcher business.

J. H. Rogers is clerking for Dean & Richards.

The Christian church has changed its pastor again. Rev. Bryney will be succeeded by Rev. Moss.

Miss Lou Allen, of Petersburg, is visiting friends here.

Bro. Johnson delivered quite an interesting lecture here recently. Subject—"His trip to Arizona."

Reuben Conner, of Richwood, was in town Saturday, and you should have heard him and Dr. Gaines discussing free silver and Blackburn.

Miss Mattie Whitson, of Union, was visiting friends here last week.

Miss Ella Duncan, of Burlington, is visiting her brother at this place.

One lady of our town has a bicyle.

The Walton Shooting Club met last Friday afternoon, and on account of rain there were only six members present. After the chairman called the club to order, B. F. Metcalf, Dr. Gaines and W. H. Metcalf were chosen on one side, and on the other side were J. H. Craven, C. C. Metcalf and Dr. Adams. After shooting two rounds the former gentlemen proved to be the victors by 170 points.

Rev. Moss occupied the pulpit at the Christian church Sunday morning and evening for the first time as pastor. He had the pleasure of standing before a very large audience.

There is a prospect of our having a large reservoir near the town, the L. & N. people having staked off, at Mackoy's run, several acres in extent with a draw 16 feet high. For the benefit of the town it is very important, as the water would be piped to the short line depot in the center of the place, where, in case of a fire, it would be very available.

Constable John Watson, living a mile north of here, met with two misfortunes last week, on Thursday one of his horses broke the leg of his valuable saddle mare, which had to be killed, and on Friday morning an unoccupied house was burned to the ground. It is supposed that tramps were in it, and accidentally the fire originated from them.

Mrs. Byron L. Northcut, who was expected to die for several days, has passed the dangerous crisis, and is now in a fair way to complete recovery.

Mr. Lum Snow has been very ill for some time and it is a matter of regret that he is no better at present.

The citizens of Walton witnessed one of the most charming scenes here in our town, last Thursday evening, that has occured here for some time. Men who had not been known to do any manual labor for years, were out with their shovels, spades, hoes and any tool that might be useful to arrange a level spot of ground between Dr. Jones' and Mrs. Rouse's for the purpose of playing croquet. G. W. Ransler superintended the work, assisted by John T. Johnson. Some of the men became very disorderly, i. e. they became idle and would drift to the shade. The following are the names who participated in the work: Dr. Jones, Lum Metcalf, Ran Rouse, Bud Stephens, Bruce Roberts, Raymond McHatton, B. C. Metcalf, Walter Rouse, Everet Stephens, Taylor McBee. After the work was completed, they all discussed the question as to who did the most work and it was decided in favor of Lum Metcalf.

C. C. Roberts and deputy visited our town one day last week.

Our old friend, Joe Reed, has built an addition to Stamler's shop, and is busily engaged painting buggies in first class style.

Bro. Hill filled his regular appointment here Sunday, the first time for quite a while, he being kept at home on account of sickness in his family.

Richard Finnell, who had been a sufferer of that dreadful disease, consumption, died on the 3rd. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Johnson. Remains placed in Baptist cemetery.

Union.

Miss Lulie Gaines, after several weeks visit here, returned home last week.

Miss Bertha Baker entertained quite a number of her friends, one day last week.

Mrs. Ira Percival, of Walton, spent last week with her father, T. J. Baker.

Miss Johnson and brother, of Indiana, were the guests of Miss Lulu Williams, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Garrison are visiting in Gallatin county.

Sam, blue is very becoming, you should always wear it.

Mr. Graddy, of Bullittsville, took dinner at the Galt House, Sunday,

Mrs. Ed Ryle, of Erlanger, is with Mrs. R. Clements, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Huey and daughter are visiting Rev. H. N. Quizenberry, of Hamilton, Ohio.

The good Baptists of Union who attended the Sunday School Convention at Burlington were delighted with the hospitable reception given them. They say that D. E. Castleman can make a good speech and Nathan Walton too, especially in a "Convention."

The Union boys are still celebrating that "silver victory" and they say they intend to keep it up until a silver Congressman and silver president rounds out the list. What has become of all the gold bugs? I have been trying very hard for a week—even longer, to find one, even one. They have changed color mighty fast. They say, "I was for silver all the time, why I am a staunch silver man."

Half rates will be in effect via the Queen and Crescent Route to the great National Convention at Chicago and St. Louis. These tickets will have liberal limits and will entitle passengers to ride on fast vestibuled limited trains without extra charge. No other line can give you such train service. Be sure and have your ticket read via the Queen & Crescent.

Before Mr. Harri Fisk's card was published last week, one of the expressions it contained should have been modified, and to that we are sure he would not have objected when the cause for which was explained to him; and because it was not done an apology is due from us to the Florence correspondent.

Base Ball.

The Franklin ball team of Cincinnati, visited this place again last Saturday and were given a nest of goose eggs.

The only thing that is bothering the Republican convention at St. Louis is the money plank.

A. B. Rouse has returned from college at Hanover, having graduated and is now ready to enter upon the realities of life. We hope he may realize, in the fullest, his fondest expectations.

Several neighborhoods in this county need rain badly.

We will give you the proceedings of the Republican convention next week.

There is some tobacco land in this county yet to set.

Cut your dogfennel before it ripens.

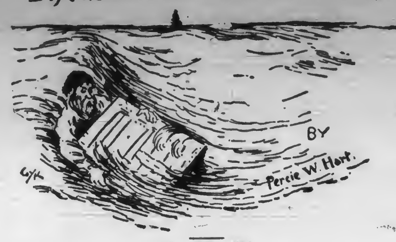
The Secret of the S.S. Good Fortune



[COPYRIGHT. 1896.]

The tale I have to tell is so strange, so weird, and so unprovable, that I must preface it by stating that what I say herewith is absolutely all I know about the subject. It will be noted by the reader that on several important points my descriptions are vague and uncertain —but quite enough is known, and told, to refute the assertion that "there is nothing new under the sun."

In the month of June, 1894, I walked the streets of New York without a cent of money in my possession, and without a friend in the whole city. Like many another poor unfortunate, it seemed impossible for me to find a niche in the world of labor into which I could fit. I subsisted entirely by the charity of a few good Samaritans, and became more and more despondent as the uneventful days dragged by.

On a certain sunny afternoon I managed to elude the vigilance of the watchman at a steamship dock, and walking out to the end of the pier esconced myself among some bales of hemp, and there went to sleep. It was night when I awoke, but as there was no one to wait for my homecoming, nor indeed, any home for me to go to, it made no particular difference.

Still, I was, as you may say, all slept out, and there were several hours to dispose of before I could have an opportunity of passing out of the gate unperceived. So, with noiseless footsteps, I wandered around among the piles of merchandise until my attention was attracted by the cabin lights of a steamship that lay at one side of the pier.

With the exception of these lights, which were, of course, situated well aft, no sign of life was visible; and although I stood alongside the gangway between the wharf and the spardeck, I could distinguish no watch or bar to prevent me from going aboard. Inspired by a feeling of curiosity as the carelessness which left such a splendid opening for the dock thieves, that I knew fairly swarmed hereabouts, to make way with portable property, I walked cautiously up the steep incline, and as I started to swing off the end to the deck, almost walked over the recumbent figure of a man. Before I could recover my startled faculties and retrace my footsteps, the sleeping sentinel gave a groan, and I had barely time to drop down behind a water-butt before he arose to his feet and commenced pacing backwards and forwards. Here was a predicament indeed! I knew that if discovered I should be handed over to the ignorant police justice who would be utterly unmoved by any statement that I might make. Unless I could get off the ship at some other point, or the sentry should once more relax his vigilance, I should probably be caught and sent to jail as a vagrant, if not an actual thief. It may well be imagined how I cursed the idle curiosity that had led me to place myself in such an unenviable position.

THE FOREMOST INTRUDER DREW A REVOLVER AND SHOT HIM THROUGH THE HEART.

But repining was worse than useless. I determined to reconnoitre the possibilities of escape; and watching my chance when the sentry's back was turned, I stole away in the darkness. The steamship, as near as I could judge, was of the typical "tramp" class, with spardeck cut away between the masts for the better accommodation of cattle shipments. In the forward cut I stumbled over a quantity of stores, which had seemingly not been taken care of by the steward—hams, barrels of flour, canned goods and as nearly as I could judge, several hundred loaves of bread were piled up in a disorderly manner. Much as I marveled at this further exhibition of lack of discipline, it was certainly a lucky find for me,, and I made no delay in breaking off a loaf of the bread and munched it greedily.

The greater part of the cut was occupied by a large number of packing cases, and while making my way over them I was surprised to discover by the hollow sounds given forth that they were seemingly empty. Just about the middle of the cut I almost fell into a small space which had been left between two cases in stowing; and in recovering my balance I wrenched loose one of the boards on the side. Again my idle curiosity proved my curse, for without any set purpose I lowered myself down and crawled inside the huge box through my improvised opening. To my great astonishment, I found nothing but a layer of stone ballast in the bottom; and I reasoned that doubtless the other cases were similarly equipped, and that the weight was to keep the boxes from being shifted in a heavy sea; although, as they were closely wedged in between the bulwarks this extra precaution seemed supurfluous

Then in an instant I had made the resolve that was to cause me so much danger and anxiety in the next few weeks—but unfortunately no hint or suspicion came to me in time.

Here, I reasoned, was an opportunity especially sent by Providence for my benefit. Unless betrayed by some unforeseen complication, I could lie unsuspected in this snug hiding-place until the vessel was far from land. The steward's stores would supply the necessary food; and, best of all, some distant land would probably afford me opportunities that my own country seemed to deny me. I would become a stowaway, brave the captain's wrath, and strive to win his sympathy by working industriously at any work that he might set me at. To will was to act; and with scarcely a pang of conscience I conveyed ten loaves of bread and a few cans of beef and tongue to my hiding-place; then, piling the rocks around the sides, found myself in comfortable if not luxurious quarters. Perhaps I might have changed my mind had time been given me, but as soon as morning broke the steamer was cast loose from the dock, and in a few hours the increased motion plainly told that we were out on the ocean.

I determined to bide my time for a day or two, and, although the confinement was irksome, I braved it out until the sun had risen and set four times. My reasons for this procrastination are not easily explained, but an indefinable feeling of dread made me hesitate, and —as the sequel proved—saved my life. There were several things which I had noted from my hiding place that caused me to wonder. In the first place the Good Fortune (as I had ascertained the name of the steamship to be) carried a surprisingly large crew, although the majority of them were not visible until the second day out. And, for another thing, the strict discipline that I had always heretofore seen on shipboard was not maintained; for almost every evening was occupied in carousing, and I never heard the slightest protest from the captain or any of the officers of the deck. Finally the fragments of a conversation which I overheard between two of the sailors impressed me as being remarkable, to say the least.

"Last cruise, eh, Bill," said one.

"And I'm glad of it, too," growled his comrade.

"Well, so am I, to tell the truth. It is wonderful that we've never been suspected in a whole year."

"That's the skipper's skill—and I, for one, don't grudge him his half share, 'specially as he provided the vessel."

"Well, you and I have near eight thousand apiece, an' it'll be nearer ten when we quit. That's more than we'd make in a year at cattle-punching."

"But it's in such mean stuff. Earrings and watches are all right, but it won't be so easy to sell them."

"Melt down the solid and—" here the speaker walked away, and left me wondering, but still unsuspecting.

On the fifth day out I was apprised by the bustle around me that something of unusual interest was transpiring. To my great surprise I noticed that spars and ropes were scattered round the deck in seeming confusion, that the smokestack was partly taken down, that the boats were swung inboard and hidden under tarpaulins, and that the English flag was fastened to the main shrouds, union down. This, of course, I knew was a signal that the ship was in distress and required assistance; but when I noted that every man on board was equipped with two revolvers and a murderous-looking bowie knife, I felt sick at heart, and a mist came before my eyes.

Overpowered by fear, I kept well hidden in my packing box, but I will briefly narrate what happened as overheard by me from conversations during the next few days.

The good bark C. B. Jones, of Broxport, Me., bound from Buenos Ayres to Boston with a cargo of hides and tallow, sighted the steamer "Good Fortune," of Bournemouth, with flag of distress flying. As all the steamer's boats were gone, the first mate and four seamen took the long boat and rowed to the Good Fortune with the humane intention of relieving the signaled wants of the steamer, bringing a barrel of pork and a bag of biscuit. So weak, as it seemed, were the crew of the steamer that they could scarcely lend a hand to hoist the provisions aboard. After quite a long delay the long boat started to return, but Capt. Jones was astonished to see that the boat contained six others in addition to his own men. And as they neared the vessel he failed to distinguish the smiling, cheery face of his first mate. Before he could recover his presence of mind the men clambered up the sides, and as he advanced to speak with them the foremost intruder drew a revolver and shot him through the heart. The scanty crew eagerly threw up their hands in surrender, but after they were bound the cold-blooded monsters murdered them, as well as the captain's wife and child. A few hundred dollars in the captain's cabin, a few watches and a little money from the forecastle and some miscellaneous articles comprised the whole plunder, and the ship was scuttled and sunk. In due course she was announced as overdue and missing, as many another good ship has been before; but what a fiendish ingenuity was displayed in destroying the ship and her entire crew, so that not one should live to tell the tale. Some prizes, it seemed, netted them thousands, but in the majority of cases a dozen human lives were sacrificed for a mere trifle.

With my brain almost unhinged by the horror of being in the power of these demons, I lay long in a sort of stupor. When I came to my senses I found myself struggling in the water, with naught between my life and eternity but my packing box. It floated me bravely, however, and when the darkness had cleared away I was picked up by the Altania, of the Cunard line, and conveyed back to New York.

Whether the Good Fortune—lying name, as she herself was a lie—sunk in collision with a rock or iceberg, or whether she still ranges the seas unchecked, I know not; but drowning seems to me all too light a punishment for the wicked deeds of its crew.

AN AMERICAN GIRL.

A Bit of a Story Which Has the Merit of Truth.

Here's a bit of a story that comes from London and has the rare merit of truth. There was a certain young American girl in London who had come over with only the courage of youth and the point of a pen to keep the wolf away. She hadn't the easiest time in the world, let me tell you.

One day she presented herself at the office of an editor who had bought "stuff" of her. The great man was busy, but as she insisted on seeing him she was allowed to enter. She had a bundle of manuscript in her hand, and she begged the editor to read it at once. Oddly enough, he consented. It was a story.

It was a story about a young woman writer who purchased a typewriting machine on the installment plan. All went well till the final payment of one pound was due. She hadn't the money and couldn't get it. Twice the people who sold the machine gave her additional time. At her wit's end, the poor girl begged him to wait just two hours. She gave him something to read, and she wheedled him a little, and he offered to wait.

So she sat down at the machine and rattled off a pathetic story of her own struggles with fate and of her fruitless efforts to raise money to pay for the typewriter. When she finished she put on her bonnet and went to a newspaper office, sold the story and brought back the money in time to save the machine.

It was a prettily told story and a pathetic one.

"By Jove," said the editor, as he finished reading it. "I always said you could do fiction, but you never would. Come around next week, and I'll let you know whether we'll publish it."

The girl hesitated.

"If you please, sir," she said, "won't you decide now?"

"Why?" asked the editor, in surprise.

"Well," said the girl, "you see, the man who came after the typewriter is waiting for the money."—Chicago Record.

Times Change and We with Them.

"Da-a-arling," she said, and her head snuggled closer to his manly shoulder—"George da-a-arling, do you love me?"

"Helen," he cried, fervently, "I love you more than words can tell. Life seems all too short to spend in kissing you."

The weary cycle of the years rolled on. Spring came and went. Clark street was repaved and fell into decay. Aldermen went to Europe, and were replaced by others who in turn grew rich and went away. Again George and Helen stood together, this time in the grand hall of their suburban villa.

"George," she said, "don't you love me?"

"Of course I do, old girl," he said. "But it seems to me that life is too short to spend it kissing you."—Chicago Times.

Dick—They're putting up new ceilings at our house, and as I was going through one of the rooms a big piece came down and I suppose I caught some of the spatters.

FALLING STAR.

One of the First Magnitude That Beams for Evil or Good.

It Fades in the Dawn or Twinkles a Life's Close—Some Are Called Wormwood—Dr. Talmage's Study in Astronomy As Applied to Every Day Life.

Dr. Talmage chose for his text Sunday Rev. viii: 10-11: "There fell a great star from Heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers and upon the fountains of waters; and the name of the star is called Wormwood."

Many commentators, like Patrick and Lowth, Thomas Scott, Matthew Henry and Albert Barnes, agree in saying that the star Wormwood, mentioned in Revelation, was Attila, king of the Huns. He was so called because he was brilliant as a star, and, like wormwood, he embittered everything he touched. We have studied the Star of Bethlehem and the Morning Star of the Revelation and the Star of Peace, but my present subject calls us to gaze at the star Wormwood, and my theme might be called Brilliant Bitterness.

A more extraordinary character history does not furnish than this man thus referred to, Attila, the king of the Huns. One day a wounded heifer came limping along through the fields, and the herdsman followed its bloody track on the grass to see where the heifer was wounded, and went on back further and further until he came to a sword fast in the earth, the point downward, as though it had dropped from the heavens, and against the edge of this sword the heifer had been cut. The herdsman pulled up that sword and presented it to Attila. Attila said that sword must have dropped from the heavens from the grasp of the god Mars, and its being given to him meant that Attila should conquor and govern the whole earth. Other mighty men have been delighted at being called liberators or the merciful or the good, but Attila called himself, and demanded that others call him the scourge of God.

At the head of 700,000 troops mounted on Cappadocian horses, he swept everything from the Adriatic to the Black sea. He put his iron heel on Macedonia and Greece and Thrace. He made Milan and Pavia and Padua and Verona beg for mercy, which he bestowed not. The Byzantine castles, to meet his ruinous levy, put up at auction massive silver tables and vases of solid gold. A city captured by him, the inhabitants were brought out and put into three classes; the first class, those who could bear arms, who must immediately enlist under Attila or be butchered; the second class, the beautiful women, who were made captives to the Huns; the third class, the aged men and women, who were robbed of everything and let go back to the city to pay a heavy tax.

It was a common saying that the grass never grew again where the hoof of Attila's horse had trod. His armies reddened the waters of the Seine and Moselle and the Rhine with carnage, and fought on the Catalonian plains the fiercest battle since the world stood—300,000 dead left on the field! On and on, until all those who could not oppose him with arms lay prostrate on their faces in prayer, and a cloud of dust seen in the distance a bishop cried: "It is the aid of God!" and all the people took up the cry, "It is the aid of God!" As the cloud of dust was blown aside the banners of re-enforcing armies marched in to help against Attila, the scourge of God. The most unimportant occurrences he used as a supernatural resource, and after three months of failure to capture the city of Aquilela, and his army had given up the siege, the flight of a stork and her young from the tower of the city was taken by him as a sign that he was to capture the city and his army, inspired by the same occurrence, resumed the seige and took the walls at a point from which the stork had emerged. So brilliant was the conqueror in attire that his enemies could not look at him, but shaded their eyes or turned their heads.

Slain on the evening of his marriage by his bride, Ildico, who was hired for the assassination, his followers bewailed him not with tears, but with blood, cutting themselves with knives and lances. He was put into three coffins—the first of iron, the second of silver and the third of gold. He was buried by night, and into his grave were poured the most valuable coin and precious stones, amounting to the wealth of a kingdom. The grave diggers and all those who assisted at the burial were massacred, so that it would never be known where so much wealth was entombed. The Roman conquered the Roman empire. He was right in calling himself a scourge, but instead of being the scourge of God he was the scourge of hell. Because of his brilliance and bitterness the commentators were right in believing him to be the star Wormwood. As the regions he devastated were parts most opulent with fountains and streams and rivers, you see how graphic is this reference in Revelation: "There fell a great star from Heaven, burning, as it were, a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers and upon the fountains of waters, and the name of the star is called Wormwood."

Have you ever thought how many embittered lives there are all about us, misanthropic, morbid, acrid, saturnine? The European plant from which wormwood is extracted, artemisia absinthium, is a perennial plant, and all the year round it is ready to exude its oil. And in many human lives there is a perennial distillation of acrid experiences. Yea, there are some whose whole work is to shed a baleful influence on others. There are Attilas of the home or Attilas of the social circle or Attilas of the church or Attilas of the state, and one-third of the waters of all the world, if not two-thirds the waters, are poisoned by the falling of the star Wormwood. It is not complimentary to human nature that most men, as soon as they get great power, become overbearing. The more power men have the better, if their power be used for good. The less power men have the better, if they use it for evil.

Birds circle round and round and round before they swoop upon that which they are aiming at. And if my discourse so far has been swinging round and round, this moment it drops straight on your heart and asks the question: "Is your life a benediction to others, or an embitterment, a blessing or a curse, a balsam or wormwood?"

Some of you, I know, are morning stars, and you are making the dawning life of your children bright with gracious influences, and you are beaming upon all the opening enterprises of philanthropic and Christian endeavor, and you are heralds of that day of Gospelization which will yet flood all the mountains and valleys of our sin-cursed earth. Hail, morning star! Keep on shining with encouragement and Christian hope!

Some of you are evening stars, and you are cheering the last days of old people, and though a cloud sometimes comes over you through the querulousness or unreasonableness of your old father and mother, it is only for a moment, and the star soon comes out clear again and is seen from all the balconies of the neighborhood. The old people will forgive your occasional shortcomings, for they themselves several times lost their patience when you were young, and slapped you when you did not deserve it. Hail, evening star! Hang on the darkening sky your diamond coronet.

But are any of you the star Wormwood? Do you scold and growl from the thrones paternal or maternal? Are your children everlastingly pecked at? Are you always crying "Hush!" to the merry voices and swift feet, and their laughter, which occasionally trickles through at wrong times, and is suppressed by them until they can hold it no longer, and all the brrriers burst into unlimited guffaw and cachinnation, as in high weather the water has trickled through a slight opening in the mill-dam, but afterward makes wider and wider breach until it carries all before it with irresistible freshet? Do not be too much offended at the noise your children now make. It will be still enough when one of them is dead. Then you would give your right hand to hear one shout from their silent voices, or one step from the still foot. You will not any of you have to wait very long before your house is stiller than you want it. Alas, that there are so many homes not known to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, where children are put on the limits, and whacked and cuffed and ear-pulled, and senselessly called to order, and answered sharp and suppressed, until it is a wonder that under such process they do not all turn out Modoc's and Nana Sahibs!

What is your influence upon the neighborhood, the town or the city of your residence? I will suppose that you are a star of wit. What kind of rays do you shoot forth? Do you use that splendid faculty to irradiate the world or to rankle it? I bless all the apostolic colleges of humorists. The man that makes me laugh is my benefactor. I do not thank anybody to make me cry. I can do that without any assistance. We all cry enough and have enough to cry about. God bless all skilful punsters, all reparteeists, all propounders of ingenious conundrums, all those who mirthfully surprise us with unusual juxtaposition of words. Thomas Hood and Charles Lamb and Sidney Smith had a divine mission, and so have their successors in these times. They stir into the acid beverage of life the saccharine. They make the cup of earthly existence, which is sometimes stale, effervesce and bubble. They placate animosities. They foster longevity. They slay follies and absurdities which all the sermons of all the pulpits can not reach.

They have for examples Elijah, who made fun of the Baalites when they called down fire and it did not come, suggesting that their heathen god had gone hunting, or was off on a journey, or was asleep, and nothing but vociferation could wake him, saying: "Cry aloud for he is a god; either he is taking or pursuing or peradventure he sleepeth and must be awaked." They have an example in Christ, who, with healthful sarcasm, showed up the lying, hypocritical Pharisees by suggesting that such perfect people like themselves needed no improvements, saying: "The whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

But what use are you making of your wit? Is it besmirched with profanity and uncleanness? Do you employ it in amusements at physical defects for which the victims are not responsible? Are your powers of mimicry used to put religion in contempt? Is it a bunch of nettlesome invective? Is it a bolt of unjust scorn? Is it fun at others' misfortune? Is it glee at their disappointment and defeat? Is it bitterness put drop by drop into a cup? Is it like the squeezing of Artemisia Absinthium into a draught already distastefully pungent? Then you are the star wormwood. Yours is the fun of a rattlesnake trying how well it can sting. It is the fun of a hawk trying how quickly it can strike out the eye of a dove.

But I will change this, and suppose you are a star of Worldly Prosperity. Then you have large opportunity. You can encourage that artist by buying his pictures. You can improve the fields, the stables, the highway, by introducing higher style of fowl, and horse, and cow, and sheep. You can bless the world with pomological achievements in the orchards. You can advance arboriculture and arrest this deathful iconoclasm of the American forests. You can put a piece of sculpture into the niche of that public academy. You can endow a college. You can stocking a thousand bare feet from the winter frost. You can build a church. You can put a missionary of Christ on that foreign shore. You can help ransom a world. A rich man with his heart right—can you tell how much good a James Lenox, or a George Peabody, or a Peter Cooper, or a William E. Dodge, did while living, or is doing now that he is dead? There is not a city, town or neighborhood that has not glorious specimens of consecrated wealth.

But suppose you grind the face of the poor. Suppose, when a man's wages are due, you make him wait for them because he can not help himself. Suppose that, because his family is sick and he has had extra expenses, he should politely ask you to raise his wages for this year, and you roughly tell him if he wants a better place to go and get it. Suppose by your manner you act as though he were nothing and you were everything. Suppose you are selfish, and overbearing and arrogant. Your first name ought to be Attila and your last name Attila, because you are the star Wormwood, and you have embittered one-third, if not three-thirds, of the waters that roll past your employes, and operatives, and dependents, and associates; and the long line of carriages which the undertaker orders for your occasion, in order to make the occasion respectable, will be filled with twice as many dry, tearless eyes as there are persons occupying them.

There is an erroneous idea abroad that there are only a few geniuses. There are millions of them; that is, men and women who have especial adaptation and quickness for some one thing. It may be great, it may be small. The circle may be like the circumference of the earth or no larger than a thimble. There are thousands of geniuses, and in some one thing you are a star. What kind of a star are you? You will be in this world but a few minutes. As compared with eternity, the stay of the longest life on earth is not more than a minute. What are we doing with that minute? Are we embittering the domestic or social or political fountains, or are we like Moses, who, when the Israelites in the wilderness complained that the water of Lake Marah were bitter and they could not drink them, cut off the branch of a certain tree and threw that branch into the water, and it became sweet and slaked the thirst of the suffering host? Are we with a branch of the Tree of Life sweetening all the brackish fountains that we can touch?

Dear Lord, send us all out on that mission. All around us embittered lives—embittered by persecution, embittered by hypercriticism, embittered by poverty, embittered by pain, embittered by injustice, embittered by sin. Why not go forth and sweeten them by smile, by inspiring words, by benefactions, by hearty counsel, by prayer, by Gospelized behavior! Let us remember that if we are wormwood to others we are wormwood to ourselves, and our life will be bitter and our eternty bitterer. The Gospel of Christ is the only sweetening power that is sufficient. It sweetens the disposition. It sweetens manners, it sweetens life, it sweetens mysterious Providences. It sweetens afflictions. It sweetens death. It sweetens everything. I have heard people ask in social company: "If you could have three wishes gratified, what would your three wishes be?" If I could have three wishes met this morning I tell you what they would be. First: more of the grace of God. Second: more of the grace of God. Third: more of the grace of God. In the dooryard of my brother John, missionary in Amoy, China, there was a tree called the emperor tree, the two characteristics of which are that it always grows higher than its surroundings, and its leaves take the form of a crown. If this emperor-tree be planted by a rosebush, it grows a little higher than the bush, and spreads out above it a crown. If it be planted by the side of another tree, it grows a little higher than that tree and spreads above it a crown. Would God that this religion of Christ, a more wonderful emperor-tree, might overshadow all your lives? Are you lowly in ambition and circumstance, putting over you its crown; are you high in talent and position, putting over you its crown. Oh, for more of the saccharine in our lives and less of the wormwood!

What is true of individuals is true of nations. God sets them up to revolve as stars, but they may fall wormwood.

Tyre—the atmosphere of the desert, fragrant with spices, coming in caravans to her fairs; all seas cleft into foam by the keels of her laden merchantmen; her markets rich with horses and camels from Togarmah, her bazaars filled with upholstery from Dedan, with emerald and coral and agate from Syria, with wines from Helbon, with embroidered work from Ashur and Chilmad. Where now the gleam of her towers, where the roar of her chariots, where the masts of her ships? Let the fishermen who dry their nets where once she stood, let the sea that rushes upon the barrenness where once she challenged the admiration of all nations, let the barbarians who set their rude tents where once her palaces glittered, answer the question. She was a star, but by her own sin turned to wormwood and has fallen.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW has a notable collection of presents that were given to him by celebrated people—gifts from the Prince of Wales, Queen Victoria, Bismarck and notables of the world. "When I go away in the summer," said Mr. Depew, "I like to meet celebrated people. I do not care in what profession they may be, so long as they are distinguished by something. And, of course, a mutual interchange of presents, as mementoes of our acquaintance, is the most natural thing in the world. I think I have gifts from every country in the world and from all the celebrated people."

TO LESSEN if not to abolish altogether the noise of a train when crossing a bridge a German engineer has devised a scheme which has proved surprisingly successful. He puts a decking of planks between the cross girders, and on the planks a double layer of felt is placed. In this way any noise is prevented.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

ABOUT HARD ROADS.

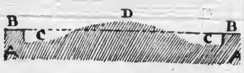
Their Advantages to Farmers Set Forth by A. G. Judd, of Dixon, Ill.

A hard road is a road that is by artificial means prepared with a surface of much more permanent and solid material than that of its natural state. The kind of material used for such artificial surface may differ with the locality or the use for which the road is intended.

The abundance of stone and gravel in a county makes it possible to build excellent roads at a reasonably moderate cost, and the probabilities are that they are the only materials that we shall use in constructing any of the country roads of Lee county.

Brick, wooden blocks, asphaltum, etc., are used for building roads in cities, but I shall not describe the various modes of construction, as I understand that they are not included in this subject.

Let us realize at once that different compositions of soil require different treatment in order to make equally serviceable roads. In this county we have practically three classes of soil to be recognized: First, black loam; second, yellow clay; third, sandy loam. There are certain conditions, such as springy, quicksand or mucky places, liable to occur in localities where any of these three kinds of soil exist, so I shall treat drainage in a few general remarks, and trust that the "road commissioners" of each district will be intelligent enough to determine what to do in their particular locality.



A to A, entire width of right of way; B and B, such a distance as commissioners think necessary to protect from fence or hedge; C C, ditches at side of road, and used for summer, or dirt, road; D, stone or gravel.

The prime requistie of every good road is a thoroughly underdrained roadbed. When this is not naturally so by reason of a porous subsoil, it may be economy to put in a line of tile, from two to four feet below the center of the road, of sufficient size to carry off the ground water. There may be spots where it is best to put in a line of tile on each side of the road.

Ditches along the sides to carry off the surface water are among the necessary elements of a good road. These ditches should be of a uniform grade, so as to carry the water on as nearly level grade as possible, in order to prevent washing, and connect with proper culverts or natural watercourses. Great care should be used in making these side ditches not to get them deep enough to be dangerous in turning off from the main road either day or night.

Now let us turn our attention to the construction of a stone road upon our ordinary soil that does not need tile drainage; and that we may better understand each other, I will draw an illustration:

Knowing how much money is to be spent each year, determine the cost per rod, and proceed to prepare the number of rods by grading up the natural dirt to the desired height and width. It is desirable to have roads around the main cities for at least two miles in each direction not less than 18 or 20 feet in width, as they are used so much by the city folks for pleasure riding that it is necessary to have them wide enough for safety at all times.

After the grading is finished, it is best, but not the common practice, to put on the heavy roller and roll the bed thoroughly, that it will better keep its shape and support the heavy loads, for it is not the stone filling that supports the load, but the dirt beneath supports both the stone roof and the loads upon its surface as well; therefore, too much pains cannot be taken with the dirt bed.

Stone or gravel, when properly broken and packed together, forms an impermeable roof that water cannot enter. One of the great mistakes of road-making is in not rolling the dirt bed, but simply grading up and putting the stone on. The result is that the loads pass over the center first, the stones settle into and pack down the dirt in the center, and in a short time a road that when built had the properly curved surface becomes almost or quite level, thus allowing water to stand on its surface until evaporation and absorption remove it. While thus standing, it has a tendency to soften certain grades of stone, and allows them to wear away faster, thus producing ruts and requiring needless repairs.

An 18-foot road requires six cubic yards of crushed stone and one and one-half cubic yards of dressing to the rod, making it nine inches deep in center and tapering to four or five inches on the sides. After the entire number of rods is properly stoned and dressed, furrows should be plowed along each side, throwing the dirt against the edge of the stone, thus forming a bank to keep it in place, and prevent its working off and becoming scattered over the adjoining portions of the roadway.

Then when the road is properly trimmed and leveled off to a nice grade to the outer edge of the ditch, take the big roller, commence at this outer edge, roll lengthwise, going around in a land, and finishing up in the center. Thus you put an improved roof on the ditch and greatly lessen its liability to wash. You pack the outside stone first, and that binds and holds the center stones in place, thus preserving the elevated line of the road and putting it in best shape to bear the surface traffic.

Such a road, where stone is reasonably convenient, can be built by contract for about $5.25 per rod, and where part or all of the hauling is done by volunteer work, the cost is greatly reduced. Gravel, not needing to be crushed, and being so much easier to be taken from the pit, can be put on for half, or even less than half, the cost of stone.

For clay roads, the only material difference is that the side ditches must be deeper and the cone higher.

For sandy roads make the side ditches more shallow and the cone wider and flatter. They should be built, if possible, when the sand is wet, for then the grains of sand have a tendency to stick together and will pack some, so that by getting the stone or gravel roof on while in that condition, the road is much more apt to retain its shape and durability.

Sometimes there are narrow or "single-track" hard roads built at one side of the main road, intended to be used only during the muddy season. There is no material difference in the manner of building stone roads of different widths.

Narrow tracks are usually adopted only by districts remote from cities and available material. They are frequently covered with drifted snow, the hedges or fences shading them so that the snow does not get off until late, thus rendering them unavailable when most needed.

McAdam and Telford are the names usually applied to stone roads. The former is the one generally adopted in this country, and consists of breaking the stone fine.

Pieces larger than an egg should be broken smaller. It is desirable to have them range from a hickory nut to an egg in size.

Telford's system consists in putting larger stones on the bottom and covering with small ones.

Such roads insure level or easy grades and equal serviceability at all seasons of the year. While costing some more at the outset, the expense of maintenance is so much smaller that after completion they become actual income-producers. They increase the comfort of travel; they place the markets of the great grain centers at the farmer's door every day of the year, thus enabling him to take advantage of the temporary rise in the markets occasioned by muddy roads during certain portions of the year. They bring the farmer's family in touch with nearly all city privileges; enable them to attend lectures, and various evening entertainments.

A good road raises the value of the adjoining lands anywhere from ten to four hundred per cent. Land that could not find a buyer at $50 per acre has sold for $200 an acre after a stone road was built, thus making it available to city markets as a truck farm.

The farmer is bending his every energy to the solving of the problem of cheaper production. When we consider the facilities for quick and economical transportation furnished by railroads and steamships to almost every part of the world, it behooves us to put ourselves in direct contact with the push and energy of commercial activity, and save our share of the $550,000,000 lost yearly on account of bad roads.—Farm and Fireside.

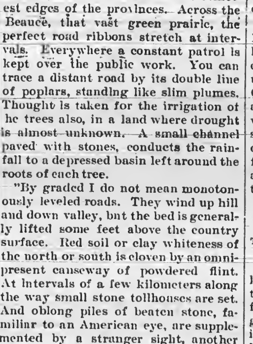
THE ROADS OF FRANCE.

How They Impressed Mary H. Catherwood, the Famous Novelist.

Mary H. Catherwood gives a good account of French highways in the Atlantic Monthly: "Toll free, streets macadamized and almost dustless, so graded and smoothed that one horse can draw a mountainous van along their surface, and maintained to the remotest edges of the provinces. Across the Beauce, that vast green prairie, the perfect road ribbons stretch at intervals. Everywhere a constant patrol is kept over the public work. You can trace a distant road by its double line of poplars, standing like slim plumes. Thought is taken for the irrigation of the trees also, in a land where drought is almost unknown. A small channel paved with stones, conducts the rainfall to a depressed basin left around the roots of each tree.

"By graded I do not mean monotonously leveled roads. They wind up hill and down valley, but the bed is generally lifted some feet above the country surface. Red soil or clay whiteness of the north or south is cloven by an omnipresent causeway of powdered flint. At intervals of a few kilometers along the way small stone tollhouses are set. And oblong piles of beaten stone, familiar to an American eye, are supplemented by a stranger sight, another proof of the thrift of France—cords of black blocks, pressed from coal waste, stand ready to feed the steam roller."

THE POWER OF MONEY.



Yes, "money makes the mare go,"
When properly applied
In building roads whereon with loads
She can get right up and glide.
—Good Roads.

Preparation of Spraying Mixtures.

Too much care cannot be taken in preparing any mixture to be used on trees and fruits. If not properly prepared, injury may follow. Bordeaux mixture, if properly prepared, will not injure the apple; but if there is not a sufficient amount of lime, injury may follow, causing the surface of the apple to be russeted and rough. Also damage to foliage may result. Other fruits are susceptible to injury from the mixture, if carelessly prepared. This mixture is one of the most effective fungicides in use.

BETTER CREMATED.

What Became of the Bodies of Many Noted Men.

The tombs of the Pharaohs have been rifled and the mummy of Seti I. is now to be seen in the Boulak museum still preserved; the ashes of a Caesar have come to light and the earrings of Aristotle's daughter have been found in her dust.

Thirty-six years after the death of Edward the Confessor his remains were disturbed in order to settle the vexed question of the incorruptibility of his flesh. The body was found in perfect preservation, the flesh white, the fingers flexible and the beard hoary and long.

William the Conqueror was refused burial and his coffin lay on the pavement until the payment of 60 shillings secured him a grave. Some 400 years later the coffin was opened by a bishop and the body was found entire. Before the coffin was again closed the bishop had a painting made of the body, but unluckily it was lost.

Henry I. died near Lyons and his remains were scattered, as often happened to the corpses of the great during the middle ages. His tongue, heart, eyes and brain were buried in Ste. Marie de Prato, the body sliced and powdered with salt, was wrapped in a bull's hide and carried to England and deposited in Reading abbey. Later at a time of trouble the remains were thrown out and scattered.

The heart of Richard Coeur de Leon was given to Rouen, which city, inclosing it in a leaden box, buried it near the high altar of the cathedral, surrounding it with silver balustrade. In 1842 the heart was exhumed entire, though withered all out of shape. To-day it is inclosed in a glass box in a museum at Rouen and is nothing but a pinch of dust.

James IV., of Scotland, who married a sister of Henry VIII., was found dead on Flodden field and not bured, as he was excommunicated. The body was embalmed and sent to a monastery, which was taken by the duke of Suffolk. The corpse, wrapped up in lead, was thrown into a lumber-room, and some workmen, for fun, cut off the head, one of their number carrying it home because of its sweet embalming spices. Finally he buried it.

Catherine Parr, the last wife of Henry VIII., was much troubled by inquisitive one after her death. The first time her coffin was opened, 234 years after her death, a square opening in the surrounding lead revealed her wrapped in six or seven grave cloths, entire. The year after the coffin was again disturbed and the corps was found greatly decayed, while a number of years later mere dust and bones were left.

The dispute over the whereabouts of the body of Charles I. was settled by the finding of his coffin. The head, nearly 200 years after decapitation, was entire, the skin and muscles preserved, the nose and one eye fallen in, but the oval face and pointed beard making recognition possible.

The daughter of Mr. Thomas More preserved until her death the decapitated head of her father and Sir Walter Raleigh's widow did a like service for him. Lord Chesterfield's skeleton was found reclining on a coverlet of white satin, with the head propped up on a cushion.

The tombs of French royalty at St. Denis were violated in 1793 and startling discoveries made. The lead of the coffin was melted for balls and the valuables removed. Pepin, the father of Charlemagne, was a mere pinch of ashes and scattered in a second; Louis XIII. was a well-preserved mummy; a black, shapeless lump was all that remained of Louis XIV.; Henri IV., who was carefully embalmed, preserved enough of a resemblance to his living self to awe the people.—Chicago News.

ALLIGATORS ARE COWARDLY.

They Will Not Attack Anything That Shows Fight.

"The cowardice of alligators is well known by the people who reside along the bayous which were at one time frequented by the saurians," said a gentleman from southwestern Louisiana. "A great many persons who only know of the alligator by reputation swallow without a qualm the stories which are so often told about the hair-breadth escapes and remarkable adventures with these reptiles. The truth is that they do not possess sufficient courage (the alligators, I mean) to attack a mouse, unless it was chained to the bank and couldn't show fight. I remember crossing a stream in the Vermilion country a number of years before the craze for alligator hides had struck the country. I entered a skiff, and when about half way over, my dog, which I had forgotten, came bounding after me, and leaping into the water, began to swim across after the boat. Almost immediately several alligators lying with the tips of their noses above the surface began to move after the dog, and soon came within a few feet of the animal. He realized that he was being chased, and proceeded to turn the tables by chasing them. He barked and turned to make for the 'gators, but they got out of his way. Well, the dog and the saurians kept this performance up until the former had crossed the stream. The alligators seemed to be afraid to come within biting distance, although it would have been impossible for the dog to have injured them. I have frequently swam after an alligator myself, and he would invariably turn tail and get out of sight in a hurry. Courage—they have no more than a goat."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Somewhat Suggestive.

It was Grandpa Aaron's 95th birthday, and one enthusiastic member of the family thought to add to the joyousness of the reunion and celebration by letting off a display of fireworks.

"I guess I'm much obliged," said the old man, "but I do hope this isn't any allusion to what I am coming to before many more years."—Indianapolis Journal.

MALAGA IN JULY.

The Old Spanish City Has Little to Offer the Sight-Seer.

It was July, and we had arrived at Malaga from Marseilles by water. The town lay white and shining under a barren amphitheater of mountains. Between it and the Vinuesa was a great stretch of hot, hazy, shimmering, sunlit water, over which little boats each with white awning up, pulled out to meet us. We had read in Mr. Hare's "Wanderings in Spain" of the extortion and shocking manners of Malaga's boatmen; the same story was in Murray, with an added warning to keep our temper. But we had no trouble.

Once we had landed, and on the open quay J—— had unstrapped and unlocked all our bags for a customs officer, who was too lazy to look into them; and at the Hotel Victoria the landlord had given us a large, clean, airy, brick-floored bedroom, for which he asked less than the guide-book told us to beat him down to; we were free without further delay or bother to make our plans and be off on the road at any moment we chose.

But first of all we went out to have a look at Malaga. Who was it said that sight-seeing is the art of disappointment? Surely we had not come all this way to the town of Hamet el Zegri, to walk through brand-new, wide streets, lined with big modern shops and clubs and cafes. The huge interior of the cathedral was unimpressive. The broken walls of the old Moorish fortress stood on the top of far too high a hill to be climbed in the staring sunshine of a July day. And even Murray could direct us to nothing else but a plain, bare church, where the banner of St. Ferdinand is said to hang, which we found fast shut; and an old Moorish arch, now neatly restored; and a river, dried up by the blazing sun of a tropical summer, with a railway track running down the middle of its bed, between groups of wooden shanties. We met women in black lace mantillas, or else in long, pointed shawls, a gay flower stuck in their hair, and men with clean-shaven faces, in low, broad-brimmed hats and wide red belts. We saw plenty of donkeys in bright, gaudy trappings, but this was all the costume. We ought to have known better than to expect more. Still, somehow, its absence added to the grayness of our first impression.—Elizabeth Robins Pennell, in Century.

Signs of the End of Time.

Many years ago there was printed in the city of Constantinople a queer Jewish "mystery book" called the "Zerubbabel." This book is great on prophecies and signs, one section of it being entirely devoted to the coming of the Messiah and the ten "signs" which shall precede that event.

The first is the appearance of the three apostle kings.

The second, a period of terrible heat. The third, a den of blood (see Joel II., 30). The fourth, a darkness which shall cover the earth for a period of 30 days.

Fifth—Rome shall be given universal power for nine months.

Sixth—A fall of "healing salve," or dew, which shall cure every ill of the pious Jews.

Seventh—The birth of Armillus, the anti-Christ, an awful monster who will be born of a marble statue in one of the churches in Rome.

Eighth—The blowing of the three blasts on the trumpet by the archangel, Michael (not Gabriel).

Ninth—the blowing of a second series of blasts by the same person.

Tenth—The ten tribes shall be led to Paradise, where they will celebrate the wedding feast of the Messiah.—St. Louis Republic.

Pill Clothes.

The good pill has a good coat. The pill coat serves two purposes; it protects the pill, enabling it to retain all its remedial value, and it disguises the taste for the palate. Some pill coats are too heavy; they will not dissolve in the stomach, and the pills they cover pass through the system as harmless as a bread pellet. Other coats are too light, and permit the speedy deterioration of the pill. After 30 years exposure, Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills have been found as effective as if just fresh from the laboratory. It's a good pill with a good coat. Ask your druggist for

[BY G. M. C.]

In taking up the Bond Issues it is better to give the views of the Secretary of the Treasury before his entrance into the hypnotie condition on gold monometallism.

In 1878, the Hon. Jno. G. Carlisle in a speech in the House, used the following extreme language: "The struggle now going on, can not,and ought not to cease until all the industrial interests of the country are fully and finally emancipated from the heartless domination of syndicates, stock exchanges and every great combination of money grabbers in this country and Europe. Let us, if we can do no better, pass bill after bill, embodying in each some one substantial provision for relief, and send them to the executive for his approval. If he withholds his signature and we are unable to secure the necessary vote here or eleswhere to enact them into laws, notwithstanding his veto, let us, as a last resort, suspend the rules and put them into the general appropriation bills, with the distinct understanding that if the people can get no relief the government can get no money?

Very soon after the repeal it was discovered that something more than the mere stoppage of the money supply was needed to bring the long hoped for prosperity. Wall Street set up a howl for bonds, claiming, that if issued, they would serve a double purpose, they would furnish an investment for idle capital, and stand as a basis for National Bank circulation. So from the money centers came the cry that bonds must be issued, and then would come "sure enough" prosperity. With an administration heartily in accordance with national bankers it was accomplished very easily.

In previous years the banks had furnished the most of the gold for export, but this they now refused to do. They set to work the "endless chain" to draw the gold from the treasury.

It had been declared for years by the gold advocates that it would be dangerous to let the gold reserve in the treasury fall below $100,000,000. But right after Mr. Cleveland's advent to power, in March, 1893, it dropped below that figure, and kept getting lower and lower until about the 1st of February, 1894, when it was down to about $65,000,000. Then $50,000,000 in bonds were issued for about $58,000,000 in gold, which was soon drawn out again; and in November, 1894, another issue of $50,000,000 bonds was made and realized about $58,000,000 in gold. The run upon the treasury continued and in little more than two months the reserve was down to $41,000,000. Then came the notorious "syndicate deal." Mr. Cleveland entered into a secret contract with Morgan Rothchilds and others, by which they were to take $62,000,000 in bonds at about 104½ in gold. At the same time the bonds were worth 117 in the market, and a little later they went up to 120. The syndicate, therefore, got the bonds for about $10,000,000 less than their market value. Then came the famous popular loan bill. Congress refused to past a bond bill. The reserve was getting low; the air was full of rumors of another "syndicate deal," popular indignation swelled the gale, and a call for popular subscriptions was made. Mr. Cleveland rushed into print to say that there had been no second agreement with the Morgan combine, but Morgan published a letter showing that he had been invited to consult with Cleveland and Carlisle, and that some sort of an arrangement was certainly contemplated, as a result of which he had formed a second syndicate.

In the end the popular loan was a success (?). The gold was obtained. How long it will remain in the treasury is another thing. There are already whispers of another bond issue and the mutterings of the people sound like distant thunder.

Thus far by these bond issues $262,000,000 has been added to the interest bearing debt. The first $100,000,000 run ten years at 5 per cent. The other $162,000,000 run 30 years with one year off, and the rate is 4 per cent. The total interest on the whole will be about $238,000,000, making a grand total that the people will have to pay off about $500,000,000. And the endless chain is still working. Greenbacks and Sherman notes are presented at the treasury and paid in gold. The notes are paid out again and are again presented for redemption in gold. When the reserve is well below $100,000,000 comes a bond issue. Men buy bonds for gold, first getting their gold from the treasury for the purpose. To the present time the result is a new burden of debt on our shoulders, which in the end, will amount to $500,000,000, with a much greater amount in prospect—all in the name of sound money, which is a good thing, but there is a possibility of its costing too much.

If some gold champion would drop his glittering generalities for a time, and spend some of his leisure moments in showing how the people are to get even on that $500,000,000, it will be time well spent.

A clause in the Sherman Law declared it to be "the established policy of the United States to maintain the two metals on a parity with each other upon the present legal ratio or such ratio as may be provided by law." In the act by which the purchase clause of that statute was repealed it is declared to be the policy of the United States by international agreement or by legislation to establish a safe system of bimetallism.

What has been done towards carrying out that declaration? The Secretary still has the authority to coin the silver bullion already in the treasury into dollars for the redemption of the "Sherman notes."

CARROLL COUNTY
[News]

S. Williams is buying several head of fine horses, which he will ship to Boston.

The weeds are taking the crop. The continued wet weather will not allow farmers to work them out.

Carrollton continues to improve notwithstanding the hard times. A number of nice dwellings and several elegant business blocks have gone up within this year.

The water in both rivers is al most thick enough to cut and has been so ever since the first rise. The continued rains and sun keep it in that shape and bass fishing is spoiled until fall.

OWEN COUNTY
[News]

Bob Sanders happened to quite an accident a few nights ago. Bob sleeps close to a window in the second story at the Johnson Hotel,and when the nights are hot he steps out on a big limb near the window and roosts their to cool off. On returning to his room, via. the window, he lost his balance just as he made the awful leap for the window sill, and crashed to the pavement below. He was terribly bruised about the head and shoulders.

Memorial Services were held at the Cemetery at this place Tuesday and the graves decorated with a profusion of flowers, but owing to the rain the ceremonies had to be cut short and were not as impressive as they otherwise would have been.

There has been considerable too much rain for the benefit of the growing crops.

GRANT COUNTY
[Courier]

Conspicuous among the delegates from the sixth district was that old time campaigner and perfect gentleman, J. Frank Grant, of Petersburg Boone county. Mr. Grant is one of the best known and best liked Democrats in the entire district. He is cashier of a bank at his place and a business man of experience and ability. He has many friends and there are legions who say he would make a pretty fair Congressman. Well, we think so, too, and as the sixth is a free silver district would it not be just as well to elect a man to Congress who is of "That faith and order;" and who is better than J. Frank Grant? We do not know that he wants the place or would make the race for it, but if he does there will be several votes in the Grant column.

Abundant rains have fallen all over Grant county during the past week. Tobacco is all set and crops of all kinds, except wheat, never looked better than at present. The indications are that if the season continues favorable the corn crop of last year will at least be equalled and the tobacco crop ought to be abundant and fine. Oats will be good and all kinds of garden truck very abundant. All that is now necessary to make the farmer happy is for prices to go back to what they used to be.

The largest load of tobacco ever loaded on one wagon and delivered in this county was received by Scott & Dickerson on last Saturday. The tobacco belonged to J. C. B. Conrad. On the first wagon loaded and hauled by Lee Conrad there was a little in excess of 8,000 pounds. On the wagon loaded and hauled by J. C. B. Conrad there was 7,000 pounds, making over 15,000 pounds on the two wagons, all one crop and belonging to one man.

CROP AND STOCK.

The cotton crop report for the Memphis district shows an increased average of 28 per cent.

Kansas is counting on a wheat crop this year of 88,000,000 bushels, which would be the biggest yield in the history of the State.

A close estimate of the crop of oranges in Southern California this season puts it at 9,000 car-loads, or 2,700,000 boxes. This is an increase of about 400,000 boxes over last season.

The Stanford Journal says nearly all the lambs in that section havs been sold at 3½ cents. It also reports the sales of a lot of heifers at 3 cents; 70 hogs at 2½ cents, and several lots of butchers stuff at 2½ to 2¾ cents.

Local buyers are offering 2 cents for fat ewes and 3 cents for yearling sheep. Joe A. Cohn bought 42 hogs averaging 175 lbs. at $2.75, 58 ewes at $2 45 per head, with 36 good lambs thrown in. He also bought 6 yearling weathers at 3 cents.—Woodford Sun.

The planting interests in Mississippi are seriously menaced, and at a critical time, by the ravages of charbon or anthrax, which, having broken out in Northern Louisiana a few weeks ago, is killing stock and cattle of all kinds in great numbers, and has more recently invaded both Arkansas and Mississippi. The Louisiana parishes affected are among the richest in the State. It is no exageration to say that thousands of mules, horses, and cows and hogs have died.

It is the opinion of a great many that there never was a better season for this locality for setting tobacco than that of last week. And when one contemplates the vast amount of it put out the mind is curious to know what is to be done with it all. The tobacco growers seem to have learned nothing from experience and indications point to this year's crop as the largest in years. Next winter a distressing spectacle will be witnessed. Thousands of farmers will have enormous crops of tobacco on their hands. The weed will be inferior in quality, owing to lack of care on account of size of crop. The market will be glutted, and many a man will sit down in sorrow and remorse to contemplate the proceeds of the sale on the wrong side of the book. Whereas the man who had but a small crop and well attended will have a nice bank account and will be correspondingly happy. This state of affairs exists every year, yet many do not seem to profit by it. Reason and common sense ought to make quality and not quantity the desired goal, but unfortunately the reverse is the case. Paste this in your hat and see if the prediction does not come true.—New Castle Local.

STATE NEWS.

Jailer Hiram Centers shot Dave Cassidy at Jackson over the election of school trustees.

Isaac Gerry, a wealthy farmer of Breathitt county, was killed by a throw from his horse.

Ex-Marshall Frank Ellis was sentenced at Stanford, Ky., to twenty-one years' imprisonment for murdering young Murphy.

Thomas Wood, a wealthy farmer near Higginsport, accused Tom Thornton, colored, formerly of Dover, of stealing chickens, and Thornton has sued him for $5,000 damages. Wood found his chickens at Thornton's home.

H. B. McEuen, the Republican chief clerk in the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction Davidson, was fined $50 and bounced for furnishing a Mr. Lightfoot with teachers' examination questions. He claime innocence of intention.

The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, of Louisville, graduated a class of 234 ministers, who represented 29 States, 4 foreign countries and the District of Columbia, probably the largest number of diplomas ever issued at one time by any theological school.

Congressman Owens has introduced a bill in Congress to establish a cavalry post in Fayette county. Mr. Owens says that such a post would be of advantage to the farmers in that section of Kentucky, and that ultimately the post would be made the base of supply for the cavalry.

George Ingle, a farmer near Dalton Hopkins county, had a valuable horse stolen. Starting in pursuit of the thief, he found her in the person of a young woman dressed in men's clothes. She shed tears copiously, but refused to answer all questions. She was taken to jail to await the action of the grand jury.

In the Circuit Court at Williamstown Milton Burgess, of Scott county, was sentenced to the penitentiary for life for the murder of Allen Johnson. During a political gathering at Downingsville, Grant county, last November, Burgess and Johnson engaged in a game of cards when a quarrel arose, which ended in the fatal shooting of the latter. The proof showed that Johnson was leaving the scene when Burgess shot him in the back. The prisoner is now a physical wreck.

POLITICAL.

A report says that 95 per cent. of the intelligent white voters of Arkansas are for free and "unlimited silver or bust."

The editor of the Taylorsville Monitor is about the only Democrat in the district, who is opposing the reelection of Judge Pryor.

Twenty-nine Democrats voted for the Rivers and Harbors grab over the President's veto, while twenty-six Republicans voted to sustain the veto.

The golden streets of the New Jerusalem, where we all expect to go when done with the toils and troubles of this world, are to be torn up and laid with pure 16 to 1 silver.—Madisonville Hustler.

Col. Breckinridge says he will be the Democratic nominee for Congress in this district. Two years ago he said that no other Democrat but himself should represent this district in Congress.—Western Argus.

Committee on Arrangements:

ELMER BEALL, J. F. BLYTH, J. M. LASSING.

W. M. SAFFELL, of Frankfort, has been appointed Special Agent of the Treasury Department by Secretary Carlisle. The salary attached to the office is $1,800 a year. Mr. Saffell has been a life-long Republican, and the only consideration for the appointment is friendship of long standing between the Secretary and Mr. Saffell. It is strange that some good Democrat was not entitled to the appointment on the same grounds.

IT was not believed that Teller, Cannon, Carter and others would bolt the St. Louis convention, but they made good their threats, and now there is considerable uneasiness in the g. o. p. for fear that the breach will continue to widen and engulf McKinley and his running mate on the third day of next November.

HAD the McKinley rooters from Ohio been taken out of the crowd at St. Louis, last week, the McKinley shouters would have been scarce. There was more enthusiasm manifested over Senator-elect Foraker than over McKinley, all of which was very pleasing to Mr. Foraker.

COL. BERRY'S trip through this Congressional District, last week, started the discussion of that race. Some believs he will not be opposed for a renomination, while others say he can not win the prize a third time, and so it goes.

IN trying to apologize for the lack of enthusiasm at St. Louis the Louisville Commercial says: "That there were some quiet intervals was due to the fact that everybody conceded the nomination of McKinley.

THE jury in the Walling case fixed his punishment at death. If Will Wood was tried and sentenced to be hanged along with Jackson and Walling, Pearl Bryan's murder would be properly avenged.

THE Detroit Tribune, the leading Republican paper in Michigan, has repudiated the action of the St. Louis convention, denouncing the platform it adopted as "damnable and unrepublican."

SOME of the Republicans who claimed that the Democratic party only was being annoyed by the money question, are sore over some of the occurrences at St. Louis last week.

CARTER, chairman of the Republican National Committee, bolted the St. Louis convention, but then bolting was tho fad at St. Louis, you know.

HON. N. S. WALTON'S Congressional boom is given a start in this issue. There is not a better man in the district than Mr. Walton.

IF the Democrats can make a nomination without a bolt at Chicago, they will have one on the Republicans.

ENGLAND endorses the action of the Republican National Convention.

HARRISON had nothing to say as to the result of the convention.

GOV. BRADLEY proved a disappointment to his Kentucky friends in the St. Louis convention. He was never heard of after he crossed the Mississippi river, although when he startes from home it was believed he would be given an ovation. His riot-alarm notoriety does not extend beyond the borders of Kentucky.

IN their national platform, adopted at St. Loois, last wtek, the Republicans censured the Democratic administration for increasing the public debt $262,000,000, which was the result of sustaining a single gold standard; and in the next breath they delare in favor of a single gold standard. Is a more glaring inconsistency possible?

Since Mr. Cleveland came into power in March, 1893, the national debt has been increased by the sum of $262,315,400, entailing an annual interest charge of $11,492,616. A change is necessary. — Louisville Commercial.

And your party, last week, declared in favor of maintaining the identical policy that caused the enormous increase in the public debt.

The business world, which has been virtually frightened out of a month's growth by campaign lying, will not be likely, after reading the platform of the Republican national convention, ever to believe the campaign liars again.—Lawrenceburg Press.

IT is astonishing how successfully the Press sized up the platform adopted by the St. Louis convention before the editor had read it, and it is very surprising that the editor, a way-back Republican, should admit that those who constructed that platform belong in the category in which he places them; but right he is—they are not likely to be believed again.

ONE of our correspondents has requested the RECORDER to give the school per capita for this year. The following from the Courier-Journal's correspondent at Frankfort is all the information it has been able to obtain on that subject:

"The Superintendent of Public Instruction, has received the reports of more than 100 of the county school census takers. The reports show an increase of 1½ per cent. in the number of children of school age in the State. This means that there will be 10,000 more school children to provide for this year than last, when there were 729,000. This of itself would reduce the per capita, but the amount to be divided by this 729,000 will be very much less than the amount set aside for school purposes last year. In the first place the total revenue will be less by considerably more than the extra money the Administration hopes to get out of corporations, and from the schools' proportion of this revenue must deduct the $175,000 deficit in the fund of the school year just ending. The Superintendent and Auditor had intimated that they thought next year's per capita would be from $2.80 to as low as $2.25, but the Superintendent now admits the fear that it will be even less."

Hon. N. S. Walton for Congress.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

We have talked to a large number of "silver" men from different parts of the Sixth District as to their preference for our next representative in Congress, and they do not hesitate to name our own Nathan Walton as the man for the place.

They know that he is honest, capable and true. That he is sound to the core on the great questions of the day. He believes in the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at the ratio of 16 to 1. He has already honored the grand old county of Boone by the able way in which he represented us in the State legislature, and the faithful, earnest way he has executed other trusts we have placed in his hands. He is no turn-coat. He is a true Democrat. We always know where to find him when we want him, and know that he is one of us, with like interests, feelings and purpose. We know he is a loyal "Free Silver" man. He has not been in the gold camp, but has been with us all the time.

For these and other reasons we believe that the Hon. Nathan Walton is the best man for the place. We want him to make the fight and every true, loyal "silver" man in the Sixth District will vote for him.

If there is a district in the State of Kentucky that is heart and soul for free silver, it is the old Sixth District. It is but natural, therefore, that we should demand that we be represented by a loyal free silver man.

The money question, in my judgment, is the most important one that has come before the people of the United States since we won our independence more than one hundred years ago. The principle involved is the vital one of personal liberty and representation. The question before us is, "will we conltinue to govern ourselves, or shal, we be owned, and, consequently governed by the money power of New York and London? Opposed to this form of government by the rich few, the "gold-bugs," is the great masses of the people—intelligent voters—the "free-silver" people. We believe in a government "by the people, for the people and of the people."

The "money powers," the "gold-bugs," have run our government too long already. They have made the laws of this country in their favor. They have robbed the poor man—the laboring man—the people and built up for themselves castles—mansions—palaces and colossal fortunes. They have lawed us out of our birthright. We, the people, have become poorer and poorer until we are almost helpless in our poverty. Is it not time for us to act? Is the time not ripe? Shall we lay supinely down until we are loaded with irons, and sold—willing slaves? No! not as long as there is virtue in a liberty-loving people, and strength in a God-given cause. The challenge has gone forth, and we mean to fight the battle to a finish. We mean to use the ballot box and fill it with intelligent votes for a silver President and a silver Congress. To this end I write this letter, and offer the people of the Sixth District a man who will be true and faithful to their interests, if elected.

Respectfully, M. J. CROUCH.

IT is evident that a degree of uneasiness pervades what remains of the Republican party since the St. Louis convention, and to what extent the silver element throughout the country will combine against McKinley and Hobart is the question that is unsettling the nerves of the g. o. p. It is now very apparent that the silver element of the Republican party is not confined to the West, entirely, but that it is rather formable in several other States in which it is feared they will make considerable trouble.

MR. CARLISLE had just got through explaining his 1878 silver speech, when he turned a trick that demands another explanation—a trick that will bring down upon him the censure of many of his Kentucky friends who have been unfaltering in their defense of him during the past few months, and who will now demand of him to explain why it was that he gave that Frankfort Republican, in preference to a Democrat, an office that is worth $1,800 per year. The ties of friendship are not expected to prevail to the extent of depriving political victors of the richest spoils.

THE Republican press is bloviating about the good effect the action of the St. Louis convention has already had on business, but it would have a serious time proving that such is true, in the face of the St. Louis platform which declares in favor of every specie of class legislation.

THE cabinet makers have commenced arranging a cabinet for the Republican nominee for President. Do not be in such a hurry, gentlemen, for your suggestions may prove premature, as it is not settled yet who will be the next tenant of the White House.

HAS Gov. Bradley returned from St. Louis? Nothing has been heard of him since he left for the convention. As his voice was not heard there, some believe he never reached his destination.

THE Kentucky Press Association which meets in Georgetown to-day is under especial obligations to the management of the Kentucky Midland Railway for courtisics extended the members.

Gen. Benjamin Bristow, Secretary of the Treasury under President Grant, died of peritonitis at his home in New York, Monday. He was taken ill only last Saturday.

IT is settled that the silver men will control the Chicago convention, but they will not nominate Senator Teller for President. That would be committing suicide.

THE Ohio Democratic State Convention is in session. It is overwhelmingly in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

THE gold and silver fight is now on in Ohio and Indiana.

AT CANTON.

The Little City Goes Wild Over the Nomination of McKinley.

The Citizens, Without Regard to Party Affiliations, Call at the McKinley Residence and Congratulate the Nominee—His Happy Response.

CANTON, O., June 19.—This city went wild in receipt of the nomination of ex-Gov. Wm. McKinley for president of the United States by the republican convention at St. Louis. The citizens thronged by the striking of 918 on the fire alarm bells of Canton, that being the number of delegates in the convention, and therefore selected for the purpose, together with the booming of the big cannon on the bluff back of the watch factory at 5:19 o'clock Thursday evening, notified such people of Canton as had not followed the posted bulletins that the national republican convention at St. Louis, had nominated their fellow townsman, Maj. Wm. McKinley, as its candidate for president, and then the pent up enthusiasm, which had been repressed for the [illegible] days with more or less force, broke out, and far into the night pandemonium reigned. Every device that skill and energy could produce to make a noise was brought into play, not only in Canton, but in all the cities and towns for miles around, in all of which McKinley is a favorite.

As if by magic, too, the streets blossomed forth in the national colors, of designs numerous and various, bunting, flags, streamers and what not, and everywhere the smooth, serious face of the new candidate looked forth upon the multitude.

The McKinley house was the center of attraction all day and many residents and visitors from the surrounding towns called during the day to pay their respects.

In the evening a delegation of leading citizens arranged themselves in front of the McKinley residence, and F. E. Case, the spokesman for the crowd, spoke the congratulations of the candidate's fellow citizens on his good luck.

The major in responding said:

"My friends and fellow citizens: I am greatly honored by this demonstration. Its nonpartisan character forbids political discussion, and I appear only to make grateful acknowledgement of your address and congratulations. I am not indifferent to the pleasure which you exhibit with the news just received from the republican national convention. For days your interest has been centered upon St. Louis and your presence in such vast numbers testifies to your personal good will, as well as your gratification with the work done there. Your cordial assurances are all the more appreciated by me because they come from my fellow citizens, men of all parties, my neighbors, my former constituents and my old comrades with whom I have lived almost a lifetime and who have honored me over and over again with importnnt public trusts. Your warm words are reciprocated and will be long remembered. Many of those around me have not always agreed with me, nor I with them, touching political questions. But it is pleasant to look into your faces, to recall that in all the years of the past there has never been a moment of time when you have withheld from me your friendship, your encouragement and your confidence. You have always been most generously loyal, and my heart is full of gratitude to you all."

CHAIRMAN MANLEY

On the Nomination of Maj. McKinley for the Presidency.

ST. LOUIS, June 19.—Concerning the outcome of the convention, Jos. Manley said this evening:

"Of course Maine feels grievously disappointed that the convention did not endorse its candidate and make Thomas B. Reed the standard bearer of the republican party in this great contest, but Maine is used to disappointments. It has always been loyal to the republican party. It cast its electoral vote for John C. Fremont in 1865, and it has never failed to give the electoral vote to the candidates of the republican party from that day until now. It will not break or change its record in November next and it will give its loyal support to the ticket nominated this day.

"The platform adopted by the convention will receive the cordial support of every republican of Maine."

AT COLUMBUS.

No Demonstration Over the Nomination of McKinley for President.

COLUMBUS, O., June 19.—There was no firing of guns or other demonstration or expression of enthusiasm here at the capitol of his state when the announcement of McKinley for the presidency was made Wednesday evening, excepting the display of a flag here and there. There is nothing to emphasize the event. Most of the prominent republicans who live here are at St. Louis. Those who are here explain the absence of demonstration by saying that the result was perfectly discounted, and there was nothing in it to provoke a sudden outburst of enthusiasm, and at an early date a formal ratification meeting would be held.

California State Democratic Convention.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 19.—The democratic state convention this morning nominated Wm. T. Jeter for lieutenant governor, and instructed the delegates to the national convention at Chicago to vote as a unit on the silver question. A resolution was adopted instructing the delegates to Chicago to place in nomination for the presidency, Hon. Stephen M. White, of California, should a favorable opportunity arise. The convention then adjourned sine die.

Shively's Victory.

LA PORTE, Ind., June 19.—Ex-Congressman Shively, of St. Joseph county, the democratic free-silver candidate for the nomination for governor, has received returns from 96 counties in the state. The figures at hand Thursday indicate his nomination, the control of the convention by the silver men and the election of a solid Matthew delegation to the Chicago convention.

THE DRUMMOND CASTLE.

The Ill-Fated Vessel Struck on a Reef and Sunk in Three Minutes—242 Lives Were Lost.

LONDON, June 20.—Further developments have reached here of the loss of the steamship Drummond Castle, bound from Capetown to London. The vessel had 144 passengers and 103 officers and men. Only three men were saved out of 247 souls on board. The steamer was heading around Finisterre, from the Bay of Biscay, and making for the chops of the British channel.

Off Finisterre is the island of Ushant, about 26 miles northwest of this port, one of a group of some 30 islands, the largest of which are Ushant, Molene, Leconquet and St. Michel.

The Drummond Castle, to steer a safe course, should have been away outside of Ushant, upon which island is a lighthouse and signal station, but for some reason not satisfactorily explained the steamship headed inside of Ushant. Between that point and the mainland of France is a line of islands including Molene and Leconquet and connected by ridges of rock with each other. At different places there are rifts through which vessels can pass with safety, but between Ushant and Molene, the latter island being about half way to mainland, is a sunken reef of rocks with deep water on both sides of it and covered in parts even at the lowest tides. It was on this ridge that the Drummond Castle struck while going at full speed.

The unlucky steamer must have struck so as to tear her bottom from stem to stern, thus filling all her water-tight compartments, and sending her to the bottom within three minutes. Marquardt, one of the survivors, has made a statement in which he says that Capt. Pierce had just gone to his cabin for a brief rest when there was a terrible shock, which caused the Drummond Castle to quiver as if shaken by a dynamite explosion. This was followed by a horrible grating, rasping sound, the noise of inrushing water, the cries of the passengers, who sprang from their berths in terror, and the sharp words of command from the officers on the deck, who ordered all hands to clear away the boats for lowering. But the rents in the stricken steamer were so wide and deep that but few of the passengers had time to scramble up on deck before she gave two or three heavy rolls and then an awful lurch, accompanied by some interior explosion, and she sank.

Some of the passengers, however, succeeded in fastening life-preservers around them, and some of the bodies washed ashore were so provided.

A tug which has just returned from Molene island says that the bodies of 25 of the victims of the wreck of the Drummond Castle have been washed ashore at that place.

Much wreckage of the lost steamship is washing ashore at Ushant and Molene island.

SHORT SKETCH

Of the Life of the Republican Candidate for Vice President, Garrett A. Hobart.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Garrett A. Hobart, nominated by the republican party for the vice presidency of the United States, was born at Long Branch, N. J., in 1844. He graduated from Rutger college before he was twenty years old, and studied law at Paterson, being admitted to the bar in 1866.

In 1872 he was elected a member of the New Jersey house, and was reelected and chosen speaker. In 1877 he was elected senator from Passaic county. He was re-elected to this position, and served in the office from that time until the expiration of the year 1882, being president pro tem of the body for the last two years of which he was a member. In 1884 he was nominated by the republican caucus of the legislature for United States senator, but was not elected, as the legislature was democratic, and John R. McPherson was chosen. In 1884 he became a member of the republican national committee.

In business life he has been active and energetic. He is the president of the Passaic Water Co., the Acquackanonk Water Co., the Paterson Railroad Co.'s consolidated lines, the Morris County railroad and the Peoples Gas Co. He is the director in several national banks, including the First national bank, of Paterson, and the Paterson Savings institution. He is also on the directory boards of the New York, Susquehanna and Western railroad, the Lehigh and Hudson River railroad, the Barbour Flax Spinning Co., the Pioneer Silk Co., the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., the American Cotton Oil Co. and some 40 or more additional corporations. With many of those concerns he holds the position of legal adviser.

Mr. Hobart is a resident of Paterson, where he has a beautiful home, which is the center of the social amenities of the city.

Three Filibustering Expeditions.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—The Record Friday says that three of the largest and most formidable filibustering expeditions that have ever left the United States are now on their way to the coast of Cuba, and all have thus far escaped the vigilance of this government and the Spaniards, who have been watching for them and their many passengers and large cargoes of ammunition, dynamite, guns and other war material.

New Yorkers Leave for Home.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—Mr. T. C. Platt left for New York at 8:30 Friday morning. He was accompanied by Congressman Odell, State Chairman Hackett, J. Sloat Fassett and Mr. Lou Payne. Mr. Chauncey M. Depew took his departure at 12 o'clock over the Big Four route. A number of other New Yorkers left on the same train.

Walked Out of a Second-Story Window.

ORLEANS, Ind., June 20.—Beulah Easley, aged six, walked out of a second-story window Friday morning while asleep and sustained injuries that will prove fatal.

THREE KILLED

And One Fatally Injured at a Railroad Crossing in New Jersey.

The Victims Were on Their Way to a Picnic, Were Relatives and Prominent in County Affairs, One Being a Member of the Board of Freeholders.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 21.—The eight o'clock express from Philadelphia for this city, over the Pennsylvania railroad, struck a team and wagon at Absecon station, about eight miles from here, shortly after nine o'clock Sunday morning, and killed three men and fatally injured another. The men were bound on a picnic trip and had descended a steep hill leading to the depot without knowing the proximity of the train, which was speeding along at the rate of 60 miles an hour. They realized their danger when too late, as the momentum of the wagon carried the team out on the track where the vehicle was struck by the locomotive. The dead men who were all relatives, are George Huber and his son, Frederick Huber, and Henry Getzner, Joseph Sahle, son-in-law of Huber, is believed to be fatally injured, and he is now at the city hospital. The men belonged in Galloway township and were prominent in the county's affairs, Sahle being a member of the county board of freeholders.

POLITICAL GOSSIP.

Sound Money Democrats Look to Hon. Wm. C. Whitney as Their Leader.

NEW YORK, June 22.—The sound money men of the democratic party are looking to Wm. C. Whitney as the natural leader of the single standard in the Chicago convention. He has received since Wednesday letters from conspicuous men in Massachusetts, Connecticut Pennsylvania, Michigan, New Hampshire and New Jersey, thanking him for his determination to battle against the free silver forces.

These messages have contained pledges of support in carrying out any plan which Mr. Whitney may have formed for pushing gold to the front.

Mr. Whitney saw President Cleveland in Washington about two weeks ago and the financial question was talked over by them. Mr. Whitney also saw Mr. Lamont in Washington and conversed with him on the same subject. Mr. Whitney has adopted a course of complete reserve until he shall have reached Chicago, to begin work among the delegates and with men through whom he can influence the acts of the delegates. He has not decided on the day that he will go to Chicago, but it will probably be about July 5. When there he will make some written statement of his reasons for urging the convention to adopt a gold standard.

Mr. Whitney considers that the democrats on a sound money platform with a sound money candidate will have an equal chance to win against McKinley and the republican platform of gold and protection. This view is shared by other notable members of the party.

The possibility of Mr. Whitney being a candidate for president notwithstanding his repeated statements that he was not, was revived again Friday. In talking of it he said:

"I am not a candidate for the presidential nomination. I am going to Chicago to do what I can for sound money. Some of my friends think I can do something. I shall not go as a delegate, but as a private person."

A BAD GANG

Arrested Near Wyoming, Minn., the Leader Being Killed, After a Desperate Resistance.

NORTH BRANCH, Minn., June 22.—The desperadoes who murdered Jacob Hay and Andrew Paul and attempted to kill Dr. Burnside Foster at Wyoming, Minn., Saturday, were rounded up Sunday morning, Bob Wilson, the leader of the gang being killed and the other two, James Cunningham and George Kelly captured after making a desperate resistance. Cunningham was badly wounded. The men have been committing robberies along the St. Paul and Duluth road for the past month. After robbing Dr. Foster and shooting Paul and Hay dead the bandits moved northward along the railroad to this point. Saturday night they robbed the house of ex-Mayor Frank Smith and started for Duluth. Half a mile from here they were met by several railroad men who had heard of the Wyoming killing. The railroaders ordered them to halt, but they only answered with shots from a revolver. The railroad men ran into North Branch and gave alarm. A posse of seventeen men was made up here and at once went in pursuit. Early Sunday morning the bandits were located in a tamarack swamp. The posse gradually drew in on the men in a circle. After several volleys had been exchanged, the posse ceased firing for a few minutes. Finally one of the men behind some logs raised his head.

A rifle shot rang out and the fellow fell back, shot through the brain. His companion soon ran up the white flag. Cunningham, a mere boy of 19, was found to be badly wounded about the head, a load of buckshot having struck him. The other man gave the name of George Kelly, but declined to talk further as to his identity. He admitted the killing at Wyoming, but said Bob Wilson, the dead man, did the shooting.

Ex-Gov. Boies on the Ground.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Ex-Gov. Horace Boies, of Iowa, arrived in Chicago and registered at the Palmer house. The ex-governor refused to discuss the political situation. He said he had read in the morning papers of Col. Morrison's refusal to run on a democratic silver platform, but declined to say whether or not that fact had any material bearing upon his own candidacy.

GOMEZ'S VICTORY.

Over One Thousand Insurgent Cavalry Attack 3,500 Spanish Soldiers—They Harrassed the Troops for 42 Hours, Killing and Wounding Many.

HAVANA, June 17, via Tampa, Fla., June 20.—The event of the week has been Gomez's splendid victory at Najasa, Puerto Principe. The details thus far are meager, the best report received here up to the present time being from the correspondent La Discussion, which is regarded as the best informed independent paper in Havana. He says that Gen. Jiminez Castellanos left Puerto Principe on the 8th inst. with 2,114 men, 342 horses and five mounted pieces of artillery. On the 9th they camped at a cattle ranch called Saratoga, where about four o'clock p. m. the attack commenced by a charge of 1,000 rebel cavalrymen with machetes. From that moment until the morning of the 11th the insurgents continued harassing the troops, killing and wounding many.

The story of Gen. Castellanos, who commanded the Spaniards, is that the Cuban charges were repelled either by artillery fire or by forming hollow squares, which the Spaniards consider unbreakable. Still, Castellanos confesses, there were moments of great danger and only by displaying the greatest valor could the Spaniards succeed in repelling the attacks of the enemy. He admits that the number of wounded Spanish troops obliged him to erect his camp hospital in the farmhouse of the ranch, a brick structure, which was so riddled with bullets that some of the wounded men were struck after being placed inside. Castellanos also acknowledges that Gen. Godoy's arrival was very opportune, since the 42 hours had exhausted his troops. In view of the loss inflicted on the forces, Gens. Godoy and Castellanos decided to return to the city without pursuing the enemy, who had already inaugurated their retreat on Godoy's approach.

Varela, the La Discussions correspondent, says that the Spanish troops fired 50,000 cartridges and three shells and the rebels 25,000 shots. He figures the rebel losses from 400 to 500, and the Spaniards at 35, of whom only four were killed and the rest wounded, including two officesrs. He concludes his story by simply announcing the arrival of both columns in Puerto Principe, without stating in what condition they entered the city, whether all their commanding officers of high or low rank returned, or who were missing. This is the Spanish side of the fight, which is borne out by the official report.

From other sources uncomplete and lacking important details, it is shown that Gomez had only 1,800 men. Gen. Castellano's forces amounted to 3,500 men. He, knowing of his rival's approach, placed the men in convenient positions, dividing his forces in small groups of 300 men each. As soon as the Spaniards were comfortably encamped in the ranch, preparing for the next day's attack on Gomez's stronghold at Najaza, the Cuban chief suddenly made his appearance, attacking their position simultaneously on all sides. Taken unawares and completely surrounded, all they could do was to defend themselves from the continued charges, which, with marvellous to military precision, were kept up night and day, without affording the Spaniard's a moment's rest. Thanks to Gen. Godoy's timely arrival with 2,500 men, Castellanos was saved from complete defeat. It is said that if Godoy had delayed his march six hours longer, Castellanos would have surrendered, as he was already too weak to stand fighting much longer.

The actual losses on both sides have not been ascertained yet. It is only known that the Spaniards brought with them 320 wounded from the field of action, and if any were left behind it is not known. Report has it that the total Spanish loss in killed, wounded and missing was over one thousand.

SILVERITES APPEAL.

They Issue a Stirring Appeal to the American People—Teller for President.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—At the secret conference of bolting silver delegates Thursday afternoon and Thursday night, after much careful consideration, the subjoined address to the people of the United States was agreed upon and authorized to be given to the press. While the address contains much in the nature of a silver-coinage argument, the concluding paragraphs show the determination of the bolting delegates to bring about the nomination, if possible, of Senator Henry M. Teller, of Colorado, as the candidate for the presidency on a platform having for its cardinal principles the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

The bolters make no effort to conceal their first choice for a bimetallic president. If the democrats refuse to accept the distinguished Colorado bolter the western silverites will support any man who can command the support of all the silver factions. But they are for Teller for first choice.

The Notification Committee.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—The two committees that were appointed by the convention Thursday to notify Messrs. McKinley and Hobart of their respective nominations as president and vice president respectively met Friday morning. The first named committee will notify McKinley at Canton on June 29, and the committee appointed to notify the vice president will perform a similar service at Mr. Hobart's home on July 7.

Street Railway Boycott Off.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 20.—The street railway boycott is ended. It was formally declared off Friday by President James Flint, of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes; that it was declared off so far as it was within his power to do so He said Friday morning that his organization has discontinued running busses, and no longer asks the public to refrain from riding in the cars. He stated, however, that the strike has not been declared off, and that it will not be as long as the men feel us they do at present.

OFF FOR HIDDEN TREASURE.

Two Expeditions Organized for the Search of Lost Wealth.

Recently a couple of expeditions have started from San Francisco to unearth two deposits of treasure as rich and mysterious as the lost mines of the Aztecs. One, a party of easterners, has gone to San Miguel island, off Santa Barbara, to find the chests of Spanish doubloons which, according to tradition, were lost there years ago in the wreck of a Spanish bark. The survivors secured their gold and buried it in a cave close to the historic spot where [illegible] landed and afterward, going to the mainland, were slain by the Indians. The second expedition, which is backed by a hotelkeeper in Stockton, makes Cocos island, off the coast of Central America, its objective point. Cocos island was once the resort of pirates and on it, the tale goes, some of the buccaneers buried their riches. The Stockton hotelkeeper and his associates have gone to work in a businesslike way. They have secured a concession from the Nicaraguan government to farm the island for a number of years and have imported a number of Germans who, if the treasure does not turn up, will get what they can out of the land by growing coffee. So far their search has been unsuccessful, the directions on the chart which locates the pirates' hoard having led to nothing.

HOW SHE GOT EVEN.

A Gently-Bred Woman Administers a Telling Rebuke.

As it is a well-established fact that men are always in the prime of life, while women begin to get over it at the age of 35, the gentler sex are naturally averse to pointed comments upon their years. A blundering man, whose too convivial habits have conspicuously wrecked his wife's health and peace of mind, was recently introduced to a visiting lady of less than 50 years, but of remarkably youthful and fresh appearance. With fatal intent to be gallant, the blundering man remarked:

"Glad to meet you, madam—glad to meet you. You are very well-preserved for your years."

No answer was returned, the visiting lady having been naturally shocked at being thus classed among the aged.

Not disconcerted, the talkative gentleman went on: "You look young, madam, indeed you do Pray, tell me what is the secret of it?"

A picture of the harassed wife of the rude questioner came to the visiting lady's mind, and she retorted, gently, but pointedly: "There is but one secret of what you are pleased to term my youth and good looks. I have a husband who has never given me an unkind word or cost me an anxious thought."

WM. M'KINLEY

The Republican Nominee for President of the United States.

Garrett A. Hobart, of New Jersey, for Vice President.

When the Sound Money Clause of the Platform Was Read

Some of the Silver Men Entered Their Protest and Left the Hall.

As the Bolters Filed Out the Band Played Patriotic Airs and the Assembly Sang the Chorus—The Full Platform Adopted by an Overwhelming Vote Amid Great Enthusiasm.

CONVENTION HALL, ST. LOUIS, June 17.—The republican national convention was called to order by Chairman Carter at 12:15 Tuesday. Rabbi Sales invoked the divine blessing on the assemblage, the audience standing. The rabbi's voice was weak and his invocation was inaudible except to those in his immediate vicinity.

MAJ. WM. McKINLEY.

At 12:34, C. W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, was presented for temporary chairman. Sutherland of New York moved that the recommendation be approved. It was adopted with cheers.

At the conclusion of Mr. Fairbanks' speech Mr. Carter proposed the appointments of secretary, assistant secretaries, sergeants-at-arms, official stenographers and other officials, and the persons so named were declared duly appointed.

The states were then called for their selection of delegates as members of the several committees.

When the name of Senator Teller was announced as a member of the committee on rules for his state there was a small outburst of applause, after which the call was proceeded with.

When Massachusetts sent up the name of Senator Lodge as its representative on the committee on resolutions there was a counter demonstration on the part of the gold standard men.

The name of Joseph B. Foraker was sent up as the representative of the state of Ohio on the committee on resolutions, and when it was read from the clerk's desk it was hailed with cheers.

Mr. Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, sent up a resolution which he desired to have read and referred, but objection was made to its being read and it was referred without reading. It related to the determination of election contests.

After an announcement of the places and times of meeting of the four committees the convention at 1:47 adjourned to Wednesday at 10 a. m.

ST. LOUIS, June 18.—At 10 o'clock, the hour for reassembling, not a thousand delegates and spectators were in the big hall.

At 10:39 Chairman Fairbanks rapped for order, but he could not reach the band and it kept on. Fourteen blows of the gavel were necessary to bring the convention to a semblance of quiet and order, and it was not until 10:46 that the chairman could make himself heard.

Dr. Wm. G. Williams was presented "to invoke a blessing on the proceedings of the day."

The prayer was concluded at 10:50. Senator Lodge, who was received with cheers, announced that the sub-committee of the committee on resolutions had completed the ground work of the platform, and it was now under consideration by the full committee. He asked leave to sit during the proceedings, and it was granted. He announced that the platform would be ready at the afternoon session.

A motion that the report of the committee on permanent organization be accepted was made by Senator Sewall, of New Jersey, and was agreed to amid applause.

Senator Thurston took the chair amid tumultuous applause and addressed the convention.

As Senator Thurston closed his short speech with the phrase, "a patriotism as eternal as the stars," the air was rent with cheers amid which he was heard to ask the official question, "Gentlemen, what is your pleasure?"

At 2:45 the convention was again called to order. After prayer was offered, Judge George Denny, of Lexington, Ky., was presented to offer to the chairman a gavel fashioned from an ash tree planted by Henry Clay on his home estate at Ashland, Ky. At this stage the great hall for the first time was filled to overflowing and the scene was impressive.

Before Judge Denny could be introduced, Mr. Madden, of Chicago, presented a gavel made from the oak wood of a building once occupied by Abraham Lincoln. Senator Thurston made an appropriate response and Judge Denny presented the Kentucky gavel. Mr. Fairbanks, ex-temporary chairman, accepted the Kentucky gavel, it having been intended for his use. He was glad that this grand commonwealth had come into the ranks of the republican party. (Cheers.)

Mr. Torrence, of Minneapolis, then presented a table used at the Minnesota convention of 1890.

The republican convention adjourned Wednesday afternoon at 5:10 o'clock until 10 o'clock Thursday morning, after adopting the majority report of the committee on credentials, which seats the McKinley delegates from states where there were contests.

CONVENTION HALL, ST. LOUIS, June 19.—convention was called to order at 10:32 by Chairman Thurston, and Rev. John R. Scott (colored), of Florida, invoked the Divine blessing.

The chairman said the first order of business was the reception of the report of the committee on resolutions and the chair recognized for that purpose Senator-elect Foraker, of Ohio.

Mr. Foraker as he stepped upon the platform, was received with hearty applause. He said: As chairman of the committee on resolutions, I have the honor to report as follows:

THE PLATFORM.

The republicans of the United States, assembled by their representatives in national convention, appealing to the popular and historical justification of their claims to the matchless achievements of 30 years of republican rule, earnestly and confidently address themselves to the awakened intelligence, experience and conscience of their countrymen in the following declaration of faith and principles:

For the first time since the civil war the American people have witnessed the calamitous consequences of full and unrestricted democratic control of the government. It has been a record of unparalleled incapacity, dishonor and disaster. In administrative management it has ruthlessly sacrificed indispensable revenue, entailed an unceasing deficit, eked out ordinary current expenses with borrowed money, piled up the public debt by $262,000,000 in time of peace, forced an adverse balance of trade, kept a perpetual menace hanging over the redemption fund, pawned American credit to alien syndicates and reversed all the measures and results of successful republican rule. In the broad effect of its policy it has precipitated panic, blighted industry and trade with prolonged depression, closed factories, reduced work and wages, halted enterprise and crippled American production for the American market. Every consideration of public safety and individual interest demands that the government shall be rescued from the hands of those who have shown themselves incapable of conducting it without disaster at home and dishonor abroad, and shall be [illegible] to the party which [illegible] has administered it with unparalleled success and prosperity. And in this connection we heartily indorse the wisdom, the patriotism, and the success of the administration of President Harrison.

We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of American industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity. This true American policy taxes foreign products and encourage homes industry; it puts the burden of revenue on foreign goods; it secures the American market for the American producer; it upholds the American standard of wages for the American workingman; it puts the factory by the side of the farm and makes the American farmer less dependent on foreign demand and price; it diffuses general thrift and founds the strength of all on the strength of each. In its reasonable application it is just, fair and impartial, equally opposed to foreign control and domestic monopoly, to sectional discrimination and individual favoritism.

We denounce the present democratic tariff as sectional, injurious to the public credit and destructive to business enterprise. We demand such an equitable tariff on foreign imports which come into competition with American products as will not only furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the government, but will protect American labor from degradation to the wage level of other lands. We are not pledged to any particular schedules. The question of rates is a practical question, to be governed by the conditions of the time and of production; the ruling and uncompromising principle is the protection and development of American labor and industry. The country demands a right settlement, and then it wants rest.

Protection and reciprocity are twin measures of republican policy and go hand in hand. Democratic rule has recklessly struck down both, and both must be re-established. Protection for what we produce; free admission for the necessaries of life which we do not produce; reciprocal agreements of mutual interest which gain open markets for us in return for our open market to others. Protection builds up domestic industry and trade, and secures our own markets for ourselves; reciprocity builds up foreign trade and finds an outlet for our surplus.

We condemn the present administration for not keeping faith with the sugar producers of this country. The republican party favors such protection as will lead to the production on American soil of all the sugar which the American people use, and for which they pay other countries more than $100,000,000 annually.

To all our products—to those of the mine and field as well as to those of the shop and factory—to hemp, to wool, the product of the great industry of sheep husbandry, as well as to the finished woolens of the mill, we promise the most ample protection.

We favor restoring the early American policy of discriminating duties for the up-building of our merchant marine and the protection of our shipping in the foreign carrying trade, so that American ships—the product of American labor, employed in American shipyards, sailing under the stars and stripes and manned, officered and owned by Americans—may regain the carrying of our foreign commerce.

The republican party is unreservedly for sound money. It caused the enactment of the law providing for the resumption of specie payments in 1879; since then every dollar has been as gold.

GARRETT A. HOBART.

We are unalterably opposed to every measure calculated to debase our currency or impair the credit of our country. We are therefore opposed to the free coinage of silver except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote, and until such agreement can be obtained, the existing standard must be preserved. All our silver and paper currency must be maintained at parity with gold, and we favor all measures designed to maintain inviolably the obligations of the United States and all our money, whether coin or paper, at the present standard, the standard of the most enlightened nations of the earth.

The veterans of the union armies deserve and should receive fair treatment and generous recognition. Whenever practicable they should be given the preference in the matter of employment, and they are entitled to the enactment of such laws as are best calculated to secure the fulfillment of the pledges made to them in the dark days of the country's peril. We denounce the practice in the pension bureau, so recklessly and unjustly carried on by the present administration of reducing pensions and arbitrarily dropping names from the rolls, as deserving the severest condemnation of the American people.

Our foreign policy should be at all times firm, vigorous and dignified, and all our interests in the western hemisphere carefully watched and guarded. The Hawaiian islands should be controlled by the United States and no foreign power should be permitted to interfere with them; the Nicaragua canal should be built, owned and operated by the United States; and by the purchase of the Danish islands we should secure a proper and much needed naval station in the West Indies.

The massacres in Armenia have aroused the deep sympathy and just indignation of the American people, and we believe that the United States should exercise all the influence it can properly exert to bring these atrocities to an end. In Turkey American residents have been exposed to the gravest dangers and American property destroyed there, and everywhere American citizens and American property must be absolutely protected at all hazards and at any cost.

We reassert the Monroe doctrine in its full extent, and we reaffirm the right of the United States to give the doctrine effect by responding to the appeals of an American state for friendly intervention in case of European encroachment. We have not interfered and shall not interfere with the existing possessions of any European power in this hemisphere, but their possessions must not, on any pretext, be extended. We hopefully look forward to the eventual withdrawal of the European powers from this hemisphere and to the ultimate union of all the English-speaking part of the continent by the free consent of its inhabitants.

The government of Spain, having lost control of Cuba, and being unable to protect the property or lives of resident American citizens or to comply with its treaty obligations, we believe that the government of the United States should actively use its influence and good offices to restore peace and give independence to the island.

For the protection of the equality of our American citizenship and of the wages of our workingmen against the fatal competition of low-priced labor, we demand that the immigration laws be thoroughly enforced, and so extended as to exclude from entrance to the United States those who can neither read nor write.

HON. C. W. FAIRBANKS, TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.

The civil service law was placed on the statute book by the republican party, which has always sustained it, and we renew our repeated declarations that it shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable.

We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one free and unrestricted ballot, and that such ballot be counted and returned as cast.

We proclaim our unqualified condemnation of the uncivilized and barbarous practices, well known as lynching or killing of human beings, suspected or charged with crime, without process of law.

We favor the creation of a national board of arbitration to settle and adjust differences which may arise between employers and employed engaged in inter-state commerce.

We believe in an immediate return to the free homestead policy of the republican party and urge the passage by congress of the satisfactory free homestead measure which has already passed the house and is now pending in the senate.

We sympathize with all wise and legitimate efforts to lessen and prevent the evils of intemperance and promote morality.

The republican party is mindful of the rights and interests of women. Protection of American industries includes equal opportunities, equal pay for equal work, and protection to the home. We favor the admission of women to wider spheres of usefulness, and welcome their co-operation in rescuing the country from democratic and populistic mismanagement and misrule.

At 11:05 the chair recognized Senator Teller, who was received with loud and continued applause.

Senator Teller handed to the chair his substitute for the financial plank. It was read by the secretary and is as follows:

"We, the undersigned members of the committee on resolutions, being unable to agree with that portion of the majority report which treats of the subject of coinage and finance, respectfully submit the following paragraph as a substitute therefor:

"The republican party favors the use of both gold and silver as equal standard money, and pledges its power to secure the free, unrestricted and independent coinage of gold and silver at our mints at a ratio of sixteen parts of silver to one of gold."

Mr. Teller then advanced to the front and in earnest tones addressed the convention at length in explanation of his course. Senator Teller retired from the stage at 11:45. There were cries for Mr. Foraker to reply. Senator-elect Foraker moved that the Teller substitute be laid on the table. Colorado asked for a roll call. Montana and Nevada seconded it.

The motion to table the free silver substitute carries by a vote of 818½ to 105½.

Mr. Foraker was recognized to move the previous question on the passage of the resolutions.

Mr. Dubois demanded a roll call of states on the passage of the financial plank and Colorado and Montana seconded the call.

The chairman said the question to be voted on was "Shall the financial plank be adopted as the sense of this convention?" On this the roll of states was called.

The official announcement on adoption of the financial plank of the majority was: Ayes, 812½; nayes, 110½.

The chair declared the financial plank adopted and the entire platform was then adopted unanimously by a viva voce vote.

When the result of the vote adopting the platform was made apparent, Senator Teller sent up to the secretary's desk a lengthy protest, which was read by Senator Cannon, of Utah.

When Mr. Cannon had nearly finished the reading of the document cries of time and counter cries of "no," "let him finish" were raised.

The chair again appealed for respectful attention to the protest, which he said was nearly finished.

At his closing words, declaring that the republican party, once the redeemer of the people, was now about to become its oppressor, a storm of hisses and groans was raised from all parts of the hall, and cries of "down" were raised.

The chair appealed for order, saying: "The chair suggests in the interest of the republican party that whatever is to be said within reasonable limits by those who can no longer remain in our organization ought to be listened to with respect and attention, believing that full answer to all such declarations will be made by the great majority of the American people at the polls next November." Applause.

The names of the signers to the protest as read by the secretary were greeted with hisses, and a voice in the rear called out "Good-by, my lovers, good-by," as Senator Teller and his associates then filed out of the hall, marching down the main aisle. The whole convention rose and yelled and waved flags, hats and fans while the band played patriotic airs, the assemblage singing the chorus: "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue" and shouting till they were hoarse. The chair, when the tumult had in some measure subsided, said in his slow, deliberate way:

"Gentlemen of the convention, there seems to be enough delegates left to do business." (Great cheers.)

Senator Brown, of Utah, rose to a question of privilege and the chair, in according him the floor expressed a hope that the request had not been made for the purpose of saying anything offensive to this convention.

Senator Brown, speaking on the platform, said:

Mr. Chairman: "The delegation from Utah does not bolt. (Cheers.) We do not believe that the republican party is the oppressor of the people, but the guardian of liberty and the protector of honest government. (Applause.)

The total number of silver men who bolted the convention were 21, including four senators and two congressmen.

The states were then called for the choice of members of the national committee and the names were sent up.

The president then directed the call of states for nominations for the presidency. The first state to respond was Iowa, when Mr. R. M. Baldwin, of Council Bluffs, came to the platform and nominated Senator W. B. Allison, of Iowa.

The next state to respond was Massachusetts and Senator Lodge, of that state, came to the platform and nominated Thomas B. Reed for the presidency. Mr. Reed's nomination was seconded by Charles E. Littleford, of Maine.

A round of cheers greeted Mr. Depew as he made his way to the platform and proceeded to put in nomination Gov. Levi P. Morton.

The state of Ohio was reached at 3.07 p. m., and Senator-elect Foraker rose in his place to place in nomination William McKinley, of Ohio.

Delegates and spectators jumped to chairs and tables. Fans, hats, plumes, the McKinley flags, etc., were waved for the space of ninety seconds. A bust of McKinley, presented by Mr. Hirsch, of the University of Chicago, was hoisted over Senator Foraker's head.

As fast as enthusiasm subdued in one quarter it began in another. Trumpets and bugles were blown. Gov. Bushnell stood on a chair waving a plume that towered over all of those around it. The galleries joined in the enthusiasm with heartiness. The gigantic crayon of McKinley which had been exhibited at the Southern hotel was brought in and elevated to the gallery and immediately facing the chair. In the midst of the din the band struck up "Marching Through Georgia," and the audience joined in. It was an enthusiastic and impressive demonstration.

Senator Thurston seconded McKinley's nomination the speaker finishing at 4 p. m. with great applause.

Gen. Hastings, of Pennsylvania, then placed Senator Matthew S. Quay in nomination.

At 4:14 Gov. Hastings named Quay. The delegates from Pennsylvania mounted their chairs and there was a repetition of the scenes of a [illegible] was somewhat [illegible].

At 4:23 the band struck up "Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching." The Quay adherents are anxious to equal the McKinley demonstration.

4:24 the chair has given up the attempt to get order. The band now changes to "Rally Round the Flag." Two-thirds of the convention has started the refrain, "Quay, Quay, Matt S. Quay."

Hon. W. H. Anderson, of Montgomery, Ala., seconded the nomination of Maj. McKinley.

A vote was then taken on the candidates for president of the United States. The result was: For McKinley, 659¼; Reed, 84½; Allison, 35½; Morton, 38; Quay, 61½; Cameron, 1.

Total number delegates present, 906.

Mr. Lodge moved for Massachusetts to make the selection unanimous. The motion was carried by a standing vote.

Senator Lodge then moved that the convention proceed with the nomination of vice president. It was carried with the addition that nominating speeches be limited to five minutes. There was considerable confusion when nominations for vice president were declared to be in order. The delegates were on the floor caucusing, and thousands of spectators left the hall.

Mr. Fessenden, of Connecticut, nominated ex-Gov. Bulkeley.

Mr. Hobart was nominated, and seconded by Mr. Humphrey, of Illinois.

Mr. Allen, of Rhode Island, nominated Charles Warner Lippitt, of that state.

Mr. Randolph suggested the name of Henry Clay Evans, of Tennessee. His nomination was seconded by Mr. Smith (colored), of Kentucky.

Mr. I. C. Walker, of Virginia, colored, put in nomination his fellow-delegate, James A. Walker.

SENATOR THURSTON, NEBRASKA.

A delegate from West Virginia reported that that state was solid for sound money, solid for McKinley and solid for Hobart, of New Jersey, for vice president.

The balloting for vice president then began. The call had only proceeded as far as South Dakota when it became evident that Hobart had been nominated on the first ballot and the delegates and the crowd in the hall began to leave the building.

Resolutions were offered and agreed to, appointing the chairman, Mr. Thurston, and the temporary chairman, Mr. Fairbanks, chairman respectively of the two committees to notify the nominees for president and vice-president which will meet Friday morning at the Southern hotel.

Resolutions of thanks were also offered to the chairman, temporary chairman and the officers of the convention, and suitable acknowlegements were made by Messrs. Thurston and of Mr. Fairbanks.

The result of the ballot for vice-president was announced by the chair as follows: Hobart, 533¾; Evans, 277¼; Bulkeley, 39; Lippitt, 8; Walker, 24; Reed, 3; Thurston, 2; Frederick Grant, 2; Depew, 3; Morton, 1. Absent, 23.

The chair then formally declared Garrett A. Hobart, of New Jersey, the nominee for vice president of the United States, and the convention adjourned sine die at 7:11 p. m.

DEATH PENALTY

Imposed on Alonzo Walling for the Part He Took

In the Atrocious Murder of Pearl Bryan at Ft. Thomas, Ky.—The Verdict Easily Reached, Though It Was Withheld for Some Time So as Not to Create Excitement.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 16.—The first argument before the jury in the Walling trial was made Monday afternoon by Attorney Shepherd, for the defense. He spoke for one hour and fifteen minutes, and covered only the principal points in the case and in a brief manner. There was little attempt by Mr. Shepherd to present his arguments with much elaborateness or oratorical effect, but he was forcible, logical, and came to his points in plain, simple, every-day language. Many portions of the evidence were left out by Mr. Shepherd, as he explained, because Col. Washington was better acquainted with them than he was.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 17.—Silas P. Hays, the Greencastle attorney, surprised a number of people Tuesday when he made the first argument for the prosecution against Alonzo Walling in the Campbell county circuit court.

He began by submitting three propositions to the jury—First, who was murdered? Second, when, where, how and for what purpose was the murder committed? Third, by whom?

Mr. Hays waxed eloquent as he proceeded with his argument. When Mr. Hays referred to Walling as "a fiend in hell" Mrs. Walling, the prisoner's aged mother, and Mrs. Charles Walling, his sister-in-law, wrought to a high tension of suppressed emotion and excitement, became hysterical and wept copiously, and had to be escorted from the courtroom.

Mr. Hays finished his argument at 3:35 p. m., and Col. Washington immediately began his address in defense of Walling.

Col. Washington was in ill health, but his voice had lost none of its force; his language none of its eloquence. He began by a severe oral chastisement of Mr. Hays for his utter disregard of the court's instructions, the law and the evidence, and of his "cheap wit on so serious an occasion, when solemnity alone should reign."

NEWPORT, Ky., June 18.—In the Walling trial Col. Washington took up the entire day with his argument for the defense. It was a brilliant effort and made without doubt a marked impression upon the jury. In the forenoon he spoke particularly upon the expert medical testimony, and no great interest seemed to be manifested by the jurors while he was upon that subject.

During the first half hour of the afternoon, the same listless attention was paid to the colonel's argument, but when he touched upon the testimony of the Bellevue witnesses and those others who claimed to have identified Scott Jackson, Walling and Pearl Bryan on Thursday and Friday, and began to cut up and analyze it, a change took place gradually in the attention of the jurors. They straightened up in their chairs, and as Col. Washington proceeded to take the testimony of Foertmeyer, Mrs. Holmes, Foster, Pinkard, Kinney, Dave Wallingford, Allen Johnson and Tegeler to pieces, and fling it with biting sarcasm at the heads of the counsel for the prosecution, their attitude was one of the deepest interest.

The courtroom was crowded during both sessions. Mrs. Walling sat by her son as usual, surrounded by her other two sons and their wives.

Thursday morning Mr. Lockhart will begin the closing argument of the case, and it will go to the jury sometime Thursday afternoon.

The general impression Wednesday evening was that the jury in this case will not come to a decision in such a short time as did the Jackson jury. The probability is, in the general opinion, that the jury will disagree between an acquittal and a life sentence. In that case the jury may be out all night, perhaps longer.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 19.—The case of Alonzo Walling, for the murder of Pearl Bryan at Ft. Thomas, Ky., the night of January 31, 1896, was given into the hands of the jury Thursday morning. At four p. m. they came to a decision and were brought into court.

After being polled by the clerk, they announced that they had found Alonzo Walling guilty of murder in the first degree, and that the penalty would be death.

Walling received the announcement of the verdict with a tear in his eye. His relatives who were with him burst out crying. Their sorrow was pitiable to behold.

STEWART INTERVIEWED.

He Thinks the Action of the Bolters at the St. Louis Convention Significant.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Senator Stewart, of Nevada, who is at the Hoffman house, regards the action of Senator Teller and the men who followed him out of the St. Louis convention as significant in the highest degree.

"Senator Teller represented the real sentiment of nine-tenths of the people west of the Mississippi river," said he, "and three-fourths of the people of the United States. To me it appears a hopeful sign and very remarkable, that 105 men could have been found in the convention to vote as they did against the consolidated bank officers of America and Europe. The friends of silver have succeeded in electing a majority of delegates in favor of the United States and against English rule and are anxious to make an honest effort to rescue the party, which Cleveland betrayed, from the control of Pierpont Morgan, the Belmonts and their associates. It remains to be seen whether politics and intrigue will debauch the convention at Chicago."

IN UTAH

Public Sentiment Indorses the Action of the Bolters.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 20.—It is yet too early to index public sentiment upon the momentous events at St. Louis. In the streets here comment generally was favorable to the action of the men who left the convention. Judging from the record of the April state convention, which indorsed the action of Senator Cannon in voting against the Dingley bill in the interests of free silver, there will be many here who will approve his leaving the convention. Outside of the cities and mining camps the silver sentiment, while strong, is not as prominent as the feeling in favor of a protective tariff, and it may be that McKinley will carry the republican strength in these districts. Still, good judges prefer to await the other nominations before hazarding a prediction as to the outcome.

Pressmen Elect Officers.

CHICAGO, June, 20.—The convention of the International Printing Pressmen's union Friday elected the following officers: President, Theodore Galoskowsky, of St. Louis; first vice president, J. Birmingham, Washington; second vice president, J. W. Connor, Philadelphia; third vice president, Frank Pampusch, St. Paul; secretary-treasury, James Gilson, Brooklyn, and delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention, Jesse Johnson. Nashville, Detroit, Washington and New York are candidates for the next convention.

MAN KILLERS.

An Official Test of the Krag-Jorgensen Army Rifle.

The Death Rate Would Probably be Four Killed to One Wounded—Anything Grazed by a Bullet is Mutilated—A Test Made of the Shrapnel Shot.

FT. RILEY, Kas., June 22.—An official test of the new military rifle, the Krag-Jorgensen, was made on dead bodies at this post under the direction of Dr. J. D. Griffith, of Kansas City, member of the United States Association of Military Surgeons and chairman of the national committee on testing new guns, assisted by a dozen attending surgeons and photographers.

The object of the test was to find out the relative effects of the use of the Krag-Jorgensen gun, from a humanitarian point of view, as compared with other army rifles. This test has demonstrated to the minds of those who participated that the Krag-Jorgensen gun can not be called a humane gun.

At distances up to 1,000 yards the explosive quality of the Krag-Jorgensen bullet, and consequently the cruelty of its use, is terrific. The explosive quality [illegible] marked in soft tissues and cavities, the brain and lung tissues being terribly torn and the heart burst. When anything is grazed by a bullet they are mutilated.

Blood vessels are cut, not torn, hence the death rate would be very great, four killed to one wounded probably.

Tendons are the only tissues in the body which seem to be turned aside by the ball.

A test of Shrapnel shot used by the artillery followed the Krag-Jorgensen test.

To do effective work the shell should burst 30 or 40 yards in front of the object aimed at. Some very effective wounds were obtained, and the opinion strengthened that the Shrapnel gun is to be the man killer of the future.

THE SECOND TIME.

Another Tornado Visits St. Louis—About Seventy Houses Damaged With Fourteen Minor Casualties.

ST. LOUIS, June 22.—A sharp reminder of the recent disastrous tornado visited this city at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The weather was oppressively hot and the sky cloudless. From the same quarter that the great tornado came a mass of dark clouds swept across the city. The wind blew at a forty mile speed and rain fell in sheets. Many of the houses that were partly restored after the tornado were again damaged, but up to 9 p. m. no fatalities were reported. In Cabanne place, a fine residence section, the damage in the aggregate is greatest. R. J. Boekhoff, a grocer at Third and Carr streets, Saturday finished rebuilding the top floor of his three-story house destroyed by the former storm. Again it was blown down. The roof of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy passenger depot at Second and Carr streets, also just rebuilt, was partly torn off. About twenty telegraph poles were blown down and trees and bill boards were leveled. In all about seventy houses were damaged. The property loss is estimated at $15,000. Panic seized the people in the track of the storm and wild rumors of death and destruction were on every tongue. Only fourteen minor casualties are reported.

WITH OPEN ARMS.

Senator Teller Will Be Received by His Constituents.

DENVER, Col., June 22.—The news of the action of Senator Teller and the Colorado and Idaho delegations in withdrawing from the national republican convention has been received throughout the state with great enthusiasm. In Denver there will be a demonstration when Senator Teller returns, which will be by Thursday, and Senator Cannon, of Utah, will be the feature of another demonstration when he passes through. The mining camps are especially jubilant. At Aspen the hills vibrated with the boom of improvised cannon, and at Cripple creek the streets were thronged by enthusiastic crowds all night. At Pueblo the company of the national guard fired a salute of five guns when the news was received, and in the northern and southern Colorado towns the enthusiasm was unconfined.

SPAIN ANGERED

Over the Platform Adopted by the St. Louis Convention—A Conflict Probable.

LONDON, June 22.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Madrid says that the platform adopted by the St. Louis convention has caused much anger in Spain and that a conflict with the United States is almost fixed. The Rothschilds have loaned the government 100,000,000 pesetas, and the money will be mostly applied to the purchase of warships. The government is responding to an undoubted national sentiment, trusting probably to receiving help from other powers.

Sixtieth Year of Her Reign.

LONDON, June 22.—The queen Saturday entered upon the sixtieth year of her reign. If she lives to complete the year her reign will have been the longest of any English sovereign. George II. reigned 59 years and 96 days. Beyond the usual ceremonies of Accession day, there will be celebrations, these having been postponed until the end of the year, when there will be jubilee fetes similar to those held in 1887 on the occasion of the fiftieth year of her majesty's reign.

Reparation Demanded of Spain.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Instructions of a direct and positive character have been sent to the United States minister at Madrid, Mr. Hannis Taylor, to make strong representations to the Spanish government with a view of securing reparation for indignities to Dr. Jose Delagado and other American citizens in Cuba. The instructions went by mail some days ago, and should reach Madrid about the present time. A cablegram has been sent to Mr. Taylor at Paris, asking that he return to Madrid as soon as he is able to travel, in order to attend to the matter.

Death has again invaded our little city, and this time, claimed Uncle Garrard Berkshire, a highly respected old gentleman. Although he was 86 years of age and quite feeble, his death was not expected so suddenly. Tuesday morning of last week he arose and ate his breakfast about 7 o'clock, and then retired to his room. About an hour afterwards, Mrs. J. W. Berkshire, with whom he resided, heard a queer noise, and went to the door of Uncle Garrard's room and as she opened it heard him say, "God have mercy on me," and then his life had passed away. He was a great-uncle to John and George Berkshire, they being his closest relatives. His remains were taken to Grant county, Wednesday, and laid to rest by the side of his wife in the Lebanon cemetery.

A very queer phonomena presented itself to some of our citizens on Monday night of last week. Before I begin my story, dear readers, I want to impress upon your minds that this is no "ghost, hob-gobble or jack 'o lantern" tale, but a fact. Monday evening about bed time as Mr. W. T. Evans, who is a christian gentleman, an elder of the Christian church, was sitting on his porch a queer and very mysterious sight presented itself. About or near the river bank he saw a very brilliant light, sparkling bright, it appeared at first to be the reflection of an electric light but it advanced toward him and when within 100 yards and apparently, 20 ft. from the earth it grew brighter, then one of the queerest if not the prettiest sight that ever met the human eye presented itself in the form of an angel with wings spread and looking grand beyond conception. Mr. Evans called to his wife, who came and viewed the sight as if thunderstruck. The phenomenon, or whatever it may have been, rose higher and higher and at last disappeared over Randall's hill. Many of the unbelieving may doubt this, but if they will kindly ask Bro. Evans he will tell them the same thing. He is a believer in Christ and says "he actually believes it is a warning for the wicked to repent of their sins." There were several others who saw the same thing, but do not want their names published for fear the people will call them "believers in ghosts." Whatever it was it is causing a great deal of talk, and some are badly scared up.

DEL VECHO.

Without being noisy or boisterous in any way, it developed, one day last week, that there is a very strong preference in this community for Nathan S. Walton to be the standard bearer of the Democracy in the Sixth Congressional District in the next election for Congressman. Quite a number of his friends held an informal meeting and Dr. Gaines was deputed to address him a letter to ascertain his views on the subject, and herewith is presented the frank and manly reply:

"June 20th, 1896.

Dr. G. F. Gaines—

My Dear Friend:—I appreciate the handsome compliment you pay me and will ever hold it in grateful remembrance. My home affairs are in a condition that I could not without considerable sacrifice make the active campaign that would be necessary, and proper to be made, and the very idea of a heated scramble is repulsive to me. I am proud to know that my heart beats in unison with yours on the "silver question." We want no gold bug in Congress, no straddle bug, nor anyother kind of a bug that has not an equal fondness for each metal and accord them equal privileges. I want the lines clearly and sharply drawn between our Democratic and Republican candidates. We want free coinage at 16 to 1. Yours, N. S. WALTON."

There is no doubt but that Walton would poll every Democrat in the county.

Beaver.

Married—June 17th, at Hughes Chapel, Mr. George T. Jack to Miss. Emma T. Ellis, Rev. Lancaster officiating. The bride has long been accounted one of the prettiest girls in Beaver Lick's best society, while her choice for life is conceded to be one of Boone county's most promising young teachers. The church was filled to overflowing, and when the bride and groom came down the aisle, at 2 o'clock p. m. preceded by the bride's two little sisters and their two little cousins, George and Sam Sleet, stepping to the music of Beethoven's Wedding March, gently and sweetly touched by Will E. Cook, they presented a nuptial scene of loveliness seldom witnessed in a country church.

After the pleasant couple, with their bridesmaids and groomsmen, had placed themselves nicely in the chancel, the good man, neath the soft glare of colored wax candles, pronounced the marriage ceremony in a touching and impressive manner. The floor was literally strewn with daisies, and when the bridal couple stepped forth to receive the congratulations of their many friends, they were pronounced by all present, a very pretty couple. They immediately left for a western bridal tour, and will be at home to their friends after July 1st.

Miss Virginia Finch returned from Nazareth college, Friday evening, where she graduated with the highest honors. She had the honor of being the valedictorian for the class. After the closing exercises a party was given in her honor by Mayor Deffa, of Bardstown, and it was attended by the elite of the city.

A new barber struck town the other day and hired a shop, but failed to return at the appointed time, so Ashcraft still has the field to himself.

The Florence ball team beat the Elsmeres 29 to 6.

Mrs. Dr Dameron and daughter, Miss Elsie, of Newport, Miss Gertrude Stewart, of Cincinnati, and Miss Kate Corwine, of Covington, and Miss Bessie Crigler, of Erlanger, are visiting Mrs. Ed Porter.

Mr. Jack Lewis, a well known engineer on the Q. & C. was seriously injured last week, by his engine colliding with a drove of 8 horses at Sadieville, Scott county. At one time his life was despaired of, but at last accounts he was improving slowly. Seven of the horses were killed. His wife was formerly Miss Jennie Mitchel of this place, and she has the sympathy of all in her present trouble.

Our townsman, T. L. Swetman, has been appointed deputy county clerk, and he is now prepared to get up legal papers such as deeds, mortgages wills &c.

Mr. Asa Meacham was badly shaken up by his horse running away and throwing him out of a buggy a few days since. He was under medical treatment at the city for several days but is now back home.

'Squire Wagstaff held court at Constance, last Saturday.

Mrs. Alonzo Graves and daughter, Miss Lizzie, of Covington, are visiting the Misses Hoggins.

Messrs. Andy Collins, jr., and C. L. Crisler passed through town the other day. It is said they visited the dime museum, where they tried to secure an engagement as the siamese twins. Had they succeeded in making the engagement they had a punctured bicycle tire which they intended to use as an unbilical cord to join them.

This is all INO.

SEAL BIDS.

Seal bids for the refreshment stand privileges at the K. of P. barbecue and picnic on July 11th, 1896, will be received by the undersigned until 12 m. July 4th, 1896. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

J. M. LASSING, Ch'm'n Com.

The cisterns are replenished again.

There will be boat loads of black berries.

The grass will grow now.

Small, spring chickens are being put on the market.

The fourth of July comes on Saturday this year.

Glorious 4th—Low rates from all points on the Q. & C. Tickets for 1⅓ fare for the round trip will be sold via the Q. & C. July 2nd, 3d and for morning trains July 4. Good to return until the 7th. Ask agents for particulars.

NOTICE—Parties for whom I did work and sold paper and paint to on credit, and who have persisted in owing me balances of $1 to $5 for five years, are kindly requested to leave the same with W. M. Rachal & Co., Union, Ky., by June 15th, 1896, so I can settle up.

Notice, Taxpayers.

I hereby notify the taxpayers of this county that they must pay their taxes at once. The road money is now due, and the Supervisors are calling on me for the money due them, and I cannot pay it without you pay your taxes. I do not want to be compelled to advertise and sell your property, but I will surely do so if you do not pay up forthwith.

Local News.

A good rain fell here Sunday night.

When you meet Wat Brown, lift your hat.

Chinch bugs destroyed a field of corn for T. G. Willis, of Bullittsville.

Born on the 22d inst., to W. C. Brown and wife, an eight pound daughter.

Uncle Noah Sebree had his lands on Double Lick divided among his children, last week.

Considerable complaint is being made because of the seining and netting of the creeks.

The Saturday Bulletin says Aurora is not bow-legged if she does stand on both sides of Hogan creek.

The tobacco that has been set is growing very nicely, and some of it can be topped at 10 or 12 leaves.

Local option carried in Grant county last week, by 319 majority. A small vote was cast at the election.

In some neighborhoods in this county very little rain fell Sunday night, while in others it rained very hard.

Trustees must bear in mind that they have a compulsory educational law to enforce during the next school year.

A very large crowd attended the sale of the personal estate of the late John S. Huey, last Saturday. The property sold, brought fair prices.

The oat crop will be, at least, a fair one, but not large enough to supply the fall off in the hay crop. A great deal of corn will be cut up this fall.

Temp Graves' picnic at the Harvest Home Grounds, last Saturday, was well attended, and all had a delightful time notwithstanding the extreme heat.

J. F. Blyth received, recently, from Illinois, a pair of Poland China pigs, which he pronounces the finest pigs of that breed, that were ever seen in this county.

Had not the melon growers had such bad luck in the spring of 1895, they would have planted about April 1st this year, and the lucious home-grown melon would have been on the market now.

Master Fred Wilson fell out of the maple tree in front of the court house, Friday evening, cutting a very ugly gash in his leg between the knee and the ankle. It took Dr. Furnish some time to dress the wound, but the little fellow submitted to the operation like a hero.

A little child of Mr. John Baldon, who lives out on the Petersburg pike, crawled under the house, a few days since, and was missed by its mother before its whereabouts was discovered, when she procured an ax and chopped a hole through the floor and took the little fellow out.

Next Thursday is the day for the examination of common school graduates. All who wish to apply for a common school diplomas are requested to be on hand early that day. We will also examine any who wish to be appointed to the State College.

L. H. Voshell, County Sup't.

One of the questions which the colored applicants for teachers' certificates had to answer at the last examination was: "What was the Omnibus Bill?" You can imagine how the examiners smiled when they found among the written answers the following: "It was the omnibus used to take the colored people back to North Carolina."

During a heavy storm at Rising Sun, Sunday evening, lightning struck the Presbyterian Church while services were being held, doing $400 damage. All the lights were put out, but no one was injured. At the same hour children's day exercises were being held at the Methodist Church. A current of electricity passed through the building severely injuring Blanche Riggs, who was speaking. Cool-headed men prevented a panic at this church.

Mrs. Jesse Kirkpatrick, an aged citizen of Burlington, died last Saturday morning about 1 o'clock, after several weeks' illness, aged 78 years. The remains were interred Sunday afternoon in the old cemetery north of town. A short service at the grave was conducted by Rev. Hoover, pastor of the Baptist church of this place, of which the deceased had been a member for several years, having joined under the pastorship of Rev. Dickens. Mrs. Kirkpatrick leaves four sons and two daughters, all of whom are grown, but one of them, Miss Gussie, being unmarried. One by one the old citizens of the town have passed away during the last four or five years, and now but few of them remain.

There was a very large attendance at the Sunday School Convention held at Hopeful church last Thursday. The program was quite lengthy, and, in nearly every instance, those to whom subjects were assigned, responded with interesting papers or speeches. Eight or ten ministers, representing four or five denominations were there, and contributed largely to the success of the convention. An abundant and excellent dinner spread at noon, and of which all were invited to partake, was not the least entertaining feature of the day, and those who furnished the many good things for dinner were untiring in their efforts to have everyone partake freely, and the person who failed to have his appetite thoroughly satisfied had no one to blame but himself.

COUNTY COURT.

June 11.—R. C. Tilley qualified as Notary Public.

R. C. Tilley appointed guardian for A. D. and L. A. Cook.

J. S. Houston appointed guardian for Clara and G. C. Hoard.

Base Ball.

The Burlington second nine and a Bellevue team played a long and tedious game here last Saturday. Score, 32 to 16 in favor of Burlington.

The Hebron base ball club has organized and will play the opening game at Hebron next Saturday, June 27th. The visiting club is a picked nine under the management of Edward Gallagher, of the Manhattan's, and will be composed of some of the best amateur players around Cincinnati.

There will be two games of ball at the Burlington park July 4th. The visiting club will be a strong one, and its name will be given next week. Come out and see the game.

PERSONAL MENTION.

James T. Gaines, of Utzinger, was in town Monday.

Miss Rose Adams, of Big Bone, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Adams.

Eddie Hogan got one of his ankles badly sprained while playing ball last Saturday.

Mrs. Jennie Stephens, returned to her home at Petersburg, last Tuesday, after several days very pleasant visit with her brother, J. B. Berkshire, of this place.

Dr. W. H. Blanton, of Harrodsburg, was the guest of Dr. Furnish, last Wednesday night. The Doctor looks like the blue grass atmosphere is especially beneficial to him.

Charles Westbay, Kirb Tanner and others, composed a fishing party down on Gunpowder, Saturday. Of course the boys made so much noise the girls could catch no fish.

Col. John M. Moody, of Bellevue, is now a government officer, being the keeper of the government light recently established at the head of the chute at Laughery island.

Harry Blyth spent last Wednesday in Petersburg. Some say Harry was assisting his friend Mathews to sit up his political pins for the next congressional nomination in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Tanner, of the Mt. Pleasant neighborhood, were in town Monday. They were conveying to Spencer Tanner a portion of the land allotted Harvey in the division of his father's lands.

William Berkshire, of the Petersburg neighborhood, was in town one day last week, and in discussing the outlook for wheat, said he had a piece that he believed would make twenty-five bushels per acre.

Those Burlington people who attended the Sunday School Convention at Hopeful, last Thursday, can testify as to the splendid dinner contributed for the occasion by Mrs. James M. Utz and Mrs. E. H. Blankenbecker.

We met our old friend, Benj. F. Crisler, down on Gunpowder, one day last week, splendidly equipped for piscatorial pleasure, but when we left him he had succeeded in landing but one of the finny monsters that cause so many to seek pleasure along the rugged banks of that creek.

Half rates via the Queen & Crescent Route from all points for the B. P. O. E. meeting Grand Lodge, Cincinnati, July 8th. Vestibuled Limited Trains and 109 miles shortest line. W. C. Rinearson, G. P. A., Cincinnati, O.

Jack Hagish, son of John Hagish, of the Pleasant Hill neighborhood, has been out of shape, mentally, for several days. Monday evening he came to town, and in a short time was landed in jail to await an investigation.

The best rain that has fallen here this year, commenced about 10 o'clock Monday night and continued until after daylight Tuesday morning, giving the earth a thorough wetting.

The K. of P's desire it undersood that no intoxicating liquors will be allowed on the ground on the day of their barbecue and picnic.

The splendid rains of the past few days have made the farmers' faces radiant with smiles.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Union.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stephens, of Bullittsville, spent Wednesday with Mr. C. T. Rice and family.

The many friends here of Dr. W. H. Blanton and wife, were disappointed that they did not visit them during their short leave of Harrodsburg.

Mr. Asbury and wife, of Mason Co., are visiting Mrs. Asbury's parents near this place.

Hal Blanton was to be found at his old stand in Union, Sunday.

The Masons are looking forward to a pleasant day at their hall the 24th inst. The wives of the Masonic brethren protested against their being excluded from the festivities and as usual gained their point.

Robt. Tigrett has secured the contract to carry the mail from Union to Florence. Mr. Thomas Baker made a faithful and efficient carrier, and he will be missed by his many friends. He expects to rent his place and make his home in Walton.

Jack Hagish, son of John Hagish, of Gunpowder, has given his parents and the community a great deal of trouble. They fear that his mind is deranged.

Some of the members of the Baptist church at this place expect to visit their pastor, Rev. Adams, Saturday the 27th. They will go with well filled baskets and expect a delightful day.

Mrs. Sarah Huey, after a week's visit to her sister, Mrs. Quisenbury, Hamilton, Ohio, returned home Saturday.

Master William Poindexter is visiting his grand mother, Mrs. J. W. Kennedy.

Mrs. Dora Bannister and Mrs. Sarah Hedges were visiting Mrs. Birdie Bannister, who has been sick in the hospital in Cincinnati, the past 2 months.

Miss Etta Riley spent several days with Miss Jean Chambers at Beaver, last week.

Mr. P. Taliaferro has improved the looks of his house very much with a fresh coat of paint. I hope others will do likewise.

Miss Josie Gatson, after a pleasant visit to Independence, returned home.

GOD GUIDES ALL.

One Hand That Never Grows Tired, an Eye That Never Sleeps.

God Directs Every Detail of Our Smallest Affairs and Watches Over All Our Pleasures and Our Cares—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

A most uplifting truth is presented in Dr. Talmage's discourse of Sunday. His text was Matt. x., 29: "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father."

You see the Bible will not be limited in choice of symbols. There is hardly a beast, or bird, or insect which has not been called to illustrate some divine truth—the ox's patience, the ant's industry, the spider's skill, the hind's surefootedness, the eagle's speed, the dove's gentleness and even the sparrow's meanness and insignificance. In the oriental countries none but the poorest people buy the sparrow and eat it—so very little meat is there on the bones, and so poor is it what there is of it. The comfortable population would not think of touching it any more than they would think of eating a bat or a lamprey. Now, says Jesus, if God takes such good care of a poor bird that is not worth a cent, will He not care for you, an immortal?

We associate God with revolutions. We can see a divine purpose in the discovery of America, in the invention of the art of printing, in the exposure of the gunpowder plot, in the contrivance of the needle gun, in the ruin of an Austrian or Napoleonic despotism; but it is hard to see God in the minute personal affairs of our lives. We think of God as making a record of the starry host, but can not realize the Bible truth that He knows how many hairs are on our head. It seems a grand thing for God to provide food for hundreds of thousands of Israelites in the desert; but we can not appreciate the truth that, when the sparrow is hungry, God stoops down and opens its mouth and puts the seed in. We are struck with the idea that God fills the universe with His presence, but can not understand how He encamps in the crystal palace of a dewdrop, or finds room to stand between the alabaster pillars of the pond lily. We can not see God in the clouds. Can we see God in the flowers at our feet?

We are apt to place God upon some great stage—or to try to do it—expecting Him there to act out His stupendous projects, but we forget that the life of a Cromwell, an Alexander, or a Washington, or an archangel, is not more under Divine inspection than your life or mine. Pompey thought there must be a mist over the eyes of God because He so much favored Cæsar. But there is no such mist. He sees everything. We say God's path is in the great waters. True enough, but no more certainty than He is in the water in the glass on the table. We say God guides the stars in their courses. Magnificent truth! but no more certain truth than that He decides which road or street you shall take in coming to church. Understand that God does not sit upon an indifferent or unsympathetic throne, but that He sits down beside you to-day, and stands beside me to-day, and no affair of our lives is so insignificant but that it is of importance to God.

In the first place God chooses our occupation for us. I am amazed to see how many people there are dissatisfied with the work they have to do. I think three-fourths wish they were in some other occupation, and they spend a great deal of time in regretting that they got in the wrong trade or profession. I want to tell you that God put into operation all the influences which led to that particular choice. Many of you are not in the business that you expected to be in. You started for the ministry and learned merchandise; you started for the law and you are a physician; you preferred agriculture and you became a mechanic. You thought one way; God thought another. But you ought not to sit down and mourn over the past. You are to remember that God arranged all these circumstances by which you were made what you are.

I remark further that God has arranged the place of our dwelling. What particular city or town, street or house you shall live in seems to be a mere matter of accident. You go out to hunt for a house, and you happen to pass up a certain street, and happen to see a sign, and you select that house. Was it all happening so? Oh, no! God guided you in every step. He foresaw the future. He knew all your circumstance, and he selected just that one house as better for you than any of the ten thousand habitations in the city. Our house, however humble the roof and however lowly the portals, is as near God's heart as an Alhambra or a Kremlin. Prove it, you say. Proverbs iii., "He blesseth the habitation of the just."

I remark, further, that God arranges all friendships. You were driven to the wall. You found a man just at that crisis who sympathized with you and helped you. You say: "How lucky I was!" There was no luck about it. God sent that friend just as certainly as He sent the angels to strengthen Christ. Your domestic friends, your business friends, your Christian friends, God sent them to bless you, and if any of them have proved traitorous it is only to bring out the value of those who remain. If some die it is only that they may stand at the outposts of Heaven to greet you at your coming.

You always will have friends, warm-hearted friends, magnanimous friends; and when sickness comes to your dwelling there will be watchers; when trouble comes to your heart there will be sympathizers; when death comes there will be gentle fingers to close the eyes and fold the hands, and gentle lips to tell of a resurrection. Oh, we are compassed by a body guard of friends!

Every man, if he has behaved himself well, is surrounded by three circles of friends—those of the outer circle wishing him well; those in the next circle willing to help him; while close up to his heart are a few who would die for him. God pity the wretch who has not any friends!

I remark again, that God puts down the limit to our temporal prosperity. The world of finance seems to have no God in it. You can not tell where a man will land. The affluent fall; the poor rise. The ingenious fall; the ignorant succeed. An enterprise opening grandly shuts in bankruptcy, while out of the peat dug up from some New England marsh the millionaire builds his fortune. The poor man thinks it is chance that keeps him down; the rich man thinks it is chance which hoists him; and they are both wrong. It is so hard to realize that God rules the money market, and has a hook in the nose of the stock gambler, and that all the commercial revolutions of the world shall result in the very best for God's dear children.

My brethren, do not kick against the Divine allotments. God knows just how much money it is best for you to lose. You never gain unless it is best for you to gain. You go up when it is best for you to go up, and go down when it is best for you to go down. Prove it, you say. I will. Rom. viii. 28, "All things work together for good to them that love God." You go into a factory and you see 20 or 30 wheels, and they are going in different directions. This band is rolling off this way, and another band another way; one down and another up. You say, "What confusion in a factory!" Oh, no! all these different bands are only different parts of the machinery. So I go into your life and see strange things. Here is one providence pulling you one way and another in another way. But these are different parts of one machinery by which He will advance your everlasting and present well being.

Now you know that a second mortgage, and a third and a fourth mortgage, are often worth nothing. It is the first mortgage that is a good investment. I have to tell you that every Christian man has a first mortgage on every trial, and on every disaster, and it must make a payment of eternal advantage to his soul. How many worriments it would take out of your heart if you believed that fully. You buy goods and hope the price will go up, but you are in a fret and frown for fear the price will go down. You do not buy the goods using your best discretion in the matter, and then say, "O, Lord, I have done the best I could; I commit this whole transaction into your hands!" That is what religion is good for or it is good for nothing. There are two things, says an old proverb, you ought not to fret about: First, things that you can help; second, things which you can not help. If you can help them, why do you not apply the remedy? If you can not help them, you might as well surrender first as last. My dear brethren, do not sit any longer moping about your ledger, do not sit looking so desponding upon your stock of unsalable goods. Do you think that God is going to allow you, a Christian man, to do business alone? God is the controlling partner in every firm; and, although your debtors may abscond, although your securities may fall, although your store may burn, God will, out of an infinity of results, choose for you the very best results.

Do not have any idea you can overstep the limit that God has laid down for your prosperity. You will never get one inch beyond it. God has decided how much prosperity you can stand honorably, and employ usefully, and control righteously; and at the end of the year you will have just so many dollars and cents, just so much wardrobe, just so much furniture, just so many bonds and mortgages, and nothing more. I will give you one hundred dollars for every penny you get beyond that. God has looked over your life. He knows what is best for you, and He is going to bless you in time, and bless you for eternity; and He will do it in the best way. Your little child says, "Papa, I wish you would let me have that knife." "No," you say, "it is a sharp knife and you will cut yourself." He says, "I must have it." "But you can not have it," you reply. He gets angry and red in the face, and says he will have it; but you say he shall not have it. Are you kind in keeping it from him? So God treats His children. I say, "I wish Heavenly Father to get that." God says, "No, my child." I say, "I must have it." God says, "You can not have it." I get angry and say, "I will have it." God says, "You shall not have it," and I do not get it. Is He not kind and loving and the best of Fathers? Do you tell me there is no rule and regulation in these things? Tell that to the men who believe in no God and no Bible. Tell it not to me!

A man of large business concludes to go out of his store, leaving much of his investments in the business, and he says to his sons: "Now, I am going to leave this business in your hands. Perhaps I may come back in a little while, and perhaps not. While I am gone you will please to look after affairs." After awhile the father comes back and finds everything at loose ends, and the whole business seems to be going wrong. He says: "I am going to take possession of this business. You know I never fully surrendered it, and henceforth consider yourselves subordinates." Is he not right in doing it? He saves the business. The Lord seems to let us go on in life, guided by our own skill, and we make miserable work of it. God comes down to our shop or store and says: "Things are going wrong. I come to take charge. I am master, and I know what is best, and I proclaim my authority." We are merely subordinates. It is like a boy at school with a long sum that he can not do. He has been working at it for hours, making figures here and rubbing out figures there, and it is all mixed up, and the teacher, looking over the boy's shoulder, knows that he can not get out of it, and, cleaning the slate, says: "Begin again." Just as God does to us. Our affairs get into an inextricable entanglement, and He rubs everything out and says: "Begin again." Is He not wise and loving in so doing?

I think the trouble is that there is so large a difference between the Divine and the human estimate as to what is enough. I have heard of people striving for that which is enough, but I never heard of any one who had enough. What God calls enough for man, man calls too little. What man calls enough God says is too much. The difference between a poor man and a rich man is only the difference in banks. The rich man puts his money in the Washington bank or the Central bank or the Metropolitan bank, or some other bank of that character, while the poor man comes up and makes investments in the bank of him who runs all the quarries, all the mines, all the gold, all the earth, all Heaven. Do you think a man can fail when he is backed up like that?

You may have seen a map on which is described in red ink, the travels of the children of Israel through the desert to the Promised Land. You see how they took this and that direction, crossed the river and went through the sea. Do you know God has made a map of your life, with paths leading up to this bitterness and that success, through this river and across that sea? But blessed be God, the path always comes out at the Promised Land. Mark that! Mark that!

I remark, again, that all those things that seem to be but accidents in our life are under the Divine supervision. We sometimes seem to be going helmless and anchorless. You say: "If I had some other trade; if I had not gone there this summer; if I had lived in some other house." You have no right to say that. Every tear you wept, every step you have taken, every burden you have carried, is under Divine inspection, and that event which startled your whole household with horror God met with perfect placidity, because He knew it was for your good. It was part of a great plan projected long ago. In eternity when you come to reckon up your mercies you will point to that affliction as one of your greatest blessings.

God has a strange way with us. Joseph found his way to the Prime Minister's chair by being pushed into a pit, and to many a Christian down is up. The wheat must be flailed; the quarry must be blasted; the diamond must be ground; the Christian must be afflicted; and that single event which you supposed stood entirely alone, was a connecting link between two great chains, one chain reaching through all eternity past and the other chain reaching through all eternity future—so small an event fastening two eternities together.

A missionary, coming from India to the United States, stopped at St. Helena while the vessel was taking water. He had his little child with him. They walked along by an embankment, and a rock at that moment became loosened, and falling instantly killed the child. Was it an accident? Was it a surprise to God? Had he allowed his servant, after a life of consecration, to come to such a trial? Not such is my God. There are no accidents in the Divine mind, though they may seem so to us. God is good, and by every single incident of our life, whether it be adverse or otherwise, before earth and Heaven, God will demonstrate His mercy.

I hear a man say. "That idea belittles God. You bring Him down to such little things." Oh, I have a more thorough appreciation of God in little things than I have in great things! The mother does not wait until the child has crushed its foot or broken its arm before she administers sympathy. The child comes in with the least bruise and the mother kisses it. God does not wait for some tremendous crisis in our life, but comes down to us in our most insignificant trials, and throws over us the arms of his mercy.

Going up the White Mountains some years ago, I thought of that passage in the Bible that speaks of God as weighing mountains in a balance. As I looked at those great mountains I thought can it be possible that God can put these great mountains in scales? It was an idea too great for me to grasp; but when I saw a bluebell down by the mule's foot, on my way up Mt. Washington, then I understood the kindness and goodness of God. It is not so much of God in great things I can understand, but of God in little things.

There is a man who says: "That doctrine can not be true, because things do go so very wrong." I reply, it is no inconsistency on the part of God, but a lack of understanding on our part. I hear that men are making very fine shawls in some factory. I go on the first floor and see only the raw materials, and I ask: "Are these the shawls I have heard about?" "No," says the manufacturer, "go up to the next floor;" and I go up, and there I begin to see the design. But the man says, "Do not stop here; go up to the top floor of the factory, and you will see the idea fully carried out." I do so, and, having come to the top, see the complete pattern of an exquisite shawl. So in our life, standing down on a low level of Christian experience we do not understand God's dealings. He tells us to go up higher and higher, until we begin to understand the Divine meaning with respect to us, and we advance until we stand at the very gate of Heaven, and there see God's idea all wrought out—a perfect idea of mercy, of love, of kindness. And we say, "Just and true are all the ways." It is all right at the top. Remember there is no inconsistency on the part of God, but it is only our mental and spiritual incapacity.

So, my dear friends, this day take home this subject. Be content with such things as you have. From every grass blade under your feet learn the lesson of divine care, and never let the smallest bird flit across your path without thinking of the truth, that two sparrows are sold for a farthing, and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. Blessed be His glorious name forever. Amen.

HEAD OF THE OSTRICH.

Serves as a Weapon and Has Eyes That Can Look Backward and Forward.

As a matter of fact, the head of an ostrich is a very remarkable thing. The bird has been put together with the most ill-matched body, legs and head imaginable.

With its powerful legs it can overturn a horse. But its head is out of all proportion to the rest of its body, and is equipped in a very curious way to do the hard work required of it.

An ostrich's head is shaped very much like a steel hand punch.

It is usually about 11 inches long, made up of about equal parts of head and beak. The ostrich has no forehead, the top line of the long beak continuing to the back of the head. There are besides no projections from it of any kind. There is no nose, the bird breathing through holes in the beak. The ears are placed so far back of the head that they lap over the back of the head without projecting the fraction of an inch.

The head tapers from the knob at the back of the head to the point of the beak, and is so smooth that a blow would glance off without doing any damage. An ostrich uses its head as a weapon in fighting, and it can deal deadly blows with this curious, hammer-like instrument. The head is formed of bones which have no air cells like ordinary bones and are almost as hard as iron.

An ostrich's mouth or beak is capable of tackling any kind of food. The stomach of an ordinary able-bodied ostrich craves a diet of broken glass, stones, nails and similar appetizing foods.

This curious mouth chews up these dainties and prepares them for digestion. The ostrich is about the only living thing in the world, except a politician, that can look both ways at once. It can look backward and forward at the same time without the least effort. They are very nervous birds, as they live among wild animals much stronger than themselves. Their nervousness makes it very hard to catch them. The eye of an ostrich is a little larger than a silver dollar. By observing closely one will see the eye is so convex that it stands out about an inch from the side of the head. The eye is so situated on the side of the hammer-like head that it may be seen from the rear and front.

The optic of the big bird is always very alert. Nothing escapes its attention. The eye of one of these wary birds is never covered by an eyelid. The ostrich keeps his eyelids carefully tucked away all day and uses them only at night. The eye is so large and so exposed that it needs some protection, and so it has a bountiful fringe of lashes. These are enough to make any woman envious. They are more than an inch in length, and suggest fine lace awnings.—N. Y. World.

USING HIS HEELS.

How a Surgeon in the Army Fooled the Officers.

Some men are able to joke in the midst of the most fearful circumstances, and, unless their nonsense is in bad taste, it is not ill-timed, but, on the contrary, is generally welcomed by those who need cheering up. Col. Bell tells the following story of an incident which occurred during a battle of the peninsular war:

When the battle began the surgeon of a certain regiment was in his proper place at the rear of the men. He had deposited his instruments under a tree and crept along in the rear of the troops until he saw the men beginning to fail. Then he ran back as fast as he could to bring up his mule and surgical kit.

Doctors wore at the time cocked hats and feathers, and were not to be easily distinguished, at a distance, from the general's staff.

As he went at full speed along one side of a hedge a general officer, with his aide-de-camp, came galloping up the other way.

"There's an officer running away!" cried the former. "Stop him! Hallo, sir! where are you going?"

No answer. Both officers wheeled their horses.

"Stop, sir!" cried the general officer. "Give an account of yourself and your name."

"No, no!" shouted the doctor. "I'm off; seen plenty of fighting for one day."

The officer was furious and pushed on after the fugitive, the stiff fence still between them.

"Give your name, sir!"

"Oh, never mind my name; everybody knows me. Look out for yourself. Your life's not worth a penny. Go to the front and be killed, if you like. Everybody's being killed there but me!" speaking over his shoulder and running like the wind.

On he went until he reached his surgical kit, which he proceeded to load upon the mule, and ordered his assistant to move with it to the front. Then he dashed back in the direction from which he had come, and the officers realized that they had been sold.—London News.

Russian Thistle.

The so-called "Russian thistle," or "tumbleweed," has found its way to the vicinity of Chicago, as it was sure to do sooner or later, and is causing no little annoyance to the farmers of northern Illinois and Indiana. It came, of course, along the railway lines with the stock cars, and great patches of it are now found on the outskirts of the city. It first got a foothold in this country over 20 years ago, having been brought by some Russian colonists who settled in the northwest. It soon took firm possession of the Dakotas, and began to spread itself over a dozen other states and territories. It is a pest that promises to make more trouble than the Canada thistle ever did. Already it causes a loss of several millions annually to the farmers of the northwest, and its ravages are increasing every year. Thus far science has been appealed to almost in vain for some effective means of getting rid of this extremely unwelcome immigrant.—Harper's Weekly.

SNARING THE REDBIRD.

The Pluck of the Bird Leads Him Into Captivity.

The redbird, when it has gotten down hard to home-making, develops a remarkable tendency to fight. At all other times of the year he is as docile and gentle as any in the woods, indeed, rather inclined to take a great deal from other birds; but as soon as the nest is completed and Mrs. Redbird is installed queen thereof, he gets on his war paint, and will fight anything that comes along. It is by taking advantage of this bravery of the redbird in defending the home that the hunter is enabled to ensnare it. The trap used is a small wire cage. Within this cage is a tame bird, one which has been in captivity for a year or two, and sings freely. The hunter wanders into the woods, and slowly takes his way through the swamps until he reaches a dense portion, when he halts. Pretty soon the bird in the cage, delighted, doubtless, at being again in its native woods, even if bars stand between it and liberty, begins singing with all its might. If there is a redbird anywhere within the sound of the caller's voice it hastes to investigate. One of the peculiar habits of the redbird, hunters say, is that there seems by common consent to be a division of the woods among them, each bird having appropriated to his especial jurisdiction a certain allotment of woods. Sometimes other birds, either by mistake or for the purpose of acquiring more territory, invade the domain of another, whereupon there is a fierce fight, which is called off only when one or the other of the birds conquers, in which case the victor becomes the possessor of the territory of the two, together with the defeated bird's mate, who it seems is no longer willing to share fortunes with her former lord after he has proven himself a poor fighter.

The hunter has on one side of his cage a light net, bound about by a light frame, and to the center of a light iron rod stretched perpendicularly across this frame is attached in a swinging position a short, rounded stick about six inches in length. This gate of netting is opened and kept in that position by the wooden trigger, which is braced against another similar trigger attached to the sides of the cage wherein is the call bird. This connection of the two triggers is very delicate, and the slightest touch will suffice to throw it, whereupon the netting frame door is quickly closed by a spring against the sides of the cage. This is what holds the redbird captive.

As soon as the hunter has set the triggers of his cage he hangs it to a limb somewhere or places it on the ground, and goes away some distance to await results. The imprisoned redbird soon begins to sing, and presently, if there is a redbird anywhere within hearing distance, there is a flutter of wings, a series of sharp cries, and before the hunter can say scat! the wild redbird flies headlong at its supposed enemy within the cage, throws the trigger and is captured. It takes very little longer to capture a redbird at this time of the year than it does to catch a fish. If once the caged bird is placed in the right spot within the territory of the other redbirds, and he hears its singing, the rest is very easy, for, regardless of all personal safety and everything else, he rushes madly to the fight.—N. O. Picayune.

FOLLOWS GERMANY'S EXAMPLE.

Young Russians Being Educated in Commercial Trade Schools.

In looking over the field of commerce the Russians have noted the fact that there is not one Russian exporting house in any of the ports of the Black and Azov seas, the whole business of exporting in the southern part of the czar's dominions being in foreign hands. The reason assigned is that the Russians are not properly fitted with commercial education. Therefore, according to United States Consul General Karal, at St. Petersburg, a general movement has begun looking to the establishment of special trade schools, which will educate the Russian merchant to a point where he may hold his own against the specially trained agents of foreign firms. In these schools, which are variously supported by municipalities, merchants, societies and private companies, young men of business instincts are given a special education in language, political economy, commercial arithmetic and other branches of learning not particularly treated in colleges, but highly essential to the success of those who engage in the world's commerce. In this the Russians are following the German system, which has as yet no counterpart in the United States, and which is developing a class of enterprising and thoroughly equipped young business men who are rapidly extending German trade in every quarter of the globe.—Chicago Post.

A Forty-Mile Bridge.

The great project of bridging over Palk's strait, separating the island of Ceylon from the mainland of India, for which such important advantages are claimed, is said to be again under consideration by the government of Ceylon. The strait is some 41 miles broad at its narrowest point, being double the width of the English channel, but it is very shallow, in many places being not more than six feet deep. The islands, reefs and channels in it have been recently accurately surveyed and mapped, and the cost of the work, extending over 61 miles, including the Pamban channel and the Adam's Bridge reef, is estimated to reach some 28,000,000 rupees. The plan of work contemplates the connection of the ends by 145 miles of railroad with Colombo, the great harbor of Ceylon, on one side, and by 90 miles of road with Modura, the nearest point of the Indian railroad system, on the other. If narrow gauge is used this can be done, it is calculated, for 11,000,000 rupees more.—St. Louis Republic.

STEEL WOOL.

It Is Used for Polishing in Place of Sand and Emery Paper.

Steel wool is an interesting product; the subject of a recent German patent, and is intended for use in all cases where sandpaper, emery paper, pumice stone and materials of a kindred nature are employed. In bulk it resembles, both in appearance and to the touch, the hair commonly used for stuffing mattresses and chairs. The ordinary by-product known as steel shavings has for many years been used for rough work, in which the coarser grades of sandpaper are used; but the objections to the use of these shavings for the finer work of rubbing down varnish or paint on woods and for polishing metals were the harshness of, and lack of uniformity in, the threads, and thereby cutting instead of polishing; and, being of many different sizes and shapes, would leave an uneven surface.

The idea of making a machine to overcome these difficulties originated years ago in Switzerland with an observing German, who noticed painters gathering the refuse derived from the manufacture of reed for looms, and picking therefrom the finer grades for the use in rubbing down wood and metal work generally. Upon examination he found that his residue consisted of flat ribbons of steel, the borders of which were planed off, and before being assorted was an admixture of fine and coarse grades. He discovered two defects in the material; first, it was impossible to obtain any appreciable quantity of a uniform grade, and, second, the temper and quality of the steel were such that only indifferent results could be obtained.

Eventually he built a machine for the manufacture of shredded steel or steel threads uniformly fine in quality, but still retaining sufficient cutting propensities, and so delicate in texture that instead of steel shavings he called it steel wool. Then by carefully studying the temper and quality of steel best adapted to his needs he was enabled to perfect the product. The advantages claimed for steel wool are that it cuts more quickly and uniformly than sandpaper, does not clog or gum, and being both flexible and perfectly homogeneous, adapts itself readily to the shapes of carvings and moldings.—St. Louis Republic.

New Way of Stringing Fish.

The ordinary way of stringing black bass or other fish is to take a four-foot piece of chalkline, tie a crossbar of wood the size of a pencil at either end, and then, as fast as the fish are taken, they are put on the line by shoving one of the sticks up through the gills and out of the mouth. That method plays havoc with the gills of the fish, and very often the fish dies in the water, where it should have lived for a considerable period. The way to do it is to have a light chain, instead of a chalkline, four feet long, and a bar at one end to keep the fish from slipping off. A heavy piece of wire is attached to the other end, and sharpened so that it may be passed through the lower jaw from the outside and out of the mouth. The advantages of this method are apparent. The fish's breathing apparatus is not injured, and it lives for a long while, thereby keeping hard and palatable. The chain is a much cleaner stringer, since it may be boiled at the end of each trip, and so thoroughly cleansed.—N. Y. Sun.

Misdirected Sympathy.

A New York clergyman, meeting one of his female parishioners dressed in deep black, tried to console her by saying:

"You have no idea how I regret to see you wearing those sad habillments of woe."

"You can't be as sad about it as I am," responded the widow; "I look worse in black than any other color. It makes me look like a fright."—Texas Sifter.

CAPONIZING TABLE.

A Subject of Great Interest to Farmers Living Near Cities.

About four years ago, through the influence of an intimate friend, I was persuaded to experiment in a small way with capons. The departure was practically a new thing for me, and it was with some trepidation that I entered into it, but now, after knowing of its merits and its few if any disadvantages, I wonder that caponizing is not better known and more widely practiced than it is. Anyone with a little enterprise can successfully perform the operation, and grow capons to perfection, and once having given it a trial, they will never fail to caponize all their cockerels that are not desirable for breeding purposes, and thus be able to furnish their table with a delicacy which our wealthy epicures of the city prize very highly.

The operation, says a writer in the Orange Judd Farmer, is performed on a table made for the purpose, about 3 feet high and 1½ feet wide by 3 long. The bird is placed upon the table as indicated in the accompanying cut, the legs being secured under the padded lever (a) at the operator's right, and the wings by the loop of strong cloth (b) attached to the lever (c) at the left and coming up through the hole in the left center of the table, passing around the wings. The weights on the two levers should be in proportion to the size and strength of the bird; then after plucking a few feathers from the side of the cockerel just in front of the thigh, cut a slit between the last two ribs, well up towards the back, and after adjusting the "spreader," the operator can see what remains to be done very plainly. Some cut only one side, but I prefer to work from both sides, as it is much more convenient, and usually takes no longer.

Some care should be exercised in performing the operation lest the large artery following along the backbone is ruptured, since that would cause the immediate death of the chicken; still there is no loss, for he only provides us with a good broiler! Then, too, another thing to expect is from 15 to 25 per cent. "slips"—these are cockerels on which imperfect operations were performed, and as they mature the comb grows, and to all appearances they are roosters. Possibly the most important factor of all in a successful operation is having the cockerel at the proper age. I am better acquainted with the Plymouth Rocks than any other breed, and with them about 3½ months seems to be the proper age. Those breeds which mature much earlier, like the Leghorns, should be operated upon much younger, while a Brahma could possibly be caponized when five or six months old, and not have much danger attending the work.

As soon as caponized the chicken should be given all the ground feed and drink it wishes, for it is hungry, since, in order to facilitate matters, the cockerel should be fasted about 30 hours previous to the operation; in three days' time the wound should be healed over, and in two or three weeks it would be quite difficult to find even a scar.

Now we have a bird that will put on flesh at a surprising rate; the meat is of a delicious flavor and very tender and juicy, and with the same amount of feed, a capon will weigh about a third more at a given age than if left as a rooster. It is well worth the trouble to have the noisy young cockerels transformed into a quiet, lazy bird, even if we were recompensed in no other way, but the price to be obtained for capons is what pleases the grower of them most of all, as the regular quotations range from six to ten cents above the ordinary chicken. I well remember the first year I engaged in this department of my poultry work, when I sold 20 capons averaging eight pounds at 25 cents per pound, one of which dressed 9½ pounds, and a well-known lawyer paid me $2.37 for the same. So we see the advantages are threefold—a better price, a larger bird and a quiet bird.

Telling a Horse's Age.

"The popular idea that the age of a horse can always be told by looking at his teeth," said a veterinary surgeon on Michigan avenue, "is not entirely correct. After the eighth year the horse has no more new teeth, so that the tooth method is useless for telling the age of a horse which is more than eight years old. As soon as the set of teeth is complete, however, a wrinkle begins to appear on the upper edge of the lower eyelid, and a new wrinkle is added each year, so that to get at the age of a horse more than eight years old you must figure the teeth plus the wrinkles."—Chicago Tribune.

Profit Depends on Management.

Profit in fowls depends on management. Few realize how much profit may be made from a small flock of hens. One farmer's wife began last year with 50 hens and ended with 73. The account of expenses and receipts foots up a profit of $56.73, and the eggs sold for one cent each, and the chickens disposed of brought only five cents a pound. This little flock is, then, clearly worth as a money breeder the sum of a clear $1,000 for it brought in the interest on that sum at 5½ per cent.

After the turkeys are ten days old they may be turned out every morning after the dew is off and be allowed to stay out all day, unless there are hard showers.

WEIGHT OF CATTLE.

It Has Steadily Increased Since the Beginning of the Century.

In the beginning of the century about to close cattle were dressed at the weight of 400 pounds net, or less. In 1830, as was stated by an historian and statistician, they were killed at a weight of 450 to 500 pounds, at four years of age. In a few years from now the great bony frame and bulky carcass of the Texas steer will have disappeared, and instead of these we will have the shorthorns, the Angus and the Herefords, or their grades.

It is surprising how early in life calves when raised by hand, will learn to eat, or rather lick up. If a calf is weaned directly it has drawn the milk once or twice after birth, and is taught to drink milk from the pail, it has no further use for its dam than to have her furnish at first new milk, and, subsequently all the skim milk it can assimilate. At four weeks old it will lick salt, if taught, and dry bran. At six weeks of age a handful of cornmeal may be added, and so on until a year old. Of course it should have (in season) all the good pasture grass it can consume. Raise all your calves. At six weeks of age geld your males. One year on my farm I had a baker's dozen of calves. They drank at proper age, all the milk in any shape, and then they were fed a half bushel of corn and cob meal, and I never had a finer lot to turn out to pasture the next spring. They were large and in fine condition.

The American people eat much meat. It always was abundant; but either we export too much, or we do not raise enough, for in these days it is neither cheap nor good. The mechanic and the laborer cannot afford to buy much at the prices at which it retails; and yet the quotations run from $2.50 to $4.00; hence it should come to the consumer at a lower rate than it does at present.

The country butcher cart is seen in the lanes and on the farms as often as needed, and presumably the farmers have beef at reasonable rates. Besides he can, if he manages correctly, have a lamb, a pig, or some fowls, and need not starve for want of fresh meat.—Chas. W. Murtfeldt, in Journal of Agriculture.

MODERN STOCK BARN.

Novel Construction Is Shown in the Design Here Illustrated.

The silo has changed the entire conditions of feeding on many farms. Bulky fodder, for which much barn room was needed, has been largely replaced on these farms by the condensed ration of ensilage. A radical change can thus be made in barn construction, for, with the silo, immense storage room for hay and similar fodder is not required. A somewhat novel construction is shown in the design of a barn that is presented herewith. The wall space around three sides is used for stock, while the space over the stock—the scaffolding—can be used for hay and fodder, this being stowed away with a hay fork. The center of the barn is taken up by an immense silo, or a double silo, the center of the barn offering the greatest height for the accommodation of the silo. A cellar is needed under such a barn, so that manure can be dropped through the floor. If the cellar is not possible, the manure can be wheeled out in a car arranged to run behind the cattle. Make the foundation a grout wall and cover the siding with heavy paper. Shingles over this will keep all very warm within. If more fodder is required than can be stored upon the scaffolding, a stack can be made outside.—N. Y. Tribune.

IN THE POULTRY YARD.

Black feathered fowls have a white skin. White skinned fowls usually sell at a less price than yellow-skinned fowls.

Young Guineas do not thrive well if hatched too early. Taking one year with another June is plenty early to have them hatch.

A filthy drinking fountain will breed disease sooner than anything else, and easily becomes foul when a large number of fowls drink from it.

Young ducks drink water every day when eating. They should be supplied with all they can drink in a convenient place while they are eating.

Carbolic acid is a poison, and too much should not be used. Ten or twelve drops in a quart of water is enough. For cholera double this quantity.

When the wings are cut the feathers do not renew until the bird molts, but where the feathers are pulled new feathers will appear in a short time.

If the laying hens can be fed as soon as they fly down from their roosts and again just before they go on the roosts at night this is all that will be needed.

Give the hens as much liberty as possible now. It is natural for them to forage. They will lay more eggs on the food that they pick up than if kept in a yard and fed well.—St. Louis Republic.

Feed for Young Pigs.

The young pig should have enough feed to maintain thrift, but he should not be fed as if he were being fattened. The digestion of young pigs is weak, and if overfed at this time, especially with corn, they will become stunted, and never after prove profitable animals. The Western Swineherd maintains that feed for young pigs should not be concentrated. Give them a small proportion of grain and wheat middlings, with enough milk and dishwater to distend their stomachs and keep their digestion in good condition. A pig should be eight or nine months old before it will be safe to feed it heavily with corn.

A PRINCELY PHILANTHROPIST.

The Large Benefactions of the Late Baron Hirsch.

That remarkable man and marvel of beneficence—Baron Hirsch—to whose stupendous gifts allusion has been recently made, anticipated living for many years. His sudden death defeated his best purposes. It would be a platitude to say this, except for his astonishing unselfishness in the plan he had in view. While he was one of the richest men in Europe, those who knew him best declare that it was his intention to die poor, after his vast wealth had been given for benevolent uses.

Such philanthropy as he purposed and had begun to execute, is unparalleled in the history of beneficence, and can hardly be adequately comprehended. His income was estimated at $15,000,000 a year, and that sum has latterly been but a part of his yearly charity. His gifts far exceeded his income at the time of his death.

Among the wealthy men of the world he stands honored and supreme as an exemplification of the command: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

With this fact in view it is a pleasure to know that there is in this country at least one millionaire with like ideals. His large benefactions are constantly and quietly made. He has been sadly misjudged because of conditions in his stupendous business over which it was impossible for him to have full personal control. The real man has not been known to those who have misunderstood him. The poor are his constant wards. His benefactions are given with unsparing hand and without parade. Emphasizing this, and giving it force and radiance, is his declared purpose to die shorn of his wealth—his life a complete ministration to the generation he has toiled to bless.

Such lives ennoble manhood, and glorify the age that gives them birth.—Youth's Companion.

RUSSIANS AND MONGOLS.

The Fearful Change Wrought by the Tartar Rule.

All independent modern Russian writers agree in stating that the long Mongol dominion sadly affected the character of the populations throughout the land. With the exception of Novgorod and the few kindred communities in the north, the spirit of freedom had scarcely existed in Russia even before, among the mass of the people. But the Tartar yoke wrought a fearful change for the worse.

"Political slavery," writes Prince Peter Dolgorukow, whose family traces its descent from Rurik, in his work, "La Verite sur la Russin, "destroyed all feeling of personal dignity. The Russian rulers were compelled to go to the Horde of the Tartar Khan in order to receive the investiture for their states. Admitted to the presence of the khan they had to remain on their knees before him. Having left his tent, they had still to pay an assiduous and obsequious homage to the most influential men of the Mongol Horde. If they incurred the khan's disgrace, they were loaded with chains, tortured and killed. No humiliation was spared to them. When they had bought their investiture very dearly, they went back to render the yoke of their own subjects more heavy, in order to indemnify themselves, by tyranny and by exactions for the insults they had had to bear among the Horde. The laws were altered; the manners became of a harshness and barbarism unknown until then. From corporal punishment nobody was exempt, not even those highest in office—neither the boyars, nor even the members of the princely houses, who hailed from Rurik."—Fortnightly Review.

College Educated Women.

Vassar, the oldest of women's colleges, is but 30 years old. Nearly 1,200 women have graduated from Vassar, and about 3,000 from all the other women's colleges put together. About 4,000 other college-bred women have taken degrees at the co-educational institutions.

Wampum.

The first currency issued by the whites within the limits of the United States was wampum, which was adopted by the Massachusetts colonists in 1607 in their intercourse with the Indians.

YOUNG AT FIFTY.

How a Methodist Minister Carries His Years.

Rev. William Young, of Oswego, Tells a Reporter His Secret of Good Health—Will Surely Benefit Everyone Who Follows His Advice.

From the Times, Oswego, N. Y.

Probably no man is better known or more highly respected in Oswego, N. Y., than Rev. William Young, of the Methodist Church. Mr. Young has not a Conference appointment, but holds a responsible position with the Oswego City Savings Bank, where he has been a trusty employe for the past twenty years.

In the spring of 1894 Mr. Young looked as if his time on earth was limited and that he would be laid at rest with the great majority before snow covered the ground. But, instead of failing as was predicted, he soon gained a more healthy look and appeared stronger. As the months went by this improvement continued, until now he is as rugged and apparently as healthy as a young man of thirty, although his gray locks denote a more advanced age. A Times reporter, determined to find out what had made this great, and it might be said phenomenal change, called upon Mr. Young at the bank and put the question direct and received the following reply:

"In truth I am a changed man, and I owe my present good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the spring of 1894 I was all run down and had commenced to think that my time had come. I had to be prescribed for by physicians, and although I received temporary relief, the same old trouble came back again and I was worse than before. I had no strength or appetite, and physically I was in a miserable condition. After my work I would go home, but the general lassitude which hung over me left me without any ambition, and when I would go to the table to eat, my appetite failed me and I would have to leave without taking hardly any nourishment. My kidneys were also badly affected, and I was in utter despair. One day, here at the bank, I happened to pick up one of the local papers, and my eye fell on an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The advertisement gave a description of a man who, afflicted as I then was, had been cured by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was not a believer in that kind of doctoring, but concluded as a last resort to try a box of the pills, making up my mind that if they did not help me I certainly would not be injured any. Going to a drug store, I purchased a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and commenced taking them according to directions. Very soon after I began to feel better and I saw I had made no mistake in trying the pills, and before the first box was emptied I felt so much improved that I immediately purchased another. I had taken seven boxes of the pills, and at the end of last summer I felt I was entirely cured and discontinued their use, but always keep a box handy if occasion requires. I am now entirely cured. The lassitude has left me, my kidneys are all right and my appetite—well, you should see me at the table. I am a new man again, and instead of feeling like a man of fifty, which is my age, I feel like a youngster of twenty, and I give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the full credit for this great change. I have recommended these pills to several of my neighbors and acquaintances who have been relieved of their complaints."

William Young, being duly sworn, deposes and says he is the gentleman referred to in the above interview, and it is true in every respect. WILLIAM YOUNG.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 25th day of May, 1895.

If Remote from Medical Help,

Doubly essential is it that you should be provided with some reliable family medicine. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the best of its class, remedying thoroughly as it does such common ailments as indigestion, constipation and biliousness, and affording safe and speedy help in malarial cases, rheumatism and inactivity of the kidneys.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

One Thousand Farmers Wanted

To settle on one thousand choice farms on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in Dakota.

These lands are located in twenty different counties, and are to be had now at prices ranging from $7 to $15 per acre; a few months hence their value will be doubled.

For a home or for investment no luckier chance in the West has ever before been offered. Now is the time to invest. No better farming land exists anywhere. No greater results can be obtained anywhere.

Schools and churches abound everywhere. Nearby markets for all farm products. South and North Dakota are the banner diversified farming and stock-raising states of the West. Everything grows in Dakota except ignorance and intemperance. A new boom is on. Take advantage of the tide which leads to Dakota and to fortune.

The best reason in the world why some things sell so well is because they are good. That is one reason for the great sales of "BATTLE AX."

But good quality is only half the story. The other half is the size of a 5 cent piece, It is as big almost as a 10 cent piece of other and poorer kinds.

Facts are facts. You can buy and see for yourself. Five cents isn't much to invest.

Mistress and Maid both have their part in the great savings that come from Pearline. Suppose you're the mistress. There's the economy of it—the saving of time, etc., and the actual money that's saved by doing away with that steady wear and tear on everything washed. Suppose you're the maid. There's the saving of labor; the absence of rubbing; the hardest part of the housework made easier and pleasanter.

But suppose you are mistress and maid, both in one, doing your own work. Then there is certainly twice as much reason why you should do every bit of your washing and cleaning with Pearline. 507

POLITICAL.

The Republicans of the Eighth District have nominated Judge Geo. M. Davidson, of Lincoln county, for Congress.

John D. Carroll has opened his campaign for the congressional nomination in the 7th district. Settle, Breckinridge, Owens and others are to follow.

The Congressional campaign in the First district is opening in earnest. There are four Democratic candidates announced and it seems there are more to follow.

Judge Wm. S, Pryor has been declared the nominee of the Democratic party for Appellate Judge in the Fifth Appellate Judicial District, no opposition to him having appeared.

So "Bilious" Nelson will try again to win the nomination for Congress. Is that why he mixes up in the Walling-Jackson case "free gratis" to advertise himself? It wont win.—Covington Record.

What a come-down of Kentucky's first and last Republican Governor! A few weeks ago he aspired to the Presidential nomination in his party, but when he got to St. Louis he was glad to be allowed the privilege of exhibiting himself before the convention.—Kentucky Journal.

"Just say this for me if you're interviewing me, said Col. Berry this morning. I'm on the platform of the Democratic party; the party makes the platform and not the individual members of the party; and what the party does I endorse every time."—Commonwealth.

When the Republicans went into power in Kentucky last January the convicts in the penitentiary were earning their victuals and clothes and other expenses. Now they are all idle and the taxpayers are called upon to maintain them out of the treasury. Who will deny this?—Carlisle Mercury.

Regarding the national finances, the Republicans at St. Louis would better confine their deliverances to what they propose to do, to the exclusion of what they have done. All the evils of the present financial system are of Republican origin,and that they are great is shown by the fact that they have already caused the worst panic in our history and have put the country on a severe strain to prevent other panics. The platform of the Republicans would be better if it promised to reform some of the defects of the system for which they boast responsibility.—Courier-Journal.

Until they found the appellate district had gone 200 Republican in the gubernatorial race, lawyers of that party vied with Democratic lawyers in sounding the praises of Judge Pryor and saying that his retirement would be a public calamity. Now they are changing their tunes and are preparing for a campaign of abuse and villification. They can't make decent people believe that Judge Pryor is anything but a forcible, clear and upright Judge, and they will see that he is re-elected, as he eminently deserves to be. The ambition of Messrs. Herndon, Burnam and others to succeed him is commendable, but it overleaps itself and they will have to bide a wee.—Interior Journal.

The Louisville Critic is about right in the following: "The Critic is willing to stand by the nominees at Chicago no matter who they are, or what policy may be laid down in the wisdom of those who represent the national Democracy. Factional quarrels have brought defeat to the party in this city and State. A continuance of that unfortunate wrangle will mean that Kentucky will ge permanently into the Republican ranks. There are not enough free silver men in the State to win without the gold men, and there are not enough gold standard Democrats to succeed without the aid of the free silver men. We are mutually dependent one upon another. Let us get together and see if we can't make some sort of serious trouble for the other fellows."

The Covington Commonwealth publishes the following interview with Hon. Richard P. Ernst, Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixth district: "I am for the single gold standard, and against the free and unlimited coinage of silver, and I don't see how any sensible man can think otherwise. I appreciate the fact that the general public favors free silver, at least in the West, and they do it because they know something is wrong, but free silver will not remedy it. I don't blame the present Administration with the hard times. I believe they would have come under any administration. The trouble is not that there is a scarcity of money, but the men who have it won't let go of it. When the factories open up business will hum, and the free silver theory will be exploded."

STATE NEWS.

John S. Turner killed his cousin. Green Turner in a difficulty in Bell county.

Prof. H. C. Snow, principal of an academy at Trenton, dropped dead of heart disease.

Miss Eunice Keen, of Burkesville, committed suicide by throwing herself into the Cumberland river.

The lawyers of Mayfield have entered into a compact not to defend anyone guilty of violating the prohibition laws of the town.

Fred Bush, aged 17, and Fred Smarr, about the same age, were drowned in the Ohio about a mile and a half below Augusta, while bathing.

On State checks to be hereafter printed Treasurer Long will omit the picture of John C. Breckinridge and substitute a vignette of Abraham Lincoln.

As they have been making Kentucky whisky faster than it is drunk the distillers of the State have agreed to stop making it until January 1st, 1898.

At High Bridge, five stone-masons in the employ of contractor Thomas, were caught under a falling derrick, and three seriously and two perhaps fatally injured.

Grayson county's Court-house, erected at a cost of $20,000, was totally destroyed by fire, some valuable records, however, being saved. There was no insurance.

The Board of Education of Newport refused to re-elect Miss Margie Gilson as a teacher for next year because of her frequent visits to Scott Jackson, who is in jail sentenced to be hanged for murdering Pearl Bryan.

Miss Hannah Hines, a good looking Clark county girl, has the contract for carrying the mail from Kiddville to Indian Fields, a distance of two miles. She makes the trip twice each day, and frequently goes afoot.

The body of Abraham Diehere, the murdered Ashland peddler, has been found near Fallsburg, Lawrence county. The body had been decapitated, but the head was also found. Two men named Cooksey and Chaffin have been arrested for the crime.

The Court of Appeals has reversed the decision of the lower court in the case of the State of Kentucky against the Mason & Foard Company. In the lower court the State got judgment for $14,000. The higher tribunal renders a judgment in favor of the company for $11,000.

In Casey county Samuel Jeffries recently died at the age of 80 years, leaving 87 grand-children. He was married only once, and for six and one-half years he and his spouse had no offspring born to them. Then for fifteen years they multiplied and replenished the earth at a rate to make an inflating census enumerator envious. Nineteen young Jeffries came in fifteen years, eleven being girl babies, fourteen being twins born consecutively, followed by five singles. Two of the daughters married and gave birth to two sets of twins each.

CROP AND STOCK.

A recent issue of the Denver Field and Farm, referring to the latest cattle statistics, shows that there are over 52,095,568 cattle in the U. S. When this country was discovered by Columbus there were no cattle to be found here, and, according to a writer in an exchange who has made a study of the subject, the first came into this country in 1852 being brought into Mexico by the Spaniards. From there they spread northward into Texas, where was laid the foundation for the immense herds that now inhabit the great South-western and Western interior of the United States. The same writer states that the English settlers brought the first cattle into Virginia in 1610. The Dutch were the first to introduce them into New York in 1615, and New Jersey in 1624. The Swedes introduced them into Delaware in 1627, and in 1531 Capt. John Mason imported cattle from Denmark to New Hampshire. Thus began one of the largest and most important industries in the New World, which is to-day calculated to be worth nearly $1,000,000,000.

J. Thurman, near the head of Mud River, has thrown away 2,000 pounds of lug tobacco out of a crop of six acres and is shipping his good, says John Darling in the Russellville Ledger. A buyer told him he could get a $1 on the hundred for what he threw away. Mr. Thurman said: "No! it is worth $2 per hundred for fertilizer on my ground. I put nothing on the market but the best." One man north of Russellville got men to prize, ship and sell his crop of tobacco. After all expenses were paid his profit was 12 cents. The Ledger told of a similar circumstance where the returns were 75c instead of 12½c. There is another case, Mr. Webb, after he had received his returns came out $4 in debt. Tobacco raisers, take warning from this and keep your trash for fertilizer and put none but the very best on the market, and go with it and see to the sales.

Wheat harvest is on in earnest, with a large portion of the crop already cut. The yield in this locality is thought to be better than last year both in quality and quantity, or about 50 per cent. of an average crop. The facquent rains just about the time the grain was ripening made many fear rust, but so far as we have heard there is but little complaint on that score.—Midway Clipper.

A large crop of peaches and blackberries will be raised this season, but if the old adage is true that a wet June is a bad crop year, we need not expect to raise much farm products.—Corinth Independent.

A little child of Frank Hopper, of Monterey, met with a fearful accident last Saturday, but strange to say, was not fatally or even seriously injured. The new iron bridge spanning Cedar creek is from thirty to forty feet from the bed of the creek. It is not supplied with foot railing. The mother and child were crossing the bridge when a wagon passed, the child being just ahead of its mother backed near the edge of the bridge to get out of the way and not noticing stepped off, falling thirty feet on a solid rock bottom below and when picked up it was found that no bones were broken and only a few bruises were found upon the body.

GRANT COUNTY

[Courier]

The recent school elections in Grant county was productive of as many fights and fusses as a regular Democratic primary.

In the Grant county local option election, 1873 votes were cast, 1,096 for and 777 against local option. In Williamstown the vote was exactly two to one against the sale of whisky. The election passed off quietly throughout the county.

[Democrat.]

An unfortunate state of affairs exists between Roland Tharp and his ex-wife, who was granted a divorce from him at the last term of court, and given the custody of their ten-year-old boy. Mrs. Tharp has been quite sick lately and the child had been left in the care of some of her relatives, and the father had obtained possession of him. Upon her recovery the mother called to see Mr. Tharp to ask for the boy, when he opened fire on her with a shot gun, frightening but not otherwise injuring her. She came to town and swore out a warrant but the case was compromised, and Tharp dismissed, the mother being given the child. The father is a consumptive and unable to care properly for the boy we understand.

John Hartman, son of Ben Hartman, Sr., died at his home near English Thursday evening at 5 o'clock, after an illness of only a week with inflammation of the bowels.

In the Carrollton school district there are 560 pupils of school age, exactly 280 of each sex.

TRIMBLE COUNTY

[News]

Capt. James O. Snyder, the largest fruit grower in Trimble county, shipped 15 bushels of peaches Wednesday—the first shipment made this season.

The late rains [illegible] a splendid fruit crop. The trees are loaded with fruit to their utmost capacity, and the berry bushes in the thrown-out fields are as full of fine large berries as they can hold. What is lacking in wheat may be made up in fruit.

Never in the history of the county was as much tobacco set in May as was set in that month this year. There were enough plants, and for nearly four weeks there has not been a day in which tobacco could not have been set without watering artificially.

Corn is looking well, although it was planted in that very dry weather. The stand is excellent and it has good height. Yet it is true that the crop has had less plowing by a great deal, than corn usually gets by this time, owing to the almost constant rain in the past four weeks. In some fields the corn is nearly knee high, in which not a furrow has been plowed.

BURLINGTON LODGE No. 109, K. OF P.

Committee on Arrangements:

ELMER BEALL, J. F. BLYTH, J. M. LASSING.

THE Kentucky Post sent a circular to each delegate to the Democratic national convention, asking the delegate this question: "Would you, under any circumstances, vote for Grover Cleveland for the nomination?" About two out of every three answers received are in the negative. The delegates from this State, to the number of 15 say "no." The delegates from this Congressional district auswer as follows: J. T. Scott, of Grant county—"would not." Hon. N. S. Walton—"I would first have him converted and baptized in a free silver basin."

* * *

THE Democratic party will not repeat the Greeley folly by nominating Senator Teller for President. There are numbers of good Democrats who are as reliable silver men as Senator Teller, and to one of them the nomination will be given. Of course the Republicans would be delighted by his nomination at Chicago but if they never smile until that happens they will "never smile again."

* * *

HON. CHAS. BRONSTON, who was charged with going over to the silver men only a few days before the Lexington convention, for the purpose af advancing his Congressional aspirations, has declared that he will not be a candidate for Congress in the Ashland district.

* * *

MR. CARLISLE pronounces as a gratuitons and malicious falsehood the statement made by H. H. Smith at Kalamazoo, Michigan, that he (Carlisle) said to him last winter that he would support McKinley if the Chicago convention declared for free silver.

* * *

MR. HANNA, chairman of the Republican National Committee is making desperate efforts to steer his party clear of the money question, but in that he will not be as successful as he was in steering McKinley into the Republican nomination.

* * *

ONE of the grounds for setting aside the verdict and granting Alonzo Walling a new trial in the Campbell Circuit Court, is that one of the jurors had expressed an opinion adverse to the accused, before he was summoned as a juror.

* * *

THE silver men cleaned the platter in Ohio, and got about all that there was in Indiana. It is now claimed that they will have two-thirds of the delegates in the Chicago convention.

* * *

IT is suggested by a correspondent this week, that the Democrats of this county would do the right and proper thing, should they endorse Hon. J. G. Furnish for Congress.

* * *

H. CLAY EVANS, of Tennessee, and Gov. Bradley were in the same class at St. Louis, and it was a class that was very much outclassed.

* * *

THE Kentucky Educational Association that met in Newport last week, was well attended by educators of the State.

* * *

THE Chicago convention meets next Tuesday.

A Plea for Democracy.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I wish to make one more plea for Democracy before the coming of the ides of July. The 7th of July, the day set apart for the fate of the Democratic party to be sealed. is close at hand.

The sun of Democracy is nearing Chicago and will soon pass beneath the western horizon, bearing with it the names of Jefferson, Benton, Jackson, Beck and Carlisle.

Its glorious sunshine will be replaced by the silver light of "Luna Pale" as she sits in a cloud, hatching out the little stars, the democratic chicks of the night. But out of that little group I fear there will not be one that will ever get large enough to grow a tail, much less to give a victorious crow.

The old platform built by Jefferson and Jackson out of solid oak and strong, elastic hickory, will soon be torn up and replaced by one made of soft white pine, and brittle hemlock.

Bill Harvey, the boss carpenter, has already selected a soft, white pine plank, full of knots, to represent the money plank. I fear that when the weight of Silverism, Popularism, Altgeldism, Tillmanism and Tellerism is placed on this plank that it will give way and let the "new Democracy" fall through into oblivion.

The Republican party is anxiously awaiting the tearing to pieces of the old Jeffersonian platform. They are determined to buy, at any price, the sound money plank. They have already measured and carefully examined it and say that it fits in their platform exactly and is as solid as gold.

They also have an eye on Jefferson's old tariff plank. They think by adding a narrow strip for the sake of protection, that it will fit much better in their platform than the one they have been using. Theirs, they now think, has always been too broad, which caused it to bulge too high in the middle suffering Mr. Harrison to stumble over it in 1892.

These Republicans are a shrewd set of fellows. They always have one eye to business. They think, by placing in their platform these two Jeffersonian planks, that a large body of his followers will go with the party that uses them. I fear that their calculations will prove too true, unless some miracle is performed in Chicago on the 7th of July in the National Democratic Convention.

I am unable to foretell what the nature of that miracle may be, but hope that the ghost of Thomas Jefferson will appear in their midst and inspire the Democrats assembled so fully with the spirit of true Democracy that all the abominable isms and fiat fakes will forever be excluded from their councils.

I hope that they will inspect, carefully, the old Jeffersonian platform before they permit Bill Harvey to tear it to pieces and substitute his rotton pine and brittle hemlock for solid oak and strong hickory.

I wish to carefully examine this old Jeffersonian platform and see how and out of what it was really made. The first plank he placed in the platform was of solid oak, and represented sound money. He measured it with a silver rule containing 412½ grains of standard silver, or 371¼ grains of pure silver and 41¼ grains of copper. This rule was the government's standard rule for the measurement of all values and was called a dollar. It was the only standard or unit of measure used for 80 years. In 1873 Congress discarded it and substituted a golden rule containing 25 8-10 grains of standard gold. Since that time this has been recognized and used by our government as the standard or unit of measure for all values. This change was made because silver was too much given to expansion and contraction to form a correct and invariable standard.

Our government never, since its organization, has at any time had two standards, or what is commonly termed a double standard; but for 103 years her monetary system has been established on a bimetallic basis except the five years intervening between 1873 and 1878.

Never at any time has the government coined but one kind of money free, and that was always the money out of which the standard was made.

Gold was not coined free until in 1875, prior to that time 1-5 of one per cent. had been charged for the coinage of all gold bullion. Two years after it was made standard money the mints thrown open to its free coinage.

I stated that the first plank Mr. Jefferson placed in his platform represented sound money. What does sound money signify? What did Mr. Jefferson consider sound money to consist of? What did the founders of our monetary system understand sound money to mean? History proves to me that not Mr. Jefferson alone, but Mr. Hamilton and all the great men of that period, who assisted in establishing our monetary system, understood sound money to mean money that contained a hundred cents worth of material in every dollar.

At that time the purchasing power of an ounce of gold was equal to a fraction over the purchasing power of fifteen ounces of silver. Hence, to make both coins sound money they established the ratio of coinage between the two metals at 1 to 15, and the fiat of the government went forth that these coins should be received as sound money and accepted as legal tender in payment of all debts. No partiality was to be shown in the use of either metal.

Notwithstanding this fiat or command of the government, a partiality was shown in the universal use of silver. Why was silver used in preference to gold? Because it was the cheapest money. A silver dollar at that time would not buy gold enough to coin a gold dollar. Both coins, however, were considered sound because the gold dollar came up to the sound standard which was a silver dollar. In fact it was worth about three cents more than the standard required.

Suppose on the other hand that the gold dollar at that time had been chosen as the standard of value, would the silver dollar have been considered sound money when it would not come up to the standard?

Suppose again that both the gold dollar and the silver dollar had been adopted as a standard or unit of measure, constituting what is erroneously termed a double standard, not being equal in value nor purchasing power could either be used in measuring the value of the same commodity? Don't you think that a little confusion would have been created in the business world by the use of these two measures of different values? What would you think of a dry goods merchant who used two yard sticks in measuring the goods he sold—one yard stick 36 inches long and the other 35 inches? Do you think you would get the same amount of goods measured by either of the sticks?

The United States never has nor never will adopt a double standard as the unit of value. Such an idea is utterly preposterous. No man with any knowledge of the science of money could be justified in entertaining such an idea.

Then you may ask why are such men as Senator Blackburn, Senator Teller and their followers clamoring so loudly for a return to the double standard? I will answer with all due modesty, that I think they have suffered their minds to become confused in the use of the two terms double standard and bimetallism. They consider the two terms synonymous, when, in fact they are distinct and entirely independent of each other.

This will conclude a series of articles I have written upon this subject. I have not exhausted the subject by any means. It is one of the most interesting subjects to me that I have ever studied. Every day presents new avenues of thought, all leading to the same conclusion. Like the Pythagorean problem in geometry, which can be solved in various ways, each solution reaching the same conclusion.

In studying this subject I have not permitted my mind to become in any way biased. Being entirely free from political aspirations, it has been my only aim to glean a rich harvest from an abundant field. I feel that I am fully repayed for my labors, and hope that I have, at least, added some interest to your most excellent paper. I assure you I fully appreciate the courtesy you have extended me in the publication of the series of articles I have written.

In conclusion, I wish to renew the proclamation I made some time ago, that I am a Democrat not by profession, but on principle, and, like "the boy that stood on the burning deck," I will remain with the old Democratic ship, though she be deserted by every Democrat in the land. and will endeavor to steer her between Sylla and Charybdis and anchor her safe in the harbor.

G. C. GRADDY.

THE TRAMPS,

Who Murdered Sheriff Rodgers, Captured by a Posse.

An Angry Mob Surrounds the Prison for the Purpose of Lynching the Prisoners—Gov. Clough Orders a Company of St. Paul Militia to the Scene.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 26.—Infuriated citizens of Southern Minnesota were trying Thursday night to lynch the murderers of Sheriff Rodgers, of McLeod county. A posse of 250 men chased the desperadoes all day and caught them in a swamp five miles west of Arlington, early Thursday evening, without firing a shot. As soon as it was learned that they had been captured, mobs, bent on lynching them, began to move from Glencoe, New Auburn, Green Isle and Hutchinson. While the mobs were moving on Arlington, the prisoners were rushed down a back street to a passing train and taken to Glencoe. This saved the prisoners for a time at least, but the governor was wired that the deputy sheriff in charge at Glencoe could not prevent a lynching. All the militia companies of that part of the state were taking their regular summer outing in camp at Lake City and were unavailable. Gov. Clough therefore ordered out Company C, First regiment, stationed in St. Paul, and that company left St. Paul for Glencoe at 10:40. It will arrive there at one o'clock, but the news from Glencoe at this hour indicates that there will be a lynching besore that time, as the town is in a state of excitement bordering on frenzy over the killing of Sheriff Rodgers, who was the most popular man in McLeod county.

At 1:30 Friday morning it was learned that the militia company from St. Paul arrived at Glencoe on time and is now stationed about the jail. There is no danger of further trouble.

THE CLOUDBURST.

Houses and Bridges Carried Away—Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars Worth of Property Destroyed.

MARIETTA, O., June 26.—The amount of property destroyed by the terrific cloudburst which visited the little valleys of Moss Run and the Little Muskingum river Wednesday night was the greatest calamity that ever occurred in this county. The property loss will reach several hundred thousand dollars, but up to a late hour Thursday night no lives are known to be lost. Travel in the stricken district is impossible, every bridge across the small streams being swept away. Live stock suffered extensively, and many bodies of drowned animals have floated down the Ohio. Crops over many square miles of fertile lands are utterly obliterated.

News coming in Thursday shows that homes of scores of familes have been destroyed, together with stores, churches and buildings of every description. At Eight-Mile and Fifteen Oil fields many derricks were torn loose and the rigs carried away. The scene along the little stream is one of devastation—a Johnstown without the dead.

In the vicinity of Archer's Fork, Thomas Ludington, Jacob Davis, Geo. Dencher and James Courtney lost their homes and everything they contained. The flouring mill of Joshua Goodman was swept from its foundation and carried away. On Moss run the stores of Isaac McGowan, Peter Stegnor, Heslep Brothers and Harrison Hamilton were torn away by the flood, and their contents are now being distributed along the banks of the Ohio. Three schoolhouses and three dwellings were obliterated near Hills. The new Baptist church at Fifteen, dedicated only last spring, is gone. Hadley's schoolhouse has vanished, and a dozen small dwellings in the hamlet near by kept it company. The store of Edward Kitts, the post office at Hesley & Evilsizer's flouring mill at the mouth of Moss Run were also destroyed.

FILLED CHEESE.

Most of the Manufacturers in the Fox River District Going Out of the Business.

CHICAGO, June 26.—Collector of Internal Revenue Mize, of this district, ecently sent an agent to the Fox river valley district where the most of tho filled cheese is made to prepare the department as well as the members for the operation of the filled cheese tax and license law next September. He returned Thursday with the information that nearly all the makers would go out of business before the law took effect, because they and the retail dealers had figured out a profitless business after paying the government license and tax and allowing for the effect on the public of having to label their product "filled cheese." The few makers who will remain in business will do an export trade exclusively, as there is no tax on that. Fifteen million pounds of filled cheese, valued at $1,000,000, were made in this district last year, and about $300,000 worth of this trade will be abolished in the fall by virtue of the enactment of congress.

Railway Mail Clerks.

TOLEDO, O., June 26.—The national convention of railway mail clerks was brought to an end here Thursday night. President W. W. Blackmer, of Detroit, was unanimously re-elected president, and O. S. Bond, secretary and treasurer. Philadelphia was chosen as the place for the next meeting, to be held in June, 1897.

Drowned Herself and Three Children.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 26.—In Comal county, north of here, Mrs. Boynerer, wife of a farmer, drowned herself and her three children, aged 2, 4 and 6 years, in the Comal river. The bodies were found tied together with cords. No cause for the act is known.

CINCINNATI, June 26.—From a reliable source it is learned that James M. Glenn, late of the Tribune, with other associates, are preparing to issue a new one-cent morning daily paper in this city. The new venture will be called the Morning Star.

BUSINESS REVIEW.

The Monetary Outlook is Not Yet Clear to Some—Number of Failures in the United States Greatly Reduced.

NEW YORK, June 27.—R. G. Dun & Co. will Saturday say:

Failures for the week have been 217 in the United States, against 256 last year, and 24 in Canada against 22 last year.

The monetary outlook is not yet clear to some. The strength shown in recent conventions by advocates of silver coinage, and expectation that all the elements favoring that policy may yet be concentrated, incline them to a waiting attitude. Their uncertainty retards improvement, notwithstanding the more widely prevalent feeling that the monetary action of the St. Louis convention will be sustained by the people. But many mills have waited as long as they can with safety and signatures have been given by enough cotton mills of Fall River to ensure a temporary stoppage, it is said, the nature of which is now under discussion in conference with the Providence manufacturers. Meanwhile the Pacific of Lawrence and the Naamkeag of Salem have closed for a time, and practically all the southern cotton mills will be represented at a meeting on Monday with the same object.

Woolen mills are active without concert; but 14 are mentioned in dispatches as having closed this week. There is no similar movement in other industries, though the period of summer closing is at hand in many of them and important controversies as to wages of iron puddlers and other hands made it likely that the annual stoppage in that industry may last longer than usual. The weakness of wheat, which has declined 2.10 cents, and of cotton, which is an eighth lower for spots, though less for futures, have full explanation in decidedly good crop prospects. It may be doubted whether the boot and shoe industry has ever been in better shape on the whole, though manufacturers complain that an advance in price is necessary which dealers are very reluctant to pay.

Leather is slightly lower for kinds not controlled by the leather company and at Chicago packer hides are steady, while country have advance a shade with small receipts. Copper is held at 11.75. Lead is hardening at 3.05 and American tin plates are well sold at 15 cents below foreign.

The great combinations, which the Iron Age wisely reasons tend to cause disastrously low prices hereafter, still control the markets both for material and finished products of iron and steel, though it is reported that lower prices will soon be made for coke, owing to better utilization of products and for nails owing to heavy decrease in consumption. The billet pool reports no large sale, but middle men or outsiders continue to undersell it. The new demand for finished products is very light; and, while quotations average a shade lower, most of them are cut to secure business. Bessemer pig is a shade lower at $12.25 at Pittsburgh. The textilo manufacturers, as has been said, are generally devising curtailment of production, and the only change in prices is downward.

Hanna's Villa Burglarized.

CLEVELAND, O., June 27.—Hon. Mark Hanna's Lakewood villa was entered by a burglar at an early hour Friday morning The thief secured $300 worth of jewels and $70 in money. He did not arouse the occupants of the house but was detected on leaving it by Mr. Hanna's private watchman. The Lakewood marshal was notified and he, with his two assistants, chased the burglar to the lake front where he eluded them, escaping safely with his plunder.

A $100,000 Fire at Point Pleasant.

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., June 27.—The greatest fire in the history of this city broke out in the millinery store of Annie Denton, and burned Hoof's opera-house, livery stable and drug store, Harper Bros. furniture store, Rayburn's insurance office, Dr. Petty's dwelling and office, R. S. Bickle's dwelling, Filson Bros. hardware store, Davis' meat market and Steinbach's barber shop. The loss is estimated at $100,000, with little insurance.

Sentenced to Death.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Julius Mannow was sentenced to hang October 16 by Judge Horton Friday morning. Mannow was an accomplice of Josiah Windrath in the murder of Carey B. Birch, cashier of the West Chicago Street Railway Co., June 25, 1895. Birch was alone at midnight of that day in the Armitage avenuo barns when the two men shot him to death and robbed the safe of $300. Windrath was hanged three weeks ago.

The Receivers Discharged.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Judge Lacombe, of the United States circuit court, has issued an order finally discharging Thomas F. Oakes, Henry C. Payne and Henry C. Rouse as receivers of the Northern Pacific railroad Co. and they are relieved from all indebtedness and obligations as such receivers.

Capt. Dickman Held for the Grand Jury

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—U. S. Commissioner Bell Friday afternoon gave a further hearing to Capt. Dickman, of the steamer Laurada, who was arrested here on the charge of engaging in a Cuban filibustering expedition on the Laurada from New York. He was held in $1,000 bail for the action of the grand jury.

Triple Hanging in Colorado.

CANON CITY, Col., June 27.—Thomas Colt, Elbert Noble and Dominick Romero, who murdered Policeman Solomon in Trinidad were hanged Friday in the state penitentiary.

FATAL FIRE.

One Killed and Two Men Dying at the City Hospital.

The Dead Man Was Driver For the Superintendent of Fire Alarms—The Injured Are Firemen—Loss by the Fire Probably Forty Thousand Dollars.

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 28.—One man dead and two dying at the city hospital, with several others injured, is the result of a fire which destroyed Miller & Co.'s mill on Twigg street Monday morning. The loss by the fire is probably $40,000; insurance, $12,000.

When discovered at 1:45 a. m., the mill was on fire in the third story of the main building, an iron covered structure with wooden frame work. The flames spread with great rapidity and while several firemen were working on a ladder, one of the walls gave way, this causing the casualties.

The dead: Aaron Morton, colored, driver for Superintendent of Fire Alarms J. B. Platt.

Injured: Mike Riley, hook and ladder truck, can not recover; Gabe Waiters, colored, can not recover.

Fredericks can not recover.

Bob Weakley, Engine Company No. 2, leg broken, head cut.

Henry J. Kale, ladderman on hook and ladder, head cut.

Ben Pueffier, engineer, head cut.

The origin of the fire is unknown.

NOTIFICATION COMMITTEE.

They Will Be in Canton Monday and Fulfill Their Duty—McKinley's Letter of Acceptance.

CANTON, O., June 29.—The city of Canton has witnessed a good many demonstrations of an enthusiastic nature since Maj. McKinley was nominated and there have been thousands of strangers within her gates. All the demonstrations and visitors up to this time, however, have been of an unofficial, if not informal character. Monday the advent of the notification committee, composed of one member from each state and territory, selected by the national committee at St. Louis for the purpose of conveying to the candidate of the notice of his nomination, will be an event of more significance and importance than the coming of all of the other visitors and delegations which McKinley has received.

The chairman of the committee, Senator John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, will be the spokesman for the committee Monday. Gov. McKinley's speech in reply to Senator Thurston will be scanned with interest. It will not be long and he will not at this time attempt to discuss in a significant or elaborate way the dominant issues of the campaign.

Nothing in the way of an exhaustive formal utterance may be expected until he publishes his letter of acceptance, which will be in a month or six weeks. This is the usual time which a candidate allows to elapse between the date of his official notification and the publication of his official acceptance of the nomination.

Maj. McKinley is not disposed to depart from custom in the matter. He knows there is an abundance of time before the election in November next for the discussion of all political questions of moment and he does not wish the campaign to commence too soon and too vigorously.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The Director Makes His Report on the Total Value of the Mineral Products of the United States.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—According to official statistics just issued by tho director of the geological survey the total value of the mineral products of the United States for 1895 increased over $80,000,000 beyond the value for 1893, or from $527,368,594 to $611,795,290. This increase is considered a long step towards recovery from the depression to which the mineral industry like all others has been subjected.

While the coal product is great, it is much steadier in spite of the extra demand for it in order to produce an extra supply of iron.

Another noticeable feature will bo tho profitable producing districts in the Appachian range. Nature gas showed a decline, the pressure decreasing in all the fields, thereby shortening the life of each well and greatly reducing the product, especially in Pennsylvania.

Almost all the remaining minerals show substantial improvement.

TOBACCO MONOPOLY.

Spanish Chamber of Deputies Adopts a Bill Permitting the Government to Raise $100,000,000.

LONDON, June 29.—The Standard Monday publishes a dispatch from Madrid saying that the chamber of deputies has unanimously adopted a bill enabling the government to raise the sum of $100,000,000 on the security of the tobacco monopoly, the money to be available for war expenses during the parliamentary recess. The dispatch adds that the government has completed arrangements for the use of 20 trans-Atlantic steamers during tho month of August to transport 40,000 reinforcements and 60,000 Mauser rifles to Cuba, and also a number of heavy guns to be mounted in the forts at Havana and other ports of the island.

New Diplomats Received.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—New diplomatic representatives of Japan and the Argentine Republic were formally received by tho president Saturday and duly recognized in their official capacity.

THE NOMINATIONS.

What the Democratic Press Says of the Work of the Republican Convention.

The predicted has come to pass. The expected has happened. The republican convention nominated William McKinley for president on the first ballot, as three months ago the World prophesied it would. McKinley is nominated with a shriek for protection, when the country is already provided with a 42 per cent. tariff—a rate one-quarter higher than the famous Morrill war tariff. He is proclaimed as the "advance agent of prosperity." "McKinley's triumph is democracy's opportunity," so said the World when his nomination became certain. The saying is true today. Nothing but the most open-eyed blundering, the most fatuous folly by the democrats at Chicago can deprive them of a splendid chance to elect the next president. Shall it be a campaign or suicide?—N. Y. World.

The republicans have nominated McKinley with unanimity not expressed for any successful new candidate, with the exception of Fremont, the first republican candidate, in 1856, and Grant, the third, in 1868. They alone were nominated for a first term on the first ballot. It is a shallow view which supposes that this extraordinary demonstration has been a mere matter of manipulation and forehandedness in the minutiae of convention politics. An amiable, engaging, showy, but rather shifty commonplace like McKinley often reaches public distinction, but personality or individual achievement hasn't drawn to him the sentiment which has made his nomination possible with an irresistible majority in the republican national convention.—N. Y. Sun.

If McKinley shall be elected president his four years' term of office will present an example of misgovernment without a parallel in past history. It will be a repetition on a larger scale of his weak and corrupt state administration in Ohio. It will be a period of misrule and of riot for all the schemes and conspiracies by which the treasury is robbed or by which the people are defrauded and oppressed. Popular institutions, a system of free government through a pure ballot box will be tested to their utmost capacity. Under an administration of McKinleyism the traffic in duties and subsidies, in patronage and spoils, will be a greater strain than that of slavery in the past on the conservative forces of honest republican government.—Chicago Chronicle.

McKinley is nominated and the republican party is before the country. The nomination was secured by a money campaign two years long. The republican party bought, with the cash put up by McKinley's investing backers, proposes to buy his election with cash pledged by the financial interests of New York and New England. What McKinley and Hobart represent consists of a few thousand owners of powerful, consolidated moneyed corporations in a few states on the Atlantic seaboard. "This is our tariff," said a Philadelphia manufacturer in 1890; "we bought and paid for it." "This is our ticket," the bankers and tariff barons are saying of McKinley and Hobart; "we have vouchers to show how much it cost us."—St. Louis Republic.

The brilliant and decisive victory won by the republican champions of gold at St. Louis should be at once a warning and an inspiration to true sound money democrats. A few days before this Waterloo of silverism and straddle cowardice would have seemed more like a dream than a possible reality. There was then every indication that the republican managers, lacking the courage to take a bold stand either for or against sound money, would straddle on that vital issue, as well as accept a straddle candidate. But the gold republicans arose, rallied, made a vigorous onslaught on silverism, cowardice and duplicity, and triumphantly carried the day as far as the platform was concerned.—N. Y. Herald (Ind.).

It is noticeable that McKinley was not the choice of the great republican states. The failure of these to agree upon a candidate gave the demberatic states, which will send him no electoral votes, an opportunity to force him upon them. The most eloquent significance of the situation is that his candidacy will fail to arouse that hearty enthusiasm in the republican states which would have resulted had they agreed upon and named a candidate of their own. It is a wonderful spectacle to see the solid democratic south thrusting down the throats of the northern and New England states a candidate whose nomination the latter fought so bitterly to defeat.—San Francisco Examiner.

The nomination of McKinley was a foregone conclusion and it was certain also that the convention would declare for protection, even though the extreme application of that principle with which McKinley's name is associated had once been overwhelmingly repudiated by the people. — Chicago News (Ind.).

It is a weak ticket; and the fact that the platform repudiates the record McKinley has made on the currency question, and the further fact that the people have rejected McKinley's high tariffism with emphasis, will serve to accentuate its dubious character.—Detroit Free Press.

CYCLING.

Mr. Goschen, the secretary of war, has followed Mr. Balfour's example and taken to the bicycle.

A speed of a mile in 58 seconds is claimed for a motor cycle exhibited at the Imperial institute, London.

At a recent bull fight in Madrid the matadore was mounted on a bicycle. The animal made a dash at him, the matadore failed to turn quickly enough, and wheel and rider were tossed high in the air. The rider was only slightly hurt, but the wheel was utterly wrecked.

MARTIAN METEOROLOGY.

The Weather on Our Neighboring Planet Is Always Fine.

The Martian meteorology is less complicated and more pleasant than that of the earth, says the North American Review. There the weather is almost always fine, especially during summer. Very seldom are there clouds even in winter. Generally, when we are unable to distinguish through the telescope the details of the geographical configurations upon the planet the fault is in our own atmosphere and not in that of Mars. It is very rarely the case that when our atmospheric conditions are good we are unable to see these details. During the last period of observation of Mars in 1894, I, to speak for myself, encountered only 15 days (from October 10 to 25) when the surface of the planet was veiled by its own atmosphere. Clouds are excessively rare on the surface of Mars, and perhaps exist at all only as fogs or light cirrus; they are not clouds of rain or storm. These veils are very infrequent there, while they are perpetual upon the earth. Probably there is not a single day in the year when the entire surface of the earth is uncovered so that it could be satisfactorily observed from space. The two planets have two meteorlogical systems that are absolutely antithetical.

Furthermore, in the rarefied atmosphere of Mars there can be no powerful winds, like the trade winds, and the predominant atmospheric currents which rule terrestrial climates. Occasionally, however, observers have noted long streaks of snow which appear to have been produced by currents in a tranquil atmosphere. Schiaparelli, for instance, observed such streaks ("trainees") in November and December, 1881, around the northern pole, and extending a considerable [illegible] from it. But such things are exceptions. The normal condition of Mars is fine weather.

WARNED BY WHITNEY.

Ex-Secretary Fears Adoption of Silver Platform at Chicago.

He Points Out the Danger of Such a Course—The Time Not Yet Opportune—Refuses to Become the Democratic Candidate.

New York, June 22.—The New York Journal, which is owned by W. R. Hearst, who is also proprietor of the San Francisco Examiner, prints a table in its issue purporting to give the standing of the delegates of the democratic national convention on the money question. The table, it says, was prepared by Mr. Whitney, and shows a total of 542 delegates for silver and 339 for gold.

New York, June 22.—Hon. William C. Whitney, who has been named as a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination has given the following to the press:

"I find it necessary to make a public statement embodying my views of the situation to correct misconceptions and to save the time now occupied in answering questions. Far too great importance has been attached to my decision to go to the Chicago convention. I have been practically out of politics for four years, and there are now many eastern democrats who can do much more than I can for the party. I shall not assume any position of leadership. My decision to stay was simply based on the duty of every person who believes in the party for its principles, to stand by and lend his aid and take his chances when a great crisis is upon it.

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY.

Differences in the Party.

"There can be no question but that a great crisis is upon the democratic party. Fundamental differences of principle exist inside the party, marked almost by sectional lines. The great question to my mind is whether the party meets in convention now as in 1860, with issues and differences that are for the moment irreconcilable. For the past 15 years leaders of public opinion in the south and west have been advocating as the great remedy for existing ills the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one, with or without the cooperation of other nations. It has come to be believed in there quite generally and conscientiously. A large majority of the delegates to the coming democratic convention have been elected by the people for the purpose of incorporating that doctrine into the platform of the democratic party.

Views of Eastern Democrats.

"Our people, on the other hand, entirely disagree with these views and believe almost universally that it will bring general ruin to the business and prosperity of the country. It is deemed a new doctrine when proposed to be incorporated into the platform of the national democracy. It is true that in no previous platform of the party can it specifically be found. Consequently no party obligations heretofore assumed oblige them to subscribe to it.

May Disrupt the Party.

"Under these circumstances, if the results of the democratic convention should be to establish as the issue of this campaign the free coinage of silver at a ratio of sixteen to one, independent of other nations, in the intensity of feeling likely to arise it is to be seriously apprehended that a disruption of the democratic party might occur. Certainly no substantial following could be secured for the doctrine among eastern democrats. They might not vote the republican ticket for other reasons (believing that the republican party stands for other issues that are detrimental to the country), but the democrats in the east would not, in my opinion, vote for it.

A Question of Ability.

"This movement for free coinage purports to have for its object the establishment and maintenance of gold and silver as the money of the country, upon equal terms with each other and at a parity of purchasing power. If, by the proposed measure, that object could be secured, there would be no substantial disagreement in the party. Every national democratic platform that has heretofore spoken upon the subject has declared for both gold and silver money. It is our traditional policy. But the maintenance of the double standard at the present time is not a question of desire; it is a question of ability. The commercial value of silver has declined greatly in the markets of the world. Whatever the causes are and whoever is to blame, the fact is that silver has declined, and free coinage now at sixteen to one is the same as our offering for all the silver in the world about twice what it is selling for in the market. International exchanges have to be paid in gold. And it would seem plain that if we, under these conditions, open our mints to free coinage of silver and gold at a ratio of comparative value which is largely at variance with the commercial value of the two metals, we must take the entire silver surplus ourselves and alone maintain its parity with gold, or else we shall go to a silver basis.

Time Is Inopportune.

Mr. Whitney refers to the fact that France closed her mints against silver in 1873, and abandoned the experiment, deeming herself unequal to the task alone. He says Germany, France, Belgium, Italy and Austria believe in a double standard and desire to establish it; but no one, two or three of them deem themselves able to maintain the double standard, even with the cooperation of the United States. He continues: "This movement, purporting to be in the interest of the joint standard, comes at a most inopportune time, in my opinion. There has never been a time when the prospects of international action favorable to the joint standard were at all as promising as at the present moment. But an ill-advised, unsuccessful attempt here would discredit the cause the world over. From the discussion of the last 20 years, it has come to pass that among the persons in Europe who are trained, recognized scientists upon the monetary and economic questions, scarcely one is not at the present moment advocating the desirability of the joint standard as the real solution of the monetary difficulties of the world. This includes every professor engaged in teaching or lecturing on these subjects in the universities of Great Britain. They are agreed upon the desirability of it, and that it is entirely practicable if established and maintained by agreement of the principal commercial nations.

Would Bring Immediate Ruin.

"It cannot be denied that the feeling among our people is that this free coinage by the United States alone will not give us the gold and silver money at a parity with each other (which is the assumption upon which it is undertaken), but will bring to us silver monometallism and a change in the standard of values. And that change, it is believed, means immediate ruin to our industries and no permanent good to anyone. This feeling is general and intense. Whether these differences can be reconciled, it is impossible to anticipate. The democratic party stands for principles desirable to be maintained for the good of the country. Almost any sacrifice might be asked of democrats for the sake of the party, and they would cheerfully make it. But if the delegates from this locality should go to that convention and represent that the rank and file of the party would follow the lead of the southern brethren and vote for free coinage of silver by the United States alone, he would be misrepresenting the state of public opinion here. Whether it is so or not, it is considered a proposition to debase the existing standard of values. And the same feeling of indisposition to compromise with that matter for votes or anything else is as active and dominant here in our party as it was found in the republican party when it bore down and overpowered the McKinley machine.

"At the present moment Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Holland, Belgium and the United States wish to cooperate for the establishment and maintenance of the joint standard by international agreement, and (a most important circumstance) Great Britain has recently, within three months, in fact, made a most important concession. She has said: 'We will do for you as much as you can do for yourselves. We will make this great contribution to a bimetallic system: We will go back upon the deliberately-arranged methods of providing a currency for India. We will reopen the Indian mints. We will engage that they shall be kept open, and we shall therefore provide for a free coinage of silver within the limits of the British empire for a population greater in number than the populations of Germany, France and America put together.'

"Into this long and now just about to be successful struggle for the establishment of the joint standard it is proposed that we should intervene by assuming to establish it alone. Against this proposed action on our part these earnest believers in and workers for the cause strenuously protest. They say to us: 'You cannot succeed, and your failure will discredit the cause.'

Predicts Democratic Defeat.

"Personally, it is my opinion that if the democratic party goes on to that platform this time they will meet the most disastrous defeat that any party has ever had in this country. I understand it is honestly believed in, and people think it will bring relief from their present troubles, but between now and election day it will be pretty thoroughly sifted and the people of this country will not face the disturbance of values, the loss of confidence, the general distress and ruin which would come to their business interests in such a change in the standard of value as would arise from such action. And it will, in my opinion, overwhelm the persons who undertake it.

Refuses to Be a Candidate.

"It ought not to be necessary for me to say anything of a personal nature. I find myself, however, spoken of here and there as a possible candidate—not very seriously or prominently, but sufficiently to attract attention if I should fail to notice it. It sometimes affects one's influence in cases like the present. I have no personal motive in entering this fight. I have said that I would not be a candidate. I will add, copying the emphatic language once used by the late Gen. Sherman (I think I remember it correctly): 'I will not run if nominated, nor serve if elected.' I am not foolish enough to suppose that any eastern man could be nominated by this convention—much less that I could. I sympathize thoroughly with the feeling in the south that has caused this uprising and will find its expression at Chicago, but as to the principles which the uprising has brought forth and the issues being framed I entirely disagree. WILLIAM C. WHITNEY."

DEATH HELD THE THROTTLE.

Engineer of the Burlington Fast Mail Dies at His Post.

Burlington, Ia., June 22.—With a dead man in the engineer's seat, the fast mail from Chicago to Burlington flew across the Illinois bottoms Saturday from Biggsville clear on to the big bridge across the Mississippi at this point before it was stopped by the fireman, who noticed the engineer's failure to blow the usual whistle signals, and ran around the boiler to the other side, where he found Engineer V. B. Giddings dead at his post. He had a great gash in his head as if it had been struck with great violence with or against some object, but what with, or how he came to his death, no one knows. The bridge draw was closed barely in time to let the runaway train, then in control of the fireman, across safely. The natural supposition is that Giddings leaned from his cab window to take a backward look and that as he did so his head came in contact with a water-crane, mail-sack catcher or bridge, but Superintendent Throop, who went over the line on a hand-car to make a personal examination, could discover no evidence in support of such a theory.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

Three Men in a Wagon Killed at a New Jersey Crossing.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 22.—The eight o'clock express from Philadelphia for this city, over the Pennsylvania railroad, struck a team and wagon at Absecon staton, about eight miles from here, shortly after nine o'clock Sunday morning and killed three men and fatally injured another. The men were bound on a picnic trip and had descended a steep hill leading to the depot without knowing the proximity of the train, which was speeding along at the rate of 60 miles an hour. They realized their danger when too late, as the momentum of the wagon carried the team out on the track where the vehicle was struck by the locomotive. The dead men, who were all relatives, are George Huber and his son, Frederick Huber, and Henry Getzner. Joseph Sahl, son-in-law of Huber, is believed to be fatally injured.

COST THREE LIVES.

Sad Disaster to a Boating Party Near Zanesville, O.

Zanesville, O., June 22.—A sad drowning accident occurred at three o'clock Sunday afternoon on the Muskingum river, four miles below this city. Grant Harvey, aged 33; Emma Collins, aged 21; A. O. Williams, aged 21, and Lulu Evans, aged 16, were out in a skiff in the middle of the river when the boat began to fill with water. Young Williams sprang into the water and with his hands on the boat was swimming for shore, when within 50 feet of the shore the three occupants of the boat became panic stricken and jumped into the water. In their struggle the two young ladies seized Harvey and pulled him down with them, the three sinking immediately. Young Williams was picked up by another skiff in an exhausted condition.

THE TRIP

Of the American Manufacturers to South America—The Party Will Consist of About Fifteen Members of Different Industries.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—All the arrangements for the trip to South America, under the auspices of the National Association of Manufacturers, have been completed and the party will sail from New York on the American line steamship St. Paul next Wednesday morning. From Southampton the party will sail on July 11 on the royal mail steamer Danube for the River Plata countries of South America. The trip will extend over about three months and the party will be due in New York again about October 1.

The party will consist of about fifteen members, each representing a different line of industry and some of them covering several branches of manufacturing.

The members of the party will be given a farewell dinner at the Hotel Waldorf next Tuesday evening.

As at present made up the party consists of the following members, to which several more are likely to be added before the time fixed for the departure: Fred. Stearns, of Frederick Stearns & Co., manufacturing pharmacists, Detroit, Mich.; J. M. Studebaker, Studebaker Bros. Manufacturing Co., wagons and carriages, South Bend, Ind.; T. S. Wood, Fairmount machine works, and Wm. Wood & Co., cotton and woolen goods, Philadelphia; Henry R. Gilbert, E. Stearns & Co., bicycles, Syracuse, N. Y.; F. L. Wagar, treasurer of the Wagar Lumber Co., Wagar, Ala., and representing the Gulf Coast Lumber Co., a combination of large mills on the gulf; Fremont W. Spicer, vice-president Frontenac Paper Co., Dexter, N. Y.; Mr. Spicer goes as the representative of the American Paper Manufacturers' association; S. E. Bacon, Bacon Manufacturing Co., Erie, Pa.; Mr. Bacon goes as the representative of the board of trade of Erie; John A. Johnson, vice-president of the Fulle & Johnson Manufacturing Co., of Madison, Wis., representing the National Association of Agricultural Implement and Vehicle manufacturers; W. T. Adams, of the W. E. Adams Machine Co., Memphis, Tenn., and Corinth, Miss., represents the Memphis Manufacturers' association; T. D. Palmer, of Palmer & Smith, leather manufacturers, Newark, N. J., represents the New Jersey Leather Manufacturers' association; J. R. Kilbourne, the Kilbourne & Jacobs Manufacturing Co., wheelbarrows, wagons, and scrapers, etc., Columbus, O.; Wm. Harper, representing the John B. Stetson Co., Philadelphia, manufacturers of fur, felt hats.

The party is under the management and direction of George W. Fishback, late secretary of legation at Buenas Ayres, Argentine Republic.

THE NEW YORK

Democratic Convention Adopts a Hard Money Platform and Elects Delegates to the Chicago Convention.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 25.—Wednesday the democratic state convention adopted a platform in favor of hard money and in opposition to legal tender paper money as a part of our permanent financial system. The platform indorses the administration of President Cleveland. The unit rule was also adopted.

SENATOR DAVID B. HILL.

The following delegates-at-large to the Chicago convention were elected: 1. David B. Hill, alternate, Robert Earl. 2. Roswell F. Flower, alternate, Smith M. Weed. 3. Edward Murphy, alternate, Jacob A. Cantor. 4. Frederick Coudert, alternate, William Purcell.

THE YALE CREW.

They Row Over Half the Course at Henley, and Made the Best Time Ever Made.

LONDON, June 25.—The Yale eight were out on the river again Wednesday afternoon and rowed over half of the Henley regetta course in the best time that has yet been made by any of the practicing crews, 3:25¾, pulling at a stroke of 35 in the minute.

Bob Cook expressed himself as very well satisfied with the work of the Yale men, and predicted that if they continued to improve daily as they have done, they will surely win the race for the grand challenge cup.

Killed Two for Revenge.

PENDLETON, Ore., June 25.—A section laborer at Rock Springs, Idaho, who was recently discharged from the Oregon Railway and Navigation road, killed Mrs. Haney, keeper of the section boarding car, and her infant child Wednesday morning and committed suicide. It is supposed he committed the crime for revenge, suspecting the woman was responsible for his discharge.

Ohio Democratic Convention.

COLUMBUS, O., June 25.—The Ohio democratic convention declared for the free coinage of silver. Chilton A. White was nominated for secretary of state, and E. K. Blondin for supreme judge. Allen W. Thurman, E. B. Finley, L. E. Holder and John R. McLean were selected as delegates-at-large to the Chicago convention.

Killed by a Fall of Slate.

MASSILLON, O., June 25.—Geo. Hauxwell, a young miner, was instantly killed in the Nutwood mine. His neck was broken by a fall of slate.

OFF FOR CUBA.

The Steamer Commodore Chased by the Revenue Cutter McLane.

The Filibustering Vessel Has a Cargo Consisting of Arms and Ammunition for the Cuban Insurgents—The Commodore Carries Nearly 100 Men.

TAMPA, Fla., June 26.—When the steamer Commodore left Port Tampa Thursday afternoon she was followed by the revenue cutter McLane, the latter having orders to stop the suspected filibuster. When Capt. Morton, of the Commodore, saw the McLane in pursuit he crowded on steam and a lively race began. As the Commodore gained the McLane sent four solid shots after the filibuster and the latter came to. The McLane's commander searched the Commodore, but nothing contraband was found. The Commodore was allowed to go and the McLane started back to port. Six miles down the bay, however, the Commodore came to and was approached by three [illegible]ers. Nearly a hundred men and scores of arms and ammunition [illegible] transferred from the schooners to the Commodore. The McLane's commander saw this transfer by means of his glasses, and again pursued the Commodore. The McLaue gained at first and fired on the Commodore repeatedly, but the shots fell short. The powerful engines of the Commodore soon told, however, and she began to forge ahead. When the boats passed St. Petersburg, the Commodore was leading the McLane six miles. As the McLane has no coast pilot, she will have to lay to during the night, and this will enable the Commodore to make good her escape.

GEORGIA DEMOCRACY.

They Adopt the Unit Rule and Will Send a Solid Silver Delegation to Chicago.

MACON, Ga., June 26.—Georgia democracy adopted the unit rule in convention Thursday and sent a solid delegation to Chicago for free silver. The delegates-at-large are: E. F. Howell, of the Atlanta Constitution; Senator Patrick Walsh, of the Augusta Chronicle, Hal Lewis and J. Hope Brown. Out of 11 congressional districts, ten solid silver delegations, and the eleventh is bound to vote for 16 to 1 bimetallic platform and bi-metallic candidates under the unit rule.

The platform deplores lynchings, and favors the enactment of such laws as will effectually prevent the same; declares its devotion to "pure democratic faith, which demands that the primary money of the country shall be the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, and which favors a circulating medium convertible into such money without loss;" and demands the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold, independent of the action of any other government, at the ratio of 16 to 1.

The entire state officers were renominated excepting the state treasurer, who declined renomination, and the assistant treasurer, J. M. Sparr, was nominated for that office.

FOUR DROWNED.

A Sail Boat on Clearwater Lake, in Minnesota, Capsizes.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., June 26.—By the capsizing of a sail boat at Clearwater lake near here three Minneapolis young people and a St. Paul woman lost their lives Thursday morning. They were John U. Putnam, book-keeper for J. Q. Adams, of the corn exchange, Minneapolis; his sister, Miss Anna T. Putnam, a teacher employed in the Minneapolis kindergartens; Miss Bessie Newhall, Minneapolis, and Mrs. Sherman, of St. Paul. The party had just embarked for a sail on Clearwater lake, and had proceeded not more than 100 yards from shore, where the water was rough, when a gale struck them. The boat capsized and all went down.

To Protect British Surveyors.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, June 26.—According to advices received here from Georgetown, British Guiana, an armed police force has been dispatched to Acarabisci for the purpose of protecting the British surveyors, who, while engaged in opening a road from the Barima to the Cuyuni rivers were stopped by a body of Venezuelans, and their leader, Crown Surveyor Harrison, arrested. An endeavor will be made to continue the survey; but the party have been instructed to retire should determined opposition be met with.

Lynched by an Angry Mob.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 26.—Infuriated citizens lynched another Negro in Lowndes county late Tuesday night. The Negro, Bill Westmoreland, had killed a well to do farmer, John Gilchrist, who lived near Ft. Deposit. Posses were at once organized. They found Westmoreland, dragged him into a wood, where they hanged him. Five hundred shots were fired into his body.

Southern Wholesale Grocers Meet.

RICHMOND, Va., June 26.—The Southern Wholesale Grocers' association met in this city Thursday morning in their Fifth annual convention and was called to order by the president, Mr. E. G. Leigh, jr. A brief address of welcome was made by Mr. F. D. Beveridge, president of the Richmond association, and Mr. Leigh read his address.

Killed By Her Nephew's Engine.

WAPAKONETA, O., June 26.—The fast Detroit express, nearing Cridersville, struck Miss Lydia Bowsher while she was walking on the track, killing her. She was the aunt of the fireman on the train that struck her.

The Government Buying Powder.

NEW YORK, June 26.—A Journal special from Wilmington, Del., says: During the past week E. I. Dupont-Nemours, whose big powder works are on the Brandywine creek, has been making large shipments of powder to the United States government, and Wednesday received several extraordinary orders from Washington calling for shipment within a week. The works are being run to their full capacity day and night to fill these orders, which are of such unusual size that considerable interest is manifested as to the disposition the government will make of such explosives.

OUTRAGES IN ARMENIA.

Girls and Women Publicly Sold at Auction by the Turks—A Distracted Mother Throws Her Two Daughters into a Well to Save Them.

NEW YORK, June 27.—A special to the Herald from Constantinople says: Denial is given by the sublime porte to the embassy statement that Turkish troops fired upon Armenian prisoners. Complete accord exists between the representatives of the great powers on the subject of securing the appointment of a Christian governor for Crete and the fulfillment of the treaty of Haleppa. Each ambassador will send an individual note to this effect.

Another sanguinary outbreak has occurred at Van and 400 are reported to have been killed.

The Persians are promoting the disturbances and fomenting the revolt throughout Armenia.

The Druses have now received Bedouin support and are driving out the Turks. Diplomatic pressure is being brought to bear upon the porte, increasing the chances of peace.

The following statement has been received from Capt. [illegible] have witnessed hideous enormities. Armenian girls and women were publicly sold at auction. A mother threw her two daughters into a well before my eyes to save them from the Turks. Evidences of Turkish official complicity have been obtained by me. The foreign press should be ashamed to remain indifferent."

Capt. Viliar deplores the humiliating role accepted by France. The porte continues to hang Armenians publicly. It is understood that Russia will prevent the publication of Viliar's report.

CORNELL WON.

Eighteen Thousand People Witness the Boat Race at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 27.—"Rah for Cornell." Eighteen thousand people grouped upon the picturesque banks of the Hudson with the last rays of the setting sun casting a golden sheen upon the water, saw the stalwart eight from Ithaca win first honors over Harvard, Pennsylvania and Columbia. It was a great race. Probably no prettier has been rowed before a greater crowd in American waters. All conditions of air and water were perfect. Not a flaw marred the contest of the crack of the starter's pistol to the crossing of the finish line. Cornell won by four lengths in 19:29, official time. Harvard was second. Pennsylvania third and Columbia a poor fourth. As a spectacular scene the race was one long to be remembered. The course, a four mile stretch straight as the crow flies, lay near the west bank of the Hudson and was spanned by the great cantilever bridge, the finish being one mile below that structure and the start three miles above.

The official time was returned as follows: Cornell, 19:19; Harvard, 19:32; Pennsylvania, 20,11.

This time if correct establishes a new American record as the best previous time was 20:10, made by Yale at New London.

SURE GO.

That Scheme to Close Down Kentucky Distilleries—Six Refuse.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 27.—Reports received in this city Friday show that the movement to secure a shut-down of the distilleries of the state for a period of 18 months—from July 1, 1896, to January 1, 1898—will be overwhelmingly successful.

Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Union national bank, the committee on allotment and the committee on solicitation will meet and formulate reports for the benefit of the distillers of the state, for such of the public as may be interested in the matter of distillery suspension.

Their reports will show that all but six of the distillers of Kentucky have signed the agreement to shut down for 18 months. These six are holding out because they have not, as they think, received proper recognition at the hands of the committee of allotment.

A Youthful Oil Magnate.

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., June 27.—The Utility Oil Co.'s well on the Charles Ford farm, two miles northwest of Dundee, was shot, and is now making 200 barrels. This is the company's fourth well on the lease, all of which are producers. Charles Ford, the owner, is hardly twenty years old, and the farm was given to him in the settlement of an estate of his father before oil was thought of in that vicinity. It is now one of the most valuable oil farms in the field.

Wm. Turner Pleads Guilty.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Before Judge Cowing, in general sessions Friday afternoon, Wm. Turner, one of the two servants who stole $60,000 worth of jewelry from I. Townsend Burden, withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to the indictment for robbery. Turner was remanded until Monday, when he will come up for sentence with Wm. Dunlop, the other servant.

Arthur Taylor Executed.

MARIANA, Ark., June 27.—Arthur Taylor, colored, was hanged here at 11 o'clock Friday morning for the murder of his wife last October. No appeal for executive clemency was made for him. Sol. Gibbs and Wesley Hall, sentenced to hang here for the assassination of W. R. King, near Saylorsville October 18, 1895, have been respited for thirty days. Both are colored.

The Law Declared to Be Valid.

CLEVELAND, O., June 27.—Word was received by the city officials Friday that the supreme court of the state has affirmed the validity of the contemplated bond issues for public improvements amounting to seven or eight million of dollars, authorized by special acts of the last legislature. The question was on the constitutionality of the special acts and had the decision been made against the city it would have invalidated many millions of dollars' worth of bonds. The decision in favor of the city affects also a large number of acts passed in the interests of other cities and counties in the state

A MINE HORROR.

Nearly One Hundred Men Entombed in a Coal Shaft.

Among the Victims Are Mayor Langan and a Number of Minor Officials—The Disaster Is Believed to Have Been Caused by a Cave-In.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 29.—The little city of Pittston is in mourning as a result of the terrible disasters which have cost so many lives in Pennsylvania. A large number of her citizens, variously estimated at from eighty to one hundred and twenty-five, are entomed at the bottom of the Twin shaft, owned by the Newton Coal company, and at a late hour Sunday night the prospect of saving the lives of any of these unfortunate men is exceedingly poor. Among the victims is M. J. Langan, mayor of Pittston, who was superintendent of the mine. A number of minor officials of the company are also in the pit.

The disaster, which was at first attributed to an explosion of gas, is now believed to have been caused by a general cave-in on the lower levels. It was noticed several days ago that the rock between the fifth and sixth veins was "working," and since that time a large force of men has been at work taking measures to insure the safety of the workings. About three o'clock Sunday morning, without warning the roof of the levels in which the men were working, collapsed with a shock which aroused everyone in the town, causing them at first to think an earthquake had occurred. The truth was soon learned, however, and within two hours thousands of excited people gathered about the head of the shaft, the relatives of the unfortunate men below indulging in the wildest manifestations of grief. The women and children who had lost husbands and fathers were frantic.

But four men escaped from the mine and not one of these could tell a connected story of how the disaster occurred, or what was the condition of the lower levels. The work of rescue was begun as soon as possible, but the first four trips made into the mine were without result. Later a conference of mining officials decided on a more systematic plan and a large force was put to work with all necessary appliances to endeavor to reach the imprisoned men. It was found impossible to work through the mass of debris in the direction of the [illegible] and at a late hour Sunday night it was decided to delve a gangway from an adjoining colliery.

This will undoubtedly take several days to complete and it is feared that in the meantime such of the unfortunates as were not killed by the cave-in will perish slowly of starvation.

Nearly all the men in the mine were married and some of them have large families. As stated above, the estimate of the number entombed varys greatly, but the number is certainly not less than eighty.

ALL BOSH.

The Talk of Gold Men Buying Silver Delegates at the Chicago Convention.

CHICAGO, June 29.—Hugh C. Wallace, delegate-at-large from the state of Washington and a member of the democratic national committee, who arrived Sunday from New York, where he has been in conference with Mr. Whitney and other sound money leaders, says:

"The talk of gold men coming to Chicago to buy silver delegates is all bosh. There will be no attempt to coerce nor will there be any unfair means used. There will be a host of strong, earnest Democrats from the east and other localities who of national prominence and leadership who will come to dissuade the silver leaders from party suicide. They will show conclusively that the adoption of a 16 to 1 platform by the convention will mean annihilation of the democracy of New York, Connecticut and New Jersey. There are those who believe that these states have been the bulwarks of democracy in the past and are essential in the future. Should the convention adopt a 16 to 1 platform and nominate a silver candidate, it will not be 30 days before the issue is clearly defined and reduced to panic vs. no panic, with the result that the combined business interest of the country will be arrayed against that candidate whose election means panic. No party has ever succeeded with the business interests against it. It is a long time between now and election and the wage earners of the country will have abundant opportunity to elect whether their wages shall be paid in fifty-cent dollars."

Will Permit no Bulldozing.

CHICAGO, June 29.—There is trouble in store for the Cleveland ballplayers if they attempt any rowdyism in this city during the series of four games beginning Monday. President Hart left Sunday night for Pittsburgh to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the league, and left orders with Treasurer Brown for an extra detail of police. Should any bulldozing be attempted by the Spiders they will be placed under arrest at once and treated as they were in Louisville.

Swindler Sentenced.

PARIS, June 29.—Emile Arton, implicated with Dr. Herz and the late Baron Von Reinack in the frauds on the Panama Canal Co., has been sentenced to six months at hard labor.

Cleveland Going to Gray Gables.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Unless something now entirely unforseen should happen to change his plans there is every probability of the president leaving here Tuesday morning next for Gray Gables, where he will remain for the summer, should not the present even tenor of events be disturbed by complications not now expected from any quarter. The coming week is likely also to witness a very general departure of cabinet officers whose personal presence in Washington is not regarded by them as absolutely necessary during the coming period of mid-summer [illegible] and stagnation.

Sam C. Johnson, candidate for assessor of Boone county, was seen shaking hands with our boys one day last week.

Edward Thompson and family, of Augusta, were visiting old acquaintances here last week.

The lecture which was delivered by Rev. Lafe Johnson on the 20 inst., subject—"Arizona Trip," was a grand success with a large attendance.

We are sorry to chronicle the death of our young friend, Lyle Hudson, who passed away on the 23rd inst., of peritonitis. Lyle was a bright, promising boy of about 18 years. He was staying with his brother, Dale, at the time of his death. His sickness was brief. The remains were take to Richwood for interment.

We learn that there is strong talk of there being an Odd Fellows' lodge organized here in the near future. We have some excellent material here to compose a good lodge.

Democrats, and free silver are all the go here. Hurrah for Mr. Teller for president. [You don't mean that, do you?—ED.]

B. D. N. Jones and wife, of Elwood, Ind., were the guests of friends and relatives here last week They took their departure for home last Saturday.

Miss Lulu B. Powers was visiting her sister, Mrs. Kittie Johnson, of Walton, last week.

We hear that Emmet Orsborn was bitten by one of B. S. O'Neal's dogs that was supposed to have hydrophobia one day last week. Emmet left immediately for Cincinnati to have a mad stone applied. We have not learned whether the stone adhered or not.

Miss Irene Hudson has been very poorly for a long time.

Walton.

Prof. Craven, of Verona, passed through our town one day last week.

The boys of Walton have added base ball to their list of amusements.

Lee Lancaster has moved into our town, and will engage in the butcher business.

The streets of Walton are being improved very much by the addition of stone covered over nicely with sand.

The writer is not sure whether we have a new hotel or not, but he saw the sign on Hugh Watson's door, reading, "a good dinner for 25 cents, but don't call for it while I'm engaged in a game of croquet."

A new Huber steam thresher passed through our town a few days ago, being owned by John L Vest, of Verona.

Miss Lillie Rouse, of Scott county, is visiting relatives here.

Rev. Mass preached Sunday morning at the Christian church.

Miss Hattie Gaines, of Cincinnati, is visiting her sister of this place, Mrs. Craven.

Everybody's old friend, Kirby Leech, of Verona, passes through here every few days and appears to be doing business in Verona, Walton and Cincinnati.

Miss Annie Rouse, of Crittendon, was visiting friends here last week.

Joe Reed, while out riding in a wagon a few days ago, fell out on his head and cut a figure which would look well in Sundays Enquirer.

Bruce Roberts has moved into Walton. We welcome him.

J. H. Rogers, clerk for Rachards and Dean, is taking his first lesson on a bike. The wheel became ungovernable as he thought, which finally proved to be a fact, when cries went ringing through the ears of those near by, "help me or I will fall," which he did, and getting up replied, "I think I can learn all right."

Messrs Rouse & Rouse (Larrence and Walter), of Zion Station, with their wives, were among their relatives here yesterday.

Mrs. Emma Houston is visiting her parents at north Walton.

A faint effort is being made to have our main thoroughfare put on a good appearance. Dock Vest, under the able superintendence of trustee Ransler, is cleaning out the gutters and grading the road between railway escape and High street.

The familiar face of A. M. Edwards, of Wilmington, Del., is being cordially greeted by his many friends. The critical illness of his sister, Mrs. A. E. Gorman, has, for a time, brought him to his old home. Mrs. Caroline Hoerell of the Phoenix hotel, is getting gradually better in the the last few days.

It is understood that Mr. Casey who contributed several articles on bimetallism which have appeared in your paper, has gone to work again since the nomination of McKinley. He thinks the Republicans will do all that is in their power to avoid the currency issue.

Bullittsville.

Miss Myrtle Riley, of Independence, is visiting relatives here.

Mr. Allie Gaines, of Chattanooga, has returned home after a week's visit in this vicinity.

Mrs. Jane and Ida Wilson went to Lawrenceburg this week to visit Charlie.

Albert Clore is expected home from Indianapolis to spend the fourth with the home folks.

Mr. Hade Calvert, of Utah, a former Boone county boy, is here visiting his many relatives and friends.

Elmer Beall and Edison Riddell gave us a call last week.

The long, protracted drouth, has terminated, and we are now having rain and plenty of it, sufficient to produce a coal-boat rise in the Ohio.

Mrs. Ben McConnell and children, of Louisville, are visiting their relatives here.

Mr Claud Adams, of Grant county, spent a couple of days here the guest of his brother.

Rev. J. L. Presser passed through our place on his way to Markland, Ind., where he will fill his regular appointment.

Wilbur Rice, of Utzinger, was visiting C. G. Riddell, last Sunday.

Miss Maud Ryle is visiting Cincinnati relatives.

Bellevue.

J. J. Huey & Co., recently shipped 16 hogsheads of tobacco to Cincinnati. Jack Walton and tenants report $3.50 average per hundred, in the Louisville market.

The corn crop has made a very rapid growth, some of it having been plowed only twice and is as high as a horse's back.

Wm. Botts reports that he has six acres of tobacco growing nicely.

The plant-louse is seriously damaging the melon crop.

Home-grown peaches are on the market here.

Rev. O. M. Huey preached at the Baptist church here on the 28th, while T. L. Utz supplied the pulpit at Carrollton.

The infant child of Henry Clore and wife is sick; also the daughter of M. J. Corbin and wife.

Mrs. Lucy Huey has been suffering with the quinsy.

The time of preaching at the Baptist church has been changed from 10 to 11 a. m.

Miss Jennie Campbell and niece, Emily Demaree, are guests of A. B. Corbin and wife.

Clayton Rogers, of Louisville, is at home spending his vacation.

Bro. Utzinger, as those initials appear where many of the days of my youth were spent, I suspect I am guilty. The only reason the killing of the bear does not appear, is I had no opportunity, as I was often styled by my elder brother, the nimrod of the family.

Union.

P. T. Fall spent a few days with us rerecently.

The Masonic Reunion announced sometime since materialized on the 24th ult., and was enjoyed by all present. The lunch was not only bountiful, but consisted of the most tempting dishes the season could afford. The ladies displayed their usual amount of curiosity, asking many questions that necessarily remained unanswered. Some were almost tempted to take a degree in order to locate the mysterious goat.

Mrs. Will Talliafero and children and Miss Elizabeth Grant, of Petersburg, are visiting Mrs. John Garrison and other friends here. Mrs. Talliaferro formerly lived in our midst and we always welcome her return. Miss Grant, daughter of J. Frant Grant, is a most animated and intelligent young lady.

The infant child of O. B. Utz died Saturday morning and was buried at Big Bone Sunday afternoon. The parents have our deepest sympathy.

Prof. Voshell attended the Kentucky Educational Association at Newport, last week.

Messrs. Hal and Jim Blanton and Squire Webb, of Erlanger, were in town Sunday.

Jas. A. Huey and family, and Mrs. Robt. Rice, of Florence, are visiting in Gallatin county.

Dr. Hays. of Bullittsville, called on Dr. Crouch and wife Sunday afternoon as he passed through town.

Mrs. Wallace Garrison gave an informal party Saturday evening in honor of Miss Elizabeth Grant. It was a delightful affair.

Dr. Charlie Violette, of Napolean, was calling near town Saturday.

Mrs. Jno. Garrison chaperoned a party to the Lagoon, last Monday.

Erlanger.

Eastern Star Lodge has sent for their charter with about thirty members on the list. They have changed the meetings from afternoons to the first and third Saturday evenings at 8 pm.

Lafayette Lodge K. of P. conferred the Knight Rank at their last meeting; they also accepted the invitation to attend the picnic of Burlington Lodge on July 11th, and will be on hand in a body.

Several of the Masonic brethren visited Henry Clay Lodge in Covington and were well paid for their trouble, if they did have to walk home.

A notable event took place last Sunday, at the graduating class of St. Henry's school at Elsmere, they receiving the first Holy Communion. The services began at 8 a. m., and Solemn High Mass was sung, the Rev. J. B. Kolby officiating. The following were the happy recipients: Masters J. Wintergerger, J. Kimmic, N. Kramer and Misses G. Biomer, R. Reisch and L. Hummel.

Revs. Barker and Fizer are conducting a very successful revival at the Methodist church. Seven new converts and five additions by letter up to Sunday night. The business houses close every afternoon for one hour during services.

Hebron.

Plenty of rain last week.

Mrs. Addie Ernstes is very low at this writing.

The Ludlow club came down last Saturday and gave the Hebron team a genuine drubbing—13 to 6.

A meeting of the board of directors of the North Kentucky Harvest Home Association was held at the Lagoon last Saturday for the purpose of arranging their program, appointing committees and fixing the date for the next Harvest Home. It will be held on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 3d & 4th. There was a good attendance and all had good time as a they always do when entertained by the manager, Mr. Noonan. Everything was free—a ride on the Ferris wheel, scenic railway, boat riding, supper, &c. Mr. Noonan is a gentleman in every respect and will endeavor to make any one enjoy themselves while in his company.

Bart Aylor and Miss Nellie Riggs were married last Wednesday at the home of the bride.

Hathaway.

Plenty of rain now and everything is looking fine.

Clyde, son of Robt. and Myrtle Clements, was very sick last week.

Mrs. Maggie Weldon has been quite sick for several days.

Mrs. Annie Snyder and Miss Carrie Woods, of Missouri, are visiting their grandfather, Mr. Robt. Woods, here.

Rev. John Presser, who has returned home from Louisville. preached a most excellent sermon at Big Bone church, last Sunday a week.

Claud Adams, of Crittenden, was visiting relatives here last week.

Any one who happened to look out last Monday morning a week, could see young men coming in every direction. They had been caught out in the storm the night before, but they had very little to say about it when asked.

Mrs. J. L. Huey and son, Linnie, who united with the Big Bone church some few weeks ago, were baptized in the river at Hamilton, last Saturday.

James Rice has been very sick for some time with the chills.

T. J. Stephens had hands out on the road several days last week, and made quite an improvement on the bad places.

Limaburg.

Five inches of rain fell here last week, and the crops are growing nicely.

A great many are anticipating an enjoyable fourth of July.

James M. Utz has moved to Limaburg.

Chas. Crigler and James Craven took in the Lagoon last Saturday.

W. R. Roues has put a sewer under the pike here.

Eddie and Allen Anderson have gone into the blackberry business.

J. M. Utz killed a spreading adder that measured 3½ feet from tip to tip.

Miss Clara Seniour, of Covington, is visiting Miss Orie Rouse and other friends at this place.

Otha Yuth, of Cincinati, is visiting Ezra Rouse.

Florence

There was a basket meeting of huge proportions at the colored Baptist church, Sunday. Nearly a car load of visitors from Cincinnati, and a great many from other parts of the country were present. Among the number was a bad nigger from the city, named Jim Ross, who came out to kill or be killed. During the course of a heated argument he attempted to draw a pistol, when our town marshal, John Hampton, dropped down on him like a duck on a June bug, and soon had him safe behind the bars of our local bastile. With this exception everything passed off in good shape.

Prof. Collins was here Sunday, telling people that he and Cy Crisler are going to swallaw your correspondent blood-raw, when they get him. They had better bring a pinch of salt with them.

Jim Carpenter has erected a set of new scales at his residence, for weighing coal, &c.

Mrs. T. L. Swetman is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Fannie Corwin, in Covington.

Joe Clark who was seriously ill with typhoid fever, is improving slowly.

Miss Katie Powers, of Verona, after a visit of several weeks to her sister here, Mrs. James Tanner, has returned home.

Tom Lancaster, a lad about 16 years old, and Charlie, a colored employe at the Southern Hotel, started for the west, last Friday, to kill Indians. When last heard from they were in Louisville. Lancaster's relatives are very much worried over his running away. JNO.

W. C. RINEARSON, G. P. A.,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

There was quite a contest in the County Court last Thursday over the granting of letters of administration on the estate of Barnett Powers, deceased. Some of the heirs were opposed to the widow administering, claiming that she is incompetent, but she satisfied the court to the contrary, and was appointed administratrix with Jas. Cleek as her surety. Levi Wolfe, Geo. W. Powers and Jack Cluster were appointed appraisers. J. G. Tomlin for the widow, and Elijah Green and Geo. G. Hughes for the heirs.

James Ross, colored, was tried before Judge Rice, of Florence, yesterday and given $25 fine and 10 days imprisonment for carrying a pistol, and marshal Hampton brought him over and lodged him in jail. Ross is a hard customer, and has been in jail here several times. He belongs to a class of lawbreakers for whom a whipping post is the best medicine.

There will be no unusual demand for harvest hands this season.

Senator Hill, of New York, says there will be no bolt at Chicago.

SAM HARRIS,

No. 6520. Record, 2:29½.

He will make the season of 1896, at my stable on the Dry Creek & Bullittsville pike, between Hebron and Constance, at $10 to insure a colt, the money due when the mare is known to be in foal or parted with after being bred.

SAM HARRIS' get always sells for fancy prices. Forty of his colts sold at an average of over $400—no other horse that ever stood in this county has made such a showing. If desired the names of those making above sales will be furnished.

Those desiring to breed mares can leave them with me and they will receive attention and be furnished pasturage at $2 per month. The excellent breeding qualities of Sam Harris are well known in this county.

Understand that our own Prof. A. C. Collins won new laurels and lots of them at the Kentucky Educational Association at Newport, last week. He was among the most prominent educators in attendance.

Prof. Henry Newton delivered a very interesting speech on the Hiles Educational law, and free text books, at Falmouth and Crittenden. Many of the teachers and people of this county would like to hear the Professor on the same subjects at the institute this year.

Tom Hogan spent last week with his parents here. Only a few days before he graduated with honors at St. Xavier's College, Cincinnati. Tommie is a popular young man, and his many friends here are pleased at the success he had in the pursuit of his studies, and only wish that his future life may be as successful as have been his school days.

Base Ball.

The game of ball played here last Saturday afternoon between the Florence and Burlington teams resulted in a victory for Burlington. The Florence and Bellevue teams are the most gentlemanly ball tossers of the five teams that have visited this place this season. Here is the score by

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	—
Burlington	2	0	4	0	3	0	6	0	*	—15
Florence	1	3	0	0	0	0	1	0	6	—11

Batteries—Clutterbuck and Hawes. Kyle, Dulaney and Ingram.

The Ludlow and the Hebron teams played at Hebron last Saturday afternoon, the score being 13 to 6 in favor of Ludlow. The features of the game were two long throws made by Johnnie Hogan from center field home cutting off two runs at the plate. Gordon and Quick did excellent work.

When we go to press Mr. Blyth, one of the managers of the Burlington ball team is in the city to get a team to play here on the 4th inst. If he succeeds posters advertising the game will be sent out in good time.

Hon. J. G. Furnish for Congress.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In last week's issue of your paper was a communication from Dr. G. F. Gaines, in which he says he was deputized to address a letter to the Hon. N. S. Walton to become a candidate for Congress from the Sixth District.

It seems funny that the Democracy of Walton or Boone county would deputize Dr. Gaines to address a letter to any Democrat to become a candidate for any office. Every Democrat in the Sixth District knows that Dr. Gaines signed a protest to the world that he would not support A. S. Berry, the Democratic nominee for Congress in 1894, and that he electioneered and voted for T. B. Mathews, the Republican nominee and a gold-bug, and that he did all he could to defeat A. S. Berry, the Democratic nominee. At the last November election he (Gaines) voted for W. H. Metcalf, the Republican candidate and a gold-bug, for Representative, against a silver Democrat and a loyal friend to Blackburn, the Hon. J. G. Furnish, the nominee of the Democratic party.

I don't see why any Democrat would answer a call from a mugwump and a bolter, and there was no informal meeting of any Democrats deputizing Dr. Gaines to communicate with the Hon. N. S. Walton. There might have been a meeting of mugwumps and bolters.

The Hon. N. S. Walton is a clever gentleman and a good Democrat, but he has no more claim on the Democracy for an endorsement than any silver Democrat in the county of Boone.

The man whom the Democrats should endorse is the Hon. J. G. Furnish for their standard bearer for Congress from the Sxth District. He has represented the county twice, and when defeat was staring Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn in the face, Furnish was always at his post to cast his vote for the nominee of the Democratic party and a silver Democrat. When the mass-convention is held at Burlington he should be endorsed as Boone county's standard bearer for Congress over any Democrat in the Sixth District. He has proven himself a staunch silver Democrat, and there is not another man in the Sixth District that has proven himself a better friend to silver than the Hon. J. G. Furnish.

D. HALEY.

J. D Acra drove a lot of nice lambs through town yesterday,

It does not seem that the blackberry vendors have learned that they are unusually cheap this season.

The Second District Sunday School Convention will be held with the Union Baptist church, July 23. The programme will be published next week.

We visited the fair grounds at Florence, Monday, and was surprised to find the work on the buildings progressing so well. Everything will be in good shape for the fair this fall.

Calling at D. E. Castleman's law office, we found him pretty well equiped for the practice of his profession. As part of his library he has a complete set of Kentucky Reports, something rarely found in a law office in Kentucky.

There were six common school pupils examined for diplomas, last Thursday, none of whom succeeded in going through. The examiners placed the grade pretty high, and the applicants will be given another examination free of charge if they desire it.

NOTICE!

The Refreshment Stand, Basket-room and the Merry-go-round privilege at the Boone County Harvest Home will be rented to the highest bidder on the grounds near Limaburg at 2 p. m., Saturday, August 1st, 1896. And at the same time and place the contract for hauling water and furnishing ice for the Harvest Home will be let to the lowest bidder.

The GLORIOUS 4TH.

The church bells are merrily clanging
At the first red flush of the morn,
And cannon are flashing and banging,
And hoarse peals the ear-splitting horn:
On the air floats the banner of glory—
New stars its bright azure adorn—
And all of the day tells the story
When a nation to freedom was born!

All day, through the heat,
Sounds the tramp, tramp of feet!
'Tis the rampant small boy,
In a frenzy of joy,
Over crackers a-cracking,
And the snappy whack-whacking
Of pistols, torpedoes, and such—
Ah, for him there is never too much!
No pleasure can thrill him,
No music can fill him
With rapture so sweet
As the popping of powder
(Now softer, now louder),
And the rub-a-dub beat
Of the drum, and the life-
Stirring scream of the fife.

But night, with her mantle of peace,
At last shutteth silently down
Over country and village and town;
For awhile in the air
The bright, sky-rending flare
Of the rocket, the sheen
Of the candle's tumultuous glare,
Out-shining the starlight, are seen—
Then quietly, one by one,
Like the going down of the sun,
The tumult, the glory, surcease,
And the day, that so noisily rose,
Sinks down to unbroken repose.
Unbroken? Ha! ha!—
Bang! bang! bang! fizz—
Bang! bang! fizz—
Bang!—
Fizz!—
And the world sleeping is.

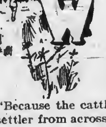
JASON'S DOUBLE INDEPENDENCE

[Original.]



WON'T be much of a holiday to-morrow, I'm afraid," remarked the storekeeper of the prairie settlement to the company gathered in his little room.

"Because the cattle's comin'?" put in a settler from across the creek. "Little thing like that hadn't ought to prevent Lone Prairie's havin' a good time on Fourth o' July."

"We'll have too much to do. The herd's a big one, or Jason Moore would not come in with it."

"His first trip to town in six years, I'm told. A woman was in it—wasn't there?"

"Yes, his girl married another man, or something like that."

Two well-dressed gentlemen, sharp contrast to the settlers, entered. They were buyers from the city at the mouth of the river, come to inspect the big herd of Texas cattle to come in off the range.

"What did you say this peculiar herder's name is?" one of them, tall and dark, asked.

"Jason Moore, the best known herder on the grazing ground—an' the best one, too, I reckon."

The stranger seemed a little startled, but he only remarked: "Good day for him to come to town—Fourth of July."

"But there ain't much going on that I know of."

There was something going on, and each member of the settlement found out what it was the next morning early when a small boy on horseback made the rounds, firing a large torpedo at every cabin door and announcing to the startled inmates that a flag-raising would take place at noon out at the schoolhouse.

"Guess we might as well go out and see the fun," remarked George Harlan, the dark-visaged stock buyer. "It's mighty dull hereabouts."

"All right," added his friend, and the two went across the level plains with the rest toward the tiny schoolhouse, set in the midst of the prairie five miles away. A few cottonwood trees were making a brave effort to shade the yard, but were somewhat bent by the steady south winds.

A considerable company of farmers, ranchmen, boys and girls, wives and sweethearts, were gathered and the teacher, pretty, blue-eyed Anna Leland, was busiest of all arranging the programme and preparing for the raising of the silk flag which some friends in her old home in western New York had sent to the school.

"Now, Mr. Graham," to the storekeeper, "I shall ask you for a speech."

"Don't do it—I'll break down," yet everybody knew that he could talk longer than any speaker on Lone Prairie.

As the strangers rode up they were closely watched by the settlers and the assembled families. Harlan was a graceful rider, and not even the Texas pony on which he was mounted could unseat him. He was not in time to see the school-teacher, for she had gone inside the building.

Before he reached the steps another matter of interest had attracted attention. Off to the south, already so near at hand as to surprise all that it had not been noticed before, was a cloud of dust. It was many rods wide and reached in a long irregular line up from the plains of the south.

"Cyclone's comin'!" shouted some excitable individual, and the women were perceptibly nervous.

"No such a thing," reassuringly put in the storekeeper. "That's the herd from the ranches we've been lookin' for, an' it ain't a mile away."

Silently they gazed. Then, as if a commander had come out of the midst of an army, a single horseman was distinguishable in front of the wall of dust and was evidently advancing on the schoolhouse group, gaining rapidly on the herd, now visible, plodding along behind.

"It's the boss herder, comin' in to pick a camp," remarked Graham.

He was right.

In a few minutes a wide-hatted, handsome cowboy dashed up and dismounted, his big spurs jingling merrily as he walked.

"Well," he began, with a light smile breaking over his naturally stern features, "are you here to give me a reception?"

"Hardly," said Graham, coming forward; "we didn't expect you quite yet."

"We're here, just the same, and the cattle are coming fast, too. They're anxious."

He was right. The herd had advanced very fast and the settlers were all on the opposite side of the schoolhouse watching the approach.

As the herder stood there beside the steps, with the bridle reins hanging loosely to his arm, suddenly came a vision in the doorway. It was a young woman, dressed in a fresh pink gown; she had laughing blue eyes and a pleasant face.

But the face grew pale and the girl started back nervously.

"Anna!" said the herder, in a voice which told of deep emotion.

"Jason!" Her words were as strangely spoken.

For a moment neither said more; then the herder went on:

"Why are you out here?"

"Why shouldn't I be? We couldn't all live on that little Illinois farm, and wages are better out here on the prairies than there."

"But—but they told me you were married—to Harlan."

"Who told you?"

"It came from him, I think, and if I find him—"

"Hush—you can find him, for he is not far off. I saw him pass the window a moment ago. He, too, is a westerner and is buying cattle."

"I've been raising them, out on the Texas plains, an' I have almost forgot I had a country, so long has it been since I saw civilization. This is my first trip in from the ranch in four years or more."

"Well, you'll know you have a country on this trip, for to-day is the Fourth of July."

"Is that why all these folks are gathered here?"

"Yes, and I'm to have a flag-raising. You must make a speech. Don't you remember how you used to 'orate' in the lyceum?"

Remember it! It was burned into his mind, and along with it was the recollection of long rides homeward with this same woman who stood before him—then a schoolgirl for whose favors he had striven and in whose good graces he had a formidable rival in Harlan. The herder kicked impatiently at the sunburned grass.

Anna Leland watched him closely and noted the change made by the passing years in her old-time admirer, and she wondered if he still thought of her as he did then.

Suddenly a shout took them to the side of the schoolhouse. The herd was coming and the younger part of the company was enjoying the tilt between two of the big steers that captain-like led the advancing horned host.

Five thousand head of cattle! A little sea of thin, nervous faces and wide-spreading, sharp-pointed horns. Sometimes so wild as to defy any but the most expert riders, mounted on fresh ponies; again seeming like farmyard inhabitants in their harmlessness.

These, browsing through the ravines and now feeding quietly while the herders, sitting on their ponies, awaited the boss herder's pleasure, were in the latter wood, and it seemed impossible that they could become as ungovernable as the beasts of the forest. Even as the spectators looked, an exhibition was to be given which would exemplify it all.

The boys of the school were watching the spectacle and likewise trying to do something to show their allegiance to the nation. For the latter purpose they were provided with several large firecrackers. It seemed to them that now would be an opportune time to begin the celebration, and accordingly the fuse of a particularly vicious cracker was lighted and the whole thrown far out in the grass.

Nobody can tell what will cause a stampede. The crack of a stick, the whistle of a quail—anything sudden and strange. In this case it was a Fourth of July firecracker, and it did its work well.

"Bang!" A thousand heads were raised. Bellowing sounds came from the leaders' throats; forefeet stamped angrily and then came the start! With heads thrown back, a dozen steers started off on their wild career. Hundreds followed them, and soon the herd was in motion. It became a blind, unreasoning horde, carrying death to whatever living thing came in its way and controllable only by adroit sideriding of the cowboys.

Jason and the school-teacher stood watching the transformation. They saw, besides the hurrying herders, a stranger in a light suit riding fast in front of the herd.

"That," spoke the girl, "is Harlan."

Jason strained his eyes, gazing at the man. Then he turned to watch his companion jealously. Did she feel an interest in Harlan? He could not tell.

Then something happened. In an instant, the twinkling of an eye, the horse Harlan was riding gave a lurch and fell headlong, his rider partly under it. Coolly Jason watched them. The horse was evidently hurt, for it did not rise—neither did the man, though he freed himself from the saddle.

But why need Harlan rise—a dozen rods away came the wave of flesh which was to make of himself and horse an indistinguishable mass hammered into the sod by thousands of hoofs.

Jason knew this and he felt conscience-stricken that his heart contemplated the catastrope rather gladly than otherwise. What could he do anyway?

That he could do something was evidently the school-teacher's view, for turning to the boss herder, she spoke clearly and firmly one little word—but its speaking meant life or death. It was: "Go"

Jason's brown face colored and with a bow in which Anna thought she realized some of his old-time courtliness, he leaped in the saddle, pressed the spurs deep into his pony's flanks and was off.

Faster and faster until the pony fairly flew over the level sod, but the herd was also advancing. The stranger who lay on the ground looked pitifully at the destroyers. The crowd of spectators at the schoolhouse was intensely interested and excited and wondered what the outcome was to be.

Boldly Jason rode and well. He plunged in ahead of the foremost cattle and with a speed which kept him in the lead made a direct course for Harlan. The latter had half risen and was, bewildered, awaiting his destiny. As Moore drew nearer he was recognized and Harlan felt deep down in his heart that his case was hopeless. For the instant that the two men gazed into each others eyes the old fire of hatred shone—but Jason did not even tighten the reins. He felt for that instant how easy it would be to fail but he did not intend to.

HE LEANED FAR OVER.

Catching one spur safely in the cinch straps he leaned far over in the opposite direction until his brawny hand could sweep the grasses. The cattle were not ten feet away and a single slip meant a life.

But he did not make it. The trembling form of Harlan met the strong wrist and arm of his rival and Harlan was swung across the saddle bow. Then on and on like the wind, taking the precious load to a place of safety. When he had reached it and the avalanche went roaring by, only to be stopped after miles of mad racing by the mere force of weariness, they rode more leisurely.

"Blessed if he ain't fainted," was Jason's first comment when he reached the schoolhouse and laid his burden on one of the long desks. But Harlan was not seriously disabled. Some water in his face revived him, an ex-physician among the settlers pulled a dislocated limb into place and he looked like himself again.

The rescuer, avoiding the crowd that came forward to praise him for his bravery, sought the blue-eyed woman whose heart he thought he now knew beyond a doubt.

"He's all right," Jason began.

"Thanks to you, sir."

"I don't care to be thanked," bitterly. "I've sat up nights hating that man out there on the ranches—I don't hate him now, but I don't care to have too much glory out of this thing for fear I will."

Anna said nothing. She was a very clever woman.

"Come," she called to the settlers, "it is 12 o'clock and the stars and stripes are waiting for the prairie breezes to kiss them." Several young people giggled.

In a moment all were seated on the grass in front of the building and the teacher stood before them. They sang "America," and then Miss Leland came forward:

"There are two kinds of independence," she began, "one of country and the other of heart. This flag we are about to raise will teach us the first, and yet the other is of as much importance. To-day a member of this circle, strangely brought among us, has thrown away a needless slavery which has bound his heart. He has a new independence that will make him better and worthier." Then she told them how the flag was sent her, the big scholar of the school read the Declaration and, amid the racket of a dozen of the largest firecrackers, the silken banner was pulled up the pole and its folds floated proudly in the breeze.

While Mr. Graham made his speech Anna went to the other side of the schoolhouse—and Jason followed.

"Did you mean that?" he whispered.

"Mean what?" Anna was very innocent, as well as clever.

"That word 'needless?'"

"Did I say that—probably I meant it."

A small boy who peeped around the corner was greatly shocked to see the big-bearded cowboy kiss the teacher.

"I don't believe," remarked Jason, a little later, "that my independence did me much good. I seem to have lost it again mighty quick."

Anna did not argue the question.

CHARLES MOREAU HARGER.

OUR INDEPENDENCE DAY.

The Inspiring Effect of Its Observance Upon the Minds of the Young.

The Fourth of July stands to-day as it has stood some hundred and twenty years, the nation's chief holiday. We sing of our flag: "It made and preserves us a nation." The same might be said and sung of this gay anniversary.

It is a significant and inspiring fact that the day is so hugely enjoyed by the young. One unacquainted with its exact import might be led to suppose it was some great holiday especially appointed for the delectation of the youth of the land. Inherent in their rollicking hearts seems to lurk and live the impression that the day with its racket and din was created for the boys and girls of the country—rather more particularly for the boys. Yes, it is inspiriting to see them; inscribed on every manly little crest seem to glare the words: "Verily, we are the people!" and woe betide the mistaken stranger who might on this auspicious dawn essay to take the spirit of independence out of them. It makes the tears start —often, it must be confessed, in older eyes, when the smart little company in knickerbockers and paper feathers goes racketing by, the latent patriotism discernible in the very tramp of the juvenile heels, and the awful blare of the responsive tin horn. The inevitable outcome of it all occurs to the older mind, and the question flashes: will the boy later on be on the right side in the tumult of life? It has been told that a father was once forcibly reminded of the strength of his influence with his son, when on seating himself at a hotel table the waiter inquired of the lad what he would have to drink: "Whatever my father has," was the swift response. The unquestioning faith and assurance of safety in following his parent's example might well give rise to caution and prudence on the parent's part.

"My father says so," is what forms the grand ultimatum of proof or conviction in the loyal hearts of most of our boys; and so, "what father says" should be guarded with exceeding care. It is true everything goes toward feeding and adding to the natural enthusiasm awakened by our Independence day. The flag floating from the schoolhouse; the observances and orations of Memorial day; the firecrackers, cannon and fireworks of the Fourth of July. Recently, also, in some of our public schools the Declaration of Independence has been repeated in concert by the scholars until its time-honored paragraphs are ineffaceably placed in the retentive memories. And the marching high-school battalions are highly suggestive of the spirit of the times. This spirit of patriotism and independence is as irrepressible as the waves that beat along the shore. It comes from way beyond any teaching the child has directly received concerning such matters, and is as spontaneous and natural as the breath he draws. It is as undeniably and evidently a God-given instinct as is love of the little innocent heart for those who are its nearest and its dearest.

Instincts in human beings need training, and even spontaneous impulses are to be molded and guided by those looked up to as examples. In the excitement of a rather fierce debate bearing on political matters two gentlemen were awhile ago checked by the presence of a little lad whose interest in the discussion caused him to throw in a word or two on his own account. The disputants suddenly paused, laughed a little at the anxious concern of the listening boy, and straightway proceeded to discuss matters in less heated terms. It would be an excellently good thing if many properly inclined men could so shape their conversation on absorbing topics as to render it entirely fit for the ears of their attentive children. He serves his country most worthily who lives purely and uprightly, and who by both precept and example leads those committed to his care into paths of rectitude and right. Living and teaching thus, the true man and patriot establishes for himself and for his children a basis of real independence enabling them to recognize, to love and to defend the right. It has been men of stamp who have helped to upbuild our glorious republic.

"He serves his country best
Who lives pure life, and doeth righteous deed.
And walks straight paths, however others stray,
And leaves his sons as uttermost bequest
A stainless record which all men may read:
This is a better way."

HANNA THE GREAT.

The Peerless and Unrivaled Owner of the Republican Party.

Hanna is an interesting psychological study. As he has consented (!) to accept the chairmanship of the republican national committee and take charge of the McKinley canvass for the presidency, the country will know Mark Hanna thoroughly by November 3 next. We predict that the knowledge will be easily acquired by the observing. In other words, there is nothing of the sphynx about Hanna. He is the hard-headed, close-fisted man of business in politics, who believes that the end justifies the means. Hanna has some regard for the proprieties—when other persons who count for something are concerned about them: For instance when inquiries were put to Hanna at St. Louis about the probable action of the convention on any subject or as to any issue, he held up his hands deprecatingly and said it was not for him, a single individual, to anticipate the wisdom of the convention. He would not venture to forecast its work, for his place was in the ranks as one of Ohio's delegates. Guileless souls were impressed. Perhaps an injustice had been done Hanna. Perhaps, after all, he was not a Gradgrind, but a man of nice sentiment. Perhaps he was an unselfish patriot and not a forehanded boss.

Hanna, however, was not in St. Louis for his health. His hand was always upon the lever, and he reversed it only when Thomas C. Platt and Henry Cabot Lodge appeared upon the track waving danger signals. The stop annoyed Hanna exceedingly, but when he started the locomotive again he made up for lost time and ran strictly by the schedule to the end of the route. His domination of the national committee was seen in the decision of nearly every contest in favor of the McKinley delegates. When the new national committeemen were chosen Hanna was again in evidence, those members suspected of hostility to McKinley being dropped in almost every instance. And when nomination were the order of business Hanna kept the convention in session for nine long sweltering, exhausting and unhappy hours, to the very last showing the unrelenting vigor of his rule by whipping the southern delegates into line for Hobart when they wanted Evans for vice president. Hanna was even master of the emotions of the convention. There was no enthusiasm, there were no plaudits until Hanna gave the word; and then a carefully regulated Bedlam broke loose for William McKinley, the candidate — Hanna's candidate.

With the convention dispersed and its labors performed to Hanna's satisfaction, he made a little speech to his "fellow republicans," in the course of which he said: "The only work I have done and the only claim I make upon the good will of my fellow-citizens lies in the fact that I gave the plain American people a chance to voice their sentiments in regard to their favorite presidential candidate."

The unsuspecting believed that Hanna's work must be done when he brought about the nomination of his friend, William McKinley. Nevertheless Hanna, who was not a member of the national committee, became its chairman before the sun set the next day, and in compliance with his wishes an executive committee of nine to hold up his hands in the campaign will be appointed. This committee is to include solid men who, like Hanna, are not members of the national committee. Hanna is also to have the power to name the secretary and the treasurer of the national committee. If there is anything else that Mark Hanna wants but doesn't see, he has only to ask for it and it will be produced. Never was a man so completely the autocrat of his party as Hanna, the iron broker. And never was a man so loath to admit that he is anything but a humble instrument of providence—that is, when the proprieties intrude. Hanna's first act as chairman of the national committee was to issue an order to "the republican party of the United States," recommending the use of California pampas plumes in red, white and blue "mounted fan-shape on a staff, for parades and interior decorations." It was characteristic of Hanna, and he will often repeat himself during the campaign.—N. Y. Sun.

MARCUS AURELIUS HANNA, ELEPHANT TAMER; RIVALLED BY NONE.

M'KINLEY AND HOBART.

A Very Weak Pair to Head a Party Ticket.

The St. Louis nominations are no surprise. Everyone knew for several days that Mark Hanna would nominate McKinley for president. To insure success he packed the convention with upwards of 150 contestants and the nomination was bestowed upon McKinley amid a scene of uproarious confusion and indicated a woeful lack of serious appreciation of the work in hand. The demonstration was one of recklessness. Such a convention was never seen before. Such a thorough mastery of delegates was never known before in a national convention. Such a rude and offensive manifestation of mastery, by a man who makes not the slightest pretense to understand the eternal fitness of things in statecraft, has never been known in this country. And when the nomination of McKinley was finally accomplished, the restrained and restless spirits of the convention broke out in shouts that betokened the expectation of an approaching deluge.

McKinley is stronger to-day than he will ever be again during this campaign. His nomination was secured by the suppression of the sober judgment of the majority of the republican party. It was a victory for the tariff extremists. Even in the case of McKinley's election the victory will be barren, for the tariff reform that has been accomplished is bound to remain.

The nomination violates the wisdom of the party. It offends its best sentiments, and it does not add to McKinley's strength that some of the powerful bosses in the party were humiliated. Mark Hanna has downed Platt and Quay and Clarkson, and Lodge and Reed, and Filley and Addicks, and the consciousness of their inferiority will will not add to their zeal in the campaign. McKinley for more than one reason will dwindle from now until November.

Garrett A. Hobart, the candidate for vice president, needs introduction to the public outside of Paterson, N. J., where he resides. He is wealthy, and is director in mercantile and business concerns. He has not been very conspicuous in New Jersey, even for a republican. How Hanna came to choose him as a running mate for McKinley has not been explained, but the fact is that he was Hanna's choice, and there was no work left for the convention except to shout, adjourn and to go home. If Hobart is a big man he has successfully concealed it. His respectability for the place is not questioned, any more than is McKinley's for the presidency. While McKinley is known to show positive lack of qualifications for the presidency, Hobart has the advantage of being above suspicion of lacking ability to administer the office of vice president.

McKinley and Hobart! The uncertain and the unknown. The ticket of silence, the syndicated ticket will become so distasteful to the people before November that it will meet the fate at the polls that it deserves.—Utica Observer.

The Boss and the Press.

Is the boss greater than the press? Is the purse mightier than the pen? The nomination of McKinley would indicate that in the republican party freedom of the press is worth little against the license of the pocketbook. There are few leading republican organs which did not object to McKinley's name in connection with the nomination when the campaign in his interest was started. Now that he has been absolutely accepted by his party as its chief representative, these same papers are engaged in an effort to explain that he is the universal choice of the people. The country knows a good deal better than that. It realizes that he is the choice of the bosses, not of the masses. In view of the absolute contempt with which the advice of the party organs was treated, it is just to conclude that, among republicans, the boss is mightier than the press and that the purse is more powerful than the pen.—St. Louis Republic.

——The nominee of the St. Louis convention is a sectionalist by nature, by conviction and by long training. If he should become president the republican party would continue the representative of sectionalism that it always has been, and the south would again be subject to discrimination. — Florida Times-Union.

THE LORD'S HUNTERS

Bring Down Much Game in the Preserves of Belzebub.

They Used the Darts of Truth Fashioned From the Gospel, and Sometimes Tipped With the Poison of Remorse—Sermon by Rev. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Genesis, x., 9: "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."

In our day hunting is a sport, but in the lands and the times infested with wild beasts it was a matter of life and death with the people. It was very different from going out on a sunshiny afternoon with a patent breech-loader to shoot reed birds on the flats, when Pollux and Achilles and Diomedes went out to clear the land of lions and tigers and bears. My text sets forth Nimrod as a hero when it presents him with broad shoulders and shaggy apparel and sunbrowned face, and arm bunched with muscle—"a mighty hunter before the Lord." I think he used the bow and the arrows with great success practicing archery.

I have thought if it is such a grand thing and such a brave thing to clear wild beasts out of a country, if it is not a better and braver thing to hunt down and destroy those great evils of society that are stalking the land with fierce eye and bloody paw, and sharp tusk and sharp spring. I have wondered if there is not such a thing as Gospel archery, by which those who have been flying from the truth may be captured for God and Heaven. The Lord Jesus in His sermon used the art of angling for an illustration when He said: "I will make you fishers of men." And so I think I have authority for using hunting as an illustration of Gospel truth, and I pray God that there may be many a man to-day who will begin to study Gospel archery, of whom it may after awhile be said: "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."

How much awkward Christian work there is done in the world! How many good people there are who drive souls away from Christ instead of bringing them to Him! All their fingers are thumbs—religious blunderers who upset more than they right. Their gun has a crooked barrel and kicks as it goes off. They are like a clumsy comrade who goes along with skillful hunters—at the very moment when he ought to be most quiet he is crackling an alder or falling over a log and frightening away the game. How few Christian people have ever learned the lesson of which I read at the beginning of this service, now that the Lord Jesus Christ at the well went from talking about a cup of water to the most practical religious truths, which won the woman's soul for God! Jesus in the wilderness was breaking bread to the people. I think it was good bread; it was very light bread, and the yeast had done its work thoroughly. Christ, after he had broken the bread, said to the people: "Beware of the yeast, or of the leaven, of the Pharisees." So natural a transition it was, and how easily they understood Him! But how few Christian people there are who understand how to fasten the truths of God and religion to the souls of men. Truman Osborne, one of the evangelists who went through the country years ago, had a wonderful art in the right direction. He came to my father's house one day, and while we were all seated in the room de said: "Mr. Talmage, are all your children Christians?" Father said: "Yes, all but De Witt." Then Truman Osborne looked down into the fireplace and began to tell a story of a storm that came on the mountains, and all the sheep were in the fold, but there was one lamb outside that perished in the storm. Had he looked me in the eye I should have been angered when he told that story, but he looked into the fireplace, and it was so pathetically and beautifully done that I never found any peace until I was sure I was inside the fold where the other sheep were.

The archers of olden times studied their art. They were very precise in the matter. The old books gave special directions—how an archer should go, and as to what an archer should do. He must stand erect and firm, his left foot a little in advance of the right foot. With his left hand he must take hold of the bow in the middle, and then with the three fingers and the thumb of his right hand he should lay hold of the arrow and affix it to the string—so precise was the direction given. But how clumsy we are about religious work! How little skill and care we exercise! How often our arrows miss the mark! Oh, that there were more institutions established in all the towns and cities of our land where men might learn the art of doing good—studying spiritual archery, and known as "mighty hunters before the Lord!"

In the first place, if you want to be effectual in doing good, you must be very sure of your weapon. There was something very fascinating about the archery of olden times. Perhaps you do not know what they could do with the bow and arrow. Why, the chief battles fought by the English Plantagenets were with the long bow. They would take the arrow of polished wood, and feather it with the plume of a bird, and then it would fly from the bow-string of plaited silk. The broad fields of Agincourt and Solway Moss, and Neville's Cross heard the loud thrum of the archer's bow-string. Now, my Christian friends, we have a mightier weapon than that. It is the arrow of the Gospel; it is a sharp arrow; it is a straight arrow; it is feathered from the wing of the dove of God's spirit; it flies from a bow made out of the wood of the cross. As far as I can estimate or calculate, it has brought down 400,000,000 souls. Paul knew how to bring the notch of that arrow on to that bow-string, and its whirr was heard through the Corinthian theaters, and through the courtroom, until the knees of Felix knocked together. It was that arrow that stuck in Luther's heart when he cried out "Oh, my sins! Oh, my sins!" If it strike a man in the head, it kills his skepticism; if it strike a man in the heel, it will turn his steps; if it strike him in the heart, he throws up his hands, as did the Emperor Julian of old when wounded in the battle, crying: "O Galilean, Thou hast conquered!"

In the armory of the earl of Pembroke there are old corselets which show that the arrow of the English used to go through the breastplate, through the body of the warrior, and out through the backplate. What a symbol of that Gospel which is sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of body and soul, and of the joints and marrow! Would to God we had more faith in that Gospel! The humblest man, if he had enough faith in it, could bring 100 souls to Jesus—perhaps 500. Just in proportion as this age seems to believe less and less in it, I believe more and more in it. What are men about that they will not accept their own deliverance? There is nothing proposed by men that can do anything like this Gospel. The religion of Ralph Waldo Emerson was the philosophy of icicles; the religion of Theodore Parker was a sirocco of the desert covering up the soul with dry sand; the religion of Renan was the romance of believing nothing; the religion of the Huxleys and the Spencers merely a pedestal on which human philosophy sits shivering in the night of the soul, looking up to the stars, offering no help to the nations that crouch and groan at the base. Tell me where there is one man who has rejected that Gospel for another, who is thoroughly satisfied, and helped, and contented in his skepticism, and I will take the car tomorrow and ride 500 miles to see him. The full power of the Gospel has not yet been touched. As a sportsman throws up his head and catches the ball flying through the air, just so easily will this Gospel after a while catch this round world flying from its orbit and bring it back to the heart of Christ. Give it full swing, and it will pardon every sin, heal every wound, cure every trouble, emancipate every slave and ransom every nation. Ye Christian men and women, who go out this afternoon to do Christian work, as you go into the Sunday schools, the lay preaching stations and the penitentiaries and the asylums I want you to feel that you bear in your hand a weapon compared with which the lightning has no speed and avalanches have no heft and the thunderbolts of heaven have no power; it is the arrow of the omnipotent Gospel. Take careful aim. Pull the arrow clear back until the head strikes the bow! Then let it fly! And may the slain of the Lord be many!

Again, if you want to be skillful in spiritual archery, you must hunt in unfrequented and secluded places. Why does the hunter go three or four days in the Pennsylvania forests or over Raquette lake into the wilds of the Adirondacks? It is the only way to do. The deer are shy, and one "bang" of the gun clears the forest. From the California stage you see, as you go over the plains, here and there, a coyote trotting along, almost within range of the gun—sometimes quite within range of it. No one cares for that; it is worthless. The good game is hidden and secluded. Every hunter knows that. So, many of the souls that will be of most worth for Christ and of most value to the church are secluded. They do not come in your way. You will have to go where they are. Yonder they are down in that cellar; yonder they are up in that garret. Far away from the door of any church, the Gospel arrow has not been pointed at them. The tract distributer and city missionary sometimes catch a glimpse of them, as a hunter through the trees gets a momentary sight of a partridge or a roebuck. The trouble is, we are waiting for the game to come to us. We are not good hunters. We are standing in some street or highway expecting that the timid antelope will come up and eat out of our hands. We are expecting that the prairie fowl will light on our church steeple. It is not their habit. If the church should wait ten millions of years for the world to come in and be saved, it will wait in vain. The world will not come. What the church wants now is to lift its feet from damask ottomans, and put them in the stirrups. We want a pulpit on wheels. The church wants not so much cushions as it wants saddle-bags and arrows. We have got to put aside the gown and kid gloves, and put on the hunting shirt. We have been fishing so long in the brooks that run under the shadow of the church that the fish know us, that they avoid the hook, and escape as soon as we come to the bank while yonder is Upper Saranac and Big Tupper's lake, where the first swing of the Gospel net would break it for the multitude of fishes. There is outside work to be done. What is that I see in the backwoods? It is a tent. The hunters have made a clearing and camped out. What do they care if they have wet feet, or if they have nothing but a pine branch for a pillow, or for the northeast storm? If a moose in the darkness steps into the lake to drink, they hear it right away. If a loon cry in the moonlight, they hear it. So in the service of God we have exposed work. We have got to camp out and rough it. We are putting all our care on the people who come to our churches. What are we doing for the thousands upon thousands that do not come? Have they no souls? Are they sinless, that they need no pardon? Are there no dead in their houses, that they need no comfort? Are they cut off from God, to go into eternity—no wing to bear them, no light to cheer them, no welcome to greet them? I hear to-day, surging up from the lower depths, a groan that comes through our Christian assemblages and through our beautiful churches; and it blots out all this scene from my eyes to-day, as by the mists of great Niagara, for the dash and the plunge of these great torrents of life dropping down into the fathomless and thundering abyss of suffering and woe. I sometimes think that just as God blotted out the churches of Thyatira and Corinth and Laodicea, because of their cloth and stolidity, He will blot out American and English Christianity, and raise on the ruins a stalwart, wide-awake, missionary church, that can take the full meaning of that command: "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

I remark, further, if you want to succeed in spiritual archery you must have courage. If the hunter stand with trembling hand or shoulder that flinches with fear, instead of his taking the catamount, the catamount takes him. What would become of the Greenlander if, when out hunting for the bear, he should stand shivering with terror on an iceberg? What would have become of Du Chaillu and Livingstone in the African thicket, with a faint heart and a weak knee? When a panther comes within 20 paces of you and it has its eye on you and it has squatted for the fearful spring, "Steady there!"

Courage, O ye spiritual archers! There are great monsters in iniquity prowling all around about the community. Shall we not of the strength of God go forth and combat them? We not only need more heart, but more backbone. What is the church of God that it should fear to look in the eye any transgression? There is the bengal tiger of drunkenness that prowls around, and instead of attacking it, how many of us hide under the church-pew or the communion table! There is so much invested in it we are afraid to assault it: millions of dollars in barrels, in vats, in spigots, in corkscrews, in gin palaces with marble floors and Italian-top tables, and chased ice-coolers, and in the strychnine, and the logwood, and the tartaric acid, and the nux vomica, that go to make up your "pure" American drinks. I looked with wondering eyes on the Heidelberg tun." It is the great liquor vat of Germany, which is said to hold 800 hogsheads of wine, and only three times in 100 years it has been filled. But, as I stood and looked at it, I said to myself: "That is nothing—800 hogsheads. Why our American vat holds 2,500,000 barrels of strong drinks, and we keep 200,000 men with nothing to do but to see that it is filled." Oh! to attack this great monster of intemperance, and the kindred monsters of fraud and uncleanness, requires you to rally all your Christian courage. Through the press, through the pulpit, through the platform, you must assault it. Would to God that all our American Christians would band together, not for crack-brained fanaticism, but for holy Christian reform. I think it was in 1793 that there went out from Lucknow, India, under the sovereign, the greatest hunting party that was ever projected. There were 10,000 armed men in that hunting party. There were camels and horses and elephants. One some princes rode, and royal ladies, under exquisite housings, and 500 coolies waited upon the train, and the desolate places of India were invaded by the excursion, and the rhinoceros, the deer and elephant fell under the stroke of saber and bullet. After awhile the party brought back trophies worth 50,000 rupees, having left the wilderness of India ghastly with the slain bodies of wild beasts. Would to God that instead of here and there a straggler going out to fight these great monsters of iniquity in our country, the million membership of our churches would band together and hew in twain these great crimes that make the land frightful with their roar, and are fattening upon the bodies and souls of immortal men! Who is ready for such a party as that? Who will be a mighty hunter for the Lord?

I remark, again, if you want to be successful in spiritual archery, you need not only to bring down the game, but bring it in. I think one of the most beautiful pictures of Thorwaldson is his "Autumn." It represents a sportsman coming home and standing under a grapevine. He has a staff over his shoulder, and on the other end of that staff are hung a rabbit and a brace of birds. Every hunter brings home the game. No one would think of bringing down a reindeer or whipping up a stream for trout, and letting them lie in the woods. At eventide the camp is adorned with the treasures of the forest—beak, and fin, and antler. If you go out to hunt for mortal souls, not only bring them down under the arrow of the Gospel, but bring them into the Church of God, the encampment we have pitched this side of the skies. Fetch them in; do no let them lie out in the open field. They need our prayers and sympathies and help. That is the meaning of the Church of God—help. O ye hunters for the Lord, not only bring down the game, but bring it in.

If Mithridates liked hunting so well that for seven years he never went indoors, what enthusiasm ought we to have who are hunting for immortal souls! If Domitianus practiced archery until he could stand a boy down in the Roman amphitheater, with a hand out the fingers like that, and then the king could shoot an arrow between the fingers without wounding them, to what drill and what practice ought not we to subject ourselves in order to become spiritual archers and "mighty hunters befor the Lord!" But let me say, you will never work any better than you pray. The old archers took the bow, put one end of it down beside the foot, elevated the other end, and it was the rule that the bow should be just the size of the archer; if it were just his size, then he would go into the battle with confidence. Let me say that your power to project good in the world will correspond exactly to your own spiritual stature. In other words, the first thing in preparation for Christian work is personal consecration.

"Oh! for a closer walk with God,
A calm and Heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb."

WILD CATS FROM TAME CATS.

The Retrogression of Twenty Years Among the Felines of Goat Island.

It has taken about 20 years to produce the wild cats of Goat island, the degenerative process commencing soon after the lighthouse was established there in 1875. It seems that the first keepers brought a number of cats with them, but with unrestrained liberty the animals gradually forsook the comforts of civilization. Goat island is the home of thousands of birds and squirrels, and to this is possibly due the temptation of the cats to forsake the keepers' fireside. At first the cats would absent themselves for days at a time, but the kittens were born at home. In time, however, they got over this, and lived altogether in the underbrush. After a few years the descendants of the first cats were so wild that they were afraid of human beings and made their dens in the crevices of the rock.

From that time the cats became wilder, until now they are as ferocious as the terrible creatures of the mountains. They have increased in size and changed altogether in disposition. They are always seen in pairs, and appear to mate, as all species of the cat tribe do in the wild state. The cats live on squirrels, quail and sparrows, as well as such other small animals and birds as they can catch. They are supplied with water from a dozen springs in different parts of the island.

In addition to other changes the wild cats have become hostile to such tame cats as are brought to the island from time to time. They will attack them on sight and never stop until they have killed their victims.

The chief destruction wrought by the wild cats is on the quail that inhabit the island. The artful "drummers" used to be there in abundance, but are now pretty well thinned out. The cats are constantly on the alert, and not only kill every quail they can catch, but often destroy whole nests full of young. To prevent this the light keepers are always on the outlook for wild cats and shoot every one that comes anywhere near the house. As a consequence the cats keep some distance away, and the quail seem to know they are safe in that locality, for there are more nests there than in any other part of the island.

Many plans have been tried within the last few years to rid the island of the hungry, carnivorous pests, but the more they are persecuted with shotgun, trap and poison the more rapidly they seem to multiply.—San Francisco Call.

MAY INVALIDATE THE WILL

Litigation Likely Over Disposition of Baron Hirsch's Millions.

A flaw has been discovered in the will of Baron de Hirsch which may seriously affect the fortune of his adopted daughter Lucienne, the illegitimate child of his only son, Lucien, who died before him. The baron decided that his will should be probated according to Austrian law, laying particular stress upon the fact that he was, above everything else, an Austrian citizen. Now, according to the Austrian code, an adopted child, when the adoption has been put into legal form, has identically the same rights as a child of the testator born in wedlock. Under these circumstances Lucienne, who is now 15 years of age, has a right not merely to the $1,000,000 which the baron bequeathed to her, but to one-half of his entire fortune, the remaining half going to his wife. According to legal experts this law suffices to invalidate the entire will and to annul all special bequests, leaving the whole fortune of $150,000,000 to be divided in two equal parts between the young girl and the widow.

New Woman in Pacific Islands.

The new woman is to be found even among the natives of the South Pacific islands, judging from the experiences of Rarotongo, in the Cook group. Since the men on the island have been drinking too much bush beer—made from oranges and bananas—the women have taken the law into their own hands, have organized themselves into a police corps and give the men no chance to indulge in their favorite beverage. The men then appealed to the president—who comes from New Zealand—but that official refused to interfere and the struggle continues.

AYER'S ARGUMENT.

If there is any reason why you should use any sarsaparilla, there is every reason why you should use Ayer's. When you take sarsaparilla you take it to cure disease; you want to be cured as quickly as possible and as cheaply as possible. That is why you should use Ayer's: it cures quickly and cheaply—and it cures to stay. Many people write us: "I would sooner have one bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla than three of any other kind." A druggist writes that "one bottle of Ayer's will give more benefit than six of any other kind." If one bottle of Ayer's will do the work of three it must have the strength of three at the cost of one. There's the point in a nutshell. It pays every way to use

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"The North Pole made use of at last."

STATE NEWS.

Business is on a boom in Middlesboro.

The Court of Appeals has adjourned for the summer's vacation.

The Court of Appeals overruled the petition for a rehearing in the Massie case.

The Kentucky Buggy & Harness Works, of Frankfort, has made an assignment.

The little son of Will Farran, of Todd county, accidentally shot and killed his sister.

J. R. Gentry a Jackson county fugitive from justice for ten years, has been arrested.

Jack Smith, a well digger, of Christian county, was killed by foul gas while at work.

There were five Baptist preachers on the last grand jury at Jackson, Breathitt County.

Portsmouth property owners must plank down taxes at the rate of $3 on the $100 this year.

Mayor Covington has ordered all the barber shops closed on Sunday in Richmond.

In Carter county, George Fletcher hanged himself at a picnic because his sweetheart danced with another man.

The old settlers of Mason, Lewis and Flemming Counties will hold a reunion at Ruggles' Camp Ground on July 4.

Two out of twelve got certificates at the recent examination for school certificates.—Mt. Olivet Tribune Democrat.

Abe Davis, who was released from the Kentucky penitentiary a few months ago, has been indicted for pension frauds.

Virgil Hines aged 18, of Lewisburg, attempted suicide because his 15 year old sweetheart showed preference for another fellow.

A tobacco journal states that the falling off in the demand for cigars will amount to $70.000,000, and this loss is generally credited to cycling.

Arthur W. Platt, who killed a lunatic in 1885, at the Eastern Kentucky Asylum, Lexington, and escaped, has been apprehended in England.

Jas. Marshall, of Christian county, aged forty-seven years, swallowed a poisonous bug while eating blackberries from the vine and died of spasms in a few minutes.

Attorney General Taylor will file suit for the Commonwealth of Kentucky against the Kentucky Chair Company for $80,200 for chairs received from the State and not paid for.

Judge Helm directed the grand jury to give the recent jail delivery in Newport, a thorough investigation and decide whether or not the jailer and his deputies were responsible.

W. L. Mason, of Warren county, met a peculiar death. While plowing his plow ran into an obstruction, the handles striking him in the groin. He was taken home and died after a few hours in great pain.

Mrs. J. McIntosh stabbed and killed Mrs. Polly Ann Fox, near Booneville, on account of jealousy. The dead woman was the wife of the notorious Jim Fox, who is serving a long term in the penitentiary.

The management of the penitentiary at Frankfort has been allowing trusties to remain outside of the walls over night, and by reason of such carelessness the citizens of Frankfort feel themselves imposed upon.

Vicious hogs attacked Levi Cline's little daughter near Bethel, Bath county, and would have torn her to pieces had not a mastiff seized the hog and held it until rescuers arrived, several severe wounds inflicted on the child.

A remarkable family reunion was held at Elkton, Ky., on Tuesday. It was composed of the children and grandchildren of Mrs. M. M. Boone, widow of the late H. G. Boone, nephew of Daniel Boone. The party of over 50 were direct descendants of Daniel Boone.

The wife of Mr. D. S. Sutherland, of Shelby county, last week gave birth to twins, making seven children born to her in three confinements. First there were twins, then triplets and then twins again. All the children are living and are hale and hearty.

The decision of the Court of Appeals in the Louisville park bond case decides a question of interest to the free turnpikers. In substance it is that upon a proposition requiring a two-thirds vote to carry, it must receive two-thirds of the voters of the county voting at the preceding election, and not two-thirds of those voting on the proposition.

The Marshal at Harrodsburg is doing good service in correcting incorrigible children that violate the laws of that town. He simply arrests the boy, takes him to the child's parents and gives the father to understand that the boy must be switched in his presence or else bring him to the police station for trial. The boy always gets the whipping.

The Lexington Argonaut says that counterfeit silver dollars in considerable quantity are circulating in that city. The money is a very good imitation, the stamp being almost perfect, but the weight deficient and the color of a bluish tint. The Argonaut says the money is supposed to be made in Frankfort by a regular organized gang of counterfeiters and sent to Lexington for circulation.

Acting Governor Worthington issued a pardon Wednesday to Riley Patterson, colored, sentenced from Scott county for life for murder. He has served sixteen years and is 60 years of age. Patterson, killed Darby Martin, an old man, thirty-two years ago, and then burned his cabin to conceal the crime. He made his escape, stayed away for a long time, but came back and in 1880 was identified, tried, convicted and given a life sentence.—Georgetown Times.

Miss Ellen Wishman, of Breathitt county, has just passed into her eighteenth year, yet for five years she has been a teacher in the public schools of the county. She commenced teaching when only thirteen, and in the sum total has taught five five-months sessions and one spring term of three months. During the closing exercises of the Jackson Collegiate Institute this year, Miss Wishman won the John Day medal for best examination in common school branches, being the first lady in the history of the institute to win this prize.

George W. Russell and wife, of Perryville, had a miraculous escape from death. They were driving along the stream known as Rolling Fork, near the Casey county line, a steep, rocky cliff between them and the water, and no fence to guard the way. The horse they were driving got scared at something, jumped toward the edge of the cliff and went over, buggy, horse, occupants and all. They tumbled over ledge after ledge for a distance of 65 feet, actual measurement, and finally landed in the water. Strange to say, while the buggy was rendered utterly useless, the horse and Mr. and Mrs. Russell escaped without even severe bruises.

Hon. C. W. Lester, State Examiner, investigating the official conduct of Circuit Judge John S. Patton, of the Twenty-fourth Judicial District, has visited all the counties composing the district with the exception of Martin County, Judge Patton's home, and, according to Mr. Lester's statement the investigation discloses some very damaging facts. Judge Patton was elected Circuit Judge November, 1893, but has not been on the bench since September, 1894, the Knott Circuit Court being the last Court held by him. Mr. Lester says his investigation discloses the fact that Judge Patton has been a worshiper at the shrine of Bacchus since his election as Circuit Judge, and for that reason was incapacitated from holding his court. He further stated that in Knott county in September, 1894, the grand jury returned an indictment against Judge Patton for being intoxicated while sitting as Judge, but that the authorities have been unable to get a process served upon him, and that the case has been continued from court to court ever since. An enormous sum of money has been paid by the state to special Judges to serve in Judge Patton's place, and that in nearly every instance from two to four special Judges have served from eight to ten days each at each term of the Court since, Judge Patton's illness. Mr. Lester says that in his report he will recommend to Governor Bradley that he call a special session of the Legislature and that steps be taken to impeach Judge Patton.

POLITICAL.

The Goebel faction in Kenton county has gained recognition by the Democratic State Central Committee over the protest of the Myers faction.

Many things have been said of Harvey Myers, but it was reserved for the Lexington Herald to charge him with parting his name in the middle.—Commonwealth.

The Republicans of the Ashland district expect to run Thomas H. Clay, of Lexington, for Congress. He is a grand son of the great commoner, Henry Clay. Denny, Holt and others will have to take a back seat for the present.

The Republican party declares in favor of the existing gold standard and in opposition to the coinage of silver at any ratio except by international agreement. This forces the currency question to the front and drives the tariff to the shades of innocuous desquetude. From a Democratic standpoint we regard this outspoken declaration for gold as fatal to Republican success. The existing gold standard has cost the people $262.000.000 of debt to maintain it for two years, and has destroyed values. The people understand this and they will repudiate it at the polls in November. The platform suits Wall Street but it does not suit the people.—Elizabethtown News.

According to the Chicago Times-Herald, the aggregate cost of the late Republican convention in St. Louis is no less than $4,000,000. This, of course, includes the erection of the buildings in which the convention assembled, but also the daily expenditures of the several thousand people who were drawn to St. Louis during the week. Including delegates, newspaper correspondents, private secretaries, clerks and visitors, there were no less than 100,000 people added to the population of St. Louis. Estimating five cigars to each stranger in the city, there was no less than $300,000 spent for cigars alone. Including the increased amount of business which fell to the share of the saloons, as well as the enormous revenue accrued to various hotels in the city during the convention, the estimate which places the cast of the great Republican gathering at $4,000,000 is no doubt conservative.

CROP AND STOCK.

The recent rains have caused a lovely smile to play around the faces of the ever-ready-to-grumble farmers. Four weeks ago their faces were like a newly plowed field—full of furrows—and every one was ready to complain of the scarcity of water. Why, to hear them, everybody would be ruined on account of the great drouth, but now their tune is changed. The reports are daily coming in that the wheat now being gathered will make a fair yield, some fields producing as much as 15 to 20 bushels per acre. Oats are looking well and will make a big crop. The prospect for an abundant corn crop was never better, to say nothing of last year's wonder. Tobacco is now safe and growing just as finely as any one could wish, while hemp is as good as could be wanted. The hay crop is a little short, yet the last rain has added very much, and this will be over half a crop. While the pastures are fresh and green there is no cause for complaint from anybody. One of our best farmers said a few days since that he did not think from present indications that corn would sell for more than 20 cents per bushel this fall. This certainly doesn't look much like people starving.—Georgetown News.

Corn never looked better at this season of the year. The wheat harvest has been in progress for the past week. While the heads generally are good and well-filled, it was too thin on the ground. The yield in the country will scarcely make half the average.—Georgetown Times.

The hay crop in this community will amount to practically nothing at all. It has not been so short for years.—Henry Local.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

OWEN COUNTY.
[Herald]

It has been noticed that some shade trees in Owenton give indications of dying without any apparent cause.

That there are places in this town where liquor is sold unlawfully every day is a fact so patent to anybody with half an eye that it would seem to need no other proof. Still, when it comes to punishing the guilty parties it is almost impossible to do so under the law.

One of the finest sheep that we have ever seen was on exhibition here Monday. It is a Cotswold and Leicester, three years old and weighs 351 pounds. The last shearing produced a fleece of 21 pounds of fine wool. The fortunate owner is C. H. Wood, of Rockdale.

Commonwealth's Attorney M. D. Gray has been in ill-health for several months, and is not fully recovered yet, but is able to discharge the responsible duties of his position. The chief trouble has been with his eyes, which have been under the treatment of a specialist.

CARROLL COUNTY
[News]

Such growing weather was never known.

Mrs. Thos. Leep, aged 82, died at her home Monday, after a short illness.

Dr. Hiner's condition is about the same, but he seems to be improving slowly.

John Hartman died at his home near English last Thursday evening after a short illness of neuralgia of the bowels.

The large new barn of Miss Caby Froman, near Ghent, was struck by lightning during the thunder storm Tuesday evening wrecking it badly, but fortunately did not set it on fire. Walter Brookin, James and Henry Walker had moved from one end of the barn to the other but a few minutes before the flash came, and fortunately for them that they did, as the sill they had been standing on was rent into splinters. Mrs. Callahan, whose residence is about 100 feet away was rendered unconscious by the shock.

SENATOR TELLER is evidently in hopes that the silver Democrats will nominate him for President. Only a few days ago he declared he agreed with the Republican party on everything but the money question. He is n. g.—is still a Republican, and has no earthly claim on the Democratic party for anything.

BURLINGTON LODGE No. 109, K. OF P.

Committee on Arrangements:

ELMER BEALL, J. F. BLYTH, J. M. LASSING.

ALL politicians have their eyes turned toward Chicago this week.

IN reducing its size the Owen News does not give evidence of prosperity.

BLAND and Mathews—see how near these names will correspond with those placed on the ticket at Chicago.

THE author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Harriet Beecher Stow," died at her home in Hartford, Connecticut, July 1.

THE silver men are working to place, beyond a doubt, a majority of two-thirds of the delegates at Chicago on their side.

IT is said that Major McKinley will give out his letter of acceptance shortly after the adjournment of the Chicago convention.

THE Kentucky soldiers will have no outing this year. There is no money in the treasury with which to pay the expenses of the encampment.

BLAND, of Missouri, seems to have the call at Chicago. He is a silver man from "way back," never having tired in his advocacy of silver as a redemption money.

THERE are quite a number of candidates to be balloted for at Chicago this week. The convention will be much more interesting in that particular than the St. Louis convention was.

THE Republicans claim that they will elect every Congressman in Kentucky this fall, something they can not do unless they receive a great deal of assistance from some who pose as Democrats.

THE Republicans who are so loud in their demands for a single gold standard, entertain very different views on the subject from those entertained by James G. Blaine, whom they used to think infallible.

To be convinced that Boone county will have an old time fair this fall it is only necessary to visit the grounds at Florence, and take a note of the buildings which are well advanced. Get something ready for exhibition.

MR. WHITNEY is very apt to learn that the purpose for which he postponed his trip to Europe will not be accomplished at Chicago. He is very much in the minority, and is not able to convert a defeat into a victory.

THERE appears to be trouble among the Republicans in some quarters of the State, where considerable money is expected to be expended in the coming campaign. They all want to handle the money. Hence the quarrels that are raging.

THE charge is made that Mr. Hobart, Republican candidate for Vice President, bolted the Republican national ticket once, and as all charges made against a candidate during a campaign can always be proven this one will be no exception.

THOSE who attended the meeting of the Press Association at Georgetown are lavish in their compliments of the citizens of the beautiful little city and loud in their praises because of the very handsome treatment accorded them during their brief sojourn.

THE Owen News says: "Public sentiment had more to do with the convicting of Alonzo Walling for the murder of Pearl Bryan than the proof. The sentence of death is looked upon by a large majority of the attorneys and citizens here as being an unjust one."

IT would be very foolish on the part of the silver Democrats to go outside of the party for a candidate for the Presidency. They have plenty of good men who are possessed of all the attributes of sound Democrats, and to one of them they will surely give the nomination.

THE Bradleyites are so determined that Dr. Hunter shall be retired from public life, although he may be nominated for a reelection to Congress, that one of their number will run independently, making Democratic success and Hunter's defeat doubly sure in his district.

THE Major has been formally notified of his nomination at Chicago, and is now preparing a letter to the public, in which he will do just exactly what everybody knows he will do—accept the nomination and get both of his feet onto the St. Louis platform. This country is getting very formal.

IT is with pleasure that it is learned that Frank P. Helm, one of the cleverest gentlemen in the three cities about the mouth of the Licking, has embarked in journalism. He is now owner of the Commonwealth. Here is to you, Frank, and may your new business be pleasant and profitable.

COL. BERRY and several friends enjoyed a fish fry in Carroll county a few days since. The Colonel's campaign is moving along very smoothly just now, but is liable to encounter opposition at any time as those opposing him two years ago are only awaiting a leader around whom to rally. With all the hard work he may do in the interest of his immediate constituency, are a large number of Democrats in this district who will never become reconciled to him as a Congressman.

THOSE Republicans who were so willing to testify to McKinley's very poor qualifications for the Presidency, have about forgotten what they said of him a short time since. It is remarkable how quick Repulicans fall into line after their candidate is named. The bolt at St. Louis is the first exhibition of in subordination ever appearing in the party, and to what extent it will affect the result of the election this fall remains to be seen, and no one need be surprised if the refractory element was subdued to such an extent as to amount to nothing by voting time.

THE comparative statement of the Government receipts and expenditures issued by the Treasury Department July 1st., shows the total receipts from all sources during the fiscal year just closed to have been $326,189,226 and the expenditures $352,231,470, which leaves a deficit for the year of $26,832,244. Although there was a surplus for June of $2,349,430, it is expected that the figures for July will show a deficit of at least $10,000,000 and probably more. The appropriation of $5,000,000 for sugar bounty payments is now available, and it is the expectation that all of the claims will have been settled and paid before the end of the month. During July the payments on account of interest, pensions and naval appropriations will be exceptionally large so that the deficit for the month is likely to be above $10,000,000 rather than less.

JAMES G. BLAINE said in the United States Senate in 1880, "I believe the struggle now going on in this country and in other countries for a single gold standard would, if successful produce wide-spread disaster in and throughout commercial world. The destruction of silver as money and establishing gold as the unit of value must have a ruinous effect on all forms of property except those investments which yield a fixed return in money." Some of the Western Republicans are now quoting the above as a reminder of the financial views of their once honored chieftain.

JOHN RHEA will make the speech putting Senator Blackburn in nomination for President in the Chicago convention. Rhea is a fine orator, and his speech at Chicago will be the effort of his life.

CROP AND STOCK.

Bath county wheat did not make halt an average yield.

A Clark county ewe has dropped 9 lambs inside of 15 months.

Cholera is playing havoc with hogs in some parts of Harrison county.

About 500 horses for cavalry purposes have been bought in Chicago market this year at from $80 to $100.

Blackberries are moving. The crop is one of the most abundant ever known and the berries are the finest.

Some of the shippers think it is cheaper to let the peaches fall off than to pay hands for picking, packing and hauling and then get blank returns.

English sparrows are now very busy in the grain fields, and not many are seen about town during the day, but they come in every evening in large numbers to roost.—Georgetown News.

On her trip up the river one day last week the steamer Telegraph carried 2,200 bushels of Indiana peaches into Cincinnati. This fruit sold at 25 cents a bushel in that city last Thursday.—Aurora Independent.

If the peach shippers had picked out one bushel of their best peaches and thrown the rest away it would have been far better. We hope, however, that when sure enough peaches get ripe they will be worth something. The Alexander is about gone. There will be a lull in the business for a week or two. Apples are doing better.—Trimble Banner.

A gentleman who has been through a considerable portion of the county reports to the Times as follows: Crops never looked better; wheat harvested, is short, but fine in quality; prospect for corn never better; tobacco forward and thrifty, a large crop set; oats fine; potato crop abundant; hay crop a little short on account of drouth in May; fruit generally abundant; more peaches than usual; plenty of blackberries and gardens filled with fine vegetables.—Georgetown Times.

James Whittington, of near Forge Hill, has been suffering for a long time with supposed lung trouble. On last Sunday a week ago he took a walk and while out was attacked by a violent fit of coughing and coughed up a piece of briar 1¾ inches long, with five thorns on it. He thinks he swallowed it or drew it into his lungs while feeding a wheat threshing-machine two years ago and thinks there is still a piece of it troubling him yet. He seems to be getting worse than he has been. James Anderson brought to this office the piece of briar coughed up by Mr. W., and truly it is a fearful thing for a person to have swallowed or inhaled.—Owingsville Outlook.

POLITICAL.

A big row is threatened in the Republican State Campaign committee. It is said the "original McKinley men" will form a separate committee to handle the Hanna funds, and thus leave the regular committee in a sorry plight.

John Sam Owsley has withdrawn from the race for Congress in the Eighth District.

George W. Frantz, once a Democratic Chief of the Fire Department in Louisville, but a convert to A. P. A. Republicanism, has announced his candidacy for Mayor. Ex-Mayor Charles D. Jacob, beyond all doubt the most popular man in Louisville, has been announced as a Democrat, and Postmaster Charles P. Weaver is expected to come out in a few days.

THE fun is now on at Chicago.

THERE never was such a crop of presidential booms at a national convention as are being cultivated at Chicago this week.

THE indications are that the Chicago convention will last all this week. The selection of the head of the ticket will prolong the work of the convention.

THE money question was thoroughly discussed on the streets of Burlington, last Monday. Several gentlemen on each side of the question devoted the entire day to the argument of the vexing problem, but if any changes resulted from the many discussions, they have not been reported.

ARSENAL FIRE.

An Immense Amount of Explosives in Imminent Danger of Ignition.

A Small Explosion in Which Seven Men Are Killed and a Number Injured—A Large Quantity of Gunpowder and Shells Removed by the Troops.

BERLIN, July 1.—An arsenal near Fort Mosel, one of the first in the vicinity of Metz, the capital of Lorraine, was discovered to be on fire Tuesday night. The discovery caused consternation among the people in the neighborhood for the reason that there is an immense amount of explosives in the arsenal. The garrison troops were hurriedly turned out to fight the flames and prevent, if possible, an explosion, which, should it occur, would be disastrous. While the soldiers were at work, there was an explosion of a comparatively small quantity of ammunition, which killed seven men and injured a number of others. This caused much excitement and dread, but the troops, after a moment's hesitation, bravely resumed their work. Large quantities of gunpowder and shells were hastily removed to places of safety, but there yet remains enough to blow the arsenal to atoms should the fire reach it.

CROP REPORT.

The Condition and General Effect of the Weather on the Cultivation, Growth and Harvest.

CHICAGO, July 1.—The reports as to the condition of the crops throughout the country and the general effect with weather on the cultivation, growth and harvest of same were Tuesday made by the directors of the several climate and crop sections. The reports received at Chicago were as follows:

The week ending June 29 has been exceptionally favorable, most crops have made rapid and healthy growth. Winter wheat harvest continues in the central and northern portion of the winter wheat belt, but has been interrupted to some extent by cloudy and rainy weather in some sections. Corn has made exceptionally good progress during the week, and the early part of this crop is being laid by in excellent condition as far north as Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois. Cotton has improved over the eastern portion of the cotton region, but continues to suffer from drought in the western portion. Reports generally indicate that tobacco is in excellent condition, and especially in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

Kentucky—Excessive rainfall, deficient sunshine, light excess in temperature. Cleaning of corn retarded some, but general conditions improved all crops. Hay cutting commenced. Oat harvest progressing. Wheat threshing approaching completion. Corn fine and some in tassel. Tobacco never better. Gardens splendid.

Indiana—Rains and warm weather continued. Corn is growing well, some tasselling; oats heading and turning; tobacco in best condition; wheat and rye harvesting nearly completed; threshing commenced; haying continues; fine crops of timothy and clover are being cut.

Ohio—Weather warm and wet with heavy local showers in all counties. Some damage to crops on low lands by being washed or flooded. Corn, oats, millets, gardens, meadows, pasture and tobacco made excellent growth and looks well, some corn four to six feet high. Rains interfered with wheat harvest and haymaking during the early part of the week, but conditions were more favorable during latter portion. Early peaches are ripe and on the market.

NO CHANGE.

The Republican Headquarters Will Remain in New York—The Advisory Headquarters Will Probably Be in Cleveland.

CANTON, O., July 1.—The city has settled down to a state of normal quiet after the excitement of the last ten days. Maj. McKinley devoted a great deal of time Tuesday to his mail. There were few callers and none of any prominence. Gen. W. M. Osborne, who is to be secretary of the executive committeee, left for his home in Boston Tuesday. He will not return here until after the [illegible] has been announced.

It has been definitely settled that the headquarters of the executive committee will be in New York. Gen. Osborne admitted as much Tuesday. The headquarters of the advisory committee will in all probability be in Cleveland. Mr. Hanna will divide his time during the campaign between Cleveland and New York.

Maj. McKinley has not yet decided definitely what his movements will be this summer. It is possible he will take a lake trip of three or four days on Mark Hanna's yacht, the Comanche, some time in July. He will do this in order to be absolutely free from interruption while he is writing his formal acceptance of the nomination. After this Maj. McKinley may visit Gen. Osborne in Boston for a few days, but the greater part of the summer will be spent here in Canton. All Maj. McKinley's campaign speeches will be made here and as a city of importance during the campaign, Canton will divide the honors with New York and Cleveland. The latest news with regard to Quay is that he will lay aside all feeling that it is claimed has existed between himself and Hanna and will cheerfully accept a place on the executive committee.

Wealth Buried in a Flower-Bed.

DANVILLE, Ind., July 1.—Robert Hervey, an eccentric and aged citizen of this place, died last Friday in rather moderate circumstances. His family believed him to have considerable money secreted, and Tuesday searchers, while digging in a flower-bed, unearthed an iron pot containing $4,000, over half of which was in gold. It is believed there will be more found.

The President Leaves for Gray Gables.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—President Cleveland left Washington at an early hour Tuesday morning to spend the summer with his family at Gray Gables.

BULLETS FLEW.

One Man Killed, One Fatally Wounded and Others Seriously Hurt in a Fight Between the Strikers and Deputies.

CLEVELAND, O., July 2.—A special to the Press from Westview, O., says: This little hamlet, on the Big Four railroad three miles from Berea, is the scene of the wildest excitement caused by the strike of the quarrymen employed by the Cleveland Stone Co. Shortly after ten o'clock Wednesday morning the strikers assembled in force and started for the quarries where a number of men who had taken their places were at work. After the strikers had passed No. 3 mill in Berea they turned west to the Big Four tracks, which indicated that they were bound for Westview. Deputy Sheriff Holliday and his specials were compelled to go around by way of Olmsted Falls. They were followed by the sheriff and one of the officials of the company. They arrived at the Westview quarries before the strikers and were prepared for them. As the strikers approached, the sheriff stood by the side of a fence and warned them back. A number of them scaled the fence and got into a hand to hand fight with the deputies. One striker pulled a gun, which he held concealed in a handkerchief. He fired at Special Ed Carran. This was the signal for the fight. In the space of a few moments over sixty shots were exchanged. Three of the strikers were seen to fall. Two of them were dragged into the woods by their companions. The name of the man who lies at the quarries wounded is John Macchuski. Immediately after the fight the strikers fled. They went to Berea in bunches. Two men were seen leading another along the Big Four tracks. His clothing was saturated with blood and it was evident that he was shot in the back.

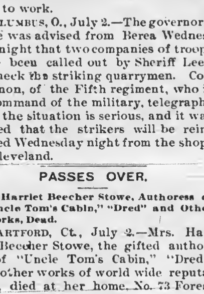
Macchuski died shortly after noon. Henry Smith, the deputy who Macchuski in his ante-mortem statement accused of firing the fatal shot, was arrested and brought to the Cleveland jail. The streets were guarded Wednesday night by deputy sheriffs and the militia. The Poles are wild with rage and it is feared serious trouble will occur Thursday, as the company is determined to make an effort to start men to work.

COLUMBUS, O., July 2.—The governor's office was advised from Berea Wednesday night that two companies of troops have been called out by Sheriff Leek to check the striking quarrymen. Col. Kennon, of the Fifth regiment, who is in command of the military, telegraphs that the situation is serious, and it was feared that the strikers will be reinforced Wednesday night from the shops at Cleveland.

PASSES OVER.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, Authoress of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Dred" and Other Works, Dead.

HARTFORD, Ct., July 2.—Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, the gifted authoress of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Dred," and other works of world wide reputation, died at her home, No. 73 Forest street, at noon Wednesday without regaining consciousness. She passed peacefully away as though into a deep sleep. By her bedside at the time were her son, her two daughters, her married sister and her husband and Dr. Edward Hooker, her nephew, who was also her medical attendant, and other relatives. Mrs. Stowe's malady, of many years' continuance, a mental trouble, took an acute form on Friday, when congestion of the brain, with partial paralysis, appeared. During Friday, Saturday and Sunday Mrs. Stowe was suffering very much. Since Monday morning she has been confined to her bed, and Tuesday became unconscious.



HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

Mrs. Stowe until about seven years ago was in good health, although she was frail bodily.

Funeral services for Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe will be held at her late home at five o'clock Thursday afternoon. The body will be taken to Andover, Mass., for interment on Friday morning.

Another New Political Party.

TACOMA, Wash., July 2.—A new political party was organized here Tuesday night, immediately after the adjournment of the bimetallic league of this state. The new organization is to be called the free coinage republican party. It is composed of republicans who favor the free coinage of silver.

Public Debt Statement.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The debt statement issued Wednesday afternoon, shows a net increase in the public debt less cash in the treasury during June of $1,820,853. Total cash in the treasury $853,905,635.

Two Drowned.

CINCINNATI, July 2.—Two yawls of the towboat Fallie capsized at the foot of Broadway at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The yawls were going from the shore to the boat. There were seven men in the two boats. Two men were known to be drowned.

Billy Stapleton, mate of the Bonanza, leaped into a yawl and rescued the other five. The crews are looking for the other bodies. The men in the yawls were taking supplies aboard the Fallie. Swells from a passing steamer upset the boats. One of the men drowned is Louis Johnson.

BLOOD SPILLED.

One of the Cleveland Strikers Shot Dead by a Non-Union Workman.

A Bloody Battle Then Took Place Between the Strikers and the Police for Possession of the Shooter—Many Wounded—Troops Ordered Out.

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—Bloodshed again marked the trouble at the Brown hoisting works Thursday afternoon. Wm. Rettger, one of the strikers, aged 19 years, a brother of Rettger, the former pitcher of the Cleveland club, now with Milwaukee, was shot dead by a non-union man who had attempted to leave the works on his bicycle and was attacked by a portion of the mob. The police managed with difficulty to rescue him, and the police detail was besieged in a shop and had great difficulty in preventing the lynching of their prisoner. Finally a call for troops was made and two of the four companies under arms were hurried to the scene. The prisoner was finally loaded into a patrol wagon and about 9:30 Thursday night locked up in the central police station. The troops remain on guard and there is a sullen mob of at least ten thousand men hanging around the premises.

Shortly before the hour for quitting, several strikers marched up to the Brown works with a big banner, on which was written in big black type: "Brown scabs."

At 4:30 o'clock the main body of the workmen were marshaled into line and the police force formed the usual hollow square.

The crowd gave way and the procession moved up Hamilton street to Case on the way to the St. Clair street cars. The crowd followed as on Wednesday evening, yelling "scab" and making a lively vocal demonstration. Contrary to what the mayor had declared would be done, the police did not drive back the crowd. At least they allowed them to follow up Hamilton street. In the meantime the police marched steadily forward to Case, up Windsor to Willson avenue, and reaching the Fourth precinct station, near Euclid, a halt was made.

Forming two lines, the police allowed the workmen to enter the station. All out of the way, the police formed again across the street. At this moment the following party was a dense, black crowd, reaching far down Willson avenue. Suddenly the word "Charge" was given. It rang out loud and clear and an awful scene followed. The police sprang forward like a shot out of a gun. In a moment they were upon the vanguard of the crowd. The latter were dumbfounded.

The facts of the fatal shooting by which Wm. Rettger lost his life were as follows:

There have been ten students of the Case School of Applied Science who have been working at the hoisting works, and there has been no disposition on the part of the strikers to molest them. Each day they have, after the police had marched out the other workmen, mounted their wheels and gone home. Thursday afternoon A. G. Saunders, one of the Case boys, aged 19, was later than his companions in leaving, and when he followed the crowd which was in pursuit of the police, he was assailed with cries of "scab" and stones thrown at him. When he reached a point about a block away in front of the Bishop Iron works, he was struck by a stone and a great gash cut in his head. He fell from his wheel and the mob howled "kill the scab," and made a rush for him. As he ran he drew a revolver and shot Rettger through the heart. The squad of police left to guard the Brown works witnessed the shooting and charged down the street, managing to reach Saunders, who was again on the ground, being kicked and buffeted. The police drew their revolvers and managed by great efforts to get the injured man into the office of the Bishop works. The mob outside, which had swelled to 3,000, infuriated by the sight of the dead man, howled "lynch him" and were preparing to make a charge on the building in which the police had taken refuge, when the police reinforcement attacked the crowd in the rear and clubbed their way to where the imprisoned officers were standing off the crowd. They managed to keep the crowd at bay until a company of militia marched onto the scene when the mob scattered and Saunders was put into a patrol wagon and guarded by a squad of police and the militia taken to the central police station. The whole section of the city where the workmen live is in a state of ferment, as threats have been made to burn the houses Thursday night where the men who have returned to work live. The police are on the alert, and the streets are being rigidly patrolled. There is also apprehension that the trouble has only begun and that a strike of iron workers, embracing every branch of the industry in Cleveland, may come about at any moment.

Four companies of militia are under arms at their respective armories and will be used to keep the peace Friday.

Mayor McKisson Thursday evening issued a proclamation commanding all persons to refrain from engaging in any unlawful or riotous acts with force or violence or assembling in public streets or grounds to incite any unlawful or riotous act. Citizens are warned to stay away from the vicinity of any trouble.

Funeral of the Late Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe.

HARTFORD, Ct., July 3.—The funeral of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe was held at her late home in this city at five o'clock Thursday afternoon. The services were of the simplest character. Scripture selections were read by Rev. Twitchell, of this city, and the Rev. Chas. T. Weitzel, assistant pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, and prayer was offered by Rev. Francis Goodwin, of this city. A male quartette sang "Nearer, My God, To Thee" and Mrs. Stowe's hymn, "The Other World." The remains will be taken to Andover, Mass., for interment Friday.

ENDEAVORERS.

Arrangements for the Fifteenth Convention About Completed.

Three Immense Tents Have Been Erected, Each of Which Will Comfortably Seat 8,000 Persons—The City is in Gala Attire—A Fine Programme.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The arrangements for the entertainment of the thousands of visiting Christian Endeavorers planning to come to the fifteenth international Christian Endeavor convention, whose opening sessions will be held in this city Wednesday night, July 8, are practically completed. Three immense tents have been erected upon the beautiful ellipse located between the white house and the Washington monument and known as the "white lot." Each of these tents will comfortably seat 8,000 persons, and with the large churches of the city will provide a combined seating capacity of nearly 40,000 available at any given moment during the convention. The city is dressed in gala attire; the beautiful convention flag and the stars and stripes forming the leading features of the decorations. The convention programme is finer and larger than any of the 14 that have preceded it. It covers nearly 300 separate meetings and more than 200 speakers, embracing the foremost divines and religious workers of this country and many foreign lands will be heard from during the five days of the convention. The convention opens Wednesday night with 22 simultaneous meetings held in 22 of the largest churches of the city, and closes the Monday following.

MARION DE KALB SMITH

Delegate-at-Large From Maryland to the Chicago Convention Resigns.

BALTIMORE, July 6.—Another of Maryland's "sound money" delegates-at-large to the national democratic convention has resigned and will not visit Chicago. Ex-Controller Marion De Kalb Smith thinks that it is a waste of time for the delegates favorable to the gold standard to attend the national convention. Said he Friday:

"I have a lot of very important business to attend to, which requires all my time at present and for several weeks to come, and I should be obliged to neglect it if I should go to Chicago.

"Besides my presence at the convention would really do no good. The free silver people seem to about have everything their own way and as I should by the resolutions of the state convention vote for sound money platform and sound money candidates, I should, stand with the minority in a hopeless and embarrassing position. In addition to my business reasons therefore, which will keep me at home, I greatly prefer not to go."

Mr. Chas. C. Homer, another delegate-at-large, resigned the position a few days after the state convention met. Senator A. P. Gorman was appointed by Chairman Talbot, of the state central committee, but Mr. Gorman also gave up the fight for "sound money" and will be represented at Chicago by proxy.

THE ENTOMBED MINERS.

A Possibility That Some of Them May Be Taken From the Twin Shaft Alive.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 6.—There is just a possibility that some of the men entombed in the Twin shaft at Pittston may be taken out alive. The rescuing party who was at work from ten o'clock Saturday night until four o'clock Sunday morning, on coming to the surface reported to Mine Foreman O'Brien that they heard rappings on the rails of the gangway road which may have been caused by some of the entombed men. The rappings were clear and distinct as if someone had struck the rail with a hard substance. The supposed signal was answered by the rescuers in the same manner. After a short silence the answer came clear and distinct. The sound seemed to come a distance of some three hundred feet from where the rescuers were at work.

At seven o'clock Sunday night the rescuers reported that in their opinion they are within 400 feet of the entombed men. The shifts have been increased from 20 men to 35, who are relieved every half hour. They are still cutting through the rock and progressing more rapidly than at any time heretofore since the work commenced.

BOAT CAPSIZED.

Three Children Drowned by the Skiff Colliding With a Canal Boat at Rochester, N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 6.—Lena Bissig, 12 years old, and Jacob and John Lee, aged six and five years respectively, sons of James Lee, lost their lives and four other persons narrowly escaped death on the Erie canal, 200 feet east of the Sixth street bridge in this city at eight o'clock Sunday night. James Lee, an employe of the Whitney grain elevator, with his wife, two children and Minard and Lena Bissig, brother and sister of Mrs. Lee, and a young man named Levi Linsey, went out on the canal, in an old skiff. The skiff collided with a passing canal boat and capsized, and the seven passengers were pulled under the canal boat by the suction of the water. With the aid of the people on shore all were rescued but the three children.

Drug Store Held Up by Robbers.

CHICAGO, July 6.—At 11 o'clock Sunday night robbers held up the drug store of Adolph Gaul, corner North Clark street and North avenue, secured $76 and made good their escape. The proprietor shot at the fleeing bandits several times without effect.

Closed the Saloons.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., July 6.—For the first time in many years the saloons of Lafayette were closed on the Fourth of July. This was on account of the recent decision of the supreme court sustaining the Nicholson law and the activity of the Ministers' association.

ANIMAL FRIENDSHIPS.

Lioness Who Nursed a Puppy—The Cat and Her Chickens.

Animals form very strong and very strange friendships, says the New York Journal. Thus, for instance, a lioness from Somaliland has recently taken under her most tender protection a youthful bull-terrier, which she treats as well as if he were her own son and heir. Curiously enough, she will have nothing whatever to do with her young friend's affectionate brothers and sisters, and while the favorite reposes securely under her protecting paw, she has nothing but a very suggestive snarl for all the rest.

Again, there is a young Maltese cat, which, on finding out in some mysterious manner that a nestful of tiny chickens were left motherless, took the orphaned family at once in hand (or, rather, paw) and the fluffy party made themselves immediately at home in the warm fur coat of the strange foster-mother. If, we are told, one of the babies ever happens to stray too far afield, the furry foster-mother recalls it at once with a plaintiff mew.

An equally curious case is told by M. Bellet of a terrier and a cat, both of whom were the mothers of happy families in the same stables, exchanging their progeny and nursing and tending their adopted children with the utmost care. At the Jardin des Plantes, in Paris, a lioness and a hound live in the same cage in perfect peace and friendship, and in a corner in north Germany a gamekeeper has recently reared a mixed litter of pups and fox cubs.

A COLD CLIMATE.

A Candle Finds It Hard Work to Keep Warm in the Arctics.

Cold is merely a relative term. The resident of the semi-tropical countries shivers when the thermometer falls to 50 degrees, while the Laplander and Eskimo think it is comfortable at zero.

For real cold, and plenty of it, one must go to the polar regions. Think of living where the mercury goes down to 36 degrees below zero in the house, in spite of the stove. Of course, in such a case, fur garments are piled on until a man looks like a great bundle of skins.

Dr. Moss, of the polar expedition of 1875-76, among other things, tells of the effect of cold on a wax candle which he burned there. The temperature was 35 degrees below zero, and the doctor must have been considerably discouraged when, looking at his candle, he discovered that the flame had all it could do to keep warm.

It was so cold that the flame could not melt all the wax of the candle, but was forced to cut its way down, leaving a sort of skeleton of the candle standing.

There was heat enough, however, to melt oddly-shaped holes in the thin walls of wax, and the result was a beautiful lace-like cylinder of white, with a tongue of yellow flame burning inside of it and sending out into the darkness many streaks of [illegible]

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

BLAND CAUCUS.

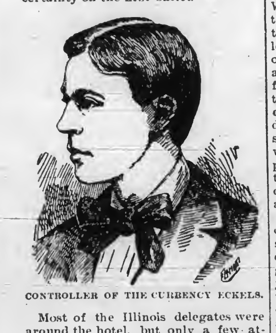
Delegates and Alternates Hold a Meeting at the Sherman House.

Phil Thompson Says Blackburn Is Gaining Votes Hourly—It Is Conceded That Senator Harris Will Be Permanent Chairman of the Convention.

CHICAGO, July 6.—The first general caucus of delegates and alternates favorable to the candidacy of Mr. Bland was held in the club room of the Sherman house Sunday afternoon and after a session lasting an hour and a half, adjourned to meet again at ten o'clock.

The object of the Bland managers was to get acquainted with the delegates from other states than Missouri and to begin the work of formulating the convention plan of procedure, rather than to make a full test of Bland's strength.

Twelve states responded to the roll call and 100 delegates instructed for the Missourian were present. From the figures sent to the secretary 250 unconditional votes were put down as a certainty on the first ballot.



CONTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY ECKELS.

Most of the Illinois delegates were around the hotel, but only a few attended the caucus. Texas and Kansas were largely represented. Secretary Allen, of the Bland executive committee of Missouri, called the caucus to order. Senator Martin, of Kansas, was chosen chairman; Dr. L. J. D. Shiel, of Texas, was elected secretary.

A few vigorous speeches were made on the outlook from Missouri's point of view, and there was no lack of enthusiasm.

Congressman Bailey said the solid 30 votes of the Lone Star state would be cast for the Laclede county farmer.

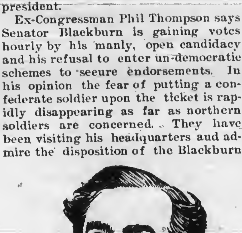
Mr. Obermeyer, of Kansas, said his state was for Mr. Bland, because no other democrat could carry the state in November.

Secretary of State Hinrichsen announced a majority of the Illinois delegation for Bland, and that under the unit rule the 48 votes of his state would be cast for the free silver pioneer of the party.

There was little but Bland talk in the Sherman house when the delegates swarmed in and the Missourians managers were elated over a report that 12 of the Tennessee delegates had been won over to the Bland persuasion. The other half are inclinded to Blackburn and McLean.

A letter was read from San Francisco stating that a silver club, composed of republicans, populists and democrats, was being formed, 1,000 strong, whose choice was Bland for president and Morgan, of Alabama, White, of California, or Sibley, of Pennsylvania, for vice president.

Ex-Congressman Phil Thompson says Senator Blackburn is gaining votes hourly by his manly, open candidacy and his refusal to enter un-democratic schemes to secure endorsements. In his opinion the fear of putting a confederate soldier upon the ticket is rapidly disappearing as far as northern soldiers are concerned. They have been visiting his headquarters and admire the disposition of the Blackburn forces to leave the nomination to the entire democracy in convention assembled and to oppose a selection by caucus in which any democrats are unrepresented.



SENATOR JOHN W. DANIEL, Virginia.

Col. Thompson deprecates any plan of agreement on candidates by a caucus which does not include every accredited delegate who will support the ticket.

This is the policy which the Blackburn people have adopted and, if successful in preventing a caucus, they hope to bring to their man a number of votes not heretofore marked in the Kentucky list. They claim that the proceedings in the convention and out must be conducted with a view to giving everybody a fair show, and while they confidently assert that a silver man will be selected, they say that the gold candidates must be given a chance. This, they think, will cause greater harmony and will give no disappointed candidate a peg on which to hang a protest against the manner in which the things have been conducted.

It is conceded that Senator Harris, of Tennessee, will be the permanent chairman of the convention, and he has made arrangements to take possession of the gavel and assume control of a body that gives promise of requiring the leadership of the skilled parliamentarian that he is. He will make but a very short speech in accepting the position, leaving it to the temporary chairman to sound the keynote for the convention.

Free silver leaders who have been selected by the respective delegations as members of the committee on resolutions and others who undoubtedly form a part of that important organization, were Sunday conferring together with respect to the platform and the subjects that shall be mentioned therein. Only upon the financial plank has there been any definite agreement. As heretofore stated in these dispatches, this plank is to dominate the whole platform and all other matters are to be second thereto. The exact text has not been finally determined, but that is a matter of detail that can be easily arranged when the committee gets together. That it will be a short, clear-cut, concise declaration for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 is a foregone conclusion. Two short sentences are all that will be necessary to construct this plank.

The indications are that those who have hoped the platform would ignore other matters will be disappointed. Well known men among those in control of convention matters, assert that the tariff question must not be overlooked. While there is a diversity of opinions as to the advisability as to coming out in a flat-footed indorsement of the Wilson tariff act, that law, bearing the stamp of democracy, will be incidentally indorsed, at least. If the United States senators are permitted to have their way the platform will declare that the present tariff law should remain untouched until the exigences of the occasion prove that its modification is absolutely necessary.

Whether the income tax, which was declared to be unconstitutional by the supreme court, shall be referred to is a question upon which there is a very great difference of opinion. The majority of the leaders, however, appear to be in favor of recognizing the principle which became a part of the Wilson tariff act, and a determined effort is to be made by delegates from some of the western and southern states to secure an expression on the subject.

The administration will not be mentioned in the platform. Some of the more radical of the silver men want an emphatic condemnation of the financial policy of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle inserted in the platform, but it is believed that while the administration will escape censure, the convention will likewise refuse to commend it, and that any substitute the gold men may offer will be voted down by the solid free silver men of the convention.

EX-GOV. BOIES' READY HAND.

There was a great deal of talk Sunday favorable to a plank that smacks very largely of what is known as jingoism. In a conversation Sunday afternoon a delegate who has been selected as a member of the committee on resolutions and who will, in all probability be its chairman, said that the democratic party has always been the American party and it was only during the administrations of President Cleveland that the Americanism of the party had been cast aside. It is therefore quite likely that the foreign policy of the present administration will, by indirection, at least, be repudiated. If the programme agreed upon by these gentlemen does not go amiss, the sympathy of the democratic party will be expressed for suffering Cuba, and a demand made for the recognition of its independence. It is not impossible that the desire to "even things up" with the administration may lead to the adoption of a plank on this subject that will be equally as strong as that adopted at St. Louis.

The Pennsylvania delegates worked heroically during the day in behalf of ex-Gov. Robert E. Pattison, their choice for the presidency. Crowds filled their headquarters at the Palmer house during the afternoon and evening, and visitors were told in eloquent tones of the qualities befitting Mr. Pattison for the presidency. The day furnished ample material for exciting discussions between the advocates of both metals and the Pennsylvania gold men put up a lively discussion for the edification of throngs gathered in their rooms.

Many members of the Pennsylvania delegation, while declaring their unfaltering allegiance to Mr. Pattison, freely admit that they see no hope for his success. Their aim rather is to gather about him the gold men, and as a tribute, make him the choice of that element.

Considerable personal feeling has been aroused by the appearance of Gov. Boies here Saturday, and the managers of other leading candidacies are openly declaring that it is contrary to precedent for a candidate for the presidency to personally attend the convention. While Senator Blackburn and John R. McLean are here, they come as delegates-at-large of their respective states, while Mr. Boies is not on the Iowa delegation.

At the Bland headquarters the statement was made with emphasis that Mr. Bland would not so violate precedents and proprieties as to come to Chicago during the convention. At the Indiana headquarters Senator Turpie said with emphasis that Gov. Matthews would not come to Chicago to take any part in his candidacy. The friends of Mr. Teller made the same observation.

After a day of hand shaking with his friends Gov. Boies returned to his home at Waterloo, Ia., Sunday.

The gold democrats who are supporting Wm. C. Whitney in the business which brought him to Chicago held an enthusiastic meeting Sunday and discussed matters bearing upon the treatment they might expect in the convention from the dominant silver men. The feature of the conference which, like that of Friday night, was conducted behind closed doors in the Auditorium hotel, was a speech delivered by Mr. Whitney at the opening. He paid his compliments to Gov. Altgeld, who, he claimed, was the dominating spirit among the silverites, and ended his remarks with this declaration made in a ringing voice:

"I take it for granted that no man in this room will ever consent to the subordination of the welfare of the country and the integrity of his party, for any consideration."

Loud cheers followed and it was some minutes before the applause died away.

It is estimated that over 225 persons were in attendance, the room being inadequate to hold the assemblage. Among the first to arrive were 60 Indianans wearing conspicuous badges, bearing the inscription "Indiana Sound Money Democrats."

Two sergeants-at-arms were placed at the door, and as each man entered he was subjected to close scrutiny. Two followers of the silverites had passed within the precincts of the conference room, but were discovered in time and summarily ousted.

Among those in attendance were W. D. Bynum, ex-Attorney General A. G. Smith, of Indiana; Wm. C. Whitney, ex-Gov. Flower, ex-Lieut Gov. Sheehan, Senator Gray, Don M Dickinson, ex-Mayor Thomas F. Gilroy, Judge Funch, of Iowa; Col. Harvey, Col. John W. Fellows, ex-Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts; Controller Eckels, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hamlin; John E. Russell, Wm. E. Harrity, chairman of the national democratic committee; Ben T. Cable, Smith T. Weed, Franklin McVeagh, Washington Hesing, ex-Gov. Bradley, ex-Gov. Francis, Josiah Quincy, Robert E. Wright, of Pennsylvania, and ex-Gov. R. W. Knox, of Kentucky.

The members of the democratic national committee who are silver men held a second meeting Sunday night to agree on a candidate for temporary chairman of the convention, and decided to recommend Senator John W. Daniel, of Virginia.

Senator White, of California, had been previously selected by them, but when the delegation called upon him to confer about the matter he said that on account of other engagements it would be out of the question for him to serve.

THE SLATE FIXED.

Men Named for the New Republican Executive Committee—Marcus A. Hanna, of Cleveland, O., Will Be the Chairman—Gen. Wm. McKinley Osborne for Secretary.

CLEVELAND, O., July 6.—As a result of the numerous conferences with leaders from all parts of the country Chairman M. A. Hanna, of the republican national committee, has decided upon the personnel of the executive committee. As made up now the list is as follows: Mark A. Hanna, chairman; M. S. Quay, Pennsylvania; Cyrus Land, Kansas; Joseph H. Manley, Maine; John I. Long, Florida; Henry C. Payne, Wisconsin; Charles G. Dawes, Illinois; W. T. Durbin, Indiana; Warner Miller, New York; W. M. Osborne, Massachusetts, secretary.

But before these men are officially notified it may be that some changes will be made. The final decision will not be made until after the Chicago convention, as the action of that body may necessitate a change in the geographical distribution of the membership.

Again, some change may be necessitated because of the objections of party leaders within their respective states, it being Hanna's settled policy not to antagonize any faction by the appointment of an opponent. In this light Warner Miller's membership on the committee is exceedingly doubtful, and it is likely that Kerns, of St. Louis, will get the vacancy.

There are several others to whom this objection applies, in a lesser degree. In Indiana war is being waged on Durbin's selection, in Wisconsin on Payne's, and in Illinois Dawes' name is received with some disapproval.

Another appointment likely to create dissatisfaction is that of Gen. William McKinley Osborne, of Boston, as secretary. The only recommendation that Gen. Osborne has to the place is that he is McKinley's cousin. Those opposed to him say that he has never distinguished himself as a party leader, and has not one of the attributes of a good secretary. It may be that a change will be made.

YOUNG IDEAS.

Nearly 16,000,000 of Them Learning How to Shoot in America.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The total enrollment in educational institutions of all kinds in the United States for the school year 1893-94 was nearly sixteen million, according to the report for the year just promulgated by Commissioner of Education Harris. Of these all but 400,000 were in the regular schools, an increase of about 500,000 for the year. The percentage of total population enrolled in the schools was 20.53. School property gained in value during the year over $25,000,000, and 1,103 more schoolhouses were in operation. In the past 20 years the south has increased 54 per cent. in population, but its school attendance has increased 130 per cent., more than twice as fast as the population. In the 20 years, from 1874 to 1894, the value of school property in the south increased from $16,000,000 to $51,000,000, an addition of $40,000,000, or $2,000,000 a year. Higher education has also made a good record.

HE ACCEPTS

The Notification Committee Informs Maj. McKinley of His Nomination.

Money Must Be as Good in Europe as at Home, Says McKinley in Reply—But the Finances Were Disposed of Briefly—Other Topics Discussed.

CANTON, O., June 30.—The notification committee, consisting of one member from each state and territory, which was selected at the St. Louis convention to convey to Maj. McKinley the official notification of his nomination, arrived at Canton on a special train from Cleveland at 11:30 o'clock Monday morning.

They were met at the depot by a committee of citizens and were driven in open carriage to Maj. McKinley's residence, accompanied by a mounted escort. McKinley met the members of the notification committee on the veranda.

John M. Thurston, chairman of the committee, formally informed Mr. McKinley of his nomination for the presidency by the republican convention in a short speech. The nominee replied as follows:

Senator Thurston and Gentlemen of the Notification Committee of the Republican National Convention: To be selected as their presidential candidate by a great party convention, representing so vast a number of the people of the United States, is a most distinguished honor, for which I would not conceal my high appreciation, although deeply sensible of the great responsibilities of the trust and my inability to bear them without the generous and constant support of my fellow-countrymen. Great as is the honor conferred, equally arduous and important is the duty imposed, and in accepting the one I assume the other, relying upon the patriotic devotion of the people to the best interest in our beloved country and the sustaining care and aid of Him without Whose support all we do is empty and vain. Should the people ratify the choice of the great convention for which you speak my only aim will be to promote the public good, which, in America, is always the good of the greatest number, the honor of our country and the welfare of the people. The questions to be settled in the national contest this year are as serious and important as any of the great governmental problems that have confronted us in the past quarter of a century. They command our sober judgment, and a settlement free from partisan prejudice and passion, beneficial to ourselves and befitting the honor and grandeur of the republic. They touch every interest of our common country. Our industrial supremacy, our productive capacity, our business and commercial prosperity, our labor and its rewards, our national credit and currency, our proud financial honor and our splendid free citizenship—the birthright of every American—are all involved in the pending campaign, and thus every home in the land is directly and intimately connected with their proper settlement. Great are the issues involved in the coming election and eager and earnest are the people for their right determination. Our domestic trade must be won back, and our idle working people employed in gainful occupations at American wages. Our home market must be restored to the proud rank of first in the world and our foreign trade, precipitately cut off by adverse national legislation, re-opened on fair and equitable terms for our surplus agricultural and manufacturing products. Protection and reciprocity, twin measures of a true American policy should again command the earnest encouragement of the government at Washington. Public confidence must be resumed and the skill, the energy and the capital of our country find ample employment at home, sustained, encouraged and defended against the unequal competition and serious disadvantages with which they are now contending. The government of the United States must raise enough money to meet both the current expenses and increasing needs. Its revenues should be so raised as to protect the material interests of our people, with the lightest possible drain upon their resources, and maintain that high standard of civilization which has distinguished our country for more than a century of its existence. The income of the government, I repeat, should equal its necessary and proper expenditures.

A failure to pursue this policy has compelled this country to borrow money, in a time of peace, to sustain its credit and pay its daily expenses. This policy should be reversed, and that too as speedily as possible. It must be apparent to all regardless of past party ties or affiliations, that it is our paramount duty to provide adequate revenue for the expenditures of the government economically and prudently administered. This the republican party has heretofore done, and this I confidently believe it will do in the future when the party is again entrusted with power in the executive and legislative branches of our government. The national credit, which has thus far fortunately resisted every assault upon it, must and will be upheld and strengthened. If sufficient revenues are provided for the support of the government there will be no necessity for borrowing money and increasing the public debt. The complaint of the people is not against the administration for borrowing money and issuing bonds to preserve the credit of the country, but against the ruinous policy which has made this necessary, owing to the policy which has been inaugurated. The inevitable effect of such a policy is seen in the deficiency in the United States treasury except as it is replenished by loans, and in the distress of the people who are suffering because of the scant demand for either their labor or the products of their labor. Here is the fundamental trouble, the remedy for which is republican opportunity and duty. During all the years of republican control following resumption, there was a steady reduction of the public debt, while the gold reserve was sacredly maintained and our currency and credit preserved without depreciation, taint or suspicion. If we would restore this policy that brought us unexampled prosperity for more than thirty years under the most trying conditions ever known in this country, the policy by which we made and bought more goods at home and sold more abroad, the trade balance would be quickly turned in our favor, and gold would come to us and not go from us in the settlement of all such balances in the future.

The party that supplied by legislation the vast revenue for the conduct of our greatest war, that promptly restored the credit of the country at its close, that from its abundant revenues paid off a large share of the debt incurred in this war, and that resumed specie payments, and placed our paper currency upon a sound and enduring basis, can safely be trusted to preserve both our credit and currency with honor, stability and inviolability. The American people hold the financial honor of our government as sacred as our flag, and can be relied upon to guard it with the same sleepless vigilance. They hold its preservation above party fealty, and have often demonstrated that party ties avail nothing when the spotless credit of our country is threatened. The money of the United States, and every kind or form of it, whether of paper, silver or gold, must be as good as the best in the world. It must not only be current for its full face value at home, but it must be counted at par in any and every commercial center of the globe. The sagacious and far-seeing policy of the great men who founded our government, the teachings and acts of the wisest financiers at every stage in our history, the steadfast faith and splendid achievements of the great party to which we belong and the genius and integrity of our people have always demanded this, and will ever maintain it. The dollar paid to the farmer, the wage earner and the pensioner must continue forever equal in purchasing and debt-paying power to the dollar paid to any government creditor.

The contest this year will not be waged upon lines of theory and speculation, but in the light of severe practical experience and new and dearly acquired knowledge. The great body of our citizens know what they want and that they intend to have. They know for what the republican party stands and what its return to power means to them. They realize that the republican party believes that our work should be done at home and not abroad and everywhere proclaim their devotion to the principles of a protective tariff which, while supplying adequate revenues for the government will restore American production and serve the best interests of American labor and development. Our appeal therefore, is not to a false philosophy or vain theorists, but to the masses of the American people, the plain, practical people, whom Lincoln loved and trusted and whom the republican party has always faithfully striven to serve. The platform adopted by the national republican convention has received my careful consideration and has my unqualified approval. It is a matter of gratification to me, as I am sure it must be to you and republicans everywhere, and to all our people everywhere, that the expression of its declaration of principles are so direct, clear and emphatic. They are too plain and positive to leave any chance for doubt or question as to their purport and meaning. But you will not expect me to discuss its provisions at length or in any detail at this time. It will, however, be my duty and pleasure at some future day to make to you and through you to the great party you represent a more formal acceptance of the nomination tendered me.

No one could be more profoundly grateful than I for the manifestation of public confidence of which you have so eloquently spoken. It shall be my aim to attest this appreciation by an unsparing devotion to what I esteem the best interests of the people, and in this work I ask the counsels and support of you, gentlemen, and of every other friend of the country. The generous expressions with which you, sir, convey the official notice of my nomination are highly appreciated, and, as fully reciprocated, and I thank you and your associates of the notification committee and the great party and convention, at whose instance you come, for the high and exceptional distinction bestowed upon me.

WHARTON BARKER,

A Candidate for the Nomination for the Presidency, Makes a Statement.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—Mr. Wharton Barker, who has announced himself a candidate for nomination for the presidency, gives to the press the following statement:

If I read the signs of the times aright Mr. Whitney's threatened bolt will not swerve the purpose of the true leaders of the democratic party, of those men who are patriots, not partisans, who have the welfare of the producing classes at heart and who revolt at the prospect of continued subserviency to the money cliques.

The fall in prices that is sapping the wealth of our producing classes, that is bankrupting our manufacturers, ruining our farmers and reducing our wage-earning classes to poverty must be checked and it can only be checked by removing the cause. That cause is the appreciation of gold consequent on discarding silver and throwing on gold alone the burden of effecting the exchanges of the western world and to check this appreciation we must restore silver to its place as money, side by side with gold.

If the democrats are wise; if they will adopt a platform and nominate a candidate who will be a platform in himself, who stands for the restoration of silver to its place as money, for financial and industrial, as well as political independence as opposed to subserviency to foreign money cliques and their American allies, such candidate will receive the enthusiastic support of bimetallists of all parties, and will be chosen by the people as their leader by an overwhelming majority, for the bolt in the democratic party will be infinitessimal compared to the great number of populists and of bimetallists heretofore republicans who will loyally and enthusiastically support such a candidate. If the leaders of the democratic party at Chicago will act so as to unite the bimetallists of all parties, democrats, populists and republicans, Maj. McKinley and the money clique will, I repeat, be overwhelmingly defeated.

An Encyclical Letter on Church Unity.

BALTIMORE, June 30.—Cardinal Gibbons has received from Rome the advance sheets containing a very comprehensive abstract of the pope's encyclical on the reunion of the Christian church. The pope compares the church to the living body of Christ, which could not exist with members torn asunder. No true and perfect human society can be conceived which is not governed by supreme authority. "The nature of this supreme authority can be ascertained from the positive and evident will of Christ in the matter. As he willed that His kingdom should be visible, Christ was obliged to designate a vice-regent on earth in the person of St. Peter. He also determined that the authority given to Him for the salvation of mankind in perpetuity should be inherited by St. Peter's successors.

The Wharf Collapsed.

BOSTON, June 30.—At City Point, South Boston, Monday afternoon, a wharf, upon which a large number of persons were viewing the departure of the Servia with the ancient and honorables on board for London, collapsed, and 30 persons were precipitated into the water. Two were drowned, but all the others were saved. Several were badly hurt, two at least of whom will die.

Another body, that of a child, has been rescued from the water. This makes the number drowned three. Lillian Duffy and Harriet Sampson, the injured, have been taken to the city hospital.

Had No Authority to Speak for Gen. Lee.

HAVANA, June 30.—Consul General Lee was interviewed Monday in regard to a statement alleged to have been made by Collector Ryan on his return to the United States from his recent trip to Havana. Gen. Lee said: "Mr. Ryan had no authority to speak for me on Cuban matters. I did not talk to him confidentially or otherwise on public questions and never gave him my views on the situation in the island. Whatever he has said or written is his own opinion, not mine."

A dispatch from Spokane, Wash., says the Penn Reilla river has overflowed its banks, flooding the entire Kilispell valley, and spreading ruin and disaster to settlers for 20 miles. The loss of cattle is heavy and crops will be an entire loss.

HUMOROUS.

—First Night—"Was the new play a success?" Parquet—"Well, I don't know; but one outraged man in the audience called the author out."—Philadelphia North American.

—He—"Which did you like best of my verses?" She—"Why, the one on the first page." He—"Let me see. Which one was that?" She—"Don't you remember? The one in quotation marks."—Harlem Life.

—"I always eat cheese with pie," remarked Gaswell to Dukane, as they lunched together at a help-yourself hashery. "It is generally regarded as the proper antidote," replied Dukane.—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

—Daughter—"This piano is really my very own, isn't it, pa?" Pa—"Yes, my dear," "And when I marry I can take it with me, can I?" "Certainly, my child; but don't tell anyone. It might spoil your chances."—Tit-Bits.

—Easy Test.—"I don't see how you design all those lovely suits for little boys," gushed the enthusiastic woman. "It is easy enough," said the ladies' and children's tailor. "I try them on my own boy. If the suit makes him utterly miserable I know I have scored another success with the mothers."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—They were discussing the new boarder. "He slips in and out of the house so quietly," said the grass-widow boarder, "that I think he must have been a married man once." "Maybe it is that," said Mrs. Hashcroft, as a troubled look came over her face, "and maybe he is in the habit of getting behind with his board."—Indianapolis Journal.

A SLAVE HUNT RECALLED.

The First Fugitive Ever Hunted in Massachusetts.

George W. Latimer, of Lynn, the first fugitive slave hunted in Massachusetts, died recently at his home in Lynn. His history was an interesting one, as it was his arrest and incarceration on Massachusetts soil in 1842 that, to great extent, inspired the old anti-slavery workers in the earlier years of the controversy. He had been given his freedom by the will of his mistress, but the will was never probated, and the heirs refused to allow the bequest, and he was sold to James B. Gray, of Norfolk, Va., September, 1841, he and his wife managed to secrete themselves in the forepeak of a stemer loaded with cotton for the north, and nine hours later left the boat at its next port of call, and took a steamer for Baltimore, whence they went to New York, and came from that place to Boston. They found lodgings among people of their own color on Joy street, but when Latimer ventured to the post office he was recognized by a man from the south, and two weeks later his master arrived from Norfolk and caused his arrest.

He was taken to the Leverett street jail and his master at once instituted proceedings to have him returned to Virginia as a fugitive. Garrison and others fought the case on every point, but Chief Justice Shaw ruled that Gray had a right to take his chattel back if he could prove property. Public indignation meetings were held in different parts of the state, the most notable one being in Faneuil hall, October 29, at which Sewell presided, and the speakers were Wendell Phillips, George S. Hilliard, Charles L. Remard and Frederick Douglass, who was at that time a fugitive.

A respite was granted in the court proceedings, and Gray's counsel offered to free Latimer for $800. This was refused, and when Gray heard that it was the intention of the citizens to storm the jail and release him, he modified his demands and freed him for half the amount originally demanded.

The sum was raised by Dr. Samuel L. Caldwell, pastor of the Tremont temple. The return of Latimer to Virginia to be tried on a charge of larceny that had been preferred against him was then demanded, but extradition papers were refused. Shortly after he removed to Lynn, and had lived there since, honored and respected by all who knew him. He was 75 years old at the time of his death and left a widow and three children.—Boston Traveler.

A Feature of the Czar's Coronation.

Among the many curious ceremonies of the coronation is the salutation by the czar of the tombs of his ancestors in the Archangel cathedral. The learned in these matters consider the custom to be a relic of a ceremony which took place in the coronation of the Byzantine empire, which formed the basis upon which the order of the Russian coronation ceremonies is founded. The ancient Byzantine emperors were presented with chippings of marble, and with rich gold-embroidered cloths containing a few human bones. This was later on simplified to the preservation of gold cloth containing earth, the object in both cases, as in the Roman triumph and the passage of a mummy through an Egyptian banqueting hall, being to remind the czar that, even in that moment of his life when he attains the summit of this world's glory he is yet but mortal.—N. The First Horses in Alaska.

Dr. Walker, a prospector in Alaska, took some horses up with him. At the first Indian village the sight of the horses drove all the dogs howling into the woods. The children dropped their rude playthings and fled crying into the huts. The men and women stood their ground although in open-eyed wonder. After much inducement they were finally prevailed upon to approach the horses, and their wonder knew no bounds. No amount of persuasion would induce them to mount. They were the first horses they had ever seen.—Chi[illegible] Chronicle.

The above is a good score, 192 points being the highest number possible to score in 12 shots.

Petersburg.

The late fine rains are making the farmers and truck growers smile all over their faces, but the pinch of the game in regard to the corn crop will be later on, two or three weeks at least.

The programme for the celebration of the 4th was deferred until Monday, on account of the weather, except the noisy fire-crackers by the small boys and a few Roman candles and sky rockets.

The berry pickers are out in the fields by daylight and argue with the owners that it is better to let somebody pick the berries than to let them rot in the patch.

Snelling & Brooks took the engine out of the mill Saturday to get ready for threshing grain.

Mr. E. Parker had some peaches in town Friday and Saturday. They are very cheap this season about 50 cents per bushels.

Our old friend Mr. Brown has traded some horses for land near the mountains of Eastern Kentucky.

Mr. Jack Cole and wife, of Crawfordsville, Ark., arrived here last Sunday night on the Memphis packet, and are intending to visit their kinfolks and friends, the Wingates and Sebrees and others. They are looking well and hearty, say they have an excellent country and the people are properous.

Erlanger.

The Methodist church closed their revival last Thursday evening, when Rev. Barker announced that there was an outstanding debt of $100, and that they also needed money to pay for painting the church, as for also building a fence around the church lot. He stated that they would take a subscription list, and began at once, and soon had $250 subscribed. Well done, thou good and faithful servant.

Thomas Lancaster, aged 14 years, is missing from his home here, and his mother is nearly distracted. He is 5ft. 1 inch, and has blue eyes. When last seen he wore a suit of black clothes, and carried a second suit of black clothes in a bundle. A colored boy accompanied him. Any word of him should be sent to Erlanger Postoffice.

Mrs. Morelli and daughter, Clara, have returned from Philadelphia, Pa., having been gone three weeks.

Rev. and Mrs. T. W. Barker, have returned to their home at Williamstown. They were guests of Dr. C. M. McCullum during the revival.

The Williams Eastern Star Lodge have sent for their charter, and elected the following officers: W. P., Hy Meyers; W. M, Mrs. A. Coe; A. W. M., Miss Mattie Talbot; Conductress, Mrs. Ida Schoepfel; ass't, Conductress, Mrs. J. Tanner; secretary, Miss Hattie Dulaney; treasury, Mrs. Hy Meyers; sentinel, R. Baker. Thirty one members signed the charter list.

The young men of St. Henry's church gave a successful picnic at Elsmere, on the 4th of July. Good receipts and plenty of fun.

Erlanger played a game of base ball with the Florence team. Score—37 to 30 in favor of the former.

Bellevue.

John H. Acra, of Middle Creek, was in town the 4th. I think it was the first 4th he ever took. He is in his 40th year,

Mr. A. Corbin attended meeting last Saturday and Sunday, near Union.

But little stir about here on the 4th—to much rain.

Mrs. Belle Clore was visiting her mother on the 4th.

Col. Moody says he has the light house and is going to have McKinley for President, but Uncle John must remember there is a little "if" in that assertion.

C. C. Craig and wife, of East Bend, passed through here last Sunday, to visit friends in Petersburg.

Miss Julia Dinsmore is entertaining friends from the city.

J. M. Lassing looked very pleasing as he passed through last week. Johnnie, explain.

J. J. Lillard and R. A. Brady spent their 4th in Carrollton.

Crops and gardens are looking well since the late rains.

Rev. T. L. Utz and wife, spent the 4th in Florence and Burlington.

J. J, Huey is able to be up again. We are glad to see Jack looking so well.

Mrs. Mary Whithead, of Louisville, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Huey.

Tom Clore returned home last Friday from Buffalo, after several weeks' absence.

George Hammonds has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks.

Verona,

The stockholders of the League Institute held their annual election of officers for the ensuing year, last Saturday afternoon.

The celebration of the fourth of July was very quiet here.

A pleasant croquet party was had at Mrs. Cravens' on the evening of the fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Ransom were the guests at L. C. Roberts' last Sunday.

The public school funds are not sufficent, by $140, this year to employ good teachers, and a subscription is being taken up. Prof. J. H Cravens and Miss Lillie Rouse are highly spoken of as teachers, by the many patrons.

O. S. Hopper and Miss Eva Wint, of Goshen, were visiting friends and relatives at West Walton, last Sunday.

Mr. Editor, we think Mr. Teller will have to have a thorough white washing before he is admitted to the good old Democrat party. We were only bragging up his free silver qualifications.

Miss Grace Thompson, of Augusta, was the guest of Miss Dickerson, last week.

Mr. Omer Rogers, of Bellevue, made us a brief call last Tuesday. He is one of our brother correspondents and a clever gentleman, too.

Our friend, Hodge Hudson, is busy engaged selling religious books in this county.

There is some excitment over mad dogs in this neighborhood. Two or three dogs are said to have gone mad. The dog that bit Mr. Orsborn, who went to Williamstown instead of Cincinnati, to have a mad stone applied, proved not to be mad.

Some hail fell near here that was as big as quarters.

The trustees of the public school met, last Saturday, and transacted some business in regard to constructing a $2,000 school house. The old house has been partly exchanged for a new location. The building will be pushed through rapidly so as to be completed for the fall session.

Florence

As the time approaches for the Fair, we are met with many questions as to the location, dimensions, time of completion, etc. To the readers of the RECORDER we propose to give some answers to the above queries that may be of general interest. The Fair Grounds are located at the junction of the Lexington and Union pikes, in what is known as Carpenter's woods, a place that has been acknowledged to be one of the finest pieces of woodland within a radius of fifty miles of Cincinnati. The amphitheatre, which is one of the largest in the State, is about 200 feet in diameter. The ring is 160 feet in diameter, just 1-11 of a mile around. It is 25 feet larger in diameter than the old fair ground ring. The seats occupy a depth of 28 feet with plenty of room for 7,000 people. The promenade is 10 feet in width, giving ample room for Charles Augustus and his Daisy Marie to glide along, whispering sweet words of love. The amphitheatre is nearly finished, and a few days more work on the seats and it will be complete. The stables have 150 box and open stalls, besides hog and sheep pens. There will be a neat two-story cottage with toilet rooms and other conveniences for the ladies.

The company has had constructed a large pond and had wells dug, insuring an ample supply of water. The grounds cover 17 acres, and those who have seen them are delighted with them and pronounce them the finest in the State.

The opening day will be September 3rd, continuing through the 4th & 5th. The directors propose giving ample premiums and expect a large attendance. They expect to have a highly moral fair and no drinking or gambling will be allowed on the grounds. The officers are B. F. McGlasson, President; E. H. Blankenbecker, Vice-President; Geo. J. Allen, Secretary; Perry Carpenter, Treasurer. The capital stock is $8,000 divided into shares of $16⅔ each.

The projectors of this enterprise are entitled to the gratitude of the people of this county for the zeal displayed in pushing such an enterprise to completion in these hard times, and we hope that the people of this and adjoining counties will show their appreciation by their attendance when the gates are thrown open September 3rd.

The 4th of July was observed here by a display of fire works at night, and several battles with Roman candles, a very dangerous sport. There were some injuries, but no severe ones.

About 9 o'clock a party of Mudlick boys returned from the city with their kites out, and stopped at Finch & Nead's saloon, where they got to fighting among themselves. They were promptly ejected by the proprietors, who closed up and the Mudlickers returned home.

Edward Golway, jr., died Wednesday at the residence of his parents. He was born in this town 37 years ago and lived here all his life. The cause of his death was consumption. He leaves a wife but no children. She has the sympathy of all this community in her sad bereavement. The remains were buried in the Florence cemetery.

Conner Yager and family are going to take up their summer residence here. They will occupy part of Mrs. Fannie Latham's house.

Mr. Tom Tupman and Miss Bessie Crigler, Mr. Chester Souther and Miss Kate Corwin, made up a Zoo Zoo party on the 4th.

T. L. Swetnam has gone to Covington on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Fannie Corwin.

James and Spencer Tanner took in Zoo on the 4th.

COUNTY COURT.

July 6.—W. E. Rouse appointed administrator of Anna Beenon, dec'd.

On motion of F. L. Gordon a portion of the old Elijah's creek road was discontinued.

The Fiscal Court convened yesterday morning with the following members present: Judge Stephens, and Esquires M. B. Green, Henry Banister, R. L. Roberts, T. E. Roberts, Jo Wagstaff and O. W. Gines. There was very little business brought before the court.

A man by the name of Riley, who was stealing a ride on a freight train Monday fell off near Erlanger, and was badly mangled. He was drunk.

Local News.

Vegetation is becoming rank.

The days are now getting shorter.

Pastures have improved wonderfully.

A very great change in the temperature.

The Fiscal Court was in session yesterday.

Business is brisk out at Zimmer's berry camp.

The stores here did very little business Monday.

There was a very small crowd in town Monday.

Our local merchants say these are the dullest times they ever encountered.

A very hard rain fell here Sunday evening, washing the land considerably.

Many a poor fellow went forth to celebrate the fourth that will never go forth again.

Rev. W. S. Bacon will preach for the Universalist congregation at this place next Sunday.

The farmers in some neighborhoods are complaining of the ravages of the chinch bugs.

Dry weather from now until after the oats and hay crops are harvested, would be appreciated.

There is no trouble to get together enough material to construct a double deck blackberry cobbler.

Gunpowder creek was past fording for a while last Thursday afternoon, on account of a heavy rain on its headwaters.

Several of those who expect to be in the campaign for county offices next year, are doing a great deal of hand shaking.

The rains last month made moderately good medows about here, in several instances where all hopes had been abandoned.

The Ladies' Aid Society served ice cream at Dr. Furnish's, Wednesday afternoon and evening. They found a ready sale for the cream.

A heavy rain fell in East Bend, last Wednesday afternoon. That neighborhood has been short on rain when compared with other localities.

The North Kentucky Agricultural Association will give its first exhibition at its grounds near Florence on the 3d 4th and 5th days of September.

William Botts, of the Bellevue neighborhood, raised an Irsh potatoe this year that weighed 3½ pounds. There were only two potatoes in the hill.

J. M. Lassing became the purchaser of the R. H. Ingram property in Erlanger, sold at public out-cry in Covington, last Wednesday. Price, $1,600.

The institution of the Knights of Pythias lodge at Rabbit Hash has been postponed until the night of the 18th inst., on account of the barbecue next Saturday.

Wash Tanner, of the Hebron neighborhood, has been employed to do the cooking for the barbecue. He is an excellent cook, and will have several able assistants.

As the August term of the Circuit Court draws on a pace, the lawyers begin to hustle that their business may be in shape to refer to that tribunal for adjudication.

Our mouth waters every time we think of that barbecued meat and burgoo with which we and 2,000 or 3,000 others will be confronted at the Harvest Home grounds next Saturday.

W. C. Brown gave the public excellent service while he had the mail route—in fact much better than ever before enjoyed here, and it was with regret that he was seen step down and out.

John Sandford killed a spreading adder in his garden, Thursday morning. It had, but a short time before, swallowed a large toad. Every few months one of those ugly reptiles are killed in Burlington.

Everything warrants the conclusion that there will be an immense crowd at the K. P. barbecue and picnic next Saturday if the weather is favorable. The boys are hustling to make the occasion a great success in every detail.

Every few days we hear of blackberry pickers who are fired out of the patches before they get their buckets filled. Blackberries are a source of revenue to the owners of the briars, and permission to pick the berries should be obtained before entering a patch.

It was a very quiet fourth in Burlington, and had it not been for the patriotic small boy with his crackers, the celebration would have been poorly celebrated. A small display of fireworks on the public square attracted quite a crowd in the evening.

A committee of ten was appointed at the K. E. A. at Lexington last year to recommend a uniform course of study for common and high schools. The course recommended by the committee was adopted by the K. E. A. at Newport this year, and a committee of fifteen was appointed to recommend the same course to the N. E. A. at Buffalo, New York.

The vegetation in the jail yard needs the caresses of a keen mowing scythe propelled by the brawny arm of some honest son of toil, who desires to inflate his exchequer to the extent of 25 cents, good and lawful coin of the realm. Said vegetation is riveling that which has gained for our garden such notoriety.

LATER—Two darkies, armed with mowing scythes, cleaned up the yard above referred to, Monday afternoon, but they did not extend their weed devastation to our garden.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. J. F. Blyth, who has been very sick, is improving.

Atty. J. C. Clore, of Cincinnati, attended court here Monday.

R. B. Huey and his mother will exchange residences this week.

Mrs. Julia Clore, who was quite sick last week, is about well again.

Mrs. Julia Clore has about recovered from her recent severe illness.

Pro. Collins was in town Monday, meeting his many friends here.

Mrs. C. C. Roberts was visiting in Walton neighborhood last week.

County Clerk Adams and wife were shopping in the city last Thursday.

Paul Hallam, of Washington, D. C., is the guest of his uncle, J. C. Revill.

Johnnie Burke and family have moved to Mr. Henry Passon's for the present.

Miss Fannie Finch, who is visiting at Williamstown, is expected home this week.

J. M. Lassing will mix with the president makers in session at Chicago this week.

Our friend G. W. Sandford took in the picnic at Woodside last Saturday after noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Rouse are visiting Rev. David Blyth at West Liberty, Ohio.

Our old friend and schoolmate, John C Sebree, of Petersburg, called on us, Monday.

Prof. Voshell says he never had a rain to tear up his farm like that one last Thursday.

D. E. Castleman was in the city, Friday, buying a lot of new books for his law library.

Mrs. Sarah Carpenter and daughter, Miss Alma, are visiting relatives at Walnut Hills, Ohio.

Hon. N. S. Walton left for Chicago in good time, and was among the first on the scene of action.

A gentleman came out from the city yesterday to measure the Baptist church floor for a carpet.

Mrs. L. H. Dills, of Bullittsville, spent several days, last week, with her many friends in Burlington.

Mrs. Elizabeth Huey and Thomas Judge, of Union, were guests of County Clerk Adams and wife, Sunday.

Several of the ladies of the Baptist church were in the city Friday, buying a carpet for their house of worship.

Our young attorney friend, Sam Adams, contemplates locating at Erlanger for the practice of his profession.

Misses Laura Hoshal and India Davis, of the Hebron neighborhood, were guests of Miss Mary Thompson, last Sunday.

J. B. Berkshire has resigned as manager of the Burlington Mercantile Co. Harry Blyth is now in full charge of the store.

Mr. Geo. F. Piper and family, of Louisville, were guests of Mrs. Virginia Huey from Saturday evening to Sunday afternoon.

Oscar Ryle piloted the mail wagon through to Erlanger for the first time Friday morning. He made all the landings on scheduled time.

Young ladies, this is leap year, and there will be no impropriety in you asking the young men to take you to the barbecue, next Saturday.

Our friend Wallace's write-up of the recent meeting of the press association came to hand too late for use this week. He has our thanks for the favor.

Our friend, C. L. Crisler, is very anxious to see a copy of a recent issue of the Times-Star, about which his friend W. H. Baker has been telling him.

Mrs. Cora Sanders and her handsome daughter, Miss Minnie Jury, of Covington, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Conner, at their beautiful country home.

Miss Emma Bentler, Miss Postcamp, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Fisher and Henry Fisher, all of Cincinnati, spent the fourth with Mr. and Mrs. Tony Bentler.

Michael Clore, of Hebron, called in to see us Monday. Mike is one of the best informed men in the county on the Lagoon, but he cannot be induced to risk the chutes.

Mr. T. D. Goodridge was in town last Monday, the first time for quite a long while, and his friends were glad to meet him. His limb is not painful but he has lost the use of it.

Col. Weeden O'Neal and C. Y. Dyas, of Covington, were in town, Monday. Some say they were here in the interest of the Colonel's candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congress in this district.

Richard Hanks, wholesale grocer, of Cincinnati, was in town, last Wednesday. Mr. Hanks is a brother-in-law of Messrs. M. S. and Benjamin Rice, of this county, and was a citizen of Burlington previous to the war.

J. M. Lassing heralded the approach of the 120th anniversary of this nation's birth by a liberal display of fire-works at his house. Nearly everybody in town as sembled to witness the flow of patriotism, the climax of which was the successful ascension of a hot air balloon.

Our friend, William Casey, of Petersburg, made us a pleasant call, one day last week. He said the shutting down of the distillery for the period of 18 months makes the outlook for all branches of business very gloomy in his town. A large number of people are now out of employment there, being the coopers and mill men.

W. C. Brown is nothing if not a wag. The other evening a gentleman who desired to rise unusually early the next morning, was trying to borrow an alarm clock, when Wat remarked. "I have one at my house." "Is it a good one?" asked the gentleman. "It is not quite two weeks old," said Wat, "and can wake a person any hour in the night."

Jerry Griffith, a prosperous farmer of the Beaver neighborhood, was in town Thursday. He reports crops in his neighborhood as looking exceedingly well. Last Monday night someone entered Mr. Griffith's barn and stole a sack containing about 200 pounds of wool. He is very well satisfied who got the wool, and traced it to Cincinnati, but was unable to locate it.

Last Sunday week Hugh Arnold and Hubert Brady had a very exciting experience at the ford near the mouth of Woolper creek. The backwater was up, but they were told that they could cross without danger, and were surprised when the horse's back disappeared beneath the water, and the buggy became completely submerged. The boys stayed in the vehicle, reaching the shore in a few minutes, thoroughly wet but very glad to get out.

A CARD.

WALTON, KY., July 2, 1896.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

No one ever imagined that Dave Haley wrote the fulmination against me in the last issue of the RECORDER. He is too ignorant. No one will believe his statements unless corroborative proof by me. Yes! be it said to my everlasting credit, I did not vote for Berry: he is a selfconfessed bribe-giver. The only doubt is his oath in a Hamilton, Ohio County Court. With unblemishing shame this "Haley" publicly acknowledged he would prefer Berry to run for office than to hold one himself. It's profitable. His statements would not have been noticed but for the cowards behind him.

GEORGE F. GAINES.

A few days ago Sheriff Roberts received a benchwarrant from the Jackson county circuit court, ordering the arrest of one William Pigg on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Pigg came to this county from Jackson just before last christmas and was occupying a piece of property near Verona, and owned by his father-in law, J. J. Brumback, who was a resident of the Verona neighborhood several years ago. Pigg came to court last Monday and the sheriff arrested him, and not being able to give the required bond of $500 he was lodged in jail until Tuesday morning when the sheriff started to Jackson county with him. Pigg was very much surprised when arrested, and is emphatic in his denial of the charge.

Miss Fannie Hogan entertained several of her young friends, last Saturday evening with a cotillion party. The enjoyment was kept up until about midnight. Among those present were Misses. Mary Furlong, Katherine Furlong, Olga Kirkpatrick, Anna Garrison, Lottie Garrison, Artie Hughes, Sheba Roberts, Hettie Riddell, Birdie Martin, Nellie Martin, Jennie Blythe, Fannie Hogan, Emma Sandford, and Messrs. Homer Clutterbuck, Roy Clutterbuck, Ollie Wean, Otto Crisler, Elbert Roberts, Henry Passons, Earle Sandford, Johnnie and Eddie Hogan.

Great damage was done in the Mud Lick neighborhood by the heavy rains. In several instances entire crops of corn and tobacco were swept away. David Houston had four or five acres of pickles washed out and totally ruined while one of his neighbors, a Mr. Johnson, had five acres of tobacco, all topped, which was hammered all to pieces by the hail, and then washed out of the field, together with all the soil as far down as it had been plowed. The damage to land and crops in the Dempsey neighborhood was particularly heavy.

Base Ball.

The Burlington and Bellevue Grays played two games of ball here last Saturday. The Grays were too light timber for the local team. The morning game resulted 7 to 2 in favor of Burlington. In the afternoon the score was 19 to 1 in favor of Burlington. About 200 people witnessed the afternoon game.

If the people of Burlington desire to have the Teachers' Institute held here this year they can succeed by giving Supt. Voshell some inducements to bring it back here—that is take hold and assist in the entertainments each evening. Now, if you are willing to thus entertain the teachers let it be known.

The bids not being satisfactory, the bank stock offered at the court house door, Monday, was not sold. For the Boone County Deposit Bank stock, 155 was bid; for the Walton Deposit Bank stock, 128 was bid. The Petersburg Bank stock was not offered.

Will and Hugh Arnold have about 20 acres of very fine tobacco on their farm. They broke up a blue grass pasture which had never been cultivated, and, with a favorable season the tobacco will be excellent.

The Union neighborhood was greatly damaged by rain and hail last Thursday afternoon. Crops were badly washed. Potatoes were washed up badly, and some patches were totally ruined.

BRILLIANT BIBLE SCENE.

Queen Vashti Held Up as a Model for All Women.

"The Sacrifice, the Silent, the Veiled," Who Scorned a Monarch and Lost a Powerful Throne Rather Than Display Herself to the King's Dissolute Friends.

In his sermon Sunday, starting from a brilliant Bible scene, Dr. Talmage discourses upon woman's opportunities, and the wrongs she sometimes suffers. His text was Esther i., 11, 12: "To bring Vashti, the queen, before the king with the crown royal to show the people and the princes her beauty; for she was fair to look upon. But the queen, Vashti, refused to come at the king's commandment by his chamberlains; therefore the king was very wroth and his anger burned in him."

We stand amid the palaces of Shushan. The pinnacles are aflame with the morning light. The columns rise festooned and wreathed, the wealth of empires flashing from the grooves; the ceilings adorned with images of bird and beast, and scenes of prowess and conquest. The walls are hung with shields and emblazoned until it seems that the whole round of splendor is exhausted. Each arch is a mighty leap of architectural achievement. Golden stars, shining down on glowing arabesque. Hangings of embroidered work in which mingle the bluenesss of the sky, the greenness of the grass, and the whiteness of the seafoam. Tapestries hung on silver rings, welding together the pillars of marble. Pavilions reaching out in every direction. These for repose, filled with luxuriant couches, into which weary limbs sink until all fatigue is submerged. These for carousal, where kings drink down a kingdom at one swallow. Amazing spectacle. Light of silver dripping down over stairs of ivory on shields of gold. Floors of stained marble, sunset red and night black, and inlaid with gleaming pearl. Why, it seems as if a heavenly vision of amethyst and jacinth and topaz and chrysoprasus had descended and alighted upon Shushan. It seems as if a billow of celestial glory had dashed clear over Heaven's battlements upon this metropolis of Persia. In connection with this palace there is a garden where the mighty men of foreign lands are seated at a banquet. Under the spread of oak and linden and acacia, the tables are arranged. The breath of honeysuckle and frankincense fills the air. Fountains leap up into the light, the spray struck through with crystalline baptism upon flowering shrubs—then rolling down through channels of marble, and widening out here and there into pools swirling with the finny tribes of foreign aquariums, bordered with scarlet anemones, hypericums, and many-colored annunculus. Meats of rarest birds and beast smoking up amid wreaths of aromatics. The vases filled with apricots and almonds. The baskets piled up with apricots and dates and figs and oranges and pomegranates. Melons tastefully twined with leaves of acacia. The bright waters of Eulaeus filling the urns and sweating outside the rim in flashing beds amid the traceries. Wine from the royal vats of Ispahan and Shiraz, in bottles of tinged shell, and lily-shaped cups of silver, and flagons and tankards of solid gold. The music rises higher and the revelry breaks out into wider transport, and the wine has flushed the cheek and touched the brain, and louder than all other voices are the hiccough of the inebriates, the gabble of fools, and the song of the drunkards.

In another part of the palace Queen Vashti is entertaining the princesses of Persia at a banquet. Drunken Ahasuerus says to his servants: "You go out and fetch Vashti from that banquet with the women, and bring her to this banquet with the men, and let me display her beauty." The servants immediately start to obey the king's command; but there was a rule in Oriental society that no woman might appear in public without having her face veiled. Yet here was a mandate that no one dare dispute, demanding that Vashti come in unveiled before the multitude. However, there was in Vashti's soul a principle more legal than Ahasuerus, more brilliant than the gold of Shushan; of more wealth than the realm of Persia, which commanded her to disobey this order of the king; and so all the righteousness and holiness and modesty of her nature rises up in one sublime refusal. She says: "I will not go into the banquet unveiled." Of course, Ahasuerus was infuriate; and Vashti, robbed of her position and her estate, is driven forth in poverty and ruin to suffer the scorn of a nation, and yet to receive the applause of after generations who shall rise up to admire this martyr to kingly insolence. Well, the last vestige of that feast is gone; the last garland has faded; the last arch has fallen; the last tankard has been destroyed, and Shushan is a ruin; but as long as the world stands there will be multitudes of men and women, familiar with the Bible, who will come into this picture gallery of God and admire the divine portrait of Vashti the queen, Vashti the veiled, Vashti the sacrifice, Vashti the silent.

In the first place I want you to look upon Vashti the queen. A blue ribbon, rayed with white, drawn around her forehead, indicated her queenly position. It was no small honor to be queen in such a realm as that. Hark to the rustle of her robes! See the blaze of her jewels! And yet, my friends, it is not necessary to have palace and regal robes in order to be queenly. When I see a woman with strong faith in God, putting her foot upon all meanness and selfishness and godless display, going right forward to serve Christ and the race by a grand and glorious service, I say: "That woman is a queen," and the ranks of Heaven look over the battlements upon the coronation, and whether she come up from the shanty on the commons or the mansion of the fashionable square, I greet her with the shout: "All hail! Queen Vashti." What glory was there on the brow of Mary of Scotland, or Elizabeth of England, or Margaret of France, or Catherine of Russia, compared with the worth of some of our Christian mothers, many of them gone into glory?—or of that woman mentioned in the Scriptures, who put all her money into the Lord's treasury?—or of Jephthah's daughter, who made a demonstration of unselfish patriotism?—or of Abigail, who rescued the herds and flocks of her husband?—or of Ruth, who toiled under a tropical sun for poor, old, helpless Naomi?—or of Florence Nightingale, who went at midnight to stanch the battle wounds of the Crimea?—or of Mrs. Adoniram Judson, who kindled the lights of salvation amid the darkness of Burmah?—or of Mrs. Hemans, who poured out her holy soul in words which will forever be associated with hunter's horn, and captive's chain, and bridal hour, and lute's throb, and curfew's knell at the dying day?—and scores and hundreds of women, unknown on earth, who have given water to the thirsty and bread to the hungry and medicine to the sick and smiles to the discouraged—the footsteps heard along dark lane and in government hospital and in almshouse corridor and by prison gate? There may be no royal robe—there may be no palatial surroundings. She does not need them; for all charitable men will unite with the crackling lips of fever-struck hospital and plague-blotched lazaretto in greeting her as she passed: "Hail! Hail! Queen Vashti."

Again I want you to consider Vashti the veiled. Had she appeared before Ahasuerus and his court on that day with her face uncovered, she would have shocked all the delicacies of Oriental society, and the very men who in their intoxication demanded that she come, in their sober moments would have despised her. As some flowers seem to thrive best in the dark lane and in the shadow, and where the sun does not seem to reach them, so God appoints to most womanly natures a retiring and unobtrusive spirit. God once in a while does call an Isabelle to a throne, or a Miriam to strike the timbrel at the front of a host, or a Marie Antoinette to quell a French mob, or a Deborah to stand at the front of an armed battalion, crying out: "Up! Up! This is the day in which the Lord will deliver Sisera into thine hand." And when women are called to such outdoor work and to such heroic positions, God prepares them for it; and they have iron in their souls and lightning in their eye, and whirlwinds in their breath, and the borrowed strength of the Lord Omnipotent in their right arm. They walk through furnaces as though they were hedges of wild flowers, and cross seas as though they were shimmering sapphire, and all the harpies of hell down to their dungeon at the stamp of her womanly indignation. But these are the exceptions. Generally, Dorcas would rather make a garment for the poor boy; Rebekah would rather fill the trough for the camels; Hannah would rather make a coat for Samuel; the Hebrew maid would rather give a prescription for Naaman's leprosy; the woman of Serepta would rather gather a few sticks to cook a meal for famished Elijah; Phebe would rather carry a letter for the inspired apostle; mother Lois would rather educate Timothy in the Scriptures. When I see a woman going about her daily duty—with cheerful dignity presiding at the table, with kind and gentle, but firm discipline presiding in the nursery, going out in the world without any blasts of trumpets, following in the footsteps of him who went about doing good—I say: "This is Vashti with a veil on." But when I see a woman of unblushing boldness, loud-voiced, with a tongue of infinite clitter-clatter, with arrogant look, passing through the streets with a step of a walking beam, gayly arrayed in a very hurricane of millinery, I cry out: "Vashti has lost her veil!"

When I see a woman of comely features, and of adroitness of interest, and endowed with all that the schools can do for one, and of high social position, yet moving in society, with surperciliousness and hauteur, as though she would have people know their place, and an undefined combination of giggle and strut and rhodomontade, endowed with allopathic quantities of talk, but only homeopathic infinitesimals of sense, the terror of dry goods clerks and railroad conductors, discoverers of significant meanings in plain conversation, prodigies of badinage and innuendo—I say, "Look! look! Vashti has lost her veil."

Again, I want you to consider Vashti the sacrifice. Who is this I see coming out of that palace gate of Shushan? It seems to me that I have seen her before. She comes along with a broken heart. Who is she? It is Vashti the sacrifice. O, what a change it was from regal position to a wayfarer's crust. A little while ago, approved and sought for; now, now, none so poor as to acknowledge her acquaintance. Vashti the sacrifice! Ah! you and I have seen it many a time. Here is a home empalaced with beauty. All that refinement and books and wealth can do for that home has been done; but Ahasuerus, the husband and the father, is taking hold on paths of sin. He is gradually going down. After awhile he will flounder and struggle like a wild beast in the hunter's net—further away from God, further away from the right. Soon the bright apparel of the children will turn to rags; soon the household song will become the sobbing of a broken heart. The old story over again. Brutal centaurs breaking up the marriage feast of Lapithae. The house full of outrage and cruelty and abomination, while trudging forth from the palace gate are Vashti and her children. There are homes that are in danger of such a breaking up. O, Ahasuerus! that you should stand in a home, by a dissipated life destroying the peace and comfort of that home. God forbid that your children should ever have to wring their hands and have people point their finger at them as they pass down the street, and saying: "There goes a drunkard's child." God forbid that the little feet should ever have to trudge the path of poverty and wretchedness! God forbid that any evil spirit born of the wine cup or the brandy glass should come forth and uproot that garden, and with a lasting, blistering, all-consuming curse, shut forever the palace gate against Vashti and the children!

During the war I went to Hagerstown to look at the army, and I stood in the night on a hill-top and looked down upon them. I saw the camp fires all through the valleys and all over the hills. It was a weird spectacle, these camp fires, and I stood and watched them; and the soldiers who were gathered around them were, no doubt, talking of their homes and of the long march they had taken, and of the battles they were to fight; but after awhile I saw these camp fires begin to lower; and they continued to lower, until they were all gone out, and the army slept. It was imposing when I saw the camp fires; it was imposing in the darkness when I thought of that great host asleep. Well, God looks down from Heaven, and he sees the firesides of Christendom and loved ones gathered around these firesides. These are the camp fires where we warm ourselves at the close of the day and talk over the battles of life we have fought and the battles that are yet to come. God grant that when at last the fires begin to go out and continue to lower until finally they are extinguished, and the ashes of consumed hopes strew the earth of the old homestead it may be because we have > Gone to sleep that last long sleep.

> From whence none ever wake to weep.

Now, we are an army on the march of life. Then, we will be an army bivouacked in the tent of the grave.

Once more: I want you to look at Vashti the silent. You do not hear any outcry from this woman as she goes forth from the palace gate. From the very dignity of her nature you know there will be no vociferation. Sometimes in life it is necessary to make a retort; sometimes in life it is necessary to resist; but there are crises when the most triumphant thing to do is to keep silent. The philosopher, confident in his newly discovered principle, waiting for the coming of more intelligent generations, willing that men should laugh at the lightning rod and cotton gin and steamboat—waiting for long years through the scoffing of philosophical schools, in grand and magnificent [illegible]lence. Galileo, condemned by mathematicians and scientists, caricatured everywhere, yet waiting and watching with his telescope to see the coming up of stellar re-enforcements, when the stars in their courses would fight for the Copernican system; then sitting down in complete blindness and deafness to wait for the coming on of the generations who would build his monument and bow at his grave. The reformer, execrated by his contemporaries, fastened in a pillory, the slow fires of public contempt burning under him, ground under the cylinders of the printing press, yet calmly waiting for the day when purity of soul and heroism of character will get the sanction of earth and the plaudits of Heaven. Affliction, enduring without any complaint the sharpness of the pang and the violence of the storm, and the heft of the chain and of the darkness of night. Waiting, until a Divine hand shall be put forth to soothe the pang and hush the storm and release the captive. A wife abused, persecuted, and a perpetual exile from every earthly comfort—waiting, waiting, until the Lord shall gather all His dear children into a heavenly home, and no poor Vashti will ever be thrust out from the palace gate. Jesus, in silence and answering not a word, drinking the gall, and bearing the cross, in prospect of the rapturous consummation when

> "Angels thronged His chariot wheel,
> And bore Him to His throne;
> Then swept their glorious harps and sang
> The glorious work is done."

O woman! does not this story of Vashti the queen, Vashti the veiled, Vashti the sacrifice, Vashti the silent, move your soul?

My sermon converged into the one absorbing hope that none of you may be shut out of the palace gate of Heaven. You can endure the hardships and the privations and the cruelties and the misfortunes of this life if you can only gain admission there. Through the blood of the everlasting covenant you go through these gates or never go at all. God forbid that you should at last be banished from the society of angels, and banished from the companionship of your glorified kindred, and banished forever. Through the rich grace of our Lord Jesus Christ may you be enabled to imitate the example of Rachel and Hannah and Abigail and Deborah and Mary and Esther, and Vashti. Amen.

THE bullet fired into Li Hung Chang's left cheek by a would-be assassin at Shimoneski, Japan, was located by use of the Roentgen rays at Berlin.

THE largest boat ever built in Michigan was successfully launched from the Wyandotte yards of the Detroit Dry Dock Co. recently. The new boat was christened The Senator. She cost $260,000, is 420 feet over all, 400 feet keel, 45 feet 6 inches beam, and 28 feet deep.

AT the recent Osuna sale in Paris, the portrait of a lady, attributed to Van Dyck, brought $12,000. The two most important Goyas were bought for $10,000, and $3,000 respectively, for the Prado museum, which also bought a portrait of a gentleman, by Carredo de Miranda, for $3,000.

TEAROOMS in the west end of London are rapidly becoming the popular form of commercial enterprise for women, who have established, during the last year, quite a network of these little concerns in and around Regent street and Bond street. These dainty little establishments, where the tea and cakes and sandwiches are of the best quality, are an immense improvement upon the ordinary confectioner's shop.

BERLIN'S NEW SEWAGE SYSTEM.

The City Runs Seven Large Sewage Farms at a Profit.

Berlin has dealt successfully with the drainage question. Until about a quarter of a century ago the disposal of sewage was effected in primitive fashion; open drain courses, badly built and with inadequate fall, ran through many of the streets, discharging finally into the River Spree, for whose condition contamination would be far too mild a word. A commission was appointed, which, after visiting various countries, especially England, with the view of practically studying different systems, reported in favor of sewage irrigation on land at a distance from the city. The flatness of the plain on which Berlin is built would not allow of any gravitation scheme, and consequently it was found necessary to adopt steam pumping. For the same reason the sewage could not all be collected at one spot, and it was therefore decided to divide the city into 12 drainage areas. The ground at the seven sewage farms was well suited for the purpose, consisting only of sandy wastes, then growing only stunted firs and birches, but now converted into fertile fields. The total area of the land which could be devoted to sewage irrigation is 22,500 acres; only about 14,000 acres are at present needed. The following extract is from Dr. Legge's account of these Berlin farms: "No deleterious effect has been noticed on the health of those living on the sewage farms, and, indeed, at some of them, as at Blankenburg and Malehow the city has built various hospitals for convalescents, for consumptives, and for women recovering after child-bed, and the patients seem to thrive in them as well as they would anywhere else."

The question whether the germs of typhoid fever and cholera pass through the soil into the drainage water has naturally formed a subject of inquiry, but many bacteriological examinations conducted specially with the view of clearing up this point, have answered the question in the negative. Until 1892 the laborers working on the sewage farms were remarkably free from typhoid fever, although in 1889 Berlin itself was visted by a severe epidemic; in 1892 a few cases occurred among some farm workers, who were alleged to have drunk largely of the effluent from the farm, but in these [illegible] other possible sources of infection could not be excluded. It is satisfactory to note that, notwithstanding the enormous cost of working these Berlin sewage farms, the expenses have, in most years, been covered by the sale of the produce; and in one year (1889) the surplus amounted to £11,511.—London Health News.

THE HONG KONG PLAGUE.

Chinamen Resist the Efforts of Europeans to Save Them.

European physicians who have had experience in China during epidemics have been obliged to combat many stubborn prejudices of the natives. In 1894 the plague attacked Hongkong about the middle of May. From 50 to 100 deaths occurred daily. From the first the Chinese strongly objected to the removal of their sick to European hospitals. They did not understand the necessity of segregation. They preferred to die in their unclean surroundings among friends than to accept the chance of a lonely recovery at a hospitul.

The devices to which the Chinese resorted to conceal the sick from searching parties were many and ingenious. A system of house-to-house visitation had to be organized to overcome the dangerous secretiveness of the Chinese. The efforts of the cleansing and disinfecting staff were rendered almost futile by the dislike of the natives to sanitary precautions. The epidemic caused 2,550 deaths before it ceased in early September.

The necessity of burying the dead in common graves was a great shock to the feelings of the natives, and finally led to open rebellion. Concessions had to be made to the ignorant and desperate celestials, and the presence of Chinese medical attendants in the European hospital was permitted. Chinese to the number of 100,000 left Hongkong while the plague was raging. Their demand that their plague-stricken relatives be allowed to accompany them was, of course, not granted. Of the Chinese patients who were attacked by the epidemic only 18 per cent. recovered, while 82 per cent. of the Europeans afflicted were restored to health.—N. Y. World.

Fallacies About Noses.

In spite of the important places given to the nose as an index of character, there is but little to be learned from it in estimating the causes of an innate bond between the mind and the features. Most of the correspondence which have been remarked appear to be of a radical order, but why a Roman nose first became associated with a warlike and domineering disposition, or how a long and thin nose became linked with a business prudence, is more than I can say. If we omit the changes which take place in a nose during the lifetime of its possessor, there is scarcely a nasal peculiarity of value to the physiognomist which at the same time is cosmopolitan. No Tartar or Hottentot, however warlike, could give proof of it in this way. Japan has shown that she possesses plenty of men with military aptitude, but no Washingtonian nose can be found within her borders. Again, no Chinese nose long and thin, yet "John" is not without a certain aptitude at driving bargains.—Blackwood's Magazine.

NO CALL FOR THE SHOTGUN.

He Pulled the Tooth and Peace Reigned Once More.

Just as I reached the crest of the Cumberland mountains I came to a mountaineer's cabin, with the husband and wife sitting on a log at the door. The woman had her jaws tied up and there was a wild look in her eyes, and after passing the time of day I naturally inquired what was wrong with her.

"Toothache, sah," replied the husband. "She's had it nigh upon a week, but she's been desperit to-day. We was just waitin' fur sumbody to cum along."

"Can't it be cured?"

"Reckon not, sah. Best way is to pull it out. I've got the pinchers here to do it with and I want yo' to help me a bit."

"I'll help, of course, but I never pulled a tooth for anyone in my life."

"That's all right. She'll lay down yere on her back and I'll hold her down while yo' pull. I've tried it twice over, but she gits away from me."

"Are you willing, ma'am?" I asked of the woman.

"I'm willin', of co'se," she replied, as she removed the bandage from her jaw. "This is the tooth right yere."

"Yes, I see it."

"D'ye reckon yo' kin pull it?"

"I think I can."

"Waal, now, don't make no mistake. When yo' git hold don't—"

"But, ma'am, you see—"

"Git hold!" she interrupted, as she fell over the log and her husband sat down on her and got a firm hold of her ears to hold her head.

"Got to do it, stranger," said the man as I hesitated. "She's got to, that pass whar she'll shoot if yo' don't. Clap on the pinchers and bust sumthin'!"

It was a solid double tooth, standing alone, and I got a firm hold, braced my feet, and, with a twist and a pull I had it out. Not even a groan escaped the woman. She rose up, took the tooth from the nippers and looked at it for a moment and then turned to me with:

"Stranger, I don't know how loud yo' kin hoot nor how fur yo' kin jump, but from the way yo' fotched this tooth out I'm willin' to believe yo're a purty good man. Jist sot down and talk with Jim and I'll hev smack ready in about five minits!"—N. Y. Herald.

IN THE TRACK O[illegible] STORM

When the Doctors Were Puzzled She Showed She Was Bostonese.

The terrible whirlwind had done its worst.

Stately monarchs of the forest lay prostrate. Ruin and desolation marked the path of the funnel-shaped monster that had swept with resistless fury over the land, destroying everything that stood in its way.

Here and there were the scattered fragments of many a dwelling that had been the abode of peace, happiness and prosperity.

Desolate, despairing men and women wandered among the ruins. Now and then there was one who bewailed his fate with loud lamentations or bitter curse, but for the most part the victims bore their sorrow in sullen silence, and there were not wanting those who found consolation and even cause for gratitude in the fact that their lives had been spared.

In an upper room of a house that had escaped the storm lay one of the injured.

"How long has she been unconscious?" inquired the physician.

"Ever since she was picked up and brought here," replied one of the watchers.

"There seems to be no bones broken," he rejoined, "but the shock has been severe. We can only hope for the best. I have witnessed the effects of many cyclones, but this one—"

The young woman on the couch opened her eyes.

"A cyclone," she muttered, feebly, "is a rotary storm of widely extended circuit, its center frequently being many miles from its outer limit or circumference. This was a tornado. It was not a cyclone. This misuse of the term is, however, almost universal, except among educated persons."

"From Boston?" said the doctor, in a low tone.

And the watchers silently nodded.—Chicago Tribune.

Summer Silks.

The handsomer qualities of silk, or to speak more correctly, the more expensive qualities, are being made up for summer outfits. Poult de soie is a fashionable material, and comes in exquisite shades. A maize or corn color is among the novelties, and when trimmed with white lace is exceedingly becoming. It used to be thought that anything approaching yellow should be exclusively worn by brunettes, but never was there a greater mistake, for blondes look equally well in that color. These heavy silks used to be considered suitable only for evening wear, but we have now no fixed laws for material or coloring for different occasions. Gray is lovely in poult de soie, and a robin's-egg blue is the softest and most delicate thing imaginable. Lace, embroideries, mousseline de soie, and chiffon all combine satisfactorily with these heavy silks, but black lace, unless for older women, should never be chosen to trim them, although there are many gowns that have been lately made up that have fine black lace on the solid colors. White against the soft shading is usually becoming, and gray made up with white and touches of yellow gives a beautifully picturesque effect.—Harper's Bazar.

—Lord George Hamilton recently said in parliament that the English system of primary education was the most expensive in the world. MANICURING AT HOME.

One Branch of a Constantly-Increasing Business.

Of the greatly increased and still increasing, number of persons who have their hands attended to by professional manicures, a considerable number now have the work done at their own home. Among the customers at the large manicuring establishments there are almost as many men as women; those whose hands are cared for at home are nearly all women and regular customers. Operators are sent to them at any desired hour from the manicuring establishments, and there are now visiting manicures who devote themselves entirely to home work. The visiting manicure acquires the art in a manicuring establishment. A[illegible] pupil can learn the work in two or three months. Then she sets about building up a route of customers. Women usually have their hands cared for once a week. They are not likely all to want the work done at the same time, and the visiting manicure endeavors to lay out a route that can be covered without loss of time and which will keep her constantly employed.

More and more parents now have the hands of their children, both boys and girls, cared for by a manicure, beginning when the child is six or seven years old. In the case of children, the work is as often done to cure them of the habit of biting the finger nails as it is to beautify them. It is sought to instil in the child a pride in the appearance of the nails, and thus to prompt it to preserve them in good order. The work thus begun is likely to be continued for purposes of beautifying.

The number of people, men and women, who now have their feet attended to by the chiropodist, as they do their hands by the manicure, has also increased greatly. The work upon the hands is done to beautify them; upon the feet, for comfort. It is now required, by the law of June 3, 1895, that chiropodists shall pass an examination by a board of examiners of the Pedic society of the state of New York. Some persons have their feet cared for at home, but much the greater number go to a manicuring establishment in which chiropodists also are employed, or to a chiropodist's establishment.—N. Y. Sun.

Paid with Checks on His Honeymoon.

A few days ago a young couple came here from Boston and went to a clergyman to be married. After the ceremony the groom passed to the clergyman a check for ten dollars. Then the groom invited the clergyman and his wife to accompany him and his bride in a ride about the town the next day in order that the couple might see the city. The invitation was accepted and the four had a very pleasant ride. The bride and groom parted from the clergyman with many expressions of regard, evidently sincere. Later on the clergyman had an inquiry from the stable keeper as to the identity of the young man. It turned out that he had passed a check in payment for his carriage and the check had come back marked worthless. The fellow paid his hotel bill with a bogus check, and the check he gave to the clergyman was also no good. The couple have left town and their whereabouts cannot be ascertained. The bride is described as a lady of very attractive qualities. — Portland (Me.) Argus.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

WALDENSIAN FARMERS.

Quite a Colony of Them Is Located in Burke County, N. C.

In the summer of 1893 some 20 families came over from sunny Italy and settled in the western part of North Carolina. They were the advance guard of the colony which to-day numbers about 200 persons.

There would be little to attract attention to this settlement if it were not the only one of the kind in America. The colonists are Waldenses; that is to say, they are descendants of a religious sect that was driven by persecution into the Piedmont mountains of northern Italy. Here they were safe and secluded, and here they were free to follow their peculiar forms of worship. In their mountain retreat at home the Waldensians have followed the ordinary pursuits of agriculture. Living by themselves and shut off from the outside world, these people were content to farm after the fashion of their forefathers. The result was, their methods of farming were rather rude and primitive.

When the Waldensians came to this country they brought with them their old-fashioned ideas and methods. Many of the colonists had never seen a plow or a mower and reaper until they arrived in North Carolina. Of course, our modern methods of intensive farming and rotation of crops were beyond their knowledge. The colony is located in Burke county, N. C., about eight miles from Morgantown, the county seat. The village is called Valdese, and is laid out into streets and building lots. The first thing the colonists did was to build a church and schoolhouse. Recently they have showed considerable enterprise in starting a hosiery mill, in which most of the young people are employed. The property of the colonists consists of several thousand acres. This has been divided into small farms, each family receiving from 50 to 60 acres. At the same time each householder is obliged to assume his share of the debt which the colony still owes.

WALDENSIANS AT WORK.

Thus far, the colonists have been too busy at clearing the lands and building houses to make much of a showing. It will be several years before the results of their work and industry are fully seen. Already they have set out quite a number of fruit trees and vines. Many of them are familiar with grape growing in Italy, and they will soon learn the methods of successful viticulture in this country.

They are giving up using their old and clumsy implements, and to-day they handle the plow as skillfully as the native farmers. As our illustration shows, the women and children lend a hand and work in the fields. The majority of the people are young and in the prime of life; that is, they are under the age of 40. The women are strong, thrifty and make good wives. The men are active, vigorous, industrious and used to hard work. They should make good citizens.—American Agriculturist.

VALUABLE POINTERS.

If They Are Followed Horse Breeding Is Bound to Be Profitable.

To those of our readers who share our faith that horse breeding will pay in the future, says Wallace, we give several pointers. Don't breed any mares under any circumstances that have a disease that may be transmitted by inheritance, as for example, spavin, or any other defect of a bony structure. Don't breed any small mares to draft horses; the result will be a misfit and will sell at about beef prices. Don't breed except with a definite purpose in view. If you wish to breed heavy draft horses, use 1,600 pound mares; if express horses weighing about 1,600 pounds, use active, shapely, spirited mares weighing 1,400 pounds. Select the best sire in the neighborhood or county for the purpose you have in view and breed only for a definite purpose. If for drafts, use draft material; if for coach horses, use coach blood. There is not much of it in the country, but there is some, and as good a show as any will be had by using the large standard bred horses. Begin practicing for the next year's colt by taking the proper care of this year's colt, no matter how it may be bred. Don't let it tag along after the mare in the corn field, but leave it at home in a good, dark stable, or better still in a pasture lot with a shed to run into and something nice to eat in a good clean box in the corner, and in a place where the chickens don't roost over it. Give it a small grain ration up until weaning time and let the grain be oats. It is oats that put bone and good form in a horse, or for that matter in a boy. If these suggestions are followed, the breeding of horses gives as much promise in these dull times as anything else on the farm.

Be careful in selection when buying trees. One variety will bring profit, another will cause you loss. Foresight is better than hindsight.

With nearly all small fruits now it is a good time to go over the rows and if any places are bare fill them with thrifty plants.

PASTURE FOR PIGS.

Results of Careful Experiments Extending Over Four Years.

Exercise, good air and sunshine play a much greater part in pig raising than most people commonly suppose. It is for this reason that the western practice of relying quite largely on grazing for the nourishment of swine is so successful.

This has never been so clearly demonstrated as by a series of pig feeding tests extending over four years, made by Mr. A. A. Mills, of Utah. We give the results below:

1. Pigs allowed to run at large over 18 acres of good pasture and fed a full ration of grain made the most rapid growth and required the least grain for one pound of gain.
2. Pigs confined in movable pens in the pasture grew more slowly than those running loose, and required an increase of 20 per cent. of grain to make one pound of growth.
3. Pigs at pasture, fed under three different conditions, gained 92.5 cent more and ate but two per cent more than the pigs getting grass and otherwise similarly fed, but confined in pens. The grain required to produce one pound of gain was increased 40 per cent. with those in pens over those in pasture.
4. Pigs fed but part rations of grain at pasture made satisfactory gains. Those at pasture getting the three-fourths grain ration gained more than those fed a full grain ration and grass either in the yard or in the pens.
5. Pigs pastured without grain made about the same growth for three seasons in succession, this averaging .36 of a pound a day.
6. As nearly as can be judged, exercise alone increased the gain 22 per cent., and the amount eaten but 1.5 per cent., but decreased the amount required for one pound gain 22 per cent.
7. Grass when cut and fed green to pigs, whether fed in pens or yards, or with full or part grain rations, or without grain, proved to be of very little value.
8. Pigs confined in pens and fed on grass alone, mostly lucerne, for 91 days, lost over a quarter of a pound per day.
9. The average of the pigs fed on grass gained a little more than those without the grass, but not enough to pay for the extra feed in the grass.
10. With the pigs confined in the hog-house pens, the grass proved beneficial, while with those in the yard it proved detrimental, the latter requiring more grain to make a pound of pork with the grass than without it.
11. Pasturing either with full or with part grain rations appeared to be by far the cheapest and best way of making pork.

GOOD BUTTER COW.

What She Should Look Like and How She Should Act.

The good milch cow should have a large muzzle, slim neck and yellow skin. She should have a long face, wide between the eyes, alert and expressive, and placed a long way between the horns. Her breathing should be regular and strong, indicative of strong lung power. The back and abdomen should be strong, the udder wide where it joins the body, and the teats be squarely placed; the tail slim. She should be wedge-shaped, slim in front and wide behind, with large body, which is necessary to the consumption, assimilation and manufacturing into milk of a large quantity of food.

The perfect udder, in size and form with the teats to match, and large abdominal proportions, are almost certain indications of good dairy qualities. A slim neck is also supposed to be almost an infallible sign of a good dairy cow.

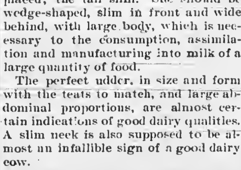
A beefy-looking cow rarely proves a good dairy animal. There is too strong a tendency to convert the food into meat rather than into milk.

Of course it will occasionally happen that looks are deceptive, so that the best test is the milk pail and the churn. —St. Louis Republic.

SAFE FODDER RACK.

So Constructed That Each Animal Must Keep Its Own Place.

When the pasture begins to get short, the stock must have extra feed, and a feed rack for the pasture or barnyard is necessary. The illustration shows such a rack built against a fence, which has one important feature. At the ordinary feed rack the strongest and most belligerent of the stock will course along the length of the rack and drive off the weaker. With the one herewith illustrated all such difficulties are avoided, as each animal must keep his own place.—Orange Judd Farmer.



Shears Sheep at Seventy-Seven.

In this section the field of woman's usefulness is widening, and the old notion that her place is in the kitchen is being dispelled. This country has a colored woman who is a brick and stone mason by trade and is an expert in that line. The country comes to the front again with another new woman. She is Mrs. Rhoda Cox, of the Panola section. A few days since she wanted her sheep sheared, and, finding no man who would do the work, went to the sheep sheds and performed the work herself. The job was neatly done, and the 17 sheep were soon separated from their fleece. Mrs. Cox is 77 years old and active, hale and hearty.—Richmond Dispatch.

Applying a little water and often is a bad principle in watering plants. If water is needed apply thoroughly.

FOR SUMMER DECORATION.

A Season of Simplicity and Light in the Home.

Decorations for this summer will be even more simple than before. Gilding and multiplication of ornaments have given place to cooler effects. Friezes, fringes and other trimmings, being voted heavy, have gone out of fashion. Even moldings are left plain and as nearly like the rest of the woodwork as possible. Good harmony in color is obtained at any cost.

French and English wall papers are now in most general use. They come without friezes. This detracts somewhat from the apparent breadth of a room, but is a distinct gain in the matter of brightness. Sprawling patterns characterize the newest papers for halls and bedrooms. Yellow is a favorite color. It appears in roses, with huge, straggling leaves. Giant cactus blossoms, poppies and hibiscus are all shown.

For drawing-rooms the effect is exactly reversed. The papering and appointments are of the most dainty description. A beautiful wall is of a green so delicate that it suggests the first upshooting grass of spring or a mat of natural moss about a fountain. Other designs show just a hint of rose color, a wavy light of blue or the faintest possible ecru. Some summer walls are draped with silk, the finest, lightest, most shimmering qualities being used.

Canvas tapestry, which closely resembles coffee-sacking in mesh and color, gives an admirable tone to the cottage library. This tapestry comes in oriental colors and flower designs, some conventional and some like the palm leaves, showing considerable artistic touch. The patterns are large.

A wall paper has recently been brought out which exactly imitates old Dutch tiling in design and appearance. Nothing more appropriate for a dining-room could be invented. Portieres and curtains should be made of blue denim. The blue harmonizes exactly with the delft tiles and plaques. Shields of white bolting cloth may be appliqued on the denim and embroidered and outlined in blue cotton. The chairs, divans and cushions should be covered plainly with the denim, bound at the edges with blue and white gimp. A mantelpiece in white, with a goodly expanse of mirror, is most effective. Odd-shaped jars of blue and white may ornament the shelves. This combination is singularly cool.

Chamois cloths, which are made of the weight and substance of a skin, make pleasing draperies for [illegible] homes furnished in French style. They are costly, however. For simple country rooms chintz is quite as effective. The designs are novel and beautiful, offering ample variety for selection. Outdoor hangings for yachts or piazzas are made of Cairo lattice nets. These are woven with an open mesh, which permits the air to circulate freely while excluding the light.

The piazza decoration and furnishing should be as carefully considered as those of parlor or bedroom. A piazza without a hammock would be incomplete. If room permits two, or even three, of the lazy nets may be provided. An attempt has been made in the last few years to improve on the hammock by introducing the Indian swing. This hangs from metal chains and has a sofa-like seat. It is not as comfortable as the hammock, but is more manageable.

Awnings are almost a fad among summer cottagers. The most popular are those gayest in design. The hideousness of the combined colors seem to matter little. The awning beneath which women appear to best advantage is marked with alternate strips of red and white. This canvas does not give as soft a light, however, as one of blue and white or green and white. One of the most startling awnings shown at Narraganset last year was a yellow, red and green affair. Under its trying shade the most beautiful woman looked hideous.—N. Y. Herald.

SHADES OF YELLOW.

Alluring Combinations of Orange and Cream Tints.

Shades of yellow have come to be considered quite as much the property of blondes as of the brunette beauties who have for so long considered them their sole property.

A wonderful French confection in the line of a fancy blouse is worn with extreme becomingness by a spirituelle blonde Newport beauty, whose hair has all the golden lights of the sunshine, and whose complexion is one of cream and roses.

The body of the bodice is of a rich, deep shade of orange velvet, fitted smoothly as a glove, and cut to set in odd points and ripples over the hips. A deep, square-shaped yoke is covered over with coarse brown-tinted lace, and finished by a full puffing of the orange velvet set on as a heading to the two deep frills of lemon yellow, pelissed mousseline de soie, which flare out over the tops of the big full sleeves.

The sleeves are of the deeply-tinted orange velvet, overlaid with lemon-tinted mousseline de soie, and finished at the wrist by a twist of velvet. A stiff stock of velvet is softened in effect by a ripple of lemon-yellow mousseline de soie. This smart bodice is worn with a Paquin skirt of pure white mohair, beautifully stiffened and lined throughout with glistening yellow.

The hat is of burnt straw, with a wide brim, rolled directly up at the back, all tucked full of big crimson and dull pink roses. Two tall black ostrich plumes and clusters of English violets decorate the flat crown.

Another charming gown is made up of ivory-yellow organdie, flowered and barred with a deeper yellow. The sheer stuff is made up over a delightful shade of butter-tinted taffeta, with pinked-out ruches of the silk at the foot of the skirt as a finish. The bodice is made up of openwork, creamy lace drawn over a fitted body of butter-tinted silk, while the full elbow sleeves are of the organdie.—St. Louis Republic.

HEALTH IN OLD AGE.

An Old Lady Finds the True Source of Vitality.

A Reporter's Interesting Interview with a Lady of Seventy-Two Years, Who Tells a Marvelous Story.

From the Union, Port Jervis, N. Y.

But a short time ago, in a distant part of the country, we heard of a cure by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which seemed almost marvelous, and more recently another substantial evidence of their value reached our ears. Being of an inquiring turn of mind, and wishing to know just how much there was in the story, a reporter was sent to interview the person said to be thus benefited. If the narrative as it had reached our ears was true, it was only simple justice to let it be known—if it proved untrue, it would be well to know it.

The person alluded to above as having been thus greatly benefited by the use of Pink Pills is Mrs. Jane Hotalen, of Hainesville, N. J., a pleasant hamlet in Sussex County, about fifteen miles from this office. The reporter had no difficulty in finding Mrs. Hotalen. It was nearly noon when we reached her pleasant home, a double house, one part of which is occupied by her son. She is a pleasant-faced old lady, looking to be about sixty-five, but is in reality seventy-two years of age. After a few preliminary remarks in explanation of the call, she was asked if she had any objection to giving us the details of the case and how she came to try this now famous remedy.

"Not at all," said she. "If my experience can be of any good to others, I am sure they are welcome to it—it can do me no harm."

"When were you taken sick and what was the nature of the malady?" was asked.

"It was about two years ago. The trouble was rheumatic in character—sciatica, they called it—and it was very painful indeed. The difficulty began in my hip and extended the whole length of the limb, crippling me completely. I suffered intensely from it, and the ordinary treatment gave me not the slightest alleviation. I was under treatment about a month as stated, but grew worse instead of better, and was fast becoming discouraged."

"What brought Pink Pills to your notice?"

"My son called my attention to an article in a paper, in which it was stated that a Mr. Struble, of Branchville, a village in this county, had been greatly benefited by their use, and suggested that it would be a good plan to try them. But I was skeptical in regard to their value—in fact, I had no confidence in their efficacy and rather laughed at the suggestion. But the trouble increased and I was badly crippled. A few days later my son was about to visit a neighboring town and suggested again that it might be well to try this much-talked-of remedy, and I then consented. He bought me a box of them and I began taking them at once. At the end of a week I noted a marked improvement, and by the time I had taken the first box I was able to walk without a cane. I continued their use, taking several boxes, and am, as you see, in a very comfortable state of health."

"Have you had any return of the trouble?"

"Not as yet, though at my time of life, seventy-two, it would not be surprising if I should have. If it comes, I should at once begin the use of the pills. I suppose I inherit a tendency to troubles of this kind—my mother died from them."

"Did you ever note any ill effects from the use of Pink Pills?"

"None whatever. They never disturbed my stomach in any way or caused me any annoyance. Neither did I find it necessary to increase the dose, as the directions say may be desirable. I am able, as you see, to attend to my own work."

The reporter thanked Mrs. Hotalen for her courtesy and bade her good day. It is not often that one can witness such a complete recovery from such a pertinacious trouble at such an advanced age, and such instances cannot fail to produce a profound impression. Readers of the Union may rely on the absolute accuracy of all the statements here given—nothing has been exaggerated, nothing withheld.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

A Traveling Crematory.

A traveling military crematory has been invented to dispose of the bodies of soldiers killed in battle. It looks, says the Buffalo Express, very much like an army oven on a large scale, and is drawn by eight horses. The inventor (a Polish engineer) claims that this arrangement would obviate any epidemic arising from the burial of many bodies in one place during a campaign. Germany—ever in the van of military innovation—proposes to test the invention.

The Law Was Vindicated.

A friend of Representative Culberson, of Texas, related the following incident: "When Mr. Culberson was prosecuting attorney," he said, "there was a criminal statute universally disregarded. The indictment of a well-known man for violation of this law was secured through the efforts of Mr. Culberson, who prosecuted the case with more vigor than almost any he had ever conducted, succeeding in securing a conviction and sentence to the penitentiary. Then he left town and no one knew where he had gone until he and the prisoner, who had been taken to the penitentiary, returned together. Mr. Culberson had gone to the governor, obtained a pardon and met the convict at the penitentiary with it. The law had been vindicated and there were no more violations of that statute in Jefferson."

Cycles and Railroads.

A London correspondent of the Paris Messenger, in speaking of the usual and general exodus from that city during the Whitsuntide holidays, says that the excursions from the metropolis were almost wholly made on wheels. On Whit Monday it was impossible to hire or even buy a bike in London. The railways begin to feel the effect of this form of transportation, which exceeds the most extreme anticipations. At the same time the rush for bicycles was a sort of relief for railway, omnibus and other vehicle passengers, which the rapid transit companies, however, did less enjoy than their fugitive customers.

Valuable Franchise Secured.

The franchise of easy digestion—one of the most valuable in the gift of medical science—can be secured by any person wise enough to use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, either to suppress growing dyspepsia, or to uproot it at maturity. Bilious, rheumatic and fever and ague sufferers, persons troubled with nervousness, and the constipated, should also secure the health franchise by the same means.

"You nebber yet," said Uncle Eben, "could fin' er man so stingy dat he isn't willin' ter share his loafin' time wif somebody dat's really busy."—Washington Star.

"Every one to her taste—as the old woman said when she kissed the cow." If you'd rather do your washing and cleaning in a slow, laborious way, spending your time and strength in useless, tiresome, ruinous rubbing, it's nobody's business but yours. You are the one that will suffer by it.

But if you want the easiest, quickest, most economical way of washing and cleaning—then you'll have to use Pearline. There's nothing else, among things absolutely safe to wash with, that can be compared to it. 515

STATE NEWS.

Paris wants brick streets.

Mt. Sterling claims a population of 6,000.

Moses Adams, aged 105 years, died in Letcher county.

Lee Carter, of Smith's Grove, was killed by a runaway team.

J. W. Showalter, of Georgetown, has won another $1,000 chess contest.

A man was blown from his house by a storm in Leslie county and killed.

A Bath county man plowed up an Andrew Jackson button the other day.

A Harrison county man found an alligator in his back yard one morning.

Jack Price, a wealthy tobacco grower of Montgomery county dropped dead.

Local option carried in Clark county by 628 majority. A large vote and a quiet election.

Col. Nelson, of Newport, fell when boarding a street car, and was badly but not dangerously hurt.

Whitecaps are causing some excitement in Carter county. Several parties have been told to "git."

A Cleveland, Ohio, lumber company has purchased $15,000 worth of standing timber in Pike county.

Every distillery in the Sixth district has shut down, throwing a great many people out of employment.

William Troy Smith, 18, of Middlesboro, read yellowback novels and has runaway from home to go west to kill Indians.

James Morton, of Nicholas county, unearthed a tomahawk, with pipe on pole and a hollow handle. It was in good state of preservation.

An eight year old colored boy was arrested in Georgetown, charged with murdering his companion and throwing his body in a pond.

N. Haner, a farmer near Franklin, hung himself in his barn. He was 87 years old. Nature would have done the job for him shortly.

The Campbell county grand jury indicted William R. Trusty for perjury and George Seward for subornation of perjury in the Scott Jackson trial.

Ben Taul, a Breckinridge county stock trader, who disappeared some time ago, has been found dead near Pike's Peak, Col. It is supposed that he was murdered.

Near Kingston, Madison county, Ky., Monday, Charles Golden shot his brother Richard, and then cut his own throat. Both men are dangerously wounded.

Major King, living east of Lexington, became enraged at a mule he was driving to a plow, and it is said, pulled the animal's tongue out by the roots. The mule died within a half hour.

The residence of Jordon Taylor, of Mercer county, was destroyed by fire, which had gained such headway when discovered that the family barly escaped, one child being consumed by the flames.

A great amount of litigation is thought to be unavoidable over the construction put by the State Board of Valuation upon the law as to estimating the value of corporate franchises for taxation.

Our good friend Dr. R. S. Hart sent us a cabbage yesterday that measured 45 inches in circumference. If any of our contemporaries can beat this we would like to hear from them.—Woodford Sun.

John T. Ryman, a hermit, who died recently near English, Ind., turns out to have been a fugitive from Kentucky justice, who was convicted in Meade county in 1868 of murder and escaped on his way to the penitentiary.

There is not a single Democrat left in the Statehouse, except in the Court of Appeals Clerk's office and in the State Library. The last to go were Virgil Hewitt, J. C. McLean and Henry B. Ware, of the Auditor's office, and J. P. Gillum, of the Insurance Bureau.

Prof. W. P. McCorkle has sent to this office a radish that eclipses anything in that line seen this season. It was raised in his garden, is eighteen inches long and eighteen inches in circumference and weighs five pounds. Who can beat it?—Eminence Constitutionalist.

Mr. T. C. Woods, who lived near the ling of Scott and Woodford counties, died on Friday last, aged 75 years. He was quite wealthy, owning several thousand acres of land in Scott, Woodford and Franklin. He was formerly President of the defunct Midway Deposit Bank.

E. E. Jones bought a head of cabbage for five cents, Wednesday, which, on being cut open, revealed a one dollar bill snugly tucked away in the heart of the cabbage. The supposition is that some one dropped the bill on the plant, which at once proceeded to grow up and around the bill.—Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat.

At Hopkinsville, Judge James Breathitt decided that the separate coach law was unconstitutional and peremptory instructions were given for the plaintiff in the suit of R. N. Lander, colored, and his wife against the receivers of the Ohio Valley Railroad Company. An agreed verdict for $125 followed. The case will go to the Court of Appeals.

James Robinson, the pearl diver, found a superb pearl last week in Stoner creek, near Paris. It is as large as a rifle ball, weighs twenty grains, is perfectly round and has a beautiful golden tinge color. Robinson says it is the finest he ever found during thirty-two years experience in pearl diving. He values it at $800, and wants to find a purchaser.

The Governor granted the requisition of Gov. Altgeld, of Illinois, for the arrest of L. V. Gillespie, who is already in jail at Louisville, and who is wanted in Illinois for stealing a bicycle. He also issued a requisition on the Governor of Ohio for Wm. Evans, who is supposed to be under arrest over there, and who is wanted in Lincoln county, this State, for house-breaking.

Thomas C. Barnes, brother of Col. Will S. Barnes, has filed a suit against the Security Trust and Safety Vault Company, assignee of Col. James E. Pepper, for $15,000 salary and $20,000 damages. Barnes had a contract with Pepper, so it is alleged, for five years at a salary of $7,000 per annum and in addition Pepper agreed to make for him each year free of cost 250 barrels of whisky.

The Fayette County Fiscal Court fixed the tax levy for the ensuing year at 32½ cents on each $100 of taxable property in the county, also 10 cents on each $100 of taxable property outside the city limits, to be levied for the Kentucky Union Railroad bonds, based upon an assessed valuation of $27,000,000. This is a reduction from last year of 11 cents. The state tax has been fixed at 42½ cents, making a total of 75 cents.

Clark Baker, charged with murdering John Lowry, was acquitted by the Campbell circuit court. Baker was tried three times for the same offense. In the first trial the jury disagreed. In the second trial a verdict of six months in jail and a $1000 fine secured. Upon a technicality he was given a new trial, and a verdict of not guilty was brought in by the jury. The killing dates back about two years. Lowry was found dead at Grant's Lick, evidently having been struck with some blunt instrument.

There never were so many cases of whooping cough in the State as at present. In many small towns there are as many as fifty cases, and the little folks are as tired when night comes as if they had been mauling rails all day. Not only does this old-time disease attack the little children, but grown people as well, and in one county we hear there are three persons past fifty years who "whoop" as vociferously as the youngsters. We learn there are no cases in Paris thus far, but parents should keep a watchful eye on their little ones, and be ready to treat premonitory symptoms.

We have the new man as well as the new woman, but the latest fad known in Kentucky's criminal history was to witness a man convicted of murder for the fourth time, and under sentence of life imprisonment, taken from the jail of Franklin county, and then permitted to have a hearing in person before Gov. Bradley, to whom he is applying for a pardon. There his attorneys met him, and he made his last plea for a pardon, but Jessie Honaker was not there. Forty-eight men have heard his case, and in each trial the verdict was the same. Five years have passed, and thousands of dollars have been expended, but in all that time Dr. Massie has never gone beyond the jail.—Western Argus.

None of the local lawyers noticed yesterday that before final adjournment the Court of Appeals made an order that no arguments would be heard next term. This, while very unusual, doesn't mean that the Court has decided that it is useless to sit and listen at long speeches that have no effect on the decisions. It rather means that the Court is so far behind with the docket that it loses all benefit of the argument in the time that must elapse between its hearing and the time at which the case can be taken up for final disposition. Briefs filed with the papers in advanced cases can be taken up and read when the other papers and the case are taken up to be immediately disposed of. It is also estimated that as many cases as the Court can dispose of at the fall term have already been argued and submitted.—Capital.

A very unusual case has been occupying the attention of State officials recently. Up in Knox county a Mr. S. C. Jones was applicant for teacher in one of the school districts. Trustees of this district went to County Superintendent Powers and told him that Jones had tried to "bribe" them into employing him as their teacher. One of the trustees says that Jones actually offered him a money consideration to vote for him, and another says that he offered to donate to the school district the price of his board in another district if they would employ him in this his home district, where he needn't pay board. When the trustees had reported these overtures to the county superintendent, the latter revoked Jones' certificate. The matter was appealed to State Superintendent Davidson, who upholds and ratifies the action of the county superintendent. Now Jones and his attorney, who is Representative Black, have appealed the case still higher, and have taken it before the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners, who are appalled at the new exofficio functions they enjoy.—Capital.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

OWEN COUNTY.
[Herald].

Twenty nine indictments were returned by the grand jury, 14 of which were against parties in this place for selling whisky.

Aunt Nancy Suter, aged 80 years died last Friday at the home of her son, John Wes Suter, near town. She was born and raised in this County.

The Governor had Dr. Massie brought before him Saturday when hearing the appeal for a pardon. If the Governor intended to finally try the case, he might have come to Owenton before the last trial, heard the evidence and saved the State the expense of a trial.

There is a report that a petition from this county has been presented to the Governor asking the pardon of Dr. Massie. So far as we have been able to learn there has been no petition in circulation in this county asking a pardon. Before the Governor grants a pardon he had better investigate the petition.

Farmers are complaining of the chintz bug. Many fields of oats are invaded by these little pests and now the corn is being attacked. They have attacked the grain in all portions of the county, and if they continue to multiply as they have been known too in the past they may prove a serious factor in the way of raising a crop this year. Some farmers use soap suds on their corn in the portion of the field attacked by the bug with good results.

M. M. Robinson left last night for Chicago, where he will act as assistant sergeant-at arms at the Democratic convention.

Frank Allen had his wheat threshed this week, getting 415 bushels off of 35 acres ground. He sold it at 50 cents per bushel.

The first of our lady bicyclists to don the bloomers were two very pretty girls, Misses Anna Abbett and Louise Chambers. They rode down Main street one afternoon this week and were quite an attraction.

Prof. Wm. Gaines, of Burlington Boone County, was here Monday trying to secure the principalship of the public school here. He met the trustees of the school and was very cordially received by them, but nothing definitely done.

Frank Shelley, a teamster at McDanell & Sons, while returning from Sparta last Tuesday, where he had taken a load of lumber, was overcome by the heat while on his wagon. When be first felt the oppression he was six miles from town but managed to hold up until he got here and in getting off his wagon fell, and remained in an unconscious state until late in the day.

Ev. Henry, a sort of a worthless fellow, who has been roaming from place to place for some time, and was wanted under a writ for a misdemeanor before Judge Brown, was caught by Sheriff Winn, Wednesday, in the Oakland neighborhood. The Sheriff having business at Glencoe, and not desiring to take Henry with him placed him in a well which was being dug near by where he confined him until his return. There was a ladder in the well about 80 feet long which Henry was made to descend, the Sheriff then withdrawing the ladder. We are not informed how long he remained in the well, but late that evening he was brought to town and put in jail.

The Congressional campaign will commence shaping up in this district now, and the indications are the Republicans will have the hottest party contest for the nomination.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1896. NO. 38.

THE indications point to a lively contest for the Republican nomination for Congress in this district. Hons. T. B. Mathews and R. P. Ernst, the candidates, are gentlemen who stand high in the party, and whom the party delights to honor, but one of them will have to give away to the other. Mr. Mathews has especial claims on the nomination, as he made the strongest race two years ago that was ever made by a Republican in this district. Mr. Mathews' strength is not confined to the country portion of the district, but it will take a very strong man to break even with him in the two cities, and Mr. Ernst will come nearer running him an even race in Covington and Newpart than anyother aspirant.

THE indications are that the Western Republicans are very much in earnest in their advocacy of the free coinage of silver, and will not submit, quietly, to having the single gold standard crammed down their throats. This fact was demonstrated again the other day when about thirty delegates walked out of the South Dakota State convention because of the platform indorsing the single gold standard.

OF course the platform adopted by the Chicago convention does not meet the approbation of the single gold standard Democrats, but no one ever expected it would. It is now evident that a large majority of the Democratic gold bugs do not intend to support the ticket put up at Chicago, and will contribute to its defeat to at least the extent of their votes.

A LARGE number of heretofore Democratic papers, throughout the country, refuses to support the nominees of the Chicago convention. Suppose they do. Did not the silver sentiment reach its present proportions notwithstanding their opposition? So far the fight these bolting papers have been making against silver has added recruits to its ranks.

IT was very unbecoming, not to say undemocratic, in the silver majority in the Chicago convention to go ahead, regardless of the wishes of the minority, and organize the convention and adopt a platform to their own notion. Of course if the gold men had been in the majority they would not have been so rude. Nit!

So far Major McKinley has had nothing to say in arranging for his campaign. Hanna is the only one known in the matter, and some say he will be boss even after McKinley gets into the White House, should he get there.

THAT pitchfork statesman from South Carolina is a dangerous leader, but it has been only a few years since that those about here who are now saying the hardest things about him, were infatuated with just that style of leaders.

THE 185 gold delegates, who refused to participate in the proceedings of the Democratic national convention after the platform was adopted, did not walk out, but their action was, nevertheless, a bolt.

IF the gold men will give the Chicago ticket the support they were demanding that the silvermen should give it if the nominees were gold men, there will be no question about defeating Hanna's team.

EACH of the great political parties now has its national ticket in the field, and the campaign will open in earnest in a few weeks, and will be fast and furious until the conclusion.

SENATOR HILL wanted the Chicago convention to make the money plank its entire platform, but the convention was not running after the Senator for advice.

SENATOR TILLMAN, of South Carolina, is a firery and untamed steed and a dangerous leader. He attempts to arouse sectional anemosities on all occasions.

THE Kentucky delegation was very much in it at Chicago, last week. Ollie James, the chairman, attracted a great deal of attention.

MR. BRYAN, Democratic candidate for President, made the first speech of the campaign, at Salem, Illinois, Monday night.

So far as wrangling was concerned the St. Louis and Chicago conventions were six of one and half a dozen of the other.

NOTHING was said at Chicago last week about marching through a slaughter house into an open grave.

THE K. P. A. MEET.

The Association Royally Entertained from the Blue Grass to the Ocean.

An Outing Long to be Remembered.

One Continuous Round of Pleasure—Banquets, Receptions, Orations, Etc.

Special to the Recorder.

The annual meeting of the Kentucky Press Association at Georgetown on the 25th ult., was one long to be remembered by the members, and although the attendance was not as large as last year, yet the pleasure was equally as great as at any previous meeting.

Seventy-seven papers were represented, and about 150 members, the ladies being in the majority.

Georgetown was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and her citizens left nothing undone to make the occasion an enjoyable one. The electric street car company kindly placed the use of their cars at the disposal of the members of the Association, during their stay in the town. That beautiful little city has two first-class metropolitan hotels, which afforded ample accommodation for the members.

Wednesday evening a reception was held at Rucker College, where refreshments were served, and the members were entertained and introduced to the leading citizens of the city, after which the evening was elivened by some choice vocal and instrumental selections.

Thursday evening a business session was held, at which John A. Bell, president of the association and editor of the Georgetown Times, delivered an address of welcome. The eloquence, wit and warmth of feeling in which he delivered his speech was greeted by a storm of applause. Mr. Bell introduced Hon. W. C. Owens, who formally welcomed the Press on behalf of the citizens, in his usually polished and elequent manner. The address of welcome was ably responded to by Arthur Y. Ford, of the Courier-Journal.

After the routine business was disposed of, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Ben D. Ringo, Bowling Green Times; First Vice-President, Loving W. Gaines, Elkton Progress; Second Vice-President, Henry E. Wolford, Danville Advocate, Sectary and Treasurer, Robt. E. Morningstar, Bowling Democrat; historian, Jas. W. Hopper, Courier Journal.

At the afternoon session several subjects were discussed, and the bylaws amended in several respects. Resolutions were adopted thanking the citizens of Georgetown for the many kindnesses and courtesies shown.

One of the pleasant features was the reception at Rucker Hall at 5 p. m. Thursday. Music was discoursed by the local Mandolin Club, and refreshments were served by a committee of ladies. Prof. and Mr. Elrod did everything in their power to make the visitors enjoy the occasion.

To editor Bell, his estimable wife, and accomplished son, Tyson, and beautiful daughter, Miss Lila, are due many of the pleasures of the visit to Georgetown. At the banquet Mrs. Bell was presented with a handsome cake as a slight token of the esteem and appreciation in which the association holds her.

Thursday night a banquet was given at the college gymnasium. About 300 covers were laid, and were served by beautiful young ladies representing the Baptist and Christian churches. After the last course was served, toasts were responded to by several of the visitors, and citizens of Georgetown. J. H. Westover, of Williamstown, was toast-master.

Friday morning the members left on the early train, about 75 of them going to Louisville, where two sleepers, in charge of conductor J. J. Logan, were attached to the train, the Pullman Campany kindly giving the association a special rate of $2 50 a person for the entire trip, of which all the members took advantage; and under the careful espionage of that prince of good fellows. J. J. Logan, conductor, and Mr. Johnston, representative of the L. & N., who made himself especially agreeable to the members during his stay with us between Louisville and Nashville. They were all taken care of as one large family.

The Louisville & Nashville people—among the best railroad people in the country—gave us an exhibition of how fast and with what safety they could run a train on the road, and the schedule time from Louisville to Nashville was cut two hours and forty minutes. The run of 74 miles from Elizabethtown to Bowling Green was made in 72 minutes with one stop.

At Nashville we were taken in charge by Mr. Leon Danley, the gentlemanly General Passenger Agent of the Nashville, Chattanooga Railway, who showed us every courtesy in his power, and who put us in Chattanooga in good time for the train to Brunswick. We left Chattanooga at 12:15, arriving at Atlanta for breakfast, reaching Brunswick that night with considerable Georgia sand in our craws.

Boarding the steamer, city of Brunswick, we were carried down the sound to Cumberland Island, which was reached about 11 p. m., where we were soon assigned to comfortable quarters at the hotel and cottages to enjoy a much needed rest after a long trip.

Cumberland Island is about 25 miles long and 2 miles wide, and figures in history as the burial place of "Light Horse Harry" Lee, father of Gen. Robt. E. Lee, and the former home of Gen. Nathaniel Green of revolutionary fame. It is the largest and most beautiful Island on the Georgia coast, and is covered with oak, pine and cedar groves. The hotel stands on the northern end of the Island. A line of cars extend the width of the Island for transferring passengers from the landing to the hotel, and from the hotel to the bathing beach.

Upon our arrival at the Island, the first thing on the programme was a plunge in the "briny," which the members enjoyed very much. As it was a novelty to many of the members many of them spent most of their time in the surf.

The association accepted the citizens' invitation to take a sail out the Atlantic for a distance of 25 miles. The sea was exceptionally smooth, and the trip was delightful, although some wish for a rough sea that they might enjoy(?) the experience of seasickness. Upon the return to Brunswick, and when the vessel reached the most shallow place in the sound, Col. Goodyear gave an exhibition of how he has succeeded in deepening the channel in the past few years, from 8 feet to its present depth, 23 feet, by the use of dynamite. Three charges of dynamite were fired of 40, 100 and 200 pounds respectively. Sand was thrown to the height of 30 feet, the concussion killing thousands of small fish and stunning many large ones, which were picked up by men in small boats. This exhibition was very entertaining to press gang, and Col. Goodyear felt fully repaid for his trouble by the many expression of praise received for his indomitable push and energy in this great improvement for the benefit of the commercial advantage for, not only Brunswick, but that whole section of the south.

Upon our return to Brunswick we were entertained most royally at the Hotel Oglethorpe, where an elegant menu was enjoyed after the appetizing ride upon the ocean.

C. H. Levy, of the Brunswick Call, made an eloquent address of welcome, which was responded to by Loving W. Gaines of the association in an impressive and expressive manner. Col. Goodyear responded to the toast "Brunswick," in his masterly vein, calling forth quite a round of applause. Green Keller, of the Carlisle Mercury, also responded to the toast, "Brunswick," in a happy style. Ed Laurbright, of the Brunswick Times-Advertiser, responded to the toast, "The Press," and his address was received with decided favor. John Westover, of the association, spoke upon "The Mission of the Press, and of the trip to Georgia," being followed by editor E. B. Drake, in a profusely complimentary manner to the State of Georgia.

After luncheon the members were driven over the city, and to all points of interest in that neighborhood, in carriages.

That evening we departed for home, and at 1 p. m., the next day, we arrived at Chattanooga, and visited Lookout mountain and viewed the beautiful scenery there. Reaching Louisville the party dissolved, the members hoping to meet again next year, and again enjoy one of the association's delightful reunions.

NOTES.

Secretary Gaines, in his usual selfsacrificing manner, made the press enjoy themselves as much as he possibly could. All have a warm feeling for Bro. Gaines.

Clarence H. Leavy, editor of Brunswick Call, made himself especially agreeable to the members of the association.

To Capt. Loom, of the Dauntless, is due a vote of thanks for many favors shown while enroute from the Island to Brunswick. He is a thoroughgoing seaman, and made the entire party enjoy themselves.

Col. Parks, of Brunswick anticipated the boys every want, and they were loud in their praises of that large-hearted gentleman.

Ed Lambright, the gentlemanly editor of the Times—Advertiser made himself quite a favorite with the members by his pleasant manner.

Brunswick is a beautiful city of 12,000 inhabitants. It is quite a business city and has a great future before it. The Hotel Oglethorpe is a magnificent building, far superior to many hosteleries in our metropolitan town.

J. H. Westover, of the Williamstown, Courier, was so taken with the surf that he spent most of his time therein, and old sol succeeded in decorating his face and arms a bright vermillion hue.

President John Bell did everything in his power to make the sojourn at Georgetown enjoyable, and if there was anything lacking it was not his fault. The boys were very sorry that he could not accompany them to the south.

Mr. Johnson, the representative of the L. & N., met the boys at Louisville, and made himself very agreeable in every way possible. However the L. & N. always has this class of gentlemen at the head of its departments, and strive to do everything in their power for the K. P. A. and the patrons of the road.

Leon Danly, the gentlemanly representative of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway, accompanied the press from Nashville to Chattan[illegible] thing in his power to make them enjoy themselves. This is another road that always shows the K. P. A. all the favors in its power.

In conductor J. J. Logan the Pullman Palace Car Co., has a gentleman who advances the interest of that company as much as anyone in its employ. Kind, courteous and obliging, he at once wins the good will and admiration of those whom he has in his charge. The K. P. A. to a member, recognizing John Logan's many good qualities, and executive ability will request of the P. P. C. C. that he be sent with them at their next meeting. He was untiring in his efforts to make them enjoy themselves and remained with the boys the entire time.

The decoration of the beautiful dining hall on Lookout mountain, where the association dined, cost $10,000. Everything about this hotel is first-class, and the management treated the boys in a kindly manner.

J. R. WALLACE.

IT is reported from New York that Senator Hill will support the nominees of the Chicago convention but will repudiate about all the platform. Much sooner than expected has the Senator begun to realize the folly of his intended course—bolting.

IT is said that the New York Sun will not support the nominee of the Chicago convention, but will give its time and talent toward electing McKinley. The Sun has not supported a Democratic nominee for the Presidency in many years, and its support of McKinley is what was expected of it.

ON the inside pages will be found the report of the proceedings of the Chicago Democratic Convention. The platform is given in full as adopted. By reading it you will find it is not the political monstrosity its opponents pronounce it. It is unequivocal in its declarations in favor of those measures which a majority of Democrats believe will bring the country financial relief.

ONE of the leading Republicans in this county, was discussing the candidates for the Republican Congressional nomination in this district, the other day, and said, "by all means Tom Mathews ought to be given the nomination. He made the fight two years ago when no one thought there was any earthly chance for his election, and he came very near succeeding. He has more pluck and is the best politician in the district. As for ability he is the equal of any Republican in the sixth district, and no man is more popular with the rank and file of the party." The man who wins the nomination from Tom Mathews will find that he has his hands in the hardest job he ever undertook.

IT was a red hot convention.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

The Fifth Annual Convention Opens in Washington City.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—The Fifteenth annual convention of the United Societies Christian Endeavorers opened its business sessions Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock. This formal opening, which took place simultaneously in the three big tents on the White lot, was preceded Wednesday night by 23 separate meetings in the city churches, where the several delegations have established their headquarters. Over these meetings the pastors of the several churches presided. Devotional exercises, singing, two formal addresses and a quiet hour of prayer made up the programme for each meeting.

In all 44 addresses were made and the list of speakers assigned therefor containing names of many leading preachers in the American pulpit, attracted good sized audiences. The topic, "Deepening the Spiritual Life," was the same for each meeting and the addresses all bore on that subject.

Among those who spoke are the following: Revs. F. W. Ramsay, Kentucky; J. W. Fifield, Chicago; Smith Baker, Boston; W. H. Strong, Detroit; E. Mason, Rochester; P. P. Watson, Beaufort, S. C.; Revs. L. A. Banks, Brooklyn; E. R. Young, Toronto; S. A. Barbour, Rochester; C. L. Work, Cincinnati; W. F. Wilson, Toronto; C. S. Mason, Los Angeles; Mr. Amos R. Wells, Boston; Rev. Wm. Rider, San Francisco; Bishop W. B. Derrick, New York city; Revs. P. T. Sanford, Boston; J. B. Morgan, England; J. C. French, Newark; Leander Keyser, Dayton; L. R. Dyott, Newark, and F. Hamilton, Newtonville, Mass.

Thursday morning the customary six o'clock prayer meetings in 33 churches on the topic, "Prayer for the Convention" inaugurated the day. At 8:30 o'clock is the customary Bible study in the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, conducted by Dr. G. S. Burroughs, of Indiana. Then came the formal openings at which were heard the welcome speeches to the delegates and the annual addresses of President Clark and Secretary Baer.

WIND STORM.

Shipping in Pensacola Bay Damaged—Nearly Every Business House in Pensacola Unroofed.

MOBILE, Ala., July 9.—A severe wind storm from the gulf passed between Pensacola and Mobile. The wind here reached a velocity of only 35 miles an hour and no damage of moment was done, but in Pensacola its speed was 75 miles an hour and all wires are down. The shipping in Pensacola bay [illegible] damaged, nearly every vessel was dismantled and adrift for a time, but no serious wrecks occurred. Nearly every business house in Pensacola was unroofed and the contents damaged. The damage in the city is about $200,000 but no lives were lost.

A NEGRO,

Who Attempted to Rob a Sub-Post Office, Chicago, Fatally Wounded.

CHICAGO, July 9.—At ten o'clock Wednesday night a Negro, who attempted to impersonate "The Short Man" and to hold up a sub-post office station in South Englewood was shot and fatally wounded.

The Negro went into the place of Wm. E. Lemerise, at 79th and Roby streets, and ordered Amy and Estelle, two girls in the place, to surrender the cash. Mr. Lemerise happened to be in the rear, and seeing the proceedings, walked around to the front of the house and discharged the contents of a revolver into the head of the Negro. The Negro will die.

The Three Friends Lands an Expedition.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 9.—A special to the Times Union from Key West says: There is reliable information that the Three Friends landed an expedition Monday night about 12 o'clock near Camagney, and about two o'clock the same night sighted the warship Alfonso XII. All the men and ammunition having been landed by this time, the Three Friends started on her way back. In their haste they left their three surf boats, which were found by the Spaniards and were taken to Havana.

Kentucky School Capita.

FRANKFORT, Ky., July 9.—Superintendent of Public Instruction Davidson has received reports of the school census in all but two counties and by estimating these finds that the total number of school children of school age in the state is about 740,000. Common school per capita for the ensuing year will, therefore, be a fraction over $2.25. This will be a falling off of sixty cents, as compared with last year, and the lowest for years.

Medical Colleges Tabooed.

COLUMBUS, O., July 9.—The state medical board, at its meeting Tuesday night, decided that it will not recognize the diplomas of the three Cincinnati medical colleges, which have been under investigation. The colleges in question are the American Eclectic, the Hygeia Medical and the American Health college, all of Cincinnati.

A Double Murder.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 9.—A horrible double murder was committed here. The bodies of Mrs. H. R. Richardson, aged 60, and daughter Ethel were found. The women had been stabbed and beaten with a club. Intense excitement prevails. There is no clew to the murderer.

The Spaniards Reported Defeated.

KEY WEST, Fla., July 9.—Passengers by the Mascotte Wednesday night report that a battle was fought near Guanabacoa on Sunday and the opinion prevails in Havana that the Spaniards were defeated. Trains are arriving in the city bringing in wounded soldiers.

Des Moines Semi-Centennial.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 9.—The city of Des Moines and the county of Polk celebrated Wednesday their semi-centennial anniversary. This is preparatory to the semi-centennial state exercises to be held later in the year at Burlington.

THOUSANDS

Visit the Christian Endeavor Meetings in the National Capital.

Services Held in Two Large Tents, Each Holding 10,000 People—Also in Twenty-Two Churches in the City—The Topic Discussed Was "Christian Citizenship."

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Both of the great Christian Endeavor tents, each holding 10,000 people, were crowded Thursday night when the convention met at 7:30 o'clock, and as many more people were turned back to the city unable to gain admittance. The big tent Williston, which had collapsed after the storm of Wednesday night, was not yet in shape and the programme arranged for that tent was transferred to the Metropolitan M. E. church. There were besides meetings in Central hall, Calvary Baptist church, First Congregational church, Foundry M. E. church, First Presbyterian church and New York avenue Presbyterian church. As on the night before when meetings were held in 22 churches, the auditoriums were well filled, and in some cases arrangements had to be made hastily for overflow meetings. The topic at all the meetings Thursday night was "Christian Citizenship," and many of the speakers made pointed allusions to the complex political situation before the country.

THE GRAND CUP.

Last Heats at Henley—Leander Gets the Much-Coveted Challenge Trophy.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, June 10.—The course Thursday was more crowded than upon any previous occasion during this year's regatta. The weather as hot and clear, with a strong breeze avoring the Berks shore even more than Wednesday. By the invitation of Col. Willan, the representative of the stewards of the Royal Henley regatta, Capt. Treadway, of the Yale crew, occupied a place in the umpire's launch in order to see the Leander's race. Bailey and Clark and several other members of the New Haven crew were in a skiff near the start. The race was started at 12:30 p. m. for the final heat of the Grand Challenge cup. The Thames Rowing club had the Berks, or most unfavorable side of the river, and there was no question as to what the result would be. The Leanders were clear at the quarter and won as they liked by two and one-fourth lengths in [illegible]

RUIN IN ITS WAKE.

A Cyclone Visits Portions of Dinwiddie and Prince George Counties, Virginia.

PETERSBURG, Va., July 10.—A wind storm which assumed the proportions of a cyclone visited portions of Dinwiddie and Prince George counties, Thursday afternoon, leaving destruction and ruin in its wake. Dwellings were blown down and in some instances occupants were more or less injured. It is said that in Prince George county, four men, two white and two colored, were killed. The storm was accompanied by rain, which, together with the wind, played havoc with the crops.

Two Killed and One Injured.

WAMELSDORF, W. Va., July 10.—James Jackson and wife were killed and Mrs. Addison Kittle fatally and her husband badly injured in a runaway at Middleford bridge, on the Parkersburg and Stanton pike. They were returning from here in separate carriages. Both teams ran off and collided. The nearest physician was 18 miles away and the injured persons suffered for hours without assistance.

Whitney Said "Don't Vote."

CHICAGO, July 10.—William C. Whitney visited the gold state delegations Thursday night and urged them to refrain from voting for candidates. At the Massachusetts delegation he said: "I don't see how the gold states, instructed as they are by their people, can consistently vote for a nominee on a silver platform."

A SHORT SKETCH

Of William J. Bryan, the Nominee of the Democratic Party for President.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—There is nothing in romantic literature that surpasses the meteoric career of Wm. Jennings Bryan, who was Friday nominated at Chicago for the highest office within the gift of the American people. The constitutional age of president is 35 years. Bryan is 36, and if he is elected in November next, he will be the youngest president that the white house has ever known. He is essentially a self-made man and a man of the people. His principal education was gained in the public schools of Salem, Ills., where his parents reside. During the succeeding six years he received an academic training. The bent of his mind was toward the law and it was in the office of Lyman Trumbull, himself a conspicuous figure during the war, and the reconstruction period which followed, that he laid the foundations of his legal career.

It was in congress, however, that Mr. Bryan made the reputation which has swept him into his present prominency. In 1890, when only 30 years of age, he was elected a member of the house from the First district of Nebraska, where he located immediately after his admission to the bar. During the consideration of the single tariff bills, which were brought before the house during the first session of that congress, Mr. Bryan electrified his colleagues by the force and vigor of his utterances, his intimate knowledge of economic matters, the gracefulness of his oratory and his ability to sustain himself with credit against the ablest debator upon the republican side of the chamber. His time, on that occasion, was repeatedly extended and he spoke in all houses. He awoke the next morning to find himself famous. Nor was it an euphemoral famous. He became from that day a conspicuous figure in the house which included such giants of debate as Breckenridge, of Kentucky; Bourke Cochran and John R. Fellows, of New York; Dingley and Reed, of Maine; Springer, of Illinois; Lodge, of Massachusetts, and Wm. F. Wilson, of West Virginia, who now holds the office of postmaster general.

While Mr. Bryan was not a free trader he favored the lowest tariff consistent with the necessities of the government and he was placed by Speaker Crisp upon the ways and means committee, an unusual honor for a new man. When the Fifty-third congress met Mr. Bryan had also achieved a reputation as a staunch supporter of free silver and when President Cleveland [illegible] that congress in extraordinary session in the autumn of 1893, Mr. Bryan was Mr. Bland's efficient lieutenant, in leading the opposition to the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. He continued in that congress as a member of the ways and means committee. He was one of the sub-committee which had in charge the international revenue, a schedule that was subsequently known as the Wilson tariff bill, and he shares with Mr. McMillan, of Tenn., in being the first to suggest the incorporation in that measure of an income tax. Mr. Bryan added to his career as a brilliant and ready debator during the discussion of that measure in the house and his influence also exerted in favor of the income tax which he regarded as one of the most essential features. With this congress Mr. Bryan's congressional career ended and he returned to Omaha to accept the editor'ship of the World-Herald of that city, although his home for many years has been at Lincoln, the state capital. Mr. Bryan is about medium in height. His face is cleanly shaven and in appearance he resembles the great Pennsylvania commoner Samuel J. Randall, who at Mr. Bryan's age, might readily have passed for the latter's twin brother. He is a strict churchman, and on several occasions during his residence in this city addressed the Young Men's Christian Association and other bodies.

ACTIVE WORK

In the Campaign Will be Straightway Commenced by the Republicans.

CANTON, O., July 11.—Mark Hanna, chairman of the republican national committee, had a long conference with Maj. McKinley Friday afternoon. The finishing touches were given to the list of members of the executive and advisory committees and the personnel of the two organizations will very soon be given to the public. The national committee will meet at Cleveland on Wednesday next and the active work of the campaign will be straightway commenced.

Mr. Hanna was outspoken in his denunciation of the Chicago platform and its dangerous and populistic utterances, although he expressed regret that so many delegates representing one of the great parties of the United States should have been willing to adopt it.

THE LATEST MOVE.

A Gold Ticket Will Be Placed in the Field by Senator Hill and Others.

COLISEUM, CHICAGO, July 11.—Following upon the declination of the New Yorkers and other goldites to vote, there came out extra editions of the Chicago papers stating that plans had been made for a caucus immediately after adjournment to put an independent gold ticket in the field.

The Wisconsin goldites are very mad, and state that they will organize an independent convention.

Populists Will Indorse Bryan.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Francis G. Newlands, the independent silver congressman from Nevada, says: "The nomination of Bryan will undoubtedly be indorsed by the populists, the silver republicans and independent silver organizations."

Boies Congratulates Bryan.

WATERLOO, July 11.—Friday afternoon Mr. Boies wired the following to Mr. Bryan: "W. J. BRYAN, Convention Hall, Chicago:—Accept Iowa's most hearty congratulations. She will be with you in November. — HORACE BOIES."

THE LILY'S LESSON.

Influence of Beautiful Objects Upon the Characters of Young Pupils.

At a teachers' convention in Detroit lately a lady, speaking about the influence of beautiful objects upon the character and conduct of young pupils, told a pretty story received by her from an eye witness, and thus reported by the News-Tribune. The occurrence took place in New York.

"Into a school made up chiefly of children from the slums the teacher one day carried a beautiful calla lily. Of course the children gathered about the pure, waxy blossom in great delight.

"One of them was a little girl, a waif of the streets, who had no care bestowed upon her, as was evinced by the dirty, ragged condition she was always in. Not only was her clothing dreadfully soiled, but her face and hands seemed totally unacquainted with soap and water.

"As this little one drew near the lovely flower, she suddenly turned and ran away down the stairs and out of the building. In a few minutes she returned with her hands washed perfectly clean, and pushed her way up to the flower, where she stood and admired it with intense satisfaction.

"It would seem," continued Miss Coffin, "that when the child saw the lily in its white purity, she suddenly realized that she was not fit to come into its atmosphere, and the little thing fled away to make herself suitable for such companionship. Did not this have an elevating, refining effect on the child? Let us gather all the beauty we can into the schoolroom."

THE HORSE OF THE CENTURY.

Wonderful Career of the Great Trotter Dexter.

Mr. Jonas Hawkins, of Orange county, obtained from a strolling gypsy band a brown mare, 15.2 hands, with four white feet. He used her, says Scribner's Magazine, for a family nag, and by Seeley's American Star got a black filly, foaled in 1848, which was named Clara. The filly became the property of his son, Jonathan Hawkins, and she grew into a mare of 14.3 hands. She had a star, snip and three white feet, and was driven pretty hard on the country roads by her young master. In 1857, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, she had the paragon, Dexter.

The brown gelding, with blaze and four white feet, was purchased by Mr. George B. Alley, for $400, and he subsequently became the property of Mr. A. F. Fawcett. Dexter, under the tutorship [illegible] made his public appearance at Fashion Course, May 4, 1864. He met and defeated, during his short but brilliant turf career, such horses as Gen. Butler, George M. Patchen, Jr., Lady Thorne and Goldsmith Maid, and he probably was in the enjoyment of more world-wide fame than any horse foaled on American soil. He brought Budd Doble into public notice, and the sight of the white-faced gelding coming with tremendous force down the home-stretch inspired the loftiest dreams. The people swung their hats and shouted: "Hurrah for Dexter! Long live the horse of the century!"

"OLD STATE OF PIKE."

The Home of the Stark Brothers' Nurseries—One of the Biggest Institutions in the World—Its Trade Extends to Nearly Every Civilized Nation on Earth.

St. Louis Republic, January 7, 1896.

One of the largest institutions in this State is the Stark Bro's Nurseries and Orchards company at Louisiana, Mo., and Rockport, Ill. The trade of the firm extends not only throughout the United States, Canada, Germany, France, Italy, Hungary and other foreign countries, but it has a number of customers both in New Zealand and Australia.

Eighty years ago there came from Kentucky to Pike county the late Judge Stark, then a young man fresh from Old Hickory's New Orleans campaign. He started the nursery and planted the first grafted orchard in the state, having brought the scions on horseback from Kentucky.

The business has descended from father to son, and is now conducted by the third generation, assisted by the fourth. This firm has more than 1,000 traveling solicitors, and employs more people in its offices than would be necessary to run a large manufacturing concern. The extensive packing-houses of the company are adjacent to the city, connected with the railroad by special tracks. From these packing-houses hundreds of carloads of trees are shipped annually. The nursery grounds embrace a number of farms convenient to the city, and even extend to Rockport, Ills., where there is a plant of several million trees.

The peculiarity of the concern is the establishment of large orchards. These orchards in 24 states aggregate nearly 50,000 acres, and more than 3,500,000 trees on the partnership plan. The firm is also interested in about as many more trees on the co-operative arrangement.

Louisiana firms have more traveling men upon the road for them than any other city of the world of its size. This, of course, is largely due to the large number of men employed by the Stark Bros. Nurseries, who furnish their men the most complete, up-to-date outfit ever issued. They are increasing their force of salesmen daily, and room for more.

How Old are You?

You need not answer the question, madam, for in your case age is not counted by years. It will always be true that "a woman is as old as she looks." Nothing sets the seal of age so deeply upon woman's beauty as gray hair. It is natural, therefore, that every woman is anxious to preserve her hair in all its original abundance and beauty; or, that being denied the crowning gift of beautiful hair, she longs to possess it. Nothing is easier than to attain to this gift or to preserve it, if already possessed. Ayer's Hair Vigor restores gray or faded hair to its original color. It does this by simply aiding nature, by supplying the nutrition necessary to health and growth. There is no better preparation for the hair than

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Nominated for President of the United States by the Democratic Convention.

Arthur Sewall, of Maine, Receives the Nomination for the Vice Presidency.

Nearly All the Gold Delegates Refused to Take Part in the Balloting for the Candidates.

During the Fifth Ballot for President Mr. Bland Withdrew in Favor of Mr. Bryan, and the Stampede Commenced for the "Boy Orator"—The Platform is for Free Coinage of Silver at the Ratio of 16 to 1.

CONVENTION HALL, Chicago, July 8.—At 1 p. m. the convention was called to order by Mr. Harrity, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the democratic national committee, who asked that all present should arise and stand while prayer was offered by Rev. Ernest Stires, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Chicago.

SENATOR JOHN W. DANIEL, Virginia. Temporary Chairman.

Then Chairman Harrity, in slow, deliberate tones, said:

"Gentlemen of the convention, by direction of the democratic national committee I desire to report the following as the temporary organization of the convention:

Temporary chairman, David B. Hill, of New York."

The rest of the organization was read as follows: For temporary secretary, Simon P. Sheerin, of Indiana; for sergeant-at-arms, John I. Martin, of Missouri.

"What is the pleasure of the convention Mr. Harrity asked, "on the report as made from the democratic national committee?"

On that, Mr. Clayton, delegate from Alabama, arose, advanced to the platform and said:

"Gentlemen of the democratic national convention, on behalf of 23 members of your national committee, as opposed to 27, and, as I believe, in accordance with the wish of the great majority of this nation (cheers), I am authorized to present to this convention a minority recommendation which I shall move as a substitute for a part of the motion made by the chairman of the national committee."

To the Democratic National Committee:

The undersigned members of the national democratic committee respectfully recommend that the name of Hon. John W. Daniel, of Virginia, be substituted in the committee report for that of Hon. David B. Hill, of New York, and that Hon. John W. Daniel be chosen temporary chairman of this convention. The names of the 23 committeemen were attached to the report.

Mr C. S. Thomas, of Colorado, seconded the minority report.

Again cries of "roll call" were raised and Mr. Harrity said: "It may as well be understood, gentlemen, that as long as the present occupant is in the chair, these proceedings will be conducted in a regular, orderly manner."

This announcement was received with general applause.

Mr. Allen McDermott, of New Jersey, was then recognized to speak in support of the majority report.

Hon. H. T. Clayton, of Alabama, took the platform to close the debate. Ballot on the substitution of the name of John W. Daniel in place of Hill began and resulted as follows: ayes 566; nays 349

The chair declared that the minority report substituting the name of John W. Daniel for temporary chairman was adopted. The announcement was received with wild cheers. At 3:30 the chair appointed J. K. Jones, of Arkansas; R. P. Keating, of Nevada, and S. M. White, of California, a committee to escort Senator Daniel to the chair.

Senator Daniel took the chair and addressed the convention.

Senator White, of California, offered a resolution that the rules of the last democratic convention, including the rules of the Fifty-third congress, govern the convention until otherwise ordered.

Gov. Hogg, of Texas, moved the appointment of committees on permanent organization, credentials, resolutions and roles

When the various committees had been appointed the members of them withdrew for organization and the convention then at 4:45 p. m. adjourned until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, July 9.—The convention was called to order at 10:51 Wednesday morning. The seats of the New York delegation were empty, the delegates being in caucus at the Auditorium.

The prayer called for a special "blessing on this convention from all over our fair land," and asked that the minds of the delegates should be "dominated for good, for humanity and for God," and that what they did might "tell in the years to come for the advancement and lifting up of our human kind."

Senator White, permanent chairman-elect, relieved Senator Daniel of the gavel and presided over the informal proceedings of the convention which followed, Mr. Daniel being in poor voice after his exertions of Tuesday.

The temporary chairman announced that the first business in order was the report of committees, as no business could be done except by unanimous consent until the committees reported. He called the committees in order. The committee on credentials did not respond, and after an interval of about ten minutes it was announced that the committee on credentials were about to reassemble after their long night's session.

While awaiting the report of the credentials committee, Gov. Hogg, Senator Blackburn, Gov. Altgeld and others made short speeches to fill in time.

At 1:10 the gold delegation from Nebraska retired to a march tune by the band and their silver successors took their places. The Bryan men, as they marched in headed by silver tipped spears and a banner bearing Mr. Bryan's name in silver letters, were vociferously applauded.

At 1:34 Senator White called the convention to order and stated that word had been received from the committee on credentials that no report could be expected for three hours He suggested a recess until 5 o'clock. The convention then recessed until that hour.

CHICAGO, July 9.—At 5:15 p. m. the convention was again called to order by Chairman Daniel.

At 5:50 p. m. Chairman Atwood reported that the committee on credentials completed report by recommending the seating of the contesting delegates of the Fourth and Ninth Michigan district. The other delegates remain as on temporary roll. Mr. Crosby, of Massachusetts, from the committee on credentials, presented a minority report in favor of seating the delegates named on the temporary role.

A ballot was taken and a motion to substitute the minority report for the majority report in the Michigan case was lost. Ayes, 368; nays, 558.

"The noes have it," said the chairman, "and the amendment is lost." It was now the silver men's turn and they yelled and waved hats and handkerchiefs and displayed Bland pictures and made the night hideous for awhile.

The chairman put the question on the majority report of the committee on credentials and declared it adopted.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was then presented by Mr. Finley, of Ohio, naming Senator White, of California, as permanent president of the convention, and Thomas J. Cogan, of Ohio, as permanent secretary.

Senator Daniel, in retiring from the temporary chairmanship, expressed his deep sense of the honor which he had enjoyed and introduced Mr. White as "the distinguished senator from California." (Cheers.)

Senator White, of California, on taking the chair, spoke of the convention as an assemblage of men from every state and territory in the union, and said that he was prepared to extend full, equal, absolute and impartial treatment to all. Every question before the convention should be, he said, considered carefully and deliberately, and when the voice of the convention was crystallized into a judgment, that judgment should be binding on all true democrats. (Cheers).

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, July 10.—At 10:54 Chairman White called the convention to order. The sergeant-at-arms was directed to clear the aisles.

Senator White called James D. Richardson, of Tennessee, to the chair and Senator Jones read the platform. All references to silver was enthusiastically applauded by the galleries. The free coinage plank in the platform was drowned in cheers. Ordered re-read.

THE PLATFORM.

We, the democrats of the United States in national convention assembled, do reaffirm our allegiance to those great essential principles of justice and liberty upon which our institutions are founded, and which the democratic party has advocated from Jefferson's time to our own—freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of conscience, the preservation of personal rights, the equality of all citizens before the law and the faithful observance of constitutional limitations.

During all these years the democratic party has resisted the tendency of selfish interests to the centralization of governmental power and steadfastly maintained the integrity of the dual scheme of government established by the founders of this republic of republics. Under its guidance and teachings the great principal of local self-government has found its best expression in the maintenance of the rights of the states and in its assertion of the necessity of confining the general government to the exercises of the powers granted by the constitution of the United States.

The constitution of the United States guarantees to every citizen the right of civil and religious liberty. The democratic party has always been the exponent of political liberty and religious freedom, and it renews its obligations and reaffirms its devotion to these fondamental principles of the constitution.

Recognizing that the money question is paramount to all others at this time, we invite attention to the fact that the federal constitution names silver and gold together as the money metals of the United States, and that the first coinage law passed by congress under the constitution made the silver dollar the monetary unit of value and admitted gold to free coinage at a ratio measured by the silver dollar unit.

We declare that the act of 1873 demonetizing silver without the knowledge or approval of the American people has resulted in the appreciation of gold and a corresponding fall in the prices of commodities produced by the people, a heavy increase in the burden of taxation and of all debts public and private; the enrichment of the money-lending class at home and abroad, postration of industry, and impoverishment of the people.

We are unalterably opposed to the single gold standard which has locked fast the prosperity of an industrial people in the paralysis of hard times. Gold monometallism is a British policy and its adoption has brought other nations into financial servitude to London. It is not only un-American but anti-American and it can be fastened on the United States only by the stifling of that indomitable spirit and love of liberty which proclaimed our political independence in 1776 and won it in the war of the revolution.

We demand the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation. We demand that the standard silver dollar shall be a full legal tender, equally with gold for all debts, public and private, and we favor such legislation as will prevent the demonetization of any kind of legal tender money by private contract.

We are opposed to the policy and practice of surrendering to the holders of the obligations of the United States the option reserved by law to the government of redeeming such obligations in either silver coin or gold coin

We are opposed to the issuing of interest-bearing bonds of the United States in time of peace, and condemn the trafficking with banking syndicates which, in exchange for bonds and at an enormous profit to themselves, supply the federal treasury with gold to maintain the policy of gold monometallism.

Congress alone has the power to coin and issue money, and President Jackson declared that this power could not be delegated to corporations or individuals.

We therefore denounce the issuance of notes intended to circulate as money by national banks as in derogation of the constitution and we demand that all paper which is made a legal tender for public and private debts, or which is receivable for dues to the United States, shall be issued by the government of the United States and shall be redeemable in coin.

We hold that tariff duties should be levied for purposes of revenue, should also be adjusted so as to operate equally throughout the country, and not discriminate between class or section, and that taxation should be limited by the needs of the government honestly and economically administered. We denounce as disturbing to business the republican threat to restore the McKinley law which has been twice condemned by the people in the national elections and which, enacted under the false plea of protection to home industry, proved a prolific breeder of trusts and monopolies, enriched the few at the expense of the many, restricted trade and deprived the producers of the great American staples of access to their natural markets. Until the money question is settled we are opposed to any agitation for further changes in our tariff laws, except such as are necessary to meet the deficit in revenue caused by the adverse decision of the supreme court on the income tax. There would be no deficit in the revenue but for the annulment by the supreme court of a law passed by a democratic congress in strict pursuance of the uniform decisions of that court for nearly one hundred years, that court having in that decision sustained constitutional objections to its enactment which has been previously overruled by the ablest judges who had ever sat on that bench. We declare that it is the duty of congress to use all the constitutional power which remains after that decision, or which may come from its reversal by the court as it may hereafter be constituted, so that the burdens of taxation may be equally and impartially laid to the end that wealth may bear its due proportion of the expenses of government.

We hold that the most efficient way of protecting American labor is to prevent the importation of foreign pauper labor to compete with it in the home market, and with the value of the home market to our American farmers and artisans is greatly reduced by a vicious monetary system which depresses the prices of their products below the cost of production and thus deprives them of the means of purchasing the products of our home manufactories, and as labor creates the wealth of the country, we demand the passage of such laws as may be necessary to protect it in all its rights.

W. J. BRYAN,

Nominated for President by the Democratic Convention at Chicago.

We are in favor of the arbitration of differences between employers engaged in interstate commerce and their employes, and recommend such legislation as is necessary to carry out this principle.

The absorption of wealth by the few, the consolidation of our leading railroad systems, and the formation of trusts and pools, require a stricter control by the federal government of those arteries of commerce. We demand the enlargement of the inter-state commerce commission, and such restrictions and guarantees in the control of railways as will protect the people from robbery and oppression.

We denounce the profligate waste of the money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation and the lavish appropriations of recent republican congresses, which have kept taxes high, while the labor that pays them is unemployed and the product of the people's toil are depressed till they no longer repay the cost of production. We demand a return to that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government and a reduction in the number of useless officers, the salaries of which drain the substance of the people

We denounce the arbitrary interference by federal authorities in local affairs as a violation of the constitution of the United States and a crime against free institutions, and we especially object to government by injunction as a new and highly dangerous form of oppression by which federal judges, in contempt of the laws of the states and rights of citizens, become at once legislators, judges and executors, and we approve the bill passed at the last session of the United States senate and now pending in the house relative to contempt in federal courts and providing for trials by jury in certain cases of contempt.

No discrimination should be indulged in by the government of the United States in favor of any of its debtors. We approve of the refusal of the Fifty-third congress to pass the Pacific railroad funding bill, denounce the effort of the present republican congress to enact a similar measure

Recognizing the just claim of deserving union soldiers, we heartily endorse the rule of the present commissioner of pensions that no names shall be arbitrarily dropped from the pension roll, and the fact of enlistment and service should be deemed conclusive evidence against disease and disability before enlistment.

We favor the admission of the territories of New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma into the union as states, and we favor the early admission of all the territories having the necessary population and resource to entitle them to statehood, and while they remain territories we hold that the officials appointed to administer the government of any territory together with the District of Columbia and Alaska, should be bona fide residents of the territory or district in which the duties are to be performed. The democratic party believes in home rule and that all public lands of the United States should be appropriated to the establishment of free homes for American citizens.

We recommend that the territory of Alaska be granted a delegate in congress and that the general land and timber laws of the United States be extended to said territory.

The Monroe doctrine, as originally declared and interpreted by succeeding presidents, is a permanent part of the foreign policy of the United States, and must at all times be maintained.

We extend our sympathy to the people of Cuba in their heroic struggle for liberty and independence.

We are opposed to life tenure in the public service. We favor appointments based upon merits, fixed terms of office and such an administration of the civil service laws as will afford equal opportunity to all citizens of ascertained fitness.

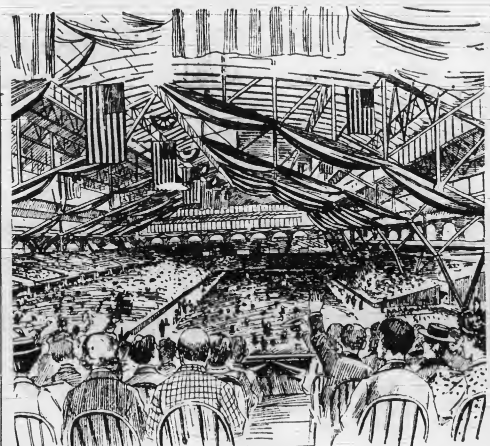
We declare it to be the unwritten law of this republic, established by custom and usage of one hundred years and sanctioned by the examples of the greatest and wisest of those who founded and have maintained our government, that no man should be eligible for a third term of the presidential office.

The federal government should care for and improve the Mississippi river and other great waterways of the republic, so as to secure for the interior states easy and cheap transportation to tide water. When any waterway of the republic is of sufficient importance to demand aid of the government such aid should be extended upon a definite plan of continuous work until permanent improvement is secured.

Confiding in the justice of our cause and the necessity of its success at the polls we submit the foregoing declaration of principles and purposes to the considerate judgment of the American people. We invite the support of all citizens who approve them and who desire to have them made effective through legislation for the relief of the people and the restoration of the country's prosperity.

After the platform was reported Senator Hill, of New York, representing the minority gold men, submitted the following, which contained a strong plank favorable to the existing standard. The use of the word "gold" in the plank is conspicuous. The text of the minority report, with the signatures attached thereto, follows:

To the Democratic National Convention—Sixteen delegates, constituting the minority of the committee on resolutions, find many declarations in the report of the majority to which they can not give their assent. Some of these are wholly unnecessary. Some are ill-considered and ambiguously phrased, while others are extreme and revolutionary of the well recognized principles of the party. The minority content themselves with this general expression of dissent without going into a specific statement of these objectionable features of the report of the majority. But upon the financial question which engages at this time the chief share of public attention, the views of the majority differ so fundamentally from what the minority regard as vital democratic doctrine as to demand a distinct statement of what they hold to as the only just and true expression of democratic faith upon this paramount issue, as follows, which is offered as a substitute for the financial planks in the majority report:



THE CONVENTION IN SESSION.

"We declare our belief that the experiment on the part of the United States alone of free silver coinage and a change of the existing standard of value independently of the action of the other great nations would not only imperil our finances, but would retard or entirely prevent the establishment of international bi-metallism, to which the efforts of the government should be steadily directed. It would place this country at once upon a silver basis, impair contracts, disturb business, diminish the purchasing power of the wages of labor and inflict irreparable evils upon our nation's commerce and industry.

"Until international co-operation among leading nations for the coinage of silver can be secured, we favor the rigid maintenance of the existing gold standard as essential to the preservation of our public pledges, and the keeping inviolate of our country's honor. We insist that all our paper and silver currency shall be kept absolutely on a parity with gold The democratic party is the party of hard money, and is opposed to legal tender paper money as a part of our permanent financial system, and we therefore favor the gradual retirement and cancellation of all United States notes and treasury notes under such legislative provisions as will prevent undue contraction. We demand that the national credits shall be resolutely maintained at all times and under all circumstances."

The minority also feel that the report of the majority is defective in failing to make any recognition of the honesty, economy, courage and fidelity of the present democratic administration, and they offer the following declaration as an amendment to the majority report:

"We commend the honesty, economy, courage and fidelity of the present democratic national administration."

The amendments proposed to be offered by Senator Hill were then read, as follows.

"First amendment: But it should be carefully provided by law at the same time that any change in the monetary standard should not apply to existing contracts."

Second amendment: "Our advocacy of the independent free coinage of silver being based on the belief that such coinage will effect and maintain a parity between gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, we declare as a pledge of our sincerity that if such free coinage shall fail to effect such parity within one year from its enactment by law, such coinage shall thereupon be suspended."

Tillman led off in the platform debate, and the sturdy South Carolina senator was given a hearty reception. Unassuming in manner and having the garb of a workingman, he did not look the senator, but few speeches have been anticipated with more interest. The hisses by the gold men were drowned by the cheers of the silver contingent.

During Tillman's address he was interrupted by calls from every part of the hall for Hill. When quiet was restored Tillman said: "You had just as well understand I am going to have my say if I stay here all night."

After Tillman had finished Senator Hill appeared and began speaking for the minority report.

Mr. Vilas was applauded as he was introduced. The resolutions of the minority were presented, he said, with a recognition that they constituted a protest against the proposed attempt at party revolution.

After Vilas finished his speech Wm. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, was recognized by the chair and spoke for the minority report.

Ex-Congressman Bryan then took the platform to close the debate. He spoke in favor of the minority report. Mr. Bryan was given a rousing reception. Delegates stood on chairs and cheered for several minutes. The band played "We Won't go Home Till Morning," at the close of his speech.

The official ballot on the minority report on platform is 620 nays, 303 ayes; 1 not voting This is six more than two-thirds.

The amendment indorsing Cleveland's administration was lost. Official result: Ayes 357, nays 564; not voting and absent 9.

Hill's amendment referring to existing contracts was lost on viva voce vote.

Hill's amendment declaring that in case the adoption of the free coinage plank does not maintain the parity of silver one year after its passage it shall be suspended, lost on viva voce vote.

Tillman withdrew his amendment denouncing Cleveland.

Call of states on adoption of platform demanded by Hill.

The official vote is 628 ayes, 301 nays, 1 not voting.

At 4:47 a motion to recess until 8:00 p. m., prevailed.

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, July 10.—The convention was called to order at 8:30 p. m. by its presiding officer, Senator White, of California, who immediately handed over the gavel to Representative Richardson, of Tennessee, who acted as president pro tem for the evening as well as during the morning session.

The chairman informed the convention that roll of states would now be called, so that nominations of candidates for the presidency should be made.

Senator Vest, of Missouri, was the first delegate to ascend the platform, even before the call of states had got further in the alphabetical list than the state of Arkansas. Mr. Vest placed Hon. R. P. Bland in nomination for the presidency of the United States. David Overmeyer, of Kansas, and J. R. Williams, of Illinois, seconded the nomination of Mr. Bland.

When Georgia was called, H. T. Lewis took the platform and placed ex-Congressman W. J. Bryan in nomination. The convention went wild at the first mention of Bryan's name. Delegates with banners of Georgia, North Carolina, Michigan, Nebraska, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Dakota paraded through the aisles.

L. F. Kultz, of North Carolina, Geo. F. Williams, of Massachusetts, and T. J. Kernan, of Louisiana, seconded Bryan's nomination.

When Indiana was called Senator Turpie took the platform and placed in nomination Gov. Claude Matthews, of Indiana. Trippett, of California, followed seconding the nomination of Matthews.

Hon. Fred White, of Iowa, was recognized to nominate ex-Gov. Boies. Cheers of a comparatively mild type greeted the announcement and the Boies banner was raised.

Hon. John S. Rhea, of Kentucky, with a voice almost as resonant and very closely resembling that of the senator he nominated, presented in nomination the name of Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky.

W. W. Foote, of California, seconded the nomination of Mr. Blackburn.

When Massachusetts was called the chairman of the delegation said Massachusetts had intended to present the name of Gov. Russell, but Mr. Russell declined to run on the platform adopted.

Mr. Patrick, of Ohio, when the name of his state was called, put in nomination Mr. John R. McLean, of Cincinnati.

Chairman Harrity, of Pennsylvania, when his state was called, said Pennsylvania had no candidate at this time, but when the roll of states was called for the purpose of ascertaining their preferences for candidates, Pennsylvania would express her wishes on the subject.

Virginia being called in the roll of states, the chairman of the delegation stated that they had been instructed to present the name of Hon. John W. Daniel, but at his earnest request and instance did not do so.

The nomination of Mr. Blackburn was also seconded by Mr. J. W. St. Clair.

When the state of Wisconsin was called, Gen. Bragg, the picturesque old hero, chairman of the delegation, rising on a chair in his place, said: "Wisconsin can not participate in the nomination of any man calling himself a democrat upon a populist platform." (Great cheers, mingled with hisses.)

One of the delegates from the state followed, saying that on the part of some of the delegates from Wisconsin, he desired to second the nomination of Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky.

At the close of the call of the roll of states, the convention, at 12:35 a. m., adjourned till 10 a. m., when balloting will be begun.

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, July 10.—Chairman White called the convention to order at 11 a. m. Friday Rev. Dr. A. Green, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., offered prayer.

Mr. Harrity, of Pennsylvania, on being recognized by the chair, said that in obedience to instructions Pennsylvania presented the name of Robert E. Pattison for president.

Mr. Mattingly, of the District of Columbia, seconded McLean's nomination. Muller, of Oregon, presented the name of ex-Gov. Pennoyer for president. The nominations were then closed and roll of states ordered.

Mr. Smith, of Ohio, announced the death of ex-Congressman Frank H. Hurd, of Ohio.

The result of the first ballot as officially announced is Bland 235, Boles 85, Matthews 37, McLean 54, Bryan 119, Blackburn 83, Pattison 95, Pennoyer 8, Campbell 1, Russell 2, Stevenson 7, Tillman 17, Hill 1, Teller 8. Absent and not voting 178. First ballot was without result, no candidate receiving a requisite two-thirds vote. Indications are that no selection will be made before several ballots are taken.

Money, of Mississippi, made the point of order that when a delegation was instructed to vote as a unit the majority had no right to stifle the vote of a delegate who desires to vote even when the majority does not.

Gen. Bragg made point of order that vote of Wisconsin, under instructions to vote as a unit, must be recorded as not voting.

Dockery, of Wisconsin, was recognized, took the platform and spoke for the four who claimed the right to vote. Great confusion followed Dockery's speech.

Poll of Wisconsin resulted: Not voting, 20 Bryan, 4.

Finley, of Ohio, raised point of order that delegation may direct a vote but, by abstaining, have no right to prevent a vote. The chair ruled out of order a motion to give the four delegates a vote.

The chair ruled that instruction was not an instruction to abstain from voting, but that the minority can not cast the vote of the entire delegation.

The Ohioan then stated that 41 delegates were for McLean, 4 for Bryan, one not voting, one Bland, [illegible] under the unit rule Ohio cast its vote for the man who made this convention possible—John R. McLean.

The purpose of Ohio to get the individual votes of its delegation on record was not to be thus balked and a delegate challenged the vote and a poll was thus had. McLean's name being reached it was stated that he was absent but his alternate was here. The alternate's name being called he voted for McLean.

South Carolina caused a surprise when the chairman announced that under instructions of her state South Carolina cast 17 votes for "her honored son," Benj. Tillman, one not voting. (Hisses and cheers.)

Mr. Marsden, of Louisiana, moved that the two-thirds rule be abrogated. Not entertained by the chair and a second ballot ordered.

Official result second ballot: Bland 283, Boles 41, Matthews 33, McLean 53, Bryan 190, Blackburn 41, Pattison 100, Stevenson 10, Pennoyer 8, Teller 8, Hill 1. Not voting 162.

Official third ballot: Bland 291, Boles 36, Matthews 34, McLean 54, Bryan 219, Blackburn 27, Pattison 97, Stevenson 9, Hill 1, not voting 162. Total 930.

A fourth roll call was immediately ordered and resulted as follows: Not voting 162, Bland 241, Boles 33, Matthews 36, McLean 46, Bryan 280, Blackburn 27, Pattison 97, Stevenson 8, Hill 1. Total 930. Necessary to choice 531.

While the fifth ballot was being ordered a demonstration took place in favor of Bryan. Eighteen state signs were carried to the Nebraska delegation amid tumultuous cheers, which lasted for several minutes. Then a procession was started and the standards of 22 states and territories were borne around the hall amid a perfect tornado of cheering. After order had been partially restored the chair announced that two-thirds of the number of votes given was necessary to make a nomination, and not two-thirds of the total vote of the convention.

While the fifth ballot was going on Gov. Stone, of Missouri, was recognized by the chair. He read a note from Hon. R. P. Bland, withdrawing his name in favor of Bryan. This nominates the latter.

SENATOR STEPHEN M. WHITE, Permanent Chairman.

The vote was as follows:

Bland 105, Boles 26, Matthews 31, McLean 0, Bryan 500, Turpie 1, Pattison 95, Stevenson 8, Hill 1: not voting 162.

NOTE—The above is the fifth official ballot as announced, changes were made thereafter, giving Bryan more than the necessary 512 votes.

Senator Turpie, of Indiana, moved the nomination of Bryan be made unanimous. Ayes had it. Many noes were heard.

Recess taken until 8 p. m.

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, July 11.—Chairman White called the convention to order at 8:56 p. m.

At 9:05 Gov. Stone moved to adjourn until 12 noon, Saturday. Henry, of Mississippi, moved to amend by changing the time to 10 a. m. Stone accepted the amendment. The motion was put and carried.

CONVENTION HALL, Chicago, July 11.—At 11 a. m. Chairman White rapped for order.

Mr. Harrity, of Pennsylvania, was recognized by the chair and announced that the national committee would meet at 3 p. m.

The convention proceeded to business without prayer. The roll of states for vice president was done away with.

O'Sullivan, of Massachusetts, took the platform to name George Fred Williams for vice president. Mr. Marston, of Louisiana, named John R. McLean. Maloney, of Washington state, nominated Hamilton Lewis. J. H. Curry, of North Carolina, placed the name of Judge Clarke, of the supreme court, in nomination. Congressman Tom Johnson, of Ohio, nominated Geo. W. Fethian, of Illinois. Hon. N. A. Miller, of Oregon, nominated Ex-Gov. Pennoyer. Wm. R. Burke, of California, named Arthur Sewall, of Maine. Shewalter, of Missouri, presented the name of Joseph C. Sibley, of Pennsylvania. C. S. Thomas, of Colorado, seconded the nomination of Arthur Sewall, of Maine. O. W. Powers, of Utah, nominated Senator John W. Daniel, of Virginia, but the name was afterward withdrawn. F. P. Morris, of Illinois, seconded the nomination of Sibley, of Pennsylvania. Ulric Sloan, of Ohio, withdrew the name of John R. McLean.

Congressman Fithian, of Illinois, stated that he was not a candidate for vice president. He seconded the nomination of Sibley. John Scott, of Maine, seconded Sewall. The chair read the names already before the convention: Williams, McLean, Lewis, Clark, Fithian, Pennoyer, Sewall and Sibley, and the balloting began.

The ballot resulted as follows: Sewall 100, Boies 20, Williams (Mass.) 76, Harrity 21, Bland 62, Teller 1, White 1, Blackburn 20, Sibley 163, McLean 111, Fithian 1, Lewis 11, Clark 50, Daniel 11, Williams (Ill.) 22

While the vote was being footed up, the leaders of a number of the delegations got together and tried to get the convention to unite on Bland.

Mr. Boies' name was withdrawn by Van Wagenen, of Iowa.

Official result of second ballot:

Bland 294, Sibley 113, McLean 158, Clark 22, Pattison 1, Sewall 37, Williams, of Massachusetts, 16, Harrity 21, Williams, of Illinois, 13, not voting 255. Necessary to a choice 453. Total vote 930.

The third ballot resulted as follows: Pattison 1, Daniel 6, Bland 255, McLean 210, Sewall 97, Sibley 19, Williams, of Massachusetts, 15, Clark 22. Total cast 675. Absent or not voting 255. Necessary to choice 450.

After the third ballot Gov. Stone withdrew the name of Bland. He read a telegram from the Missourian declining to run. The fourth ballot was taken with no result.

Official result of fourth ballot:

McLean 296, Sewall 261, Pattison 1, Daniel 54, Clark 46, Williams 9, Harrity 11. Not voting, 252. Total cast, 678. Necessary to choice, 453.

A dispatch was then read from John R. McLean saying: "Any vote cast for me for vice-president is against my express wish."

McLean's telegram was felt in the next ballot. Louisiana and other states which voted for McLean changing to Sewall and when Wisconsin's vote was reached sufficient votes had been cast for Sewall to nominate him. Illinois promptly changed her 48 votes from McLean to Sewall. Kentucky followed suit; Ohio chipped in and a procession of state standards was started round the hall in honor of the nominee.

The convention having now made its choice Nebraska voted for the first time and the state of Mr. Bryan cast its vote for Mr. Sewall, of Maine. Michigan and Ohio moved to make the nomination unanimous. Carried

The usual clearing up resolutions of thanks to the temporary chairman (Senator Daniel, of Virginia), the permanent chairman (Senator White, of California), the acting chairman (Representative Richardson, of Tennessee), the secretary and others were offered and agreed to. A resolution was also offered by Senator Blanchard, of Louisiana, and agreed to declaring the city of Chicago the "greatest convention city on earth," and then at 3:16 the chairman, Senator White, declared the convention adjourned sine die.

THE women of Holland and Belgium, who make their linen so beautifully white, use refined borax instead of washing soda in the proportion of one large handful of borax powder to about ten gallons of boiling water. Thus they save in soap nearly half.

A. M. Edwards, after a visit of several days, has sorrowfully returned to Wilmington, Del., with faint hopes of ever again seeing his sister, Mrs. A. E. Gorman, alive again.

Miss Ethel Walsh is visiting relatives in Louisville.

Mr. Wm. Northcut and family, of Covington, are having a very pleasant time among their relatives here.

Careful investigation shows that the mad dog scare in the case at Mr. Cluster's was without foundation. His dog he thinks, was poisoned. Beulah Dudgeon, his step daughter, was bitten while the dog was in a paroxysm brought on by the action of the poison. Being taken to Grant county, application of the mad stone was made several times, but it refused to adhere. The application in the case of the Osborn boy, reported as having been bitten near Verona, was also unsuccessful. As Mr. Cluster says somebody thought there were too many dogs in the neighborhood, and took this barbarous method of putting them out of the way.

Big Bone.

The Rebecca Degree Lodge of Big Bone gave an interesting entertainment at their Lodge, last Saturday. J. Frank Grant delivered them a nice little talk, which was very much enjoyed by all present. An elegant lunch was served, and, altogether, the day pleasently spent. About 40 persons, ladies and gentlemen, from Aurora were present.

Prof. J. T. LaMaster and family, of Campbellsburg, were visiting his father-in-law, J. H. Slater, Saturday and Sunday.

We, the citizens of the Big Bone and Beaver Lick voting precincts, believe this to be the best time of the year to work our dirt roads, and urgently petition those in charge to push the work along, now, and let the roads settle before fall. The tax payers are very much interested in our roads.

The democracy of Big Bone are jubilant over the nominee for President, believing him to be the true embodiment of the principles contained in their platform, and are hopeful of his election in November, the plutocracy of the east notwithstanding. Bryan is the man.

The wife of Add Miller, of Normansville, fell from a wagon and broke her arm near the wrist. Dr. Smith attended her and pronounced it one of the worst fractures seen by him lately.

Florence

In compliance with the request of one of my old friends, of Florence, I send the following for publication. On July 12th, about 5 o'clock p. m., there was a foot race in Erlanger, in which John Olsner, aged 70, of Florence, and Edwin Dennison, 63, of Elsmere, were the contestants; the distance to be run was 50 yards. Malach Schweibald, of Florence, and John Veerkamp, of Erlanger, were the judges. At about 35 yards Dennison was down, and by the time he got up Olsner was out, an easy winner; and many Democrats in Florence express a hope that their young candidate on the free silver platform [illegible] be as successful in his race as their old friend and neighbor, Olsner, was in his.

Old Hurricane.

Verona.

The Northern Kentucky Medical Association met here last Thursday, and notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather there was a fair attendance, and the subjects discussed were very interesting. The members and friends were highly entertained at the hospitable home of Dr. B. K. Menifee.

Last week Miss Letha Callahan attended the Chataugua, and is now visiting Miss Lillie Rouse, at Lexington.

For the last few months the papers have been full of the uses to which the X-rays have been put, and advertisers and funny men have applied them to so many different meanings, that we are almost afraid to venture a pun, but, Mr. Editor, the reason that no more of the Verona folks attended the barbecue last Saturday, was that they could not make the "X-raise."

Carrie, daughter of Robert Hall, after an illness of many months of consumption, died last Sunday. She was a young lady of a most lovable disposition, and of a true christian character. After funeral services her remains were laid to rest in the Concord cemetery.

Victory for Bryan and Sewall in November, 16 to 1; put up your gold.

Taylorsport.

James Wilson, aged 62, died on the 6th inst., after a lingering illness of six months. He had been a member of the Christian church for many years, was an indulgent father and a good neighbor. Nine daughters survive him —four married and five single. A postmortem was held by Drs Crigler and Godelich. All the abdominal organs were found to be in a normal condition, except the stomach and gall-bladder. The pylorus orifice of the stomach was obstructed by a small mass which caused the bile to distend the gall-bladder, making it abnormally large. This small tumor was the cause of the patient not eating during the last weeks of his illness, and indirectly caused his death by starvation.

Adam Heist and family, of Limaburg, spent last Sunday with Morgan Helm and wife.

Flora Phelps died on the 3d inst. of consumption.

We will have a wedding to report in the near future.

We are glad to report Morgan Helm getting well since Drs. Terrill operated on him.

Hurrah for Bryan and Sewall. Now let every Democrat come out and vote the straight ticket. Put aside all strife for victory. This precinct is a Republican stronghold, but watch us down them this fall.

Corn is on the jump. Oats were never better, and will put in the shock this week if the weather will permit. The blackberry season will soon be over.

Thieves are doing this neighborhood.

There has been some very hot weather this month—fine growing weather though.

The oats crop will receive especial attention this week if the weather continues favorable.

W. E. Vest was surveying and dividing the John Henry Smith farm among the heirs last week.

A great many people came in off of the East Bend road on their way to the barbecue, Saturday.

So far as we have heard everybody, with a single exception, liked the meat and soup at the barbecue, Saturday.

Twenty-nine bicyclists from the city, among them seven or eight ladies, took dinner at Mr. Cowen's Sunday.

The wind damaged the corn and oats considerably last week by blowing them down. It will be difficult to save many fields of oats.

A Mr. Swasey and Miss Palmer, of Petersburg, were granted a marriage license by deputy county clerk Garnett, late Saturday evening.

The Petersburg team of ball tossers who will appear at the park here next Saturday are said to be good players, better than any the Burlington sluggers have met this season.

In its account of the 4th of July celebration at Dilisboro, Ind., the Advocate says: "Hon, T. B. Mathews, Past Grand Chancellor of Kentucky, made an address which was brilliant and [illegible] his hearers amazingly."

The Barlow firm of livestock dealers has been driving some very fine lambs through town during the past two weeks. It is said the firm is making some money on the lambs they are handling, and we are glad to hear that things are coming their way.

A gentleman writes from Florence: "While there is a general hunt in the county of Boone for Congressional candidates, with all due respect for the gentlemen whose names have been proposed, we would beg leave to suggest an other, that of the Hon. The following is a synopsis of the business transacted by the Fiscal Court last week:

The grand jury, at its April term, 1896, having recommended that no steps be taken to rod the court house, it is now ordered that the committee appointed to see to the rodding of said house be now discharged.

T. E. Roberts allowed $3 for holding inquest.

A. S. Arnold allowed $1 for services rendered as constable.

The claim of W. H. Rice, police judge of Florence, for $3 for holding an inquest, was rejected.

It is ordered that no more claims be allowed to the county officers for exofficio services.

H. Bannister, for Tobe Baker, allowed $6 for pauper coffin.

J. Q. Elstun's claim for $26 25 for keeping pauper, was rejected.

C. L. Crisler, jailer, allowed $204.

Hankins & Davis allowed $6 for pauper coffin.

Ordered that W. J. Rice be paid the $200 for repairing the court house portico.

Ordered that C. L. Crisler, jailer, be and he is hereby directed and required to keep the privy and the privy yard in a cleanly condition, and he may, if he thinks proper, keep the door to the privy yard locked at night, except during circuit court.

J. F. Blyth allowed $500 towards paying the running expenses of the county infirmary.

Ordered that the order made to-day in the matter of paying county officers for exofficio services, be and the same is set aside.

J. B. Crigler, constable, allowed $2 25.

John Hampton, marshal of the town of Florence, allowed $2 75 for arresting and conveying prisoner to county jail.

W. J. Rice's claim of $53 97 allowed.

R. L. Robert's claim for $3 allowed.

Ordered that the order made by this court August 10th, 1895, agreeing to pay the county officers a reasonable compensation for services rendered in misdemeanor cases, be and the same is now rescinded.

Ordered that the allowance to the jailer, hereafter, shall be in proportion to the time that he is present in court in person or by deputy, during its sitting.

L. H. Voshell allowed $50 on his salary as county superintendent.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Rouse returned home last Thursday from West Liberty, Ohio. Mr. Rouse was well pleased with that part of the country.

W. C. Brown congratulates himself on having got the mail line off of his hands. He has more time in which to entertain that handsome daughter. See?

In renewing his subscription M. C. Weaver, of Evansville, Tenn., says: "We are always for the RECORDER and free silver, and Joe Furnish for President."

Miss Julia Stevenson, of Norwood, O., is the guest of Mr and Mrs. J. C. Revill. Her sister, Miss Cora, returned home Monday morning having spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Revill.

Mr. Edwards Gaines, of the Petersburg neighborhood, was the guest of his son, Sidney, of this place, last Friday night. He is an intense silver man and was well pleased with Bryan as the head of the Democratic ticket.

Sheriff Roberts returned home last Friday evening from Jackson county, where he left William Pigg in jail. The Sheriff enjoyed the trip very much, and now considers Boone county a prairie country as compared with a portion of that traversed in eastern Kentucky.

Dr. E. W. Duncan and wife, of Walton, were guests of the Doctor's father and sister last Thursday night. The Doctor had, a few days before, returned from the West, where he went on business. While out West he visited the burial place of a large amount of Boone county capital.

On Friday "Jude" Marshall, Fred Pfalzgraf, Harry McElfresh, Charles Schleicher, John Seekatz, Lon Wiles, Chas. Gifford, Frank Gallagher, Lou Schild, Gus Schiller, Earl Dorman and probably several others will go into camp over in Kentucky above the Miami for a week or two. They will fish, hunt, &c., and propose to have a jolly good time.—Lawrenceburg Register.

At Gap Run, Tenn., the Odd Fellows use a cave for a lodge room. The cave is on the farm of Doctor Hyder, secretary of the lodge, and on entering you pass down nine steps to the first floor, where is located an anteroom, 12 feet square. From the anteroom you descend twenty more steps and find yourself in a complete lodge room fifty feet long, twenty feet wide and twenty feet from floor to ceiling, a natural arch in the center. The stairs and seats are bedrock and the temperature in the lodge room is so uniform the year round that no heat or ventilation is required.

There will be a Leap Year lunch given in John Conley's yard, near Concord, Saturday, July 18th. Proceeds to go for the benefit of Concord Baptist church. All are invited.

Mrs. Jennie Lassing, wife of Hon. Leonard W. Lassing, of Union, died yesterday morning, after several weeks illness.

A very small, black gnat has put in an appearance and is very annoying to people.

Shoot the first fellow who asks, "is this hot enough for you?"

Has the weather been warm enough for you the last few days?

There is a little too much rain for the farmers now.

Next—the Keeleyites, August 1st.

The Knights of Pythias barbecue at the Harvest Home grounds, last Saturday, was a success in every particular except financially, it being necessary to assess the members to make up a deficit of about $50, which showed up when the collections of the day were applied for the liquidation of expenses.

The attendance was estimated from 1,500 to 2,000, made up of people from every neighborhood in the county, while many from adjoining counties were seen in the crowd. To accommodate this vast throng in every particular was a big undertaking, but the Knights in charge of the arrangements had anticipated every demand of their visitors, and nothing calculated to contribute to their enjoyment had been overlooked.

To feed this immense gathering in the manner in which it was done, took good management, but the "run-over-and-snatch" game that so often prevails at barbecues, was overcome, and every body was waited upon and fed abundantly of bread, meat and soup of a most excellent quality, the boys in charge of the table being kept busy for an hour or more passing the provisions out to the hundreds whose appetites craved the barbecued meats.

The cooking was done by Wash and Ed Tanner, and they distinguished themselves. The meat was thoroughly done, and was praised by all. The soup was excellent, and many carried their tin cups in their hands all the forenoon in order to get a good start for soup when dinner was announced. As was the meat, the soup was plentiful.

NOTES.

Nearly everybody visited the pits while the meats were cooking.

The youth and beauty of the county was out in full force.

Those who tripped the light fantastic had an excellent day's amusement.

The rain last week put the ground in excellent condition. There was neither dust nor mud.

Sam Ackmeyer and Ed Tanner carved the meat. The dexterity with which Sam wielded the carving knife, attracted the attention of all. Sam's carving is nothing to compare with his eating.

Several of the prospective candidates for county offices were present, but S. C. Johnson, Walton's candidate for assessor, was doing more hustling than all the others combined.

One 1,400 pound beef and six 80 lb. sheep furnished the meat for the occasion, while 140 pounds of meat and other trimmings in proportion made the 200 gallons of soup. All the above was dished up in the highest art of barbecued culinary service, which is assured when Wash and Ed Tanner are bossing the job.

The refreshment stands did a rushing business.

The day was very favorable for a barbecue—much better than the boys expected when it was raining last week.

In the afternoon Past Grand Chancelor, T. B. Mathews, was introduced and made a short speech on Pythianism. His speech was well received. J. M. Lassing followed Mr. Mathews in a few well timed remarks on the working of the order and its benefits to society.

HER SILVER WEDDING.

BY HELEN M. PALMER.

"I'VE been thinkin', Elviry," said Aunt Hannah, in the calm and placid voice which had smoothed so many rough places in the course of a 50 years' pilgrimage, "I've been thinkin' that it'll be 25 years come next Wednesday since me and your Uncle Jed was married, and if he'd a' been spared, we'd a' had a silver weddin'. I ain't never had any weddin' only the first one." Here Aunt Hannah dropped her knitting needles, which had been clicking cheerfully, as she sat on the front doorstep in the summer twilight, pleasantly conscious of the neat little front yard with its straight paths bordered with June roses and tree honeysuckles, and lifting her eyes to the blue hills which shut in the far horizon, she saw again youth and love and hope. But the touch of old Rover's nose suddenly pressed close upon her knee, seeking a friendly hand, brought her back to earth again; and with a sigh, in which regret was tempered by contentment, Aunt Hannah turned again to Elvira, and, sure of sympathy from her favorite niece, proceeded to unfold her plan.

"You know, Elviry," she said, "that your Uncle Jed didn't live but three years after we was married, so we couldn't have kep' an anniversary, even if't had been the fashion then. Not but I've thought of him, I guess, just as often as if we'd had a wooden weddin', and a tin one, and all the rest of 'em."

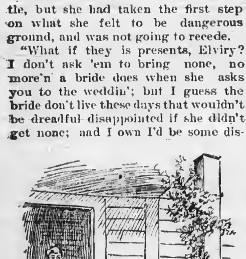
Here Aunt Hannah's needles clicked a little faster. She was thinking of some remarks that had been made when, five years after Jed's untimely de[illegible] went to meeting one Sunday with some pink roses in her bonnet—roses which matched her cheeks very well at that time, and still matched her disposition.

"I guess they can't say much about that," said Elvira, "seeing that everyone knows you might have had Deacon White or Minister Stebbins any day if you'd say the word."

"Well, well, child," said Aunt Hannah, with a conscious smile, "that's neither here nor there; but seeing's I didn't have 'em, seems to me it's ruther hard that, jest because Jed died so untimely, we shouldn't have any anniversaries like the rest of folks. He'd liked 'em—he always liked company; we was of one mind about that, as we was about most things; an' I know, if he was here to-day, he'd say: 'Hannah, you jest go ahead an' have it.' And so, Elviry, I'm a-goin' to." This was said with some decision, and then, as if to forestall any possible objections, Aunt Hannah hurried on: "I haven't had any company for most four years—not since your sister Lidy was married, and I give her a send-off. Of course, I've had sewin' society, and done my share in church and temperance doin's, but, somehow, it didn't seem jest the right thing for me, a widow woman, to start up and ask the neighbors, men and women folks both, to jest a party. But this is different; it seems as if Jed was sort of givin' it with me, an' if they's presents, why, I don't know of any man that ever deserved better of his neighbors than he did."

Aunt Hannah's voice faltered a little, but she had taken the first step on what she felt to be dangerous ground, and was not going to recede.

"What if they is presents, Elviry? I don't ask 'em to bring none, no more'n a bride does when she asks you to the weddin'; but I guess the bride don't live these days that wouldn't be dreadful disappointed if she didn't get none; and I own I'd be some disappointed, too. I like pretty things"—Aunt Hannah's voice took a wistful tone—"an' I've never had none—only what I airnt. Jed would 'a got me all I wanted if he'd only lived; but, you see, when we was married 'twa'n't the fashion to give weddin' presents. Why, all I had was half a dozen teaspoons your grandma gave me, and a pair of claw sugar-tongs your Grand-Aunt Peck lef' me in her will. An' look at Lidy! Why, she had more things to start with than me an' your mother 've had in all our lives. Then, if I say it, as I shouldn't, I've always done my share; there ain't a bride married in Saranac Corners these 20 years that I haven't took her somethin', if 'twa'n't more'n a set of mats or a crocheted tidy, and lots of times 'twas store things. An' it does seem, though I wouldn't say it to everyone, that it ain't hardly fair that, jest because I was left alone this way, I shouldn't have none of the pleasant things I might have had if I'd had all the rest. An' so, Elviry, I've made up my mind that there ain't any earthly reason why I shouldn't have a silver weddin', an' I'm a-goin' to have one."



"WHAT IF THEY IS PRESENTS, ELVIRY?"

Whatever misgivings Elvira might have felt when the project was first disclosed had melted away in the warmth of her aunt's feeling; and, knowing that the slowly matured resolves of a placid nature are hard to shake, and trusting to the real regard of the neighborhood for the kindly, helpful widow, whose social and pleasure-loving temperament had before now exposed her to the criticism of her friends without really affecting their liking, she offered no objection, and, yielding a ready assent to the plan, was soon in the midst of a delightful discussion of details, in which Aunt Hannah's too often repressed love of social functions found full expression.

Early on the following afternoon Aunt Hannah started out to give her invitations with a faint flush on her cheeks, by way of tribute to the conventional usage she might be transgressing, but with a little formula prepared, which included no explanation and permitted no comment. The invitation to be present at the 25th anniversary of her marriage with Mr. Jedidiah Rounds was as carefully worded as if she had studied it in the pages of the "Home Manual," as she probably had; and only waiting to add that she should be "dreadful disappointed if they didn't all come," she hurried from house to house. This unwonted haste on the part of leisurely Mrs. Rounds might have made her neighbors suspect that she was a little uneasy herself as to the impression her invitations might produce, but she gave no other grounds for such a suspicion; and, indeed, when she reached home, after having made the circuit of the neighborhood, the pleasant stir of action had taken possession of her, and she set about her preparations for the great event with as untroubled a mind as if she were planning for a church "sugar party." The momentous question now was whether the "entertainment" should be confined to the elegant but unsatisfying ice-cream and sweet cake, [illegible] boldly cater to the tastes of the stronger sex by admitting the golden doughnut and the flaky pie.

The next day was Saturday, the day when the "Corners" went to the village to do its "trading." It was well that Mrs. Round's invitation had been already given—that is, it was well for those who did not wish to go empty-handed to a silver wedding. Who shall say that she had foreseen this difficulty, and provided for it?

It was also the day on which the sewing society met; and to-day, for the first time in many years, Mrs. Rounds was absent.

"Gittin' baked up for the silver weddin', I suppose?" said thin little Miss Prindle, the village dressmaker, with a snort of disapproval. "Most ridic'lous thing I ever heerd of; why, I might as well set up to have a silver—I mean a wooden weddin' myself."

"Well, why not? Ain't you expectin' to, some time?" asked Mrs. Bascom, the minister's wife, in her most conciliatory tones.

At this Miss Prindle preened her ruffled feathers, smoothed her black alpaca apron, and ceased from further troubling for the moment, in view of future possibilities.

"What do you s'pose Deacon White'll say to it?" asked Widow Jenkins, giving a careless air to her question by stopping in the midst of it to shake out the garment she had just completed.

"Es Hannah Rounds ain't troubled herself about what Deacon White's said all these years he's been a-runnin' after her, 'tain't likely she'll begin now!" responded Mrs. Abijah Rounds, who, though she was severe enough in private, on Hannah's easy-going ways, pink roses and pink cheeks, yet in public never forgot that she had been Abijah's brother's wife.

Mrs. Jenkins pursed her lips and was about to make a retort, when Mrs. Bascom bethought herself of asking who was Mrs. Rounds' grandmother on her mother's side, and in less than five minutes the company, led by two or three of the older women, was launched on a sea of reminiscence and genealogical discussion, in which Aunt Hannah and her party were soon lost sight of.

The men at "the store" had their say, too, but they were accustomed to let their "women folks" settle matters of etiquette; so the question passed with a joke or two, mostly leveled at Deacon White, who, balanced on a bench on the little stoop that ran across the front of the store, his shoulders propped against the wall and his hat pulled well down over his eyes, received them in silence, as one who could afford to let others laugh.

Wednesday morning Aunt Hannah was up with the dawn, and by five o'clock, when Elvira came hurrying from school, every room in the little house was not only spotless, but had received every decoration which Aunt Hannah's fertile brain could devise. "I don't know but it looks sort of foolish," she said, as she led Elvira from the summer kitchen to the parlor chamber. "What do you think?"

"I think it's just lovely," said Elvira, and Aunt Hannah beamed.

If Aunt Hannah couldn't "bank" her mantles with chrysanthemums, she had filled every fireplace, and even the kitchen sink, with asparagus boughs. Long sprays of asparagus hung from every ceiling to attract any fly that dared to venture in, and the white-and-gilt china and red Bohemian glass vases had all been carefully filled with tight bunches of many-colored flowers. But the decorations were not confined to natural flowers. Crepe paper lamp-shades had not yet reached the "Corners," or were considered too striking an innovation to be adopted by staid people like Aunt Hannah; but life-size parasols cunningly fashioned of pink-and-white tissue paper were suspended beneath the looking-glass in the parlor; and an elaborate pagoda framed of perforated cardboard and decorated with glass beads, which had once taken a prize at the county agricultural fair, occupied a conspicuous position on a small round black walnut table. Tidies of every size and description were pinned on every available spot; braided cloth mats, or hit-or-miss rag rugs, made islands on the painted floors, except in the parlor, where a "three-ply" laid over a liberal sprinkling of straw gave one the sensation of treading on waves; the photographs of the different members of the family in their oval, black-varnished frames, with a line of gilt-beading, were draped in yellow tarletan; so was the ancient painting on velvet, done by Aunt Hannah's mother in her youth, and representing an elegant classic female weeping over a tomb. In short, everything that was possible had been done to bring the little house to the highest pitch of perfection.

Aunt Hannah herself was radiant in a steel-gray poplin, with some white lace around her neck and crossed on her ample bosom. "It was mother's lace," she told Elvira. "Mother and I favored each other, and we always picked the same patterns. I'd have liked," she continued, with a gentle sigh, "to have wore one of the dresses I had when I was married; 'twouldn't have seemed no more'n right, considering Jed; but, goodness knows, I couldn't any more have got into it than I could a' flew."

Just then came a knock at the front door, which stood open to the summer air, and Elvira hastened to take from a little boy a box which came "with Mr. and Mrs. Bascom's compliments."

"Now, ain't that just like Mis' Bascom?" said Aunt Hannah, when the parcel was at last undone. "She does beat all; some folks might have known I wanted a parlor clock till doomsday an' they'd a-got me a album instid; but she never makes a mistake."

SHE HURRIED FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE.

Indeed, in Aunt Hannah's present mood not much could come amiss; and as guests and presents arrived, each was more welcome than the other. To be sure, when Mrs. Jenkins, ostentatiously mourning in bombazine and rusty crape, arrived, bringing with her a framed worsted-work tablet bearing the legend: "To the memory of the dear Departed," worked in black, on a purple ground, Mrs. Bascom hastened to intercept it. But Aunt Hannah was floating on a sea of feeling, flowing from the blessedness of receiving, mingled with tender recollections of her youth, which bore her buoyantly over any such attempt to point the finger of scorn, and, gratefully accepting the tablet, she found room for it in the very middle of the mantle shelf, and placed a big bunch of sweet-williams beside it, remarking in an undertone to the friend nearest her that "she didn't know that his middle name was William, but so it was. Jedidiah William it stood in the Bible; but they'd always called him Jed."

Her good humor was proof against the insinuation contained in Miss Prindle's present of a black lace cap; it overflowed into delight to welcome the "elegant silver butter dish," the pickle dish and spoonholder, fashioned intricately, with a maximum of glass and a minimum of silver; it accepted gayly the gallant speeches of Deacon White, whose lagging intentions were visibly quickened by this scene of pleasant comfort and good will, though he himself had only thought fit to bring a britannia teapot with a black knob on the handle.

"Out of his store," so Mrs. Abijah commented to Elvira, "and old stock he couldn't sell off at that; for there's a dent down clost to the handle, an' I expect it leaks. Your Aunt Hannah better look out; it's pretty hard to marry for money and work for love!"

But the evening was without a flaw for Aunt Hannah; and when, at last, the guests were gone, the dishes washed and put away, the house "red up," the presents inspected for the last time, and she and Elvira had dropped into their old places upon the doorstep for a moment's rest before going to bed, she breathed a gentle sigh as she said: "Well, Elvira, it's all over, an' I've had a real good time, too; if only your Uncle Jed could a' been here to enjoy it with me!"—Peterson's Magazine.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Eloquent Preacher Discourses on the Love of David and Jonathan.

Both Feet Crippled, But It Made No Difference to David—He Took the Unfortunate Into His Fine Palace, and Sat Him Down at the Royal Banquet.

Dr. Talmage's text was II Samuel xi., 1 and 13: "Is there yet any that is left of the house of Saul that I may show him kindness for Jonathan's sake? * * * So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerusalem, for he did eat continually at the King's table, and was lame on both his feet."

Was there ever anything more romantic and chivalrous than the love of David and Jonathan? At one time Jonathan was up and David was down. Now David is up and Jonathan's family is down. As you have often heard of two soldiers before going into battle making a covenant that if one is shot the survivor will take charge of the body, the watch, the mementos, and perhaps of the bereft family of the one that dies, so David and Jonathan had made a covenant, and now, that Jonathan is dead, David is inquiring about his family that he may show kindness unto them for their father Jonathan's sake. Careful search is made, and a son of Jonathan by the dreadfully homely name of Mephibosheth is found. His nurse in his infancy had let him fall, and the fall had put both his ankles out of place, and they had never been set. This decrepit, poor man is brought into the palace of King David. David looks upon him with melting tenderness, no doubt seeing in his face a resemblance to his old friend, the deceased Jonathan. The whole bearing of King David toward him seems to say: "How glad I am to see you, Mephibosheth. How you remind me of your father, my old friend and benfactor. I made a bargain with your father a good many years ago, and I am going to keep it with you. What can I do for you, Mephibosheth? I am resolved what to do. I will make you a rich man. I will restore to you the confiscated property of your grandfather Saul, and you shall be a guest of mine as long as you live, and you shall be seated at my table among the princes." It was too much for Mephibosheth, and he cried out against it, calling himself a dead dog. "Be still," says David, "I don't do this on your own account; I do this for your father Jonathan's sake. I can never forget his kindness. I remember when I was hounded from place to place how he befriended me. Can I ever forget how he stripped himself of his courtier apparel and gave it to me instead of my sherherd's coat, and how he took off his own sword and belt and gave them to me instead of my sling? Oh, I can never forget him. I feel as if I couldn't do enough for you, his son. I don't do it for your sake; I do it for your father Jonathan's sake." "So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerulsalem; for he did eat continually at the king's table, and was lame on both his feet."

There is so much gospel in this quaint incident that I am embarrassed to know where to begin. Whom do Mephibosheth, and David, and Jonathan make you think of.

Mephibosheth, in the first place, stands for the disabled human soul. Lord Byron describes sin as a charming recklessness, as a gallantry, as a Don Juan; George Sand describes sin as triumphant in many ntricate plots; Gavarina, with his engraver's knife, always shows sin as a great jocularity; but the Bible presents it as a Mephibosheth, lame on both feet. Sin, like the nurse in the context, attempted to carry us, and let us fall, and we have been disabled, and in our whole moral nature we are decrepit. Sometimes theologians haggle about a technicality. They use the words "total depravity," and some people believe in the doctrine, and some reject it. What do you mean by total depravity? Do you mean that every man is as bad as he can be? Then I do not believe it either. But do you mean that sin has let us fall, that it has sacrificed and disabled, and crippled our entire moral nature, until we can not walk straight, and are lame in both feet? Then I admit your proposition. There is not so much difference in an African jungle, with barking, howling, hissing, fighting quadruped and reptile, and Paradise with its animals coming before Adam when he patted them and stroked them and gave them names, so that the panther was as tame as the cow, and the condor as tame as the dove, as there is between the human soul disabled and that soul as God originally constructed it. I do not care what the sentimentalists or the poets say in regard to sin; in the name of God I declare to you to-day that sin is disorganization, disintegration, ghastly disfiguration, hobbling deformity.

Your modern theologian tells you that man is little out of sorts; he sometimes thinks wrong; he sometimes does wrong; indeed, his nature needs a little moral surgery, an outside splint, a slight compress, a little rectification. Religion is a good thing to have; it might some day come into use. Man is partially wrong, not all wrong. He is lame in one foot. Bring the salve of divine grace and the ointment, and the pain extractor, and we will have his one foot cured. Man is only half wrong, not altogether wrong. In what is man's nature right? In his will? his affections? his judgment? No. There is an old book that says: "The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint," Mephibosheth lame in both feet. Our belief of the fact that sin has sacrificed and deformed our souls increases as we go on in years. When you started life you thought that man was a little marred by sin, and he was about one-tenth wrong. By the time you had gone through the early experience of your trade, or occupation, or profession, you believed that man was about half wrong. By the time you came to mid-life you believed that man was three-fourths wrong. But within these past few years, since you have been so lied about and swindled and cheated, you have come to the conclusion that man is altogether wrong, and now you can say with the prayer book and with the Bible: "There is no health in us." Now you believe with the prophet, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." Whatever you may have believed before, now you believe that Mephibosheth is lame on both feet.

Again, Mephibosheth in the text stands for the disabled human soul humbled and restored. When this invalid of my text got a command to come to King David's palace, he trembled. The fact was that the grandfather of Mephibosheth had treated David most shockingly, and now Mhibosheth says to himself: "What does the king want of me? Isn't it enough that I am lame? Is he going to destroy my life? Is he going to wreak on me the vengeance which he holds toward my grandfather Saul? It's too bad." But go to the palace Mephibosheth must, since the king has commanded it. With staff and crutches and helped by his friends, I see Mephibosheth going up the stairs of the palace. I hear his staff and crutches rattling on the tessellated floor of the throne-room. No sooner have these two persons confronted each other—Mephibosheth and David the king—than Mephibosheth throws himself flat on his face before the king, and styles himself a dead dog. In the east, when a man styles himself a dog, he utters the utmost term of self-abnegation. It is not a term so strong in this country, where, if a dog has a fair chance, he sometimes shows more nobility of character than some human specimens that we wot of; but the many curs of the Oriental cities, as I know by my own observation, are utterly detestable. Mephibosheth gives the utmost term of self-loathing when he compares himself to a dog, and dead at that.

Consider the analogy. When the command is given from the palace of Heaven to the human soul to come, the soul begins to tremble. It says: "What is God going to do with me now? Is he going to destroy me? Is He going to wreak his vengeance upon me?" There is more than one Mephibosheth trembling now, because God has summoned him to the palace of divine grace. What are you trembling about? God has no pleasure in the death of a [illegible]. He does not send for you to hurt you. He sends for you to do you good. A Scotch preacher had the following circumstances brought under his observation: There was a poor woman in the parish who was about to be turned out because she could not pay her rent.

One night she heard a loud knocking at the door, and she made no answer, and hid herself. The rapping continued louder, louder, louder, but she made no answer and continued to hide herself. She was almost frightened unto death. She said: "That's the officer of the law come to throw me out of my home."

A few days after a Christian philanthropist met her in the street and said: "My poor woman, where were you the other night? I came round to your house to pay your rent. Why didn't you let me in? Were you at home?" "Why," she replied, "was that you?" "Yes, that was me; I came to pay your rent." "Why," she said, "if I had had any idea it was you I would have let you in. I thought it was an officer come to cast me out of my home." Oh, soul, that loud knocking at thy gate to-day is not the sheriff come to put you in jail; it is the best friend you ever had come to be your security. You shiver with terror because you think it is wrath. It is mercy. Why, then, tremble before the King of Heaven and earth calls you to his palace? Stop trembling and start right away. "Oh," you say, "I can't start. I have been so lamed by sin, and so lamed by evil habit I can't start. I am lame in both feet." My friend, we come out with our prayers and sympathies to help you up to the palace. If you want to get to the palace you may get there. Start now. The Holy Spirit will help you. All you have to do is just to throw yourself on your face at the feet of the King, as Mephibosheth did.

Mephibosheth's canimal comparison seems extravagant to the world, but when a man has seen himself as he really is, and has seen how he has been treating the Lord there is no term vehement enough to express his self-condemnation. The dead dog of Mephibosheth's comparison fails to describe the man's utter loathing of himself. Mephibosheth's posturing does not seem too prostrate. When a soul is convicted first he prays upright. Then the muscles of his neck relax, and he is able to bow his head. After awhile, by an almost superhuman effort, he kneels down to pray. After awhile, when he has seen God and seen himself, he throws himself flat on his face at the feet of the King, just like Mephibosheth. The fact is, if we could see ourselves as God sees us we would perish at the spectacle. You would have no time to overhaul other people: Your cry would be: "God, be merciful to me, a sinner."

And again: Mephibosheth in my text stands for the disabled human soul saved for the sake of another. Mephibosheth would never have got into the palace on his own account. Why did David ransack the realm to find that poor man, and then bestow upon him a great fortune, and command a farmer of the name of Ziba to culture the estate and give to this invalid Mephibosheth half the proceeds every year? Why did King David make such a mighty stir about a poor fellow who would never be of any use to the throne of Israel? It was for Jonathan's sake. It was Robert Burns calls for "auld lang syne." David could not forget what Jonathan had done for him in other days. Three times this chapter has it that all this kindness on the part of David to Mephibosheth was for his father Jonathan's sake. The daughter of Peter Martyr, through the vice of her husband, came down to penury, and the senate of Zurich took care of her for her father's sake. Sometimes a person has applied to you for help, and you have refused him, but when you found he was the son or brother of some one who had been your benefactor in former days, and by a glance you saw the resemblance of your old friend in the face of the applicant, you relented and you said: "Oh, I will do this for your father's sake." You know by your experience what my text means. Now, my friends, it is on that principle that you and I are to get into the King's palace.

The most important part of every prayer is the last three or four words of it—"For Christ's sake." Do not rattle off those words as though they were merely the finishing stroke of the prayer. They are the most important part of the prayer. When in earnestness you go before God and say, "For Christ's sake," it rolls in, as it were, upon God's mind all the memories of Bethlehem and Gennesaret and Golgotha. When you say before God, "For Christ's sake," you hold before God's mind every groan, every tear, every crimson drop of His only begotten Son. If there is anything in all the universe that will move God to an act of royal benefaction, it is to say: "For Christ's sake." God is omnipotent, but He is not strong enough to resist that cry, "For Christ's sake." If a little child should kneel behind God's throne and should say, "For Christ's sake," the great Jehovah would turn around on His throne to look at her and listen. No prayer ever gets to Heaven but for Christ's sake. No soul is ever comforted but for Christ's sake. The world will never be redeemed but for Christ's sake. Our name, however illustrious it may be among men, before God stands only for inconsistency and sin; but there is a name, a potent name, a blessed name, a glorious name, an everlasting name, that we may put upon our lips as a sacrament and upon our forehead as a crown, and that is the name of Jesus, our divine Jonathan, who stripped himself of His robe and put on our rags, and gave us His sword and took our broken reed, so that now, whether we are well or sick, whether we are living or dying, if we speak that name it moves Heaven to the center and God says: "Let the poor soul come in. Carry him up into the throne room of the palace. Though he may have been in exile, though sin may have crippled him on this side, and sorrow may have crippled him on the other side, and he is lame in both his feet, bring him up into the palace, for I want to show him everlasting kindness for Jonathan's sake."

Again: Mephibosheth in my text stands for the disabled human soul lifted to the king's table. It was more difficult in those times even than it is now for common men to get into a royal dining room. The subjects might have come around the rail of the palace and might have seen the lights kindled, and might have seen the clash of the knives and the rattle of the golden goblets, but not get in. Stout men with stout feet could not get in once in all their lives to one banquet, yet poor Mephibosheth goes in, lives there and is every day at the table. Oh, what a getting up in the world it was for poor Mephibosheth! Well, though you and I may be wofully lamed with sin, for our divine Jonathan's sake, I hope we will all get in to dine with the King.

Before dining we must be introduced. If you are invited to a company of persons where there are distinguished people present, you are introduced: "This is the senator." "This is the governor." "This is the president." Before we sit down at the King's table in Heaven I think we will want to be introduced. Oh, what a time that will be, when you and I, by the grace of God, get into Heaven, and are introduced to the mighty spirits there, and some one will say: "This is Joshua." "This is Paul." "This is Moses." "This is John Knox." "This is John Milton." "This is Martin Luther." "This is George Whitefield." Oh, shall we have any strength left after such a round of celestial introduction? Yea! We shall be potentates ourselves. Then we shall sit down at the King's table with the sons and daughters of God, and one will whisper to us and say: "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God!" and some one at the table will say, "How long will it last? All other banquets at which I sat ended. How long will this last?" and Paul will answer, "Forever!" and Joshua will say "Forever!" and John Knox will say "Forever!" and George Whitefield will say "forever!"

And the wine at that banquet will be old wine; it will be very old wine; it will be the oldest wine of Heaven; it will be the wine that was trodden out from the red clusters on the day when Jesus trod the winepress alone. Wine already more than eighteen centuries old. And no one will deride us as to what we were in this world. No one will bring up our imperfections here, our sins here. All our earthly imperfections completely covered up and hidden. Mephibosheth's feet under the table. Kingly fare. Kingly vesture. Kingly companionship. We shall reign forever and ever. I think that banquet will mean more to those who had it hard in this world than to those who had it easy. That banquet in David's palace meant more to Mephibosheth than to any one else, because he had been poor and crippled, and despised, and rejected. And that man who in this world is blind will better appreciate the light of Heaven than we who in this world had good eyesight. And that man who in this world was deaf will better appreciate the music of Heaven than we who in this world had a good hearing. And those will have a higher appreciation of the easy locomotion of that land who in this world were Mephibosheths.

IT is not generally known that the ex-Empress Eugenia is partly an Irishwoman. On one side she was descended from an Irish soldier of fortune, who made a name and place for himself in the interminable Spanish wars.

A LITTLE FAIRY.

There was once a little fairy
  In a toy shop in the west,
Dressed in garments white and shining
  With a crown and spangled vest.
And her eyes were blue and tender,
  And her smile was glad and sweet;
She was wound inside with clockwork,
  So she danced with tireless feet.

It chanced that to the window
  Came a little prince one day,
In a dainty suit of velvet
  And a cap with feathers gay.
And he praised her for her beauty
  And the lightness of her dance,
Till her foolish heart was fluttered
  By the wonder of his glance.

The little prince was wealthy,
  So he bought her for his own,
And the fairy and her spangles
  And her heart were his alone.
Then she whispered, oh, so gladly,
  As he bore her far away:
"Though I'm but a silly fairy
  He will love me now alway."

But he wearied of his plaything,
  Just as wiser people do,
And he broke her heart, they tell me,
  When she old and faded grew.
He had other things to please him—
  Ships and horses too, I trow,
And you wouldn't know the fairy
  If you chanced to see her now.
—Florence Hoare, in Pall Mall Gazette.

ADVENTURE WITH A LION.

The lion is not by any means a loving or a lovable beast. I have not enjoyed the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with this king of quadrupeds in his native wilds and solitudes. I speak now simply from a home experience—from what I have seen of him in zoological gardens, traveling caravans and menageries; but, judging from these posts of observation, I think I have formed a tolerably fair estimate of his character and disposition. The story of the mouse that nibbled the net, set the captive monarch free, and earned the latter's undying gratitude; with that of Androcles, picking out the thorn, and discovering an old friend years afterwards in the fierce animal who had been commissioned to eat him, are all very well, and pretty and picturesque in their way, but these were evidently exceptionally good-natured brutes, and modern representatives of the "genus" would, I fear, have exhibited far less scruple and made short work of both.

I have always, from a boy, liked to stand within a few inches (the bars between us) of one of these majestic creatures, and peer into those huge bronze eyes, turned scornfully away with that far-off look as though gazing into the depths of distant forests. I was one day thus interestingly engaged, when a young artist came, with crayons and sketch-book, in the hope of getting a good front view of our tawny friend's physiognomy and transferring it afterwards to canvas; but the latter, not in a mood to appreciate the compliment, wheeled deliberately round and sat down with his back to us. Getting tired of the sulks, however, by and by he arose and went to quench his thirst at the trough. "Nothing could be better," cried the enraptured artist. "I wanted to catch him at that," and he made a splendid picture with a few masterly strokes of a little bit of charcoal, held lightly between his finger and thumb.

On another occasion I stood watching a very large lion in the L—— Zoological gardens. He had finished his dinner and was lying half asleep in the front of the cage, with his paws crossed and a huge well-polished bone between them, when a handsome young sailor approached, put his hand coolly through, seized the drowsy captive by the mane, and shook him as one would a tame cat. The lion awoke quickly at the insult, and darted forth a paw, but I pulled the daring youth back by the collar just in time to save his arm. I shall not soon forget the rage of the angry beast behind the bars, the lightning flash of his eyes, and the roar he set up at not being able to redress the grievance.

Let me now shift the scene from England to a small settlement in upper Canada, 100 miles or more north of Lake Ontario, and not far from one of my old hunting-grounds.

Hans Derrick, an enterprising showman, by dint of infinite pains and perseverance, had brought up his four caravans of animals into the "bush" on exhibition. Being quite a new thing in that out-of-the-way part of the world, Derrick's collection drew numbers of people from the neighboring settlements, and there was a full tent of enthusiastic spectators, a wild-beast performance being promised as part of the show. Next to the elephant, who claimed the largest share of popular wonder and admiration, the lion—called "Gen. Taylor," in compliment to that military hero who was then earning laurels in Mexico—enjoyed a fair amount of both: He was a prodigiously fine specimen, and, except now and then, when something ruffled him (on which occasion he thought nothing of eating a keeper or two), a beast of tolerably amiable deportment and gentlemanly manners. I was subsequently informed that he had bitten off the head of a young girl who was supposed to be a particular favorite of his. Derrick, though I detected a little anxiety on his countenance at times, was able to walk into his cage, caress him, and do other things that kept the onlookers' hearts in a pleasing state of palpitation. Having gone through these everyday feats, he now advanced, whip in hand, and invited any person present to accompany him into the den and shake its grim occupant by the paw.

There was a dead silence. No one moved.

"Will any gentleman come forward?" repeated Hans, gazing round the sea of faces. "The general is in good humor to-night and receives company."

Still no one accepted his offer. A man got up from his seat, but sat down again suddenly. Two others did the same, their wives seizing them by their jacket skirts.

Derrick laughed scornfully. "What!" he cried, striking his boot with the light whip he held, "I see several six-foot-and-a-half fellows among you, and is there not one daring enough to follow me?"

Nettled at this challenge, which I regarded as a reflection on the British coolness and courage, I arose and nodded.

"Hurrah! hurrah! the young Englishman is going in!" was the immediate cry, and the shouts and clapping of hands and stamping served to excite the lion, who walked up and down his cage and lashed his tail, stopping ever and anon to look menacingly through the bars.

"Have a red-hot iron ready," whispered Hans to a tall and powerful negro, who was one of his staff.

I regarded this "aside" as a test for my nerves, but learned afterwards that Derrick was not joking, the "General's" temper being often extremely uncertain.

Hans now entered the long caravan, desiring me to follow and close the door behind me; to keep my eye steadily on "Taylor," and when I retired, to walk slowly backwards while he (Derrick) covered my retreat. He then gave the general a smart cut or two with his whip—for which playful piece of chastisement I was certainly not able to appreciate the exact necessity at this critical moment.

The people in the circus nearly all leaped to their feet as word went round that the "General" had been the death of two of his valets-de-chambre, and severely bitten and clapper-clawed another, who was only rescued from his clutch by the application of a kitchen poker at a white heat thrust into his flank.

I held up my hand to beg for quiet, but it was of no use; some of the men scrambled over the benches and strode forward boisterously.

I did not feel encouraged by this impudent display of interest in the proceedings, but I knew that it was best to put a bold front on matters: and walking steadily forward, I placed my hand upon the gigantic beast's shoulder, smoothing down his mane at the same time in a way that I intended to be friendly. "So, ho, General! So ho, old boy!"

This was the easiest part of the business, and my reception (not having been honored with an invite) was more gracious than I had any right or reason to expect.

"How do you feel, sir?" inquired Hans. "Pretty calm and collected?"

"Oh, quite, thank you."

"Ever presented before?"

"Only once that I am able to recollect."

"There's a claw for you!" holding it up with an air of pride. "Mind you don't tread on it, for it would take a handsomer apology than you could offer to atone for the offense."

"I will endeavor not to offend."

"Would you like to put your head in the General's mouth?"

"Decidedly not, being unprovided with a spare one."

"Will you get on his back?"

"I should prefer taking a few riding lessons first. Will you oblige me by keeping that whip of yours quiet."

"Well, yes. Open your jaws, General, and show the gentleman your box of ivories. Not a bad set of masticators, sir, are they?"

"Very fine, indeed; and all his own, I presume?"

"Just so," laughing; "he has not troubled the dentist much that I am aware of."

The lion at this juncture of the dialogue gave me a most malignant look. Was he hurt at what I was insinuating about his teeth? And there was a suppressed ventriloquial roar and rumbling, like thunder dying away among distant hills.

"I was wrong," muttered Derrick, with a slight hesitation in his manner, "our friend is not in the best of tempers to-night. I would rather you didn't stay longer. He is displeased at something. Retire steadily, with your face toward us—steadily, mark you; any sudden rush or show of haste, and you are lost! He is forcing me back, and means mischief. Ha! dare you, you brute!"

This angry remonstrance was offered to the lion, and not to myself, for the beast was glaring fiercely at me over Hans' arm and shoulder, and describing unpleasant hieroglyphics with the tip of his tail. Then came another series of those internal rumblings that had startled me before. I felt sorry that I had made that disparaging remark about the animal's teeth; but it was too late to withdraw it now. I reached the door, and opened it. Derrick, gradually yielding ground, forced nearly off his legs, and appearing to have lost all his presence of mind, could not do what he intended, and I saw that every instant was precious. Making a rapid, undignified exit, therefore, I dragged him after me with one hand, half by the hair and half by the coat-collar, and with the other slammed the gate, which fastened with a spring. I had acted quite on the impulse of the moment, and without knowing much what I did; but it was the right thing, I was told. The charge of the infuriated general followed, and the shock nearly sent the bars flying from their sockets. Then Hans and I both sat down and laughed.

"Not bad!" cried he, wringing my hand. "Phew! It was warm work. Let us go and take a drink."

I hope I am not doing the good people of K—— an injustice, but judging from the vociferous plaudits I received from some, and the ambiguous greetings of others, I was led to infer that while half the assembled company were glad to see me once more safe and sound among them, the remainder were a little disappointed and chagrined at my not having formed one of the side dishes for the general's supper.—Argosy.

The Dog Watch.

"The dog watch," a term used by sailors, was once the dodge watch, a short watch being introduced between these longer in duration in order that too great an amount of work should not be put upon the same men in the course of the day.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

FOR BERRY GROWERS.

Hints on the Propagation of Strawberries and Black Raspberries.

It is not always best to invest too much money in new things. Nowadays, hundreds of new varieties of fruits are being propagated and introduced through the catalogues, describing the characteristics and good qualities of each in such a way that would excite one's curiosity and tempt them to invest. No doubt, though, some of the newer varieties are better than the old ones. But if you desire to try something new, don't "go in too steep;" buy just a few and try them, and if they prove satisfactory, you can make more of the same by propagating them yourself, just the same as the nurserymen.

It is possible to produce 500 to 1,000 strawberry plants from one healthy plant in one season. The plant is put in a very rich bed, deeply trenched and enriched the year previously with all the manure that can be mixed thereon. The plant then set, work the soil about it frequently, but not deep. Remove all the runners that appear at first. As the plant gains strength, permit the runners to remain, and draw them out in all directions from the parent plant, laying a small stone over each where the leaves appear. (See Fig. 1.) When rooted, separate them, set them from four to six feet apart each way, and treat them in the same manner as just described above for the parent plant. Continue this course, watering in time of drought with diluted liquid manure. Soil so rich as that is not desirable for producing fruit, but is just the thing for growing more plants.

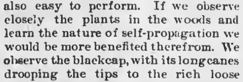

FIG. 1.

Propagating the black raspberry is also easy to perform. If we observe closely the plants in the woods and learn the nature of self-propagation we would be more benefited therefrom. We observe the blackcap, with its long canes drooping the tips to the rich loose ground, where they coil and assume a snakish appearance and send out rootlets into the rich soil, thus forming a new plant. The natural mode of self-propagation is almost unknown in a great many places nowadays, since the woods are being cleared out, as the winds have full sway, swinging the plants to and fro, forbidding them fixing their tips in the ground. Natural conditions have been changed to some extent, and now nature has to be assisted somewhat to fill the deficiency. Just after the fruit has been gathered is the time to commence "tipping" your plants. Cultivate the soil very finely and dig little holes two to three inches deep, and bend the tip ends of the canes into them perpendicularly, not slantingly, and cover with dirt to hold them in place. (See Fig. 2.) By following this method attentively it is possible to make above a hundred plants from a vigorous plant in a season.

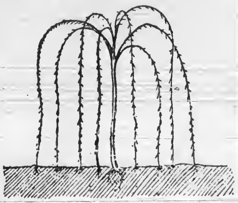

FIG. 2.

The red raspberry and blackberry are propagated from the roots sprouting up. It is quite an item to the farmer and fruit grower to understand propagation; they may just have only one plant of a rare variety and increase it to many the same season, thus getting a start very cheaply, even if they do pay a big price for the first one.—S. C. Vaughn, in Farm and Fireside.

PROFITS OF DAIRYING.

Why Butter Makers Should Study the Tastes of Their Customers.

The pleasant feature about dairying is the profit. If the profit is not found, there is no pleasure in the work. This is a general law, but it applies with a special force to dairying, because profitable dairying is a fine art, and success is won by strict attention to business. The man who looks upon a cow as a necessary evil, can never be a decided success as a dairyman, any more than a slovenly farmer can make a success at farming. The price received for butter depends chiefly upon the taste of the consumer. The intelligent butter maker studies the tastes of these people who are willing to pay well for what suits them, and then he learns how to make that kind of butter. It is the only way he can get their money. It is not the expense of manufacture that fixes the price, says a writer. The consumer cares not that the butter perhaps cost untold labor on the part of some one who churned and prepared it for market. If inferior, it sells for an inferior price, regardless of the cost of production, and if it is superior, it sells at top prices, though made with ease and little expense. And the beauty remains that the cost of producing the best butter need not be greater than that of producing goods of a poorer quality; in fact the bad article is generally made at the greatest cost. Ignorance is expensive. I think it will make every one who owns cows a better dairyman to sit down and compare the prices of dairy goods with other farm products. If your cheap grains can be converted into 20 and 25-cent butter and 10-cent cheese or $1 to $1.15 per 100 for milk, it will pay better than selling the raw material and robbing the farm of all the fertilizing material that much of the land is already in need of.—Farmers' Voice.

THE ROMAN ROADS.

Some of Them Are Still in Use and Call for No Repairs.

The Roman road was built for eternity. When the roadbed had been prepared by excavation it was carefully refilled, regardless of expense, with layers of sand, stones and cement. The surface was so solidly dressed that the wear and tear was reduced to a minimum. Investigations with regard to the preparation of the roadbeds were made years ago by Bergier on Roman roads that are still in use in France, and with the following results: In one road the excavation down to hardpan was three feet deep. This trench was filled up first with a layer of sand and cement an inch thick; then came a foot layer of flattish stones and cement; then a foot layer of small traveled stones and cement. These last two layers were so hard and firmly knit together that tools could break off fragments only with great difficulty. The next layer consisted of a foot of cement and sand, covered with a top-dressing of gravel. In another road in France the foot layer of cement and sand changed places with the layer of cement and traveled stones. A third road in France was examined at a point where it had been raised 20 feet above the level of the surrounding country, and a vertical section revealed a structure of five layers. First came the great fill of 16½ feet; on top of this fill they placed first a foot layer of flattish stones and cement, then a foot layer of flattish stones without mortar of any kind, then a half-foot layer of firmly-packed dirt, then a half-foot layer of small gravel in hard cement, and, lastly, a half-foot layer of cement and large gravel.

Paved roads were exceptional. An example of paved roads is the Via Appia, whose pavement consists of a hard kind of stone, such as is used for millstones. The stones of this pavement are carefully hewn and fitted together so precisely that the road often appears to be solid rock, and has proved to be so indestructible that after 2,000 years of continuous use it is still a magnificent road. Ordinarily, however, the top dressing of the road consisted of gravel and hard cement, and when, in the countless inscriptions such and such a governor is said to have restored a given road, reference is made to this top dressing of gravel and cement. The width of the military road was usually 60 feet; the raised center being 20 feet wide, with side tracks of the width of 20 feet. In some roads the raised center was paved, while the side tracks were dressed with gravel and cement.

The viae privatae and the feeders of the military roads were usually dirt roads. They were much narrower than the military roads; sometimes they had a width of only ten feet, and, indeed, the feeders of the Via Appia were only two feet wide, but paved. The width of the Roman roads, all told, varied, therefore, from two to 120 feet.—N. Y. Independent.

MAKE IT AN ISSUE.

The Bad Roads Question in Township and County Politics.

Discussing the bad roads question in the light of a local campaign issue, the Los Angeles (Cal.) Times makes the pertinent question:

"By way of a starter in this matter, how would it do this fall to make candidates for supervisors take a cast-iron pledge to favor a comprehensive system of road improvement that will put an end to the present extravagant method of tinkering roads, and give us the beginning of a first-class system of public highways? Our present method, or rather lack of method, of constructing roads is extravagant and ridiculous, and would have excited the derision of those early road builders 2,000 years or more ago, whose work still remains in good preservation on the continent of Europe. The American idea of a country road appears to be to level off the soil, and wherever there is a hole filling it with loose dirt—and then filling it again. It needs as much science to construct a first-class road that will last as it does to put up a building, yet it is taken for granted that the first man you meet on the street can build a road. Consequently it is no wonder that the roads of this country cost every five years almost as much as the courthouse, and then we have nothing to show for it."

DAIRY SUGGESTIONS.

Always strain the milk as soon as it is drawn.

Churning at too high a temperature, or too long, will produce greasy butter, in which the grain is injured.

It is the attention paid to seemingly insignificant things in dairying that make or mar the profits.

Large cows need more feed than smaller ones, and a cow in the flush of milk needs more than when dry.

If you fear motties in butter never ship it until it has been tested. Work out the streaks if any are in it.

It is essential in dairying that the food of the cows be uniform, and the supply should be arranged to have it so.—Rural World.

Travel with a Friend

Who will protect you from those enemies—nausea, indigestion, malaria and the sickness produced by rocking on the waves, and sometimes by inland traveling over the rough beds of the ill laid railroads. Such a friend is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Ocean mariners, yachtsmen, commercial and theatrical agents, and tourists testify to the protective potency of this effective safeguard, which conquers also rheumatism, nervousness and biliousness.

STATE NEWS.

Louisville has 80,114 children of school age.

Lexington's oldest citizen died last week, aged 82.

John Johnson was killed by lightning at Harrodsburg.

Gov. Bradley has decided not to grant Dr. Massie a pardon.

A violent wind storm did much damage in Christian county.

Luther Clark, aged 12, was killed by lightning in Barren county.

A rain and windstorm did much damage to crops in Harrison county.

The heaviest rain and hail storm in 12 years visited Richmond last week.

Wm. Johnson was killed by lightning while hoeing potatoes, near Harrodsburg.

The 190,000 people of Louisville live on an area fourteen and one-half square miles.

There are 594 cases on the docket of the Bell Circuit Court, now in session at Pineville.

Hailstones hit and crippled two work hands on T. D. Chenault's farm in Madison county.

Frank Harting, of Clay county, fell dead when he heard that his divorced wife had married.

Two convicts in the penitentiary had a bloody fight with bricks one day last week. The skull of one was crushed.

Mr. Sam Rose, a prominent farmer of Logan county, shot and seriously wounded three negroes who had insulted his wife.

Two of Henderson's well known young society men fought ten rounds with two ounce gloves on account of a love affair.

Nearly one hundred physicians of Christian county, Ky., have been arrested for failing to file a list of deahts and births to their practice.

Geo. O. Barnes will preach at Russellville for a while. He has a fancy now that the Anglo-Saxon race is composed of the "Lost Tribes of Israel."

The teachers are about to get the last of the amount due them for last year. Treasurer Long has mailed checks, aggregating $208,000, to the County Superintendents.

A jury at Stanford sentenced John Murphy to seven years' imprisonment for shooting Frank Ellis, and then eleven of the jurymen signed a petition for a pardon.

Lafayette Brooks, aged twenty, who murdered Gus McKenzie at West Liberty, on Monday night of last week, was tried and convicted last Friday and sentenced to be hanged September 15.

A letter from the agent of a harvesting machine company, who has been travling all over Indiana, says that one-third of the wheat in that State will never be harvested, and that one-half of the remainder will not yield five bushels per acre.

The Cal East farm near Calcast, was sold to Maj. J. D. Harris for $45 per acre. Sixteen years ago this same farm sold for $67 10 per acre, a decrease in that time of $22 10 on the acre. The land today is just as good as ever.—Richmond Climax.

At base ball game 7 miles from Vanceburg, W. M. Carver, a prominent farmer, had his throat cut from ear to ear and a terrible gash across the forehead by Leonard Penrod, who was long confined in jail for shooting a man. He is known as "The Fighting Preacher."

Matt Gibson is having luck in pigs. On Saturday one sow gave birth to 14 pigs; on Sunday forenoon another had 12, and that afternoon a third had 14. The fourth that made a record last year of 16. is expected within a day or two to materially increase the out put.—Richmond Climax.

Secretary Brown, of the Railroad Commission, is in receipt of a letter stating that all differences about some Anderson county district school tax, against the Louisville Southern, have been settled, and that the road will pay the money. This completes an exceptionally fine record for 1895, for which year every dollar's worth of railroad tax has been collected without litigation.—Capital.

A deadly duel occurred near Adairville. Dick Younger, a farmer, and a desperate man, went to town, loaded up with mean whisky, rode out of town and fired his pistol. H. S. Harmon, town marshal, jumped on a horse and started after Younger. An hour later both were found dead about a mile from town, Younger lying in a field near the road and Harmon in the middle of the road. Both had been shot through the heart. There were no eye witnesses.

POLITICAL.

The Populists will hold their State convention at Paducah on the 20th inst.

Hon. E. E. Settle opened his canvass for Congress in the Seventh district, last Monday.

The Owen Herald says Mr. Settle has no intention of quitting the race for the Congressional nomination until it has been won.

Senator Lindsay announces that he can not afford to leave the Democratic party on account of the currency question.—Commonwealth.

Although a so-called sound money Democrat, Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge has many enthusiastic friends among the 16 to 1 silver advocates in his Congressional District.

The canvass for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the First District, is warming up. Hendricks and Stone get very hot under the collar in their joint discussions. Each charge the other with being a recent convert to the cause of silver.

There is every indication that when the State Central Committee meets here on July 15, that the silver forces will set their picket lines on the county committees of every county in the State, so that very few but dyed-in-the-wool silver men will be left on guard in the regular party organization in the State.—Lexington Argonaut.

CROP AND STOCK.

Fifty cents is the ruling price for wheat in Lincoln.

The quality of the wheat delivered in Boyle so far is very fine.

The wheat crop in central Kentucky is about 50 per cent short.

Last week, Col. Milton, Young, of Fayette county, shipped a large batch of thoroughbred horses to Mexico.

The Commissioner of Agriculture thinks, from advices received from all over the State, that the wheat crop will not be above one-half.

Favorable crop reports are coming in from all parts of the county, and unless something unforeseen should interfere the farmers will be made glad by large yields of tobacco and corn especially.—Owen Herald.

It is estimated that 25,000 horses will be shipped from this country to England during the present year. The demand for them is due to the fact that electric motors have not been generally introduced on the street railways there.

Oats this year have been remarkable for the height of the stalk. Many fields have averaged over 5 feet. The highest we have seen this year was a bunch brought us by Mr. C. W. Moss, that measured five feet nine inches tall. They are the white oats.—Henry Local.

The chinch bug is causing many complaints from the farmers of the county. This pestiferous insect, now that the wheat has been harvested, has turned its attention to the corn. Our correspondents throughout the county made mention of this today. Thousands of these bugs are reported in the cornfields, but much of the corn has reached a stage where the insect can do it little injury. The melon growers are greatly worried also by the ravages of a small green bug or louse. It has attacked the canteloupe and cucumber vines and has done these crops serious damage. The prospects were never finer for a big melon crop until this insect struck the vines. The melon growers are trying to find some poison that will put a stop to these insects but have not succeeded so far. Poison that put a quietus to the average insect don't effect these little green bugs.—Maysville Bulletin.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

GRANT COUNTY
[Courier]

There is a great deal of sickness in and near Williamstown.

The county has received in dividends from turnpikes the sum of $492,51.

William Littell, one of the old and respectable citizens of Grant county, died at his home near Hards-scrable or Cherry Grove on last Friday morning. For several years past he has been a sufferer from heart failure.

One of the saddest deaths that has occurred in Grant county for many years was the death on Sunday morning at 7 o'clock of Mrs. G. W. Hill, the wife and helpmate of Brother G. W. Hill, who is known and loved all over Northern Kentucky. For four months Mrs. Hill had been a sufferer from pneumonia and fever. In fact she had not been stout for several years.

James Price, father of Dr. J. L. and Commodore Price, of Sherman, died at his home near Sherman last week. He was an aged and respected citizen of the county, a man of exemplary habits and kind disposition. He had lived in the neighborhood for nearly fifty years, and died with the universal respect of all who knew him.

OWEN COUNTY.
[News]

The docket of the Owen Circuit Court was about cleaned up last week and the juries discharged.

The Owenton Fair Company has set dates for the fall meeting, which will be held the 9, 10, 11 and 12 of September.

French Taylor, who lives near Breck, had a fine buggy stolen last Thursday night. So far he has been unable to get any trace of the thief.

Jesse Holbrook, jr., John Martin, Teal Roberts and other little boys, have discovered a cave in the Holbrook pasture, through which flows a stream of sulphur water. They are busy walling it up, and say they will open up a health resort.

Never in the history of this county were the prospects ever brighter for a large crop. The production of corn will be even greater than last year, and oats are splendid. Potatoes are bountiful, and, in fact, all kinds of vegetables will yield enormously Blackberries are beyond anything ever known before. The tobacco crop is elegant at this time of the season, although one cannot tell what that crop will be until harvested, but everything tends to show there will not be barn room enough to house it.

TRIMBLE COUNTY
[Banner.]

Lightning killed a fine milch cow for Mr. Lafe Bell last Friday.

Congressman Berry was in Bedford Monday shaking hands with old friends and looking after his fences.

The women are very busy in this community canning and preserving blackberries.

Last week we wrote that we had not received a fish story since we took the paper. While we were writing that W. C. Morgan, John Young, Emmett Barnes and Will Jackson were pulling bass out of Corn Creek as fast as they could operate their poles and lines. B. H. Voiers and Redford Callis had gone with the party. Burr had caught a cat fish at the mouth of the creek and then they stop biting. The party started up the creek and Burr said: "Oh! there is nothing in that clear water, I am going home." He and Redford went home. Burr never did know anything about fishing, and is afraid of the water anyhow. The other boys began to fish in the clear water, and at night had 78 bass which averaged a pound apiece. The next day they went to the same place and caught 92.

GALLATIN COUNTY.
[Independent]

Circuit Court convenes here Monday, July 20th. There will be quite a good sized docket.

The heavy rain and wind the first of the week caused the oats crop to nearly all fall down.

Miss Nora Summers, while riding a bicycle last Saturday evening, fell from the wheel, sustaining a severe gash over her eye.

A mad dog scare excited the town Tuesday. A dog from the country was set upon by a lot of dogs in town and it fought viciously and nearly everyone believes it was afflicted with rabies.

There is considerable complaint of the chintz bug in this county, it having done considerable damage to the small grain crop, especially wheat and now appears to be attacking the roots of the growing corn. S. C. Turley, of Napoleon, has adopted the means of exterminating the pest as recommended by the State agricultural experiment station at Lexington. He obtained some of the fungus from the Station, and caught a number of the bugs, putting them in a box with a fungus, and after they had eaten of it turned them loose to inoculate the other bugs, it being a poisonous substance, and spreading a contagion among the bugs, exterminates them. The great agricultural portions of the West were greatly affected by these pests, and this means was found the best to eradicate them. Mr. Turley believes they will become very numerous and destructive in this quarter unless some measure is taken for their destruction and advises all of the farmers whose fields are affected by the bugs to begin work at once. The State Experiment Station at Lexington, Ky., will furnish any farmer with the fungus free of charge by writing them, and it will be easy to get rid of the pests by this means.

There was a fatal shooting at the Clay Lick picnic on the 4th. John Lee, who resided on the farm of M. J. Castleman was shot by James W. Albro. Lee lived until last Thursday. Lee became incensed at a remark made to his daughter by Ed Rider, who was dancing in the set with her, and assaulted Rider, and a general fight followed, in which Albro, Rider's friend, took part and did the shooting.

THE following special dispatch from Burlington, appeared in Monday's Enquirer: "The approach of the campaign is bringing to light new timber for the congressional race in this district. There are several gentlemen who would like to succeed Colonel Berry, among them being Dr. Furnish, whose friends all through the district are urging his candidacy. Boone county has not had a Congressman since the Mexican war; hence the desire to have Dr. Furnish make the race. He is a native of our county, and graduated in Cincinnati, going from there to Bellevue Hospital, New York. He is a strong silver man and a loyal friend of Senator Blackburn."

THE gold-bugs will nominate a ticket of their own. There is no law to prevent them doing so.

TAX NOTICE!

I was unexpectedly called away from home on last Tuesday, therefore did not get a list for publication in the Recorder for taxes due me.

I wish to say now to those owing back taxes, that I am in a position that I am compelled to raise considerable money in order to meet my obligaions. I do not wish to put anyone to the extra expense and embarrassment of advertising their property to satisfy the taxes long past due. But, as I said in the outstart, that I am compelled to do so, and will do so, unless you come in and settle before the last of this month. Pay up and save costs.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1896. NO.

Wm. E. Russell, three times Democratic Governor of Massachusetts, was found dead in his bed in a fishing camp last Thursday morning. He was an able and successful politician.

Congressman Berry stands on the Chicago platform with both feet, and will make speeches in behalf of tho ticket. He is willing that the party make and promulgate its platform of principles.

The daily Commonwealth has been very much impfoved in the last few weeks. The manager, A. F. Calvert, knows what constitutes a good paper, and he is going to give the Covington people one.

The Owen News made a hard fight against the silver question, but it now submits gracefully to the action of the Chicago convention—recognizes the right of the majority to make the platform and select the candidate.

Senator Teller has written W. J. Bryan, Democratic nominee for the presidency, signifying his intentions of rendering him all the assistance in his power. Teller may succeed in landing a large sized block of silver Republicans in the Bryan camp.

Hon. T. B. Mathews will open his campaign at Bromley, next Saturday evening. His opponent, Hon. R. P. Ernest, did the opening act at same place last Saturday. The Republican activity in this Congressional District indicates that they entertain strong hopes of carrying it this fall.

The gold bugs are persisting in their efforts at reading out of the party Democrats who do not agree with them on the money question. The Democrats who stand by the action of the regularly constituted Democratic convention are denounced as Populists, revolutionists, anarchists, rabble, &c. These fellows have not learned the first principles of democracy—the majority must rule.

The State Central Committee made no changes in the Democratic Executive Committee of this county. The committee is composed of D. E. Castleman, Burlington; O. W. Gaines, Bullittsville; Elijah Parker, Petersburg; C. H. Acra, Bellevue; Richard Stephens, Rabbit-Hash; Dr. W. W. Smith, Hamilton; C. C. Roberts, Verona; Reuben Conner, Walton; J. C. Hughes, Beaver; B. L. Rice, Union; J. N. Pearson, Florence; Milton Souther, Constance.

Mr. Watterson could interest many Kentucky Democrats by informing them by cable from Geneva through his paper, as to what became of that large Democratic majority that prevailed in the Louisville district until recent years. While he and others were posing as great and wise leaders there an overwhelming Democratic majority was converted into a large Republican majority, and still he and other Louisville people pride themselves on their leadership as Democrats.

Hon. W. W. Dickerson, of Williamstown, refuses to support the Chicago platform or to vote for the nominees of the national Democratic convention, and as between Bryan and McKinley he will support the latter. In a letter to the C.-J., congratulating it upon the course it is pursuing, he says: "In the present crisis the country must rely largely upon the patriotism of the Democratic daily press to save it from dishonor of Populism, repudiation and anarchy—the three cardinal principles of the Chicago convention."

Col. Craddock in his paper, the Kentuckian-Citizen, says: "How this world is giving to lying!" and especially the New York World. When we arrived in Chicago the first man to greet us was Senator Lindsay, who standing in front of hotel (Auditorium) said with his kindly fat face and bright smile: "How are you, John,"(he calls everyone by given name.) We replied and added! "Well, I have just clipped and mailed back to Kentuckian-Citizen a telegram which your kindly face gives lie to in past. It is said you and Blackburn had been at outs but had made up." "Yes, it's a lie that we had ever been out," added the Senator. Next day the World published a full telegram with Senator Lindsay's name signed to it making him say things he never thought of, and he almost cursed in indignation. Mr. Bryan fared even worse at hands of the World, as it gave a column with his name signed and afterwards admitted it was a forgery, saying they had made it up from what they had read of his sentiments.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died, July 14th, 1896, Jenney M. Lassing, beloved wife of Hon. Leonard W. Lassing, of Boone Co., Ky.

She was the daughter of Thomas Kennedy and Louisa Cleveland, both of Kenton Co., Ky.

On the paternal side, a great grand daughter of that Thomas Kennedy, who was the pioneer settler, and owner of the land on which the original plat of the city of Covington was laid out; and owner of the once famous ferry between the cities of Covington and Cincinnati, antedating the building of the Suspension Bridge.

On the maternal side, a descendant and grand daughter of Levi Cleveland, an early settler and honored citizen of Kenton county, whose descendants have always occupied positions of esteem and respect.

Deceased was a loving and lovable woman; a devoted wife, and fond, watchful and loving mother.

Loved, honored and respected by her neighbors, and by a very large circle of acquaintances, for her kindly loving, unselfish nature; her charitable character, her hospitality; and her regard for every duty in life, as wife, mother, neighbor and friend.

Her remains were interred in the cemetery near Richwood church, Boone Co., Ky., after appropriate religious services in the church, conducted by Rev. W. H. Davis, the Pastor; and followed to the grave by a large concourse of loving and sorrowing neighbors and friends.

For in the language of Halleck,
"None knew her but to love her,
"None named her but to praise."

There remains to mourn with inconsolable sorrow, a stricken husband, to whose life she had been sunshine and joy for thirty eight years of married life; and a devoted daughter, to whose precepts and example she is indebted for every thing feminine and lovable in life.

KANSAS LETTER.

Valley Falls, Kan., July 17, '96.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Thinking a word from the west might not be out of place in your paper, I will give you a few items from this vicinity.

We have had an over-abundance of rain this summer, consequently the corn crop will not be as large as usual; for while the rains hindered planting and cultivating the corn, it was feeding the weeds which require no hoeing or cultivating, but flourish alike in sunshine and in shade.

It has been hard work to save the wheat and oats; but there is not much small grain raised here any more there is so little profit in it. Farther west they are more successful with corn; as wheat and oats have matured before the dry summer months with their hot winds, (that so often prevail in that region) come on.

We think that north eastern Kansas is the finest part of the State yet we some times have it too dry and other seasons too wet. These are the laws of nature and man, with all his wisdom and ingenuity, cannot control or make them different.

We prize the visits of the Recorder, because it comes from our old home (the land of our birth), and tho perusal of its pages recall to mind many incidents of our childhood, and though most of the persons we read of are strangers to us yet once in awhile we see the name of some schoolmate, teacher or friend, whom we may almost have forgotten, so many have been the years and so varied the scenes and changes we have passed through since we left our old Kentucky home. And often tho lines of a song sung by a little colored boy come into our mind: "I'll sing one song far my old Kentucky Home far away. The sun shines bright on my old Kentucky home: my old Kentucky home, far away." Now, Mr. Editor, I invite you and any and all of old Boone county residents to call on me if ever you should be so fortunate as to visit this country.

Mrs. Robert Utz.

It has been a long time since the farmers of this county encountered such very unfavorable weather for harvesting their hay and oats. The meadows, in a majority of instances, were not worth cutting, and the frequent showers have damaged, materially, nearly all the hay that has been cut. Oats are rotting in the shocks, and it looks like those in the field will be a total loss. The corn crop is what the farmers will have to depend on for food for their stock this winter.

POLITICAL.

The Congressional bee has begun buzzing in several hats in this district.

Judge A. A. Lewis, of Somerset, and a life long Republican, has declared for Bryan.

The Lexington Bimetallic Club will be known in the future as the Bryan Bimetallic Club.

It is said Judge Holman can have the congressional nomination in his district if he wants it.

Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, has left the Republican party and gone over to the Populists.

Hon. Sam C. Hardin, of Albany, Ky., is a Democratic candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District.

The Platt and Miller factions in New York are giving the Republican managers trouble. Each faction is demanding the leadership.

The Democratic nominee for the presidency will be invited to address the working men of Lexington and vicinity on Labor Day.

Young Bryan is a gallant leader of a righteous cause, and we waver not one moment in our conviction of the result awaiting us upon the ides of November.—Park City Times.

United States District Judge Robert W. Hughes, of Richmond, Virginia, who has been a Republican since the war, has declared for the nominees of the Chicago convention.

Kentucky is in the lead again. The first child to be named William Jennings Bryan, after his nomination, was born in Nicholasville this State. The child was of the regulation weight.

Hodges, Settle and Carroll, candidates for Congress spoke at Lexington on the 13th. Owens and Breckinridge were present but did not speak. Breckinridge said he would make the race.

The Carrollton Democrat is a pronounced gold standard paper, but it is now shouting for Bryan as lustily as any silver Democrat. It recognizes the rights of the majority to name the candidates.

Capt. J. W. Anderson, a leading Florida Republican, has flopped to Bryan, and says that every man who objects to Great Britian controlling this country's financial policy will vote for Bryan.

Some of the Democratic papers are urging the holding of another Democratic Convention and the putting of another ticket in the field. This would be the height of folly.—Georgetown Times.

The Democrats of Kentucky have done more for the Courier-Journal and Mr. Haldeman than for all other Democrats combined; yet both decline for a third time to support the Democratic nominees.—Argus.

The News is Democratic and while it has seen fit to differ with the majority of the party on the finance it does not propose to let that difference stand in the way of supporting the nominee.—Owen News.

The Democrats of Carroll county, with very few exceptions, are enthusiastically for the ticket and a number of Republicans are with us. Carroll's usual heavy Democratic majority will be increased without any trouble.—News.

If the future has in store nothing better than a choice between tho two evils of McKinley and a Robber Tariff and Bryan and a Dishonest Dollar—The Times will take to the woods and inaugurate an indiscriminate and impartial warfare on both.—Louisville Times.

Many of us may not like the platform adopted at Chicago, but what good will come from kicking about it? When a fellow is whipped the best way is not to whine about it, and if he can't help it it is the part of philosophy to grin and bear it.—Georgetown Times.

Henry Watterson flashes across the sea this message: "Another ticket our only hope. No compromise with dishonor." But, Marse Henry, there is another ticket in the field, and you ought to specify whether it is that or still another would meet your heart's longing.—Commonwealth.

Mr. Don Dickinson is said to be predicting that the Democrats will lose everything in Michigan. Well that will not be much. Under the management of Mr. Dickinson the Democrats of that State have nothing but one solitary member of the legislature, and he is so lonesome that he would like to be lost.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Talk about calling another Democratic convention—from whence will come the authority for a call. The Chicago convention was held in pursuance of the call by the regularly constituted Democratic authority, and the nominations were made according to prescribed Democratic usages of long standing, and no other National Democratic Convention can be convened in this year of grace.

There having been some speculation as to the next President's religious belief, an investigation into the matter for the benefit of the overscrupulous, discloses that the Hon. Wm. J. Bryan united with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at the age of 14. He neither drinks, chews tobacco nor swears. His language is pure, and he is just such a man as the people ought to, and will, elect in November.—Owensboro Messenger.

If this were a campaign of common sense, or even of sanity Mr. Bryan could be counted on to quickly talk himself to death; but as it is, Mr. Bryan's demagogic loquacity is to be the main reliance of his party for rabble-rousing votes. The "sober-thinking people" have already made up their minds against him and his platform.—Courier-Journal.

"The sober-thinking people," agree with the Courier-Journal, of course. Those who do not are, in the estimation of that paper rabble.

The question of finance is settled so far as the Democratic party is concerned, and all good Democrats should support the nominee. There are two sides to the question undoubtedly; there is something wrong in the present system, surely; there is a positive opposition on the part of a large majority of the students of finance to the gold standard, which in the opinion of the News is undoubtedly wrong, and as a great majority has spoken against it, there is now, to a Democrat, but one side to the question.—Owen News.

A sound money Democrat need not make any apology for refusing to support the nominee of the late Chicago National Convention on the platform adopted by that convention. Even explanations seem superfluous; the platform carries its own condemnation and no sound money Democrat can adhere to that deliverance for any other reason than that he values the success of the ticket nominated by the convention more highly than he does the integrity of the organization, as regards principle, or the general welfare of the country, as affected by the currency question.—Capital.

We did all in our humble power to stem the free silver tide and fought for the gold standard till the last day in the evening. But that is not here nor there. We do not arrogate to ourselves more wisdom than is possessed by the majority of the constituted authorities of the party, and believing in the right of that majority to dictate the platform, we have climbed upon the one adopted at Chicago, and while surrendering no conviction previously expressed, nor at the same time professing any infallibility, we shall endeavor to stand upon it with both feet and give the nominee our hearty support. So hurrah for Bryan and Sewall, and may the devil take McKinley and his running mate.—Stanford Journal.

The wisdom of those gold Democrats who are willing to follow the lead of the majority is manifest. If free silver is wrong time will demonstrate it and they will come to the front in the years to come as good Democrats who were willing to follow the lead of the majority even when they believed that the majority was leading them wrong. If free silver proves to be the blessing for the country that we believe it to be they will have the consolation of knowing that they did not bolt the ticket when its doctrines and creed were for the best interests of the country. As far as Grant county is concerned there will be no bolt and scarcely any defection. True some five or six Democrats have announced their intentions of supporting McKinley or not voting at all; but they will likely think better of the matter before the election. They should remember that they have been preaching the majority rule to the Democrats of Grant county for the last twenty years and they should now at least be willing to observe and follow their own doctrines. If they cannot lead in the fight let them follow.—Williamstown Courier.

THE POPULISTS.

Not More Than One-Fourth of the Delegates Have Arrived in St. Louis.

There is Strong Talk of a Bolt if Bryan is Nominated for President by the Convention—A Bolt Would Lose to Silverites Four Southern States.

ST. LOUIS, July 20.—The situation Sunday night was Bryan and anti-Bryan. More strictly speaking it is Bryan as against some members of the populist party yet to be named.

At the present writing not more than 300 of the 1,800 delegates to the populist convention have arrived, and these are individual members who constitute the advance guard of a number of delegations from the south and west. It is yet too early to predict with reasonable certainty what decision the convention may reach, but from the surface indications it would appear that the sentiment for Bryan will be very strong, if indeed, his friends do not have a majority when the roll is called.

The leaders so far as they have arrived, are divided in their preferences. Some are enthusiastic in his support. Among these are Gen. J. B. Weaver, of Iowa, who made the race for the presidency on the populist ticket four years ago. Others—and among these are Mr. Taubeneck, the chairman of the national committee—impatiently repudiate the suggestion of Bryan's name and assert that his nomination would fall like a wet blanket upon the party.

There was talk Sunday of a bolt if Bryan be nominated. Bolting or what is tantamount to bolting, seems to have become the fashion in this campaign. Whom they would select in these circumstances they do not say. They do not hesitate to say, however, that a bolt would lose to the silverites the electoral votes of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida, and certainly result in the election of McKinley.

This is the threat that may be held over the heads of the party brethren, but with what success can only be conjectured. There is but one thing the anti-Bryan men fear—that is a possibility that some one may make a ringing speech, full of apt illusions to the boy orator of the Platte and his long devotion to silver, that may sweep the convention off its feet and bring about his nomination in a whirlwind of enthusiasm, even as Bryan himself succeeded in doing at Chicago less than a fortnight ago. In such an event the list of malcontents might be so reduced as to make a bolt impossible, but this is not expected. It is thought that if Bryan is nominated or indorsed it will be by sheer force of members and not through any adventitious aids. The opposition to Bryan springs from two causes. The first is the complete obliteration of the party which would follow his nomination, and the second is a distrust in some quarters that the democrats would not act fairly with them in division of the electoral vote. Those who entertain this latter view are southern populists who claim to have been "counted out" by their democratic opponents when they have carried state and congressional elections, and who fear that a repetition of such methods would be practiced again this year if McKinley fails to secure a majority of the electoral college votes.

A strong impetus was given to the Bryan boom Sunday night at a meeting held at the Lindell hotel. Upwards of 60 delegates were present. Great enthusiasm prevailed. The purpose of the meeting was to consolidate the Bryan men in the different delegations. The various speakers showed that the sentiment for Bryan among their colleagues was generally favorable while the delegates from Kansas, Oklahoma, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Nevada and the District of Columbia asserted that their delegates would vote as a unit for the democratic candidate. Another meeting will be held at 9 o'clock Monday morning, at which a definite program will be agreed upon. Sunday night's meeting was presided over by Gen. Weaver, of Iowa.

Senator Peffer and ex-Gov. Llewelling, of Kansas, were among those present. Mr. Bailey, who is an ardent Bryan man, informed a United Press reporter subsequently that the reports made Sunday evening indicated Bryan's nomination by the convention beyond a peradventure.

The national silver convention will be held in the Grand Music hall at the exposition building next Wednesday. The opening session will begin about 10 a. m.

Sergeant-at-arms Dowd has completed arrangements for decorating and adjusting the hall for convention purposes. A number of employes are engaged in fitting it up for the occasion. The telegraph companies strung their wires into the building Friday.

Mr. Dowd said Saturday: "We will have a big convention here, and place in nomination a state and national ticket. There will be fully 1,500 delegates and alternates in attendance. I am unable to say whether the convention will indorse Bryan. There is a strong sentiment in his favor among the members of the silver party."

Troops at Cleveland Constantly Under Arms to Suppress Violence—Mob Drives Back at the Point of the Bayonet.

CLEVELAND, O., July 18.—All Friday there have been occurring clashes between the mob at the Brown Hoisting works, the police and militia. The members of the mob are in a vicious mood and whenever a lone soldier or policeman could be reached violence was attempted. The troops from two o'clock were constantly under arms and had great difficulty in clearing the street, two charges being necessary, in which the bayonet was freely used. But as soon as a charge was ended, the mob, which early in the afternoon numbered 5,000, would work back against the line of steel like a wave of the sea, and again began to hoot and throw stones. When the workmen had been taken away and troops were returning to their quarters at the works, another vengeful rally was made upon Company F. Again a charge was made and cold steel was driven home so that many of the rioters had to be help away. At this time some one sent in a general alarm to the police station and every patrol wagon was soon dashing through the streets, causing the wildest rumors among the thousands on their way home from work. There was no need of the police reinforcements and the crowd which had been swelled to 15,000 began to melt away. It looked as if the trouble was ended, but at 7 o'clock an assault was made on a soldier who was passing along Wilson avenue. He fought desperately as did also a policeman who hurried to his aid. A squad of troops came to their rescue, but not before the officers had been beaten into insensibility.

Again the patrol wagons rushed to the scene and had all they could do to force a passage through the angry mob. Everything is now in readiness to repel an outbreak which is expected during the night. Just how many strikers were hurt is uncertain, two, both severely stabbed with bayonets are lying at the St. Clair hospital. They are Thomas McGreavy and Thomas Garety.

John Russell, the crippled gate tender who was thrown from a car by the strikers Tuesday night died Friday night. An effort is being made to trace his assailants. Private watchman Owen Murphy, who attempted to protect a militiaman Friday night was struck on the head with a brick and while lying on the ground was kicked and received injuries which may prove fatal. He was only saved from instant death by a charge made by Company F. [illegible] were many women in [illegible], and they were apparently the most bitter, and as they refused to move some of them were injured by bayonet thrusts.

The situation at midnight was ominous, and the streets about the vicinity of the works are being patrolled by soldiers and police.

PRIVATE ADVICES

Give a Different Account of the Death of Gen. Jose Maceo—He Lost His Life in a Dashing Attack.

HAVANA, July 18.—Private advices give an entirely different account of the death of Jose Maceo, the insurgent leader, from the versions which have heretofore been given out. According to this story, after the insurgent colonel, Cartagena, had been killed in the engagement in the Gate hills, Maceo, with his staff and escort, put himself at the head of the forces and led in a dash, by which he hoped to surprise the Spaniards. He had, however, made a serious miscalculation and found himself confronted by a strong force on a superior position. Seeing his error and hoping to escape, Maceo shouted to his followers: "Back; let us retreat; there are too many for us." As he uttered the last word a rifle ball struck him in the back of the neck and passed through his head, emerging between his eyes. The volley that killed Jose Maceo also slew his friend, Dr. Peruoto Echavarria, and several members of his staff.

FREE BULLETINS.

What a Service of This Kind Costs the Western Union Telegraph Co.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The Western Union Telegraph company has arranged to send a free bulletin service over the country from the populist and bimetallic conventions, which meet in St. Louis next week, just as it did from the late republican and democratic conventions. It has been learned that service of this kind costs the company for operating and delivery expense between $5,000 and $6,000 per day, not to mention the extensive wire facilities required to perform it.

The St. Louis and Chicago bulletins were sent to some 15,000 offices and were given to the press and the public free of cost.

The Chicago bulletins of the democratic convention distributed over the various ciruits from its New York office alone, after they were received here, amounted in the aggregate to 193,000, or about two and a half million words.

The Contract Awarded.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The contract for the interior finish work of the Detroit, Mich., public building was Friday awarded to Foraster and Smithy, of Minneapolis, Minn., at $216,740, the work to be completed within seventeen months. This bid was $90,000 less than the next lowest bid.

Hanlon's Challenge.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 18.—Hanlon, the ex-champion oarsman of the world, has wired the Vancouver Carnival company that he will row Guadaur, the champion of America, for a purse and side bets and the American championship in September on Burrard Inlet, Vancouver. The match will probably be arranged.

American Bar Association Meeting.

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 18.—The 19th annual meeting of the American Bar association will be held at Saratoga Springs on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 19, 20 and 21, 1896.

THE SPANIARDS

Sustain a Crushing Defeat at the Hands of the Insurgents.

Inclan's Command Was Ambushed and Completely Routed—The Spaniards Lost More Than 300 in Killed and Wounded—Fourteen Officers Dead.

NEW YORK, July 20.—A Herald special from Key West, Fla., says:

The Spaniards, under Gen. Suarez Inclan, have sustained a crushing defeat at the hands of the insurgents under Antonio Maceo, according to advices received by the Cuban revolutionary leaders in this city. Not only was Inclan's column defeated with heavy loss, but the Cuban leaders are informed that it is currently reported in Havana that the Spanish general himself was captured and is now held as a prisoner by Maceo. The battle is said to have occurred on July 15, near Maceo's stronghold in the province of Pinar del Rio. For the last two weeks the insurgents have been very aggressive, and small parties have repeatedly attacked the trocha, causing the Spaniards much annoyance. Gen. Inclan was ordered to drive back these detached bands of insurgents and for this purpose took with him 2,000 men.

Maceo seems to have expected such a movement and arranged to ambush the Spaniards. The Spaniards followed the insurgent skirmishers incautiously and fell into the ambush. Then the Cubans opened fire from all sides, which threw the Spaniards into confusion. While the spaniards were thus disordered the Cubans charged, completely routing their foes. Gen. Inclan made a desperate effort to rally his demoralized forces, but was surrounded by the Cubans and compelled to surrender. It is reported in Havana, according to the revolutionists here, that the Spaniards were pursued almost to the trocha, and lost more than 300 men killed and wounded. There were 14 officers among the killed. Cubans here also say Maceo will hold Inclan as a hostage to save the lives of prominent insurgent officers who have been captured by the Spaniards.

NOT A CANDIDATE.

Hon. R. P. Bland Emphatically Declines the Nomination for Governor.

ST. LOUIS, July 20.—Ever since the Chicago convention, the friends of Hon. R. P. Bland have been persistent in their demands that he become the democratic candidate for governor of Missouri, but he has steadily refused and stated that he wished [illegible] to congress. To set the matter at rest Mr. Bland sent the following telegram to a local democratic leader:

"No one is authorized to use my name for governor. As stated over and over again, I would not accept the nomination. I am not in the habit of lying about an important matter like this. If the convention should nominate me over my protest, it would have its work to do over again. I would not accept it. R. P. BLAND."

FATAL FLAMES.

Three Charred Remains Found in the Ashes of the Burned Street Railway Barns, Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 20.—It was learned early Sunday morning that three persons lost their lives in the fire which destroyed the barns of the South Chicago Street Railway Co. at Thirty-ninth street and Cottage Grove avenue Saturday night. The dead are: Frank Crosby, tow boy; W. L. Elwell, driver; Patrick Martin, conductor. The bodies were found at 6:45 o'clock Sunday morning and while charred beyond recognition, were identified by articles found on them.

INDIGNANT CITIZENS

Of Meigs and Gallia Counties Organized and Will Make War on Desperadoes.

POMEROY, O., July 20.—Meigs and Gallia counties are being overrun by organized highwaymen, burglars and incendiaries. There are 27 in the gang. Both counties are terrorized and the officers are powerless to capture them. People are held up and nightly robbed and beaten. Judge H. A. Kent's barn and stock were burned early Sunday morning. Five hundred men in Middleport have armed by permission of the authorities to protect themselves. Both counties are ready to rise up for a wholesale killing of the robbers.

Mr. Bryan's Mail.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 20.—The life of a candidate for the presidency did not have so rosey a tinge to Mr. Bryan Sunday. He has a wonderful capacity for hard work, but a man even of his strength would be appalled at the prospect of wading through the thousands of letters and telegrams which litter the oak desk in his library. It was six o'clock Sunday evening before Mr. Bryan, with the assistance of Mrs. Bryan and W. F. Sewind, who are acting as secretaries to the nominee, had opened and sorted Saturday's mail, and then they sighed as they looked at the big bundle of mail matter that came from the post office Sunday.

Miners Threaten Trouble.

MASSILLON, O., July 20.—State President Ratchford, of the United Mine Workers, states that the operators must recognize agreements entered into at a recent joint conference with the miners. "The issue of store orders must stop, or trouble will result," said he. "And we will cease to recognize the operators' organization."

Victoria to Act as Arbitrator.

NEW YORK, July 20.—A dispatch to the Herald from Valparaiso says: The foreign minister at Santiago has received an important dispatch from the Chilian minister in London, stating that Queen Victoria consents to act as arbitrator in the boundary dispute between Chili and Argentina.

Work for Thousands.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., July 20.—It is announced that the Lehigh Valley collieries, in this vicinity, ten in number, will resume work on full time, beginning Monday. This affects about 5,000 hand

THE POPULISTS.

A Division of Sentiment in the Ranks Between the Support of Bryan and Independent Action Sharply Defined.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 16.—As the time approaches for the assembling of the people's party national convention the division of sentiment between support of Bryan and independent action becomes sharply defined. At the party headquarters there is uneasiness. Chairman Taubeneck has committed himself to Teller while the burden of the majority of the telegrams and letters received there favor the indorsement of Bryan. It is no secret that Mr. Taubeneck would gladly recall his indorsement of Teller now that even the Colorado senator has said a good word for the Chicago nominee. As a prominent populist put it, "Taubeneck went off at half cock."

Life is being made a heavy burden to Chairman Taubeneck and he has worn a worried look ever since the Chicago convention. "I have nothing to say for publication," he reiterated Wednesday morning at the conclusion of a long conference with "Cyclone" Davis, the Texas leader.

A meeting of the national committee is called for Saturday noon.

The members of this committee are H. E. Taubeneck, M. C. Rankin, J. H. Turner, Lawrence McParlin, Ignatius Donnelly, Geo. F. Washburn, J. H. Davis, Geo. F. Gaither and V. O. Strickler. Taubeneck and Davis are the only members of the committee now here, but the others will arrive Thursday and Friday.

Following are Wednesday's prominent arrivals: Hon. J. H. Davis, of Texas; R. G. Scott, ex-chairman of the populist state committee of Iowa; J. B. Perrin, a delegate from Philadelphia; N. D. McDowell, son of the sergeant-at-arms, and M. H. Owen, a Tennessee delegate from Brownsville.

One serious question which faces the populists is the attitude of the silver party, whose representative on the ground, Dr. J. J. Mott, of North Carolina, practically confesses that his party will almost assuredly indorse Bryan. This is a decided reversal of form in comparison with the original policy of the silver party.

All the hotels are booking guests rapidly, and the number of visitors to the two conventions will be as large as those who attended the republican convention. The populists will assemble in convention Auditorium at 12th and Poplar streets on July 22.

The silver party convention will convene on the same day at Music hall, in the Exposition building, Thirteenth and Olive streets. The latter will have 1,200 delegates, [illegible] basis being nearly the same as the populists, which is hinged upon its own vote instead of being double the congressional representation.

A CALL ISSUED

To the Gold Democrats of Minnesota for a Conference at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 16.—Daniel W. Lawler, democratic national committeeman for Minnesota, Wednesday issued a call to the gold democrats of Minnesota for a conference here July 23. Ex-Congressmen Hall, Wilson and Baldwin and 100 other sound democrats have been invited to attend. This gathering will decide and communicate with the gold democrats of New York, Illinois and elsewhere with a view to co-operation in the matter of naming a national sound money democratic ticket. Mr. Lawler said he had been named as democratic national committeeman for the state by a sound money convention and would continue to hold his office for four years. If the committee named at Chicago wanted a member of its own kind, he saw no objection to its naming a man in Minnesota.

Iowa Republican Ticket.

DES MOINES, Ia., July 16.—The republican state convention Wednesday adopted resolutions reaffirming the St. Louis platform of the party with a paragraph pledging the Iowa delegation in congress to faithfully work in behalf of international bimetallism. The following ticket was nominated: Secretary of state, George L. Dobson; auditor, C. G. McCarthy; treasurer, John Herriott; supreme judge, Scott M. Ladd; railroad commissioner, Ed A. Dawson; electors-at-large, E. H. Conger, Edward S. James.

Goes to Prison for Life.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The trial of Adolph Hershekopp, charged with murder by means of arson ended in the criminal court branch of the supreme court Wednesday morning, the jury rendering a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. Justice Furstman later sentenced Hershekopp to imprisonment for life.

An Uninstructed Delegation.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 16.—The populist convention Wednesday night, by a vote of 178½ to 21½, rejected the Norwood substitute and voted unanimously to send an uninstructed delegation to the St. Louis convention. The delegation was instructed to vote as a unit for the presidential nominee and adoption of a platform.

The F. H. Alden Co. Fails.

CINCINNATI, June 16.—Following a flood of suits in magistrates' courts, the F. H. Alden Co., newspaper publishers and advertisers at 28 East Third street, assigned Wednesday to Philip Roettinger. Assets, $10,000; liabilities, unknown. No preferences. Cause pressure of creditors.

A Hot Wave at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, July 16.—For the 48 hours ending at nine o'clock Wednesday night there has prevailed a higher average of temperature than for any previous corresponding period. At noon Wednesday St. Louis was the hottest place in the Mississippi valley, authentic thermometers registering 100 degrees heat. The torrid weather of Tuesday was followed by a sultry, stifling night and at sunrise Wednesday the reading was at 81 degrees. Outdoor labor was generally suspended and there were not so many sunstrokes as Tuesday, only four being treated at the city dispensary.

LOCKJAW IN SOIL.

Tetanus Bacilli Thrive in Long Island—Nine Fatalities a Year.

The death of a child in Brooklyn from lockjaw, said to have been caused by bacilli of the disease which existed in the soil of that region, calls attention again to a peculiar danger of some portions of Long Island, which has been mentioned at intervals of several years. In this instance the child, says the Hartford Times, a girl two years old, had been vaccinated. There was no reason to suspect the purity of the vaccine matter. It was used three weeks ago, and the child was getting on well until in playing in the dirt she scratched the vaccinated arm while her fingers were smeared with clay.

As to the existence of tetanus bacilli in the soil, the evidence seems to be ample. Health Commissioner Emery says the soil is full of these bacilli and that they caused several deaths which followed vaccination a year ago. Dr. Mayne, who attended the little girl, says: "The germs of tetanus are in the air as well as in the soil, but to breathe them is not necessarily fatal. In the vicinity of the south shore of Long Island horses, as well as human beings, have fallen victims to the bacilli. In the case of the little girl her finger nails contained the germ, which when brought into contact with the superficial abrasion at once inoculated her system with the poison." Dr. West, of the Brooklyn department of health, says the existence of the germ of tetanus has been noted for several years, more particularly in the east and southern tiers of Long Island. He adds: "Suffolk county, I believe, has the reputation of being the most affected spot. In the past three years, in Brooklyn, there has been an average of nine fatalities from the work of tetanus bacillus annually. The germ, when exposed to the air, soon succumbs. When it attacks a wound it burrows down deep [illegible] purpose of keeping away from the air."

A Woman's Cleverness.

A good story is told of the cleverness of a woman in a transaction with an insurance adjuster. The parlor curtains took fire, and before the blaze was extinguished the carpet was badly scorched. After looking over the damage the representative of the company said she was entitled to the value of a new carpet—$100. "We will allow you that sum," continued the man, "and we will take your old carpet." "Why, what can you do with it?" "Oh, we'll sell it second-hand and get back $10 or $12 at least," was the careless reply, intended to make the company's attitude as generous as possible. "In that case," promptly put in the owner of the carpet, "sell it to me. I'll give you $12 for it." The adjuster could only comply, with the result that this quick-witted chatelaine got a new parlor carpet with a handsome moquette floor covering as well for an upper room that needed it for $12.

Experiments with a hermetically sealed rubber bottle containing water have shown that the rubber is not absolutely watertight. The filled bottle weighed 17 ounces 4 drams; at the end of one year the weight was 17 ounces 2 drams; nine years, 16 ounces; eighteen years, 14 ounces 2 drams; twenty-three years, 13 ounces 4 drams; twenty-five years, 7 ounces 8 drams; twenty-eight years, 3 ounces 14 drams; thirty years, 3 ounces 12 drams, the water being entirely gone.

BRYAN'S STIRRING SPEECH.

"Boy Orator" of Nebraska Awakes the Greatest Enthusiasm.

Arouses the Multitude by His Eloquent Plea for the Free Coinage of Silver—Greatest Speech of the Convention.

Ex-Congressman William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, by his able oratorical efforts, created a scene of the wildest excitement and enthusiasm at the Chicago convention that has ever been witnessed in the history of national political conventions. The immense audience went fairly wild over his burning words, and there is good reason to believe that his masterly effort went far towards securing for him the nomination.

Mr. Bryan, after the applause which greeted his appearance on the platform had subsided, said:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of This Convention: I would be presumptuous indeed to present myself against the distinguished gentleman (Senator David B. Hill) to whom you have listened if this were but a measuring of ability, but this is not a contest among persons. The humblest citizen in all the land when clad in the armor of a righteous cause is stronger than the whole hosts of error can bring. I come to speak to you in defense of a cause holy as the cause of liberty—the cause of humanity. [Loud applause.]

"When this debate is concluded a motion will be made to lay upon the table the resolution offered in commendation of the administration, and also the resolution in condemnation of the administration. I shall object to bringing this question down to a level of persons. The individual is but an atom; he is born, he acts, he dies, but principles are eternal, and this has been a contest of principles. Never before in the history of the country has there been witnessed such a contest as that through which we have passed. Never before in the history of American politics has a great issue been fought out, as this issue has been, by the voters themselves.

Progress of Silver Movement.

"On the 4th of March, 1895, a few democrats, most of them members of congress, issued an address to the democrats of the nation, asserting that the money question was the paramount issue of the hour; asserting also the right of a majority of the democratic party to control the position of the party on this paramount issue; concluding with the request that all believers in free coinage of silver in the democratic party should organize and take charge of and control the policy of the democratic party. Three months later, at Memphis, an organization was perfected, and the silver democrats went forth openly and boldly and courageously proclaiming their belief, and declaring that if successful they would crystallize in a platform the declaration which they had made; and then began the conflict, with a zeal approaching the zeal which inspired the crusaders who followed Peter the Hermit.

"Our silver democracy went forth from victory unto victory until they are assembled now, not to discuss, not to debate, but to enter up the judgment rendered by the plain people of this country. [Applause.] In this contest brother has been arrayed against brother and father against son. The warmest ties of love and acquaintance and association have been disregarded. Old leaders have been cast aside when they refused to give expression to the sentiments of those whom they would lead and new leaders have sprung up to give direction to this cause of truth. [Cheers.] Thus has the contest been waged, and we have assembled here under as binding and solemn instructions as were ever fastened upon the representatives of a people.

Not a Question of Personalities.

"We do not come as individuals. Why, as individuals we might have been glad to compliment the gentleman from New York, Senator Hill, but we knew that the people for whom we speak would never be willing to put him in a position where he could thwart the will of the democratic party. [Cheers.] I say it was not a question of persons; it was a question of principle; and it is not with gladness, my friends, that we find ourselves brought into conflict with those who are now arrayed on the other side. The gentleman who just preceded me spoke of the old state of Massachusetts. Let me assure him that not one person in all this convention entertains the least hostility to the people of the state of Massachusetts. [Applause.] But we stand here representing people who are the equals before the law of the largest citizens in the state of Massachusetts. [Applause.]

Business Men Defined.

"When you come before us and tell us that we shall disturb your business interests, we reply that you have disturbed our business interests by your course. [Great applause and cheering.] We say to you that you have made too limited in its application the definition of business man. The man who is employed for wages is as much a business man as his employer. [Continued cheering.] The attorney in a country town is as much a business man as the corporation counsel in a great metropolis. The merchant at the cross roads store is as much a business man as the merchant of New York. The farmer who goes forth in the morning and toils all day, begins in the spring and toils all summer, and by the application of brains and muscle to the natural resources of this country creates wealth, is as much a business man as the man who goes upon the board of trade and bets upon the price of grain."

The sentiments of the speaker were cheered again and again, and the galleries seemed to be a mass of white because of the handkerchiefs waving. It was some minutes before Mr. Bryan could be heard. He proceeded as follows:

"The miners who go 1,000 feet into the earth or climb 2,000 feet upon the cliffs and bring forth from their hiding places the precious metals to be poured into the channels of trade are as much business men as the few financial magnates who in a back room corner the money market of the world.

"We come to speak for this broader class of business men. Ah, my friends, we say not one word against those who live upon the Atlantic coast; but those hardy pioneers who braved all the dangers of the wilderness, who have made the desert to blossom as the rose—those pioneers away out there, rearing their children near to nature's heart, where they can mingle their voices with the voices of the birds—out there where they have erected schoolhouses for the education of their young, and churches where they praise their Creator, and cemeteries where sleep the ashes of their dead—are as deserving of the consideration of this party as any people in this country. [Great applause.] It is for these that we speak. We do not come as aggressors. Our war is not a war of conquest. We are fighting in the defense of our homes, our families and posterity. [Loud applause.] We have petitioned and our petitions have been scorned. We have entreated and our entreaties have been disregarded. We have begged and they have mocked, and our calamity came. We beg no longer; we entreat no more; we petition no more. We defy them. [Great applause and confusion in the silver delegations.]

An Andrew Jackson Needed.

"The gentleman from Wisconsin has said that he fears a Robespierre. My friend, in this land of the free you need fear no tyrant who will spring up from among the people. What we need is an Andrew Jackson to stand as Jackson stood against the encroachments of aggrandized wealth. [Great applause.] They tell us that this platform was made to catch votes. We reply to them that changing conditions make new issues; that the principles upon which rest democracy are as everlasting as the hills, but that they must be applied to new conditions as they arise. Conditions have arisen, and we are attempting to meet those conditions. They tell us that the income tax ought not to be brought in here—that it is a new idea. They criticise us for our criticisms of the supreme court of the United States. My friends, we have not criticised. We have simply called attention to what you know. If you want criticisms, read the dissenting opinion of the court. That will give you criticisms. [Applause.]

"They say we passed an unconstitutional law. I deny it. The income tax was not unconstitutional when it was passed. It was not unconstitutional when it went before the supreme court for the first time. It did not become unconstitutional until one judge changed his mind, and we cannot be expected to know when a judge will change his mind. The income tax is a just law. It simply intends to put the burdens of government justly upon the backs of the people. I am in favor of an income tax. [Applause.] When I find a man who is not willing to pay his share of the burden of the government which protects him I find a man who is unworthy to enjoy the blessings of a government like ours. [Applause.]

No Use for National Banks.

"He says that we are opposed to the national bank currency. It is true. If you will read what Thomas Benton said you will find that he said in searching history that he could find but one parallel to Andrew Jackson. That was Cicero, who destroyed the conspiracy of Cataline and saved Rome. He did for Rome what Jackson did when he destroyed the bank conspiracy and saved America. [Applause.] We say in our platform that we believe the right to coin money and issue money is a function of the government. We believe it. We believe it is a part of sovereignty, and can no more with safety be delegated to private individuals than we could afford to delegate to private individuals the power to make penal statutes or levy laws for taxation. [Applause.]

"Mr. Jefferson, who was once regarded as good democratic authority, seems to have a different opinion from the gentleman who has addressed us on the part of the minority. Those who are opposed to this proposition tell us that the issue of paper money is a function of the bank, and that the government ought to go out of the banking business. I stand with Jefferson rather than with them, as he did, that the issue of money is a function of the government, and that the banks ought to go out of the government business.

"They complain about that plank which declares against the life tenure in office. They have tried to strain it to mean that which it does not mean. What we oppose in that plank is the life tenure that is being built up at Washington, which excludes from participation in the benefits the humbler members of our society. I cannot dwell on this longer in my limited time. [Cries of "Go on."]

Answer to Mr. Hill.

"Let me call attention to two or three great things. The gentleman from New York says that he will propose an amendment, providing that this change in our law shall not affect contracts already made. Let me remind him that there is no intention of affecting those contracts, which, according to the present laws, are made payable in gold. But if he means to say that we cannot change our monetary system without protecting those who have loaned money before the change was made I want to ask him where, in law or in morals, he can find authority for not protecting the debtors when the act of 1873 was passed, but now insist that we must protect the creditor. He says he also wants to amend this law and provide that if we fail to maintain a parity within a year we will then suspend the coinage of silver. We reply that when we advocate a thing which we believe will be successful we are not compelled to raise a doubt as to our own sincerity by trying to show what we will do if we can. I ask him, if he will apply his logic to us, why he does not apply it to himself? He says that he wants this country to try secure an international agreement. Why doesn't he tell us what he is going to do if they fail to secure an international agreement? There is more reason for him to do that than for us to fail to maintain the parity. They have tried for 30 years—for 30 years—to secure an international agreement, and those are waiting for it most patiently and don't want it at all. [Cheering, laughter, long continued.]

The Paramount Issue.

"Now, my friends, let me come to the great paramount issue. If they ask us here why it is that we say more on the money question than we say upon the tariff question, I reply that if protection has slain its thousands the gold standard has slain its tens of thousands. If they ask us why we did not embody all these things in our platform which we believe, we reply to them that when we have restored the money of the constitution all other necessary reforms will be possible, and that until that is done there is no reform that can be accomplished. [Cheering.] Why is it that within three months such a change has come over the sentiments of this country? Three months ago when it was confidently asserted that those who believe in the gold standard would frame our platform and nominate our candidate, even the advocates of the gold standard did not think that we could elect a president, but they had good reason for the suspicion because there is scarcely a state here to-day asking the gold standard that is not within the absolute control of the republican party. [Loud cheering.] But note the change. Mr. McKinley was nominated at St. Louis on a platform that declared for the maintenance of the gold standard until it should be changed into bimetallism by an international agreement. Mr. McKinley was the most popular man among the republicans, and everybody three months ago in the republican party prophesied his election. How is it to-day? Why, that man who used to boast that he looked like Napoleon—[laughter and cheers]—that man shudders to-day when he thinks that he was nominated on the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo. [Long and loud cheering.] Not only that, but as he listens he can hear with ever-lasting distinctness the sound of the waves as they beat upon the lonely shores of St. Helena. [Cheers.] Why this change? Ah, friends, is not the change evident to anyone who will look at the matter? It is no private character however pure, no personal popularity however great, that can protect from the avenging wrath of an indignant people the man who will either declare that he is in favor of fastening the gold standard upon this people or who is willing to surrender the right of self-government and place legislative control in the hands of foreign potentates and powers." [Cheers.]

The continued cheering made it impossible for the speaker to proceed. It was renewed as the chairman vainly and repeatedly rapped for order. Finally, Mr. Bryan, raising his hand, obtained silence long enough to say that he had only ten minutes, and he asked the audience to let him occupy that time. He then resumed:

Confident of Winning.

"We go forth confident that we shall win. Why? Because upon the paramount issue in this campaign there is not a spot of ground upon which the enemy will dare to challenge battle. Why, if they tell us that the gold standard is a good thing, we point to their platform and tell them that their platform pledges the party to get rid of a gold standard and substitute bimetallism. [Applause.] If the gold standard is a good thing why try to get rid of it? [Laughter and continued applause.] I might call your attention to the fact that some of the very people who are in this convention to-day and who tell you that we ought to declare in favor of international bimetallism and thereby declare that the gold standard is wrong, and that the principle of bimetallism is better, these very people four months ago were open and avowed advocates of the gold standard and telling us that we could not legislate two metals together, even with all the world. [Renewed applause and cheers.] I want to suggest this truth, that if the gold standard is a good thing we ought to declare in favor of its retention and not in favor of abandoning it; and if the gold standard is a bad thing, why should we wait until some other nations are willing to help us to let go? [Applause.]

"Here is the line of battle: We care not upon which issue they force the fight. We are prepared to meet them on either issue or on both. If they tell us that the gold standard is the standard of civilization, we reply to them that this, the most enlightened of all the nations of the earth, has never declared for a gold standard, and both the parties this year are declaring against it. [Applause.] If the gold standard is the standard of civilization, why, my friends, should we not have it? So if they come to meet us on that, we can present the history of our nation. More than that. We can tell them this, that they will search the pages of history in vain to find a single instance in which the common people of any land have ever declared themselves in favor of a gold standard. [Applause.] They can find where the holders of fixed investments have.

"Mr. Carlisle said in 1878 that this was a struggle between the idle holders of idle capital and the struggling masses who produce the wealth and pay the taxes of the country, and, my friends, it is simply a question that we shall decide, upon which side shall the democratic party fight? Upon the side of the idle holders of idle capital, or upon the side of the struggling masses? That is the question that the party must answer first, and then it must be answered by each individual hereafter. The sympathies of the democratic party, as described by the platform, are on the side of the struggling masses, who have ever been the foundation of the democratic party. [Applause.]

Two Ideas of Government.

"There are two ideas of government. There are those who believe that if you just legislate to make the well-to-do prosperous, their prosperity will leak through on those below. The democratic idea has been that if you legislate to make the masses prosperous their prosperity will find its way up through every class and rest upon it. [Applause.]

"You come to us and tell us that the great cities are in favor of the gold standard. I tell you that the great cities rest upon these broad and fertile prairies. Burn down your cities and leave our farms and your cities will spring up again as if by magic. But destroy our farms and the grass will grow in the streets of every city in this country. [Applause.]

"My friends, we shall declare that this nation is able to legislate for its own people on every question, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation on earth [applause], and upon that issue we expect to carry every single state in this union. [Applause.] I shall not slander the fair state of Massachusetts nor the state of New York by saying that when its citizens are confronted with the proposition: Is this nation able to attend to its own business?—I will not slander either one by saying that the people of those states will declare our helpless impotency as a nation to attend to our own business. It is the issue of 1776 over again. Our ancestors were the 3,000,000 who had the courage to declare their political independence of every other nation upon earth. Shall we, their descendants, when we have grown to 70,000,000, declare that we are less independent than our forefathers? No, my friends, it will never be the judgment of this people.

Peroration.

"Therefore we care not upon what lines the battle is fought. If they say bimetallism is good, but we cannot have it until some nation helps us, we reply that instead of having a gold standard because England has, we shall restore bimetallism, and then let England have bimetallism because the United States has. [Applause.] If they dare come out, and in the open field defend the gold standard as a good thing, we shall fight to the uttermost, having behind us the producing masses of this nation and the world. Having behind us the commercial interests and the laboring interests, and all the toiling masses, we shall answer their demands for a gold standard by saying to them you shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns. You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

Some Curios.

In the early days of the last century we find in the Tatler of August 26, 1710, a charmingly written paper, by Addison, on the eccentricities of a virtuoso, who had "laid out a considerable estate in natural rarities and curiosities." In his will Nicholas Gimcrack (the aforesaid virtuoso), bequeathes to his wife one box of butterflies, one drawer of shells, a female skeleton and a dried cockatrice; to his little daughter Fannie three crocodile eggs and upon the birth of her first child, if she marries with her mother's consent, the nest of a humming bird; to his eldest brother, as "an acknowledgment for the lands he has vested in my son Charles," his last year's collection of grasshoppers; having provided for his nephew Isaac by making "over to him some years since," a horned scarabaeus the skin of a rattlesnake, and the mummy of an Egyptian king, he made no further provision for him in his will; "my eldest son John, having spoken disrespectfully of his little sister, whom I keep by me in spirits of wine, and in many other instances behaved himself undutifully toward me, I do disinherit and wholly cut off from any part of this my personal estate, by giving him a single cockleshell," and so on.—Temple Bar.

Reason Enough.

A party of women once had the privilege of inspecting a factory devoted to the manufacture of spool thread. Their cicerone was the proprietor of the factory, one of the largest and most complete in the world. What most impressed the visitors, however, was not the size and evident prosperity of the plant, but the beauty of the place. Not only was every hygienic and commercial comfort attended to, but, so far as possible, every aesthetic consideration was observed as well. Around each wall of the spacious, well-windowed apartments where the work was done ran a broad, exquisitely painted frieze. The figures upon the frieze were a dainty dancing company, beautiful in color as well as in form, and fit to grace the walls of a dwelling rather than a mill. Finally one of the women, a practical, plain-spoken dame, asked the owner why he made beauty such an object. "I don't see the use of a frieze like that in a factory," she said bluntly. "Why do you have it?" The mill-owner smiled. "Well, come to think of it, it is a very practical reason," he said. "I find that it makes better thread."—N. Y. Sun.

ARBITRATION.

The Correspondence Between the United States and England.

It Constitutes the First Authoritative Disclosures Upon These Great Questions Since Cleveland's Christmas Message to Congress—Little Progress Made.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The efforts of the United States and Great Britain to agree upon a general arbitration treaty for the settlement of all controversies through the establishment of a permanent tribunal, as well as the progress of diplomatic negotiations toward solving the Venezuelan problem are set forth in 13 communications made public by the state department Friday night. While they constitute the first authoritative disclosures upon these great questions since President Cleveland's famous Christmastide message to congress, it will be found that previous reports of the United Press of the negotiations between the two governments, have accurately outlined the course of events.

Little substantial progress toward a general arbitration treaty is disclosed by the documents. An outline in part of the proposed procedure is laid down and the views of the two governments are so explicitly stated that future discussion may be confined towards narrowing the few divergencies of method. The further fact is made apparent that the United States has not relaxed its vigilance in demanding a just settlement of the Venezuelan boundary question and has rejected the British proposals for arbitrating that dispute under terms involving the surrender of any part of Venezuela's claims.

The correspondence opens with a letter from Ambassador Bayard to Lord Salisbury, dated February 27 last, proposing an entrance forthwith upon negotiations concerning the Guinaian boundary question at Washington between the British ambassador and the secretary of state.

Mr. Bayard added that Secretary Olney greatly desired that there should be propounded a clear definition of the "settlements" by individuals in the disputed territory, which it was understood Great Britain wished excluded from the proposed arbitration.

Lord Salisbury, in reply, on March 3, said his government readily concurred in the suggestion and had sent instructions to Sir Julian Pauncefote, directing him to discuss the question, either with the Venezuelan representative or the United States, acting as the friend of Venezuela. He had asked the secretary of state of the colonies for the precise meaning attached to the word "settlements."

Lord Salisbury's instructions to Sir Julian Pauncefote, dated March 5, form the third document and are devoted to the system for general international arbitration, negotiations for the establishment of which had been ruptured by Secretary Gresham's death.

Lord Salisbury submits a draft of a treaty for arbitration which provides that her Britannic majesty and the president of the United States shall each appoint two or more permanent judicial officers for the purposes of the treaty and on the appearance of any difference between the two powers which in the judgment of either of them, can not be settled by negotiation, each of them shall designate one of the said officers as arbitrator; and the two arbitrators shall hear and determine any matter referred to them in accordance with this treaty.

Before entering on such arbitration, the arbitrators shall select an umpire by whom any question upon which those disagree, whether interlocutory or final, shall be decided. The decision of such umpire upon any interlocutory question shall be binding upon the arbitrators. The determination of the arbitrators, or, if they disagree, the decision of the umpire, shall be the award, upon the matters referred. All pecuniary claims amounting to not more than £100,000, for damages or indemnity, all questions affecting diplomatic or consular privileges, alleged rights of fishery, access, navigation or commercial privilege, and all questions referred by special agreement between the two parties shall be referred to arbitration and the decision shall be final.

In cases of questions of fact or of international law, involving territory or territorial rights, sovereignty, jurisdiction or claims involving more than 100,000 pounds, the decision of the board of arbitration shall be subject to review within three months by a court composed of three of the judges of the supreme courts of Great Britain and three of the judges of the supreme court of the United States, and if this court shall determine by a majority of not less than five to one on any issue the award shall be final, but in default of such determination, it shall not be valid. If no protest is entered by either power against the award within the time limited, it shall be final.

Any difference, which in the judgement of either power materially affects its honor or the integrity of its territory shall not be referred to arbitration under the treaty, except by special agreement, but any difference whatever, by agreement between the two powers may be referred for decision by arbitration with the stipulations that, unless accepted by both powers, the decision shall not be valid.

In the instructions Sir Julian is told that all matters in dispute can not be referred to arbitration, that neither government is willing to accept arbitration upon issues involving national honor or integrity, but within this wide region the United States desires to go further than Great Britain.

Secretary Olney in reply, April 11, declares that Lord Salisbury's proposals are welcomed with the keenest appreciation of their value and of the enlightened and progressive spirit which animates them. But by the direction of the president he proposes as a substitute and amendment that arbitration shall also be obligatory in respect of all questions now pending or hereafter arising involving territorial rights, boundaries, sovereignty or jurisdiction, or any pecuniary claim or group of claims aggregating a sum larger than 100,000 pounds and in respect of all controversies not in this treaty specially described.

Provided, however, that either congress or parliament may withdraw the same from the operation of this treaty, or if congress or parliament be not in session, any matters in dispute shall not be submitted to arbitration until these bodies have had opportunity to take action therein. In the cases of controversies, the award shall be final if concurred in by all the arbitrators. If assented to by a majority only the award shall be final unless one of the parties within three months of its promulgation, shall protest in writing to the other that the award is erroneous in respect of issue of fact or of law. In every such case, the award shall be reviewed by a court composed of three supreme judges of Great Britain and the United States, who shall agree upon three learned and impartial jurists to be added to said court in case they shall be equally divided upon the award to be made. The award of the court so constituted whether rendered unanimously or by a majority vote shall be final.

These amendments Secretary Olney argues make all disputes prima facie arbitrable and places and puts where it belongs in congress and parliament the right and power to decide whether they are arbitrable or demand assertion by force of arms. By the scheme as amended the controversy is finally ended, whereas, under the original proposition there would be an award only in the cases in which the six appellate arbiters favored it, either as unanimously or by a majority of five to one. Mr. Olney thinks such arrangements would be dangerous. In all cases in which the arbitrators are equally divided or stood four to two, public feeling in each country would be aroused by the protracted proceedings and the chances of a peaceful outcome would be rather prejudiced than promoted. It is also pointed out that the United States having no European alliances has more to fear than Great Britain from the bias of foreign judges. Secretary Olney finally contends that to insist upon an arbitration scheme so constructed that miscarriages of justice can never occur is to insist upon the unattainable, and is equivalent to a relinquishment altogether of the effort in behalf of a general system of international arbitration. An approximation to truth results which, on the average and in the long run, conform to right and justice—is all that the lot of humanity permits us to expect from any plan.

In conclusion Secretary Olney says: "It only remains to observe that if the amendments should prove acceptable, no reason is perceived why the pending Venezuelan boundary dispute should not be brought within the treaty by express words of inclusion. If, however, no treaty for general arbitration can now be expected, it can not be improper to add that the Venezuelan boundary dispute seems to offer a good opportunity for one of those tentative experiments of arbitration which, as Lord Salisbury justly intimates, would be of decided advantage as tending to indicate the lines upon which a scheme for general arbitration can be judiciously drawn."

GOV. RUSSELL DEAD.

The Cause of His Demise is Supposed to Have Been Heart Disease.

The Governor, With a Party, Pitched a Fishing Tent Near St. Adelaide De Pabos, Que., for a Few Days Rest—Thursday Russell Was Found Dead.

ST. ADELAIDE DE PABOS, Que., July 17.—Ex-Gov. Wm. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, arrived here from Boston Wednesday afternoon and pitched his tent for a few days fishing. He was accompanied by his brother and Francis Peabody. They all retired early Wednesday night, the governor apparently in good health and spirits. Upon his companions trying to arouse him Thursday morning they discovered that he was dead. Death must have resulted from heart disease. The position of the body and the expression on the dead man's face showed that his death was painless. After an inquest Thursday afternoon the remains were started at once to his home in Boston.

EX-GOV WM. E. RUSSELL.

Russell was found dead in bed at the camp of J. F. Dutton, a Boston business man. He left his home shortly after his return from Chicago for the purpose of seeking rest. He was a guest of Mr. Dutton.

Hon. Wm. E. Russell was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1857. He was educated in the public schools and in Harvard college, where he graduated in 1877. He then began to study law under his father's direction, and took a course of three years in the Boston University Law school. He was admitted to the Suffolk bar in the April term of 1880.

Mr. Russell was only 28 years old when in 1888, he was elected mayor of his native city, having already served as councilman and alderman. In 1888 he was nominated for governor, but was defeated by Ames. It was in this year that Mr Russell gave evidence of his gifts as a stump speaker. He worked and talked incessantly, going from one place to another. He was renominated for governor in 1889. This time his competitor was Gov. Brackett. Mr. Russell at the end of a victorious campaign reduced the plurality of his opponent from 29,000 to 6,775. Next year, on his third trial, he was elected by a plurality of 9,000.

Russell was re-elected governor of his state twice. He retired at the end of his third term to resume the practice of law.

Russell's name was mentioned by his admirers in New England as one which would look well at the head of the democratic national ticket.

KANSAS DIVORCE.

The Decision of the Court of Appeals Will Cause an Endless Amount of Confusion in Marital Relations.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Lawyers in this city apprehend that the decision rendered Tuesday by the Kansas court of appeals, which declared ineffective the law under which divorces had been granted in that state for the past 25 years, will cause an almost endless amount of confusion in marital relations, in the relations of children to parents and in the custody and disposition of property rights. If such a decision should be given in reference to the decrees of divorce which have been granted in Oklahoma and the Dakotas in the past few years, it would cause a veritable social revolution among many well known families of the east. Fortunately Kansas has never been a favorite state for outsiders to get divorces, as have Oklahoma and South Dakota.

Undertakers Elect Officers.

PITTSBURGH, July 17.—The first regular session of the convention of the National Association of Undertakers and Embalmers convened Thursday morning. C. L. McNulta, of Philadelphia, acted as temporary chairman and addressed the delegates, outlining the objects of the association. The election of officers resulted: President, F. J. Merrill, of Detroit; vice president, Frank Willison, Allegheny; secretary, J. H. Long, Pittsburgh; treasurer, W. W. Hunter, McKeesport.

Thursday afternoon a number of addresses on subjects relating to embalming were given. Thursday night and Friday the delegates will be provided with special entertainment by local undertakers. The convention closes Friday night with a banquet.

Rothschilds Buy Rich Mexican Mines.

HERMOSILLO, Mex., July 17.—Agents of the Rothschilds have just closed a deal for a group of the richest gold mines in this state, the reported purchase price for the property being $5,000,000 in gold. The Rothschilds before closing the deal, conducted a thorough investigation, covering a period of over one year, into the mines.

Sunday-Closing at Lawrenceburg.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ky., July 17.—Mayor Bond has issued a proclamation ordering the chief of police and assistants to close hereafter all groceries, confectioneries, saloons, cigar stands and the like which they may find open on Sunday.

The Public Building at Pueblo.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Bids were opened at the treasury department Thursday for the construction of the public building at Pueblo, Col., excepting the heating apparatus. Seven proposals were submitted, that of L. L. Leash & Sons, of Chicago, being the lowest at $187,774. The firm proposes to complete the work in 18 months.

The Gold Reserve Fund.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Gold [illegible] drawals Thursday amounted to [illegible] 000, leaving the reserve at the [illegible] business at $96,106,293. None [illegible] withdrawn was for export.

Local News.

Friday was wheel day in Burlington. There were several exciting races, while some of the unitiated took the first lesson in riding. Harry Blyth was among the would-be learners, and the grace and ease with which he spun around the track astonished the spectators.

Our Petersburg correspondent sent in for publication, this week, a lengthy write up of a large, antedeluvian tooth found on Hon. N. S. Walton's farm some time since, but we do not give it space because it has been described once by our Utzinger reporter.

Niagara Falls, July 22nd.—Only $10 round trip from Cincinati via Big Four added to one fare via Q. & C. to Cincinnati, from points in Kentucky. Tickets good only on morning trains July 22, returning 3 days after date of sale. Ask agents for particulars.

PERSONAL MENTION.

There were ten applicants for teachers' certificates.

Hon. W. H. Baker, of Erlanger, was in town, Sunday.

G. L. Miller, of Big Bone, was in town early Friday morning.

Miss Catharine Furlong was in Cincinnati shopping Friday.

Jas. E. Gaines and wife were guests of Harry Blyth and wife, Sunday.

Hubert Walton, of Petersburg, was among the visitors in town Saturday.

The Burlington Knights were delighted with their visit to Rabbit Hash.

Johnnie Souther, of Erlanger, hiked over, last Friday, and spent part of the day.

William Clore, of Illinois, has been visiting his relatives in this county for several days.

Davied Beall and wife, of Hebron, were guests at Elmer Beall's Saturday night and Sunday.

Mrs. B. W. Adams left yesterday for Big Bone, to visit her sick nephew, a son of G. M. Allen.

James Blanton was in town one day last week, to spend one day of his vacation with friends here.

J. A. Riddell and wife, of the Hebron neighborhood, spent the day Sunday, with relatives in Burlington.

Mrs. Bettie Clore and daughter, Miss Annie, of Bullittsville, were guests at Mr. J. R. Clutterbuck's, Friday.

Mrs. Sarah Carpenter and Miss Alma, returned home last Friday, after a two weeks visit with relatives in Cincinnati.

Frank Berkshire, Chinese Inspector, located at Chicago, was visiting his brother, J. B. Berkshire, at this place, last Saturday.

Atty. S. W. Adams was in town Saturday morning and left an order for envelopes and letter heads. He will open an office at Erlanger.

Atty. D. E. Castleman is attending court at Warsaw, this week. He has been retained to defend J. M. Albro for the killing of John Lee, July 4th.

S. J. Ewalt, of Hamilton, was in town Monday, having with him a fine young mare which Chas. A. Gaines was looking at with a view to buying.

J. H. Rogers, of Walton, sojourned in Burlington, a few days last week. He was taking his vacation from his clerical duties in the store of Richards & Deau.

Rev. Hoover and wife left for home, Monday, after a month's pleasant sojourn here. Mr. Hoover will return again in September to spend a few weeks.

M. C. Carroll, of Big Bone, was in town yesterday. He started from home early in the morning, and found all the water courses along the route on the rampage.

Sam C. Johnson, of Walton, was in town last Thursday. The boys in the office unearthed a pretty good joke at Sam's expense, but everything goes with a candidate.

Col. John M. Moody, of Bellevue, was in town Thursday. He is very much elated over Republican prospects, and says he will be Boone's next representative in the general assembly.

Mr. Allie Graves of the firm of Richard Hanks & Co., of Cincinnati, was in town last Thursday. He is looking quite well, and his old acquaintances here were glad to meet him again.

Arthur Rouse has a new wheel, and is learning to ride. The road between here and Florence is very rough in many places, but that will not materially interfere with him after a few practice spins.

J. F. Blyth received a business letter from a gentleman in Iowa, the other day, and enclosed with it was one of the gentleman's cards, across the back of which was written in bold hand: "Bryan and Sewall."

A letter received from Philadelphia, Tennessee, last Thursday, stated that W. T. Davis, who moved from here to that place some time since, had been sick of a fever for about ten days. He was thought to be improving when the letter was written.

Paschal Hicks and wife, of Richmond, Virginia, were in town, Monday. They are related to the Sebrees of this county, and were attending to business in regard to some property in Richmond Virginia, in which the Sebrees are interested.

Tandy Wayland was tried before Judge Stephens and a jury, Thursday, under a writ de lunatico inquiendo. He was adjudged a lunatic and ordered taken to the asylum at Lakeland. He is 50 years old and single. He had been afflicted only a few weeks.

Jack Sandford is the most obliging, all-around young fellow the town affords, and it is feard that he will not be able to resist all the opportunities a leap year affords, and that he will be "non est comatus," by next year, so far as our town is concerned.

COUNTY COURT.

July 16.—Jane E. Johnson was appointed guardian for Daniel K. Roberts and Bertha L. Hood.

Sidney Gaines was appointed committee for Tandy Weyland.

Four of Boone's gallant sons have been mentioned in these columns in connection with the approaching race for Congress: Walton, Conner, Furnish and Grant. Now, if each of these gentlemen entertain Congressional aspirations, the best thing for them to do is to hold a convention among themselves and decide which one shall make the fight for the nomination.

The hospitable residence of Mr. J. R. Clutterbuck presented a very lively scene last Friday night, when the youth and beauty of the town had gathered there in response to invitations to attend a cotillion party. The music for the occasion was made by the colored pickaninny band, and delighted the guests until about one o'clock. At midnight the guests were served with delicious ice-cream and cake, after which the dancers renewed their favorite amusement with renewed vigor. Those present from a distance were Jas. Clore and sister, of Bullittsville, Miss Maggie Conner, of Florence, and Miss Fannie Roberts, of Verona.

Base Ball.

The Burlington and Petersburg ball teams met at the park here last Saturday, and played a close and exciting game—the best game played here this season. The Bulington club came very near giving the visitors the game in first two innings by bunching several very ugly errors—doing the poorest playing with which they can be charged this season.

When Burlington came to the bat in the second inning seven runs had been placed to the credit of Petersburg team and it had concluded it had a snap, a conclusion fully warranted at that particular stage of the game.

Burlington boys realized that to win the game now would require a heroic effort, and they settled down to work, and landed three runs across the plate before being retired.

In the third inning Petersburg drew a blank, while Burlington sent another man around the circuit.

The fourth and fifth innings produced no runs for either team.

In the sixth Petersburg drew another cipher, but Burlington put three more men across the home plate, tying the scrore and giving the rooters for the home team the first opportunity to exercise their lungs.

Petersburg came to the bats for the seventh time, and for the fifth successive inning returned to the fields without scoring. In Burlington's half of this inning she took the lead by two runs, and the rooters began to feel sanguine of winning the game.

Hard work was done by each team in the eighth inning, but neither was able to score, Petersburg having two men cut off at the home plate.

In the ninth inning the visitors got the bases full of men, and the Burlington rooters began to grow nervous, as a good hit would tie the score and possibly win the game. One Petersburg man finally succeed in scoring. Two men were out and two men on the bases when "Podge" Alloway came to the bat. He got his base on balls. It now began to grow decidedly interesting, and looked like the victory was anybody's, but the next batter up fanned the air three times and the jig was up. Following is the score by

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Petersburg	4	3	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	—8
Burlington	0	3	1	0	0	3	2	0	*	—9

Struck out—By Brady, 6; by Alloway, 8.

Umpires—Faust and Gordon.

NOTES.

About 300 people witnessed the game.

Brady was very effective at critical points.

The score of Saturday's game was not kept in full.

The Miamis, of Lawrenceburg, want a game with Burlington.

Alloway throws a hard ball, and keeps his catcher wideawake.

Bohn's catching was the feature of the game on the Petersburg side.

The Burlington and Petersburg teams will play at Petersburg next Saturday afternoon.

The club which was to play at Hebron, last Saturday, disappointed the boys by not coming. There will be a good game at the Hebron park next Saturday.

If the out siders would remain in their places and let the players settle their squabbles, in many instances, a settlement would be reached much sooner and more satisfactorily to all concerned.

In the third inning Burlington kicked against a decision of the umpire, and for a while it looked like the game would proceed no further, but the trouble was settled by calling Walter Gordon in to assist in calling the remainder of the game, and there was no more trouble.

J. Frank Grant for Congress.

PETERSBURG, KY., July 19, 1896.

Special to the Recorder.

Please allow me the privilege of giving to the Democrats of Boone the name of our favorite son of Petersburg for Congress. He was born and raised on a farm, and thereby knows the wants and needs of the tillers of the soil. He also would be of great service to them if elected to Congress. He is a careful and prudent business man. Has managed his own business prudently, and is just the man to look after our affairs in Congres.

He is one of the original 16 to 1 men in Petersburg. He did not wait for the cat to jump, as others have done, but said, "come on, boys." He is a banker and thereby understands the great question of the day.

His name is J. Frank Grant.

Come, get in the wagon, and we will steer clear of Covington and Newport, and their petty quarrels. FARMER.

Ex-President Harrison and wife visited Gen. Wm. Henry Harrison's (his grand father's) tomb at North Bend, last week. He proposes having a handsome new tomb and make it the perpetual resting place for the Harrisons. Some distance below is the Harrison homestead, where Benjamin spent his early boyhood days. "Dear old Fort Hill," said the ex-President; "how well I remember the good old times there when I used to go down to Lawrenceburg and get that most delicious of sweets—ginger cakes. I'll always have a soft spot in my heart for Lawrenceburg, just for those ginger cakes."—Lawrenceburg Register.

Rabbit Hash was alive with K. P. enthusiam last Saturday evening, the occasion being the institution of East Bend Lodge No. 114, K. of P. A large number of prominent Knights were present and took part in the ceremonies. The surrounding neighborhood was well represented in the town until late that evening, when they took their departure, leaving the little village in possession of the Knights, who were introducing some of their citizens to the mysteries of the order. An early supper and a midnight lunch composed the refreshments served. Twenty-six members were initiated, and several others were received by card. The new lodge starts out under very favorable circumstances, its membership being composed of the best citizens in the East Bend neighborhood.

Of the Christian Parent After a Long Life of Duty Done.

The Hand That Rocks the Cradle and Guides the Child's First Steps Wields a Mighty Power for Future Good or Evil—Dr. Talmage's Sermon.

Dr. Talmage took for his text last Sunday I Sam. ii: 19: "Moreover his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when she came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice."

The stories of Deborah and Abigail are very apt to discourage a woman's soul. She says within herself: "It is impossible that I ever achieve any such grandeur of character, and I don't mean to try," as though a child should refuse to play the eight notes because he can not execute a "William Tell." This Hannah of the text differs from the persons I just named. She was an ordinary woman, with ordinary intellectual capacity, placed in ordinary circumstances, and yet, by extraordinary piety, standing out before all the ages to come, the model Christian mother. Hannah was the wife of Elkanah, who was a person very much like herself—unromantic and plain, never having fought a battle or been the subject of a marvelous escape. Neither of them would have been called a genius. Just what you and I might be, that was Elkanah and Hannah. The brightest time in all the history of that family was the birth of Samuel. Although no star ran along the heavens pointing down to his birthplace, I think the angels of God stopped at the coming of so wonderful a prophet. As Samuel had been given in answer to prayer. Elkanah and all his family, save Hannah, started up to Shiloh to offer sacrifices of thanksgiving. The cradle where the child slept was altar enough for Hannah's greatful heart; but when the boy was old enough she took him to Shiloh, and took three bullocks and an ephah of flour and a bottle of wine, and made offering of sacrifice unto the Lord, and there, according to a previous vow, she left him; for there he was to stay all the days of his life, and minister in the sanctuary. Years rolled on, and every year Hannah made with her own hand a garment for Samuel, and took it over to him. The lad would have got along well without that garment, for I suppose he was well clad by the ministry of the temple; but Hanna could not be contented unless she was all the time doing something for her darling boy. "Moreover, his mother made him a little coat and brought it to him from year to year when she came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice."

Hannah stands before you, then, today, in the first place, as an industrious mother. There was no need that she work. Elkanah, her husband, was far from poor. He belonged to a distinguished family, for the Bible tells us that he was the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph. "Who were they?" you say. I do not know, but they were distinguished people, no doubt, or their names would not have been mentioned. Hannah might have seated herself in her family, and, with folded arms and disheveled hair, read novels from year to year, if there had been any to read; but when I see her making that garment and taking it over to Samuel, I know she is industrious from principle as well as from pleasure. God would not have another become a drudge or a slave; He would have her employ all the helps possible in the rearing of her children. But Hannah ought never to be ashamed to be found making a coat for Samuel. Most mothers need no counsel in this direction. The wrinkles on their brow, the pallor on their cheek, the thimble mark on their finger, attest that they are faithful in their maternal duties. The bloom and the brightness and the vivacity of girlhood have given place to the grander dignity and usefulness and industry of motherhood. But there is a heathenish idea getting abroad in some of the families of Americans; there are mothers who banish themselves from the home circle. For three-fourths of their maternal duties they prove themselves incompetent. They are ignorant of what their children wear, what their children eat, and what their children read. They intrust to irresponsible persons these young immortals and allow them to be under influences which may cripple their bodies, or taint their purity, or spoil their manners, or destroy their souls. From the awkward cut of Samuel's coat you know his mother Hannah did not make it. Out from under flaming chandeliers, and off from imported carpets, and down the granite stairs, there is coming a great crowd of children in this day, untrained, saucy, incompetent for all the practical duties of life, ready to be caught in the first whirl of crime and sensuality. Indolent and unfaithful mothers will make indolent and unfaithful children. You can not expect neatness and order in any house where the daughters see nothing but slatternliness and upside-downativeness in their parents. Let Hannah be idle, and most certainly Samuel will grow up idle. Who are the industrious men in all our occupations and professions? Who are they managing the merchandise of the world, building the walls, tinning the roofs, weaving the carpets, making the laws, governing the nations, making the earth to quake and heave and roar and rattle with the tread of gigantic enterprises? Who are they? For the most part they descend from industrious mothers, who, in the old homestead, used to spin their own yarn, and weave their own carpets, and plait their own doormats, and flag their own chairs, and do their own work. The stalwart men and the influential women of this day, ninety-nine out of a hundred of them, came from such an illustrious ancestry of hard knuckles and homespun. And who are these people in society, light as froth, blown every whither of temptation and fashion—the peddlers of filthy stories, the dancing jacks of political parties, the scum of society, the tavern-lounging, store-infesting, the men of low wink, and filthy chuckle, and brass breastpin, and rotten associations? For the most part they came from mothers idle and disgusting, the scandal mongers of society, going from house to house attending to everybody's business but their own, believing in witches and ghosts, and horseshoes to keep the devil out of the churn, and by a godless life setting the children on the very verge of hell. The mothers of Samuel Johnson, and of Alfred the Great, and of Isaac Newton, and of St. Augustine, and of Richard Cecil, and President Edwards, for the most part were industrious, hard-working mothers. Now, while I congratulate all Christian mothers upon the wealth and modern science which may afford them all kinds of help, let me say that every mother ought to be observant of her children's walk, her children's behavior, her children's food, her children's books, her children's companionships. However much Hannah may have, I think she ought every year, at least, make one garment for Samuel. The Lord have mercy on the man who is so unfortunate as to have had a lazy mother!

Again: Hannah stands before you to-day as an intelligent mother. From the way in which she talked in this chapter, and from the way in which she managed this boy, you know she was intelligent. There are no persons in a community who need to be so wise and well-informed as mothers. O, this work of culturing children for this world and the next. This child is timid, and it must be roused up and pushed out into activities. This child is forward, and he must be held back, and tamed down into modesty and politeness. Rewards for one, punishments for another. That which will make George and ruin John. The rod is necessary in one case, while a frown of displeasure is more than enough in another. Whipping and a dark closet do not exhaust all the rounds of domestic discipline. There have been children who have grown up and gone to glory without ever having their ears boxed. O, how much care and intelligence is necessary in the rearing of children! But in this day, when there are so many books on this subject, no parent is excusable in being ignorant of the best mode of bringing up a child. If parents knew more of dietetics there would not be so many dyspeptic stomachs and weak nerves and inactive livers among their children. If parents knew more of physiology there would not be so many curved spines and cramped chests and inflamed throats and diseased lungs as there are among children. If parents knew more of art and were in sympathy with all that is beautiful, there would not be so many children coming out in the world with boorish proclivties. If parents knew more of Christ and practiced more of His religion, there would not be so many little feet already starting on the wrong road and all around us voices of riot and blasphemy would not come up with such ecstacy of infernal triumph. The eaglets in the eyrie have no advantage over the eaglets of a thousand years ago: the kids have no superior way of climbing up the rocks than the old goats taught them hundreds of years ago; the whelps know no more now than did the whelps of ages ago—they are taught no more by the lions of the desert; but it is a shame that in this day, when there are so many opportunities of improving ourselves in the best manner of culturing children, that so often there is no more advancement in this respect than there has been among the kids and the eaglets and the whelps.

Again: Hannah stands before you today as a Christian mother. From her prayers and the way she consecrated her boy to God, I know she was good. A mother may have the finest culture, the most brilliant surroundings; but she is not fit for her duties unless she be a Christian mother. There may be well-read libraries in the house, and exquisite music in the parlor, and the canvas of the best artist adorning the walls, and the wardrobe be crowed with tasteful apparel, and the children be wonderful for their attainments, and make the house ring with laughter and innocent mirth; but there is something wofully lacking in that house if it be not also the residence of a Christian mother. I bless God that there are not many prayerless mothers. The weight of responsibility is so great that they feel the need of a divine hand to help, and a divine voice to command, and a divine heart to sympathize. Thousands of mothers have been led into the kingdom of God by the hands of their little children. There are hundreds of mothers to-day who would not have been Christians had it not been for the prattle of their little ones.

Standing some day in the nursery, they besought themselves, "This child God has given me to raise for eternity. What is my influence upon it? Not being a Christian myself, how can I ever expect him to become a Christian. Lord, help me!" O, are their anxious mothers who know nothing of the infinite help of religion? Then I commend you to Hannah, the pious mother of Samuel. Do not think it is absolutely impossible that your children come up iniquitous. Out of just such fair brows and bright eyes and soft hands and innocent hearts, crime gets its victims—extirpating purity from the heart, and rubbing out the smoothness of the eye, and shriveling and poisoning and putrefying and scathing and scalding and biasting and burning with shame and woe.

Every child is a bundle of tremendous possibilitites; and whether that child shall come forth in life, its heart attuned to the eternal harmonies, and after a life of usefulness on earth, go to a life of joy in Heaven; or whether across it shall jar eternal discords, and after a life of wrong-doing on earth, it shall go to a home of impenetrable darkness and an abyss of immeasurable plunge is being decided by nursery song and Sabbath lesson and evening prayer, and walk and ride and look and frown and smile. O, how many children in glory! crowding all the battlements and lifting a million-voiced hosanah—brought to God through Christian parentage! One hundred and twenty clergymen were together, and they were telling their experience and their ancestry; and of the 120 clergymen, how many of them do you suppose assigned, as the means of their conversion, the influence of a Christian mother? One hundred out of the 120! Philip Doddridge was brought to God by the Scripture lesson on the Dutch tile of the chimney fireplace. The mother thinks she is only rocking a child; but at the same time she may be rocking the destiny of empires—rocking the fate of nations—rocking the glories of Heaven. The same maternal power that may lift a child up, may press a child down. A daughter came to a worldly mother and said she was anxious about her sins, and she had been praying all night.

The mother said: "O, stop praying! I don't believe in praying. Get over all these religious notions, and I'll give you a dress that will cost $500, and you may wear it next week to that party." The daughter took the dress; and she moved in the gay circle, the gayest of all the gay that night; and, sure enough, all religious impressions were gone, and she stopped praying. A few months after she came to die, and, in her closing moments, said: "Mother, I wish you would bring me that dress that cost $500." The mother thought it was a very strange request, but she brought it to please the dying child. "Now," said the daughter, "mother, hang that dress on the foot of my bed;" and the dress was hung there, on the foot of the bed. Then the dying girl got up on one elbow and looked at her mother and then pointed to the dress and said: "Mother, that dress is the price of my soul!" O, what a momentous thing it is to be a mother!

Again, and lastly: Hannah stands before you to-day, the rewarded mother. For all the coats she made for Samuel; for all the prayers she offered for him; for the discipline she exerted over him, she got abundant compensation in the piety and the usefulness and the popularity of her son Samuel; and that is true in all ages. Every mother gets full pay for all the prayers and tears in behalf of her children. That man useful in commercial life; that man prominent in the profession; that master mechanic—why, every step he takes in life has an echo of gladness in the old heart that long ago taught him to be a Christian and heroic and earnest. The story of what you have done or what you have written, of the influence you have exerted, has gone back to the old homestead. For there is someone always ready to carry good tidings—and that story makes the needle in the old mother's tremulous hand fly quicker and the flail in the father's hand comes down upon the barn floor with a more vigorous thump. Parents love to hear good news from their children. Do you send them good news always? Look out for the young man who speaks of his father as the "governor," the "squire" or the "old chap."

Look out for the young woman who calls her mother her "maternal ancestor," or the "old woman." "The eye that mocketh at his father and refuseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it." God grant that all these parents may have the great satisfaction of seeing their children grow up Christians. But, oh, the pang of that mother who, after a life of street gadding and gossip retailing, hanging on children the tripperies and follies of this world, sees those children tossed out on the sea of life like foam on the wave or nonenities in a world where only brawny and stalwart character stand the shock! But blessed be the mother who looks upon her children as sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty! Oh, the satisfaction of Hannah in seeing Samuel serving at the altar, of Mother Eunice, in seeing her Timothy learned in the Scriptures. That is the mother's recompense—to see children coming up useful in the world, reclaiming the lost, healing the sick, pitying the ignorant, earnest and useful in every sphere. That throws a new light back on the old family Bible whenever she reads it, and that will be ointment to soothe the aching limbs of decrepitude, and light up the closing hours of life's day with the glories of an autumnal sunset!

There she sits—the old Christian mother—ripe for Heaven. Her eyesight is almost gone, but the splendors of the celestial city kindle up her vision. The gray light of Heaven's morn has struck through the gray locks which are folded back over the wrinkled temples. She stoops very much now under the burden of care she used to carry for her children. She sits at home to-day, too old to find her way to the house of God, but while she sits there all the past comes back, and the children that 40 years ago trooped around her armchair with their little griefs and joys and sorrows—those children are all gone now. Some caught up into a better realm, where they shall never die, and others out in the broad world attesting the excellency of a Christian mother's discipline. Her last days are full of peace, and calmer and sweeter will her spirit become until the gates of life shall lift and let the worn-out pilgrim into eternal springtide and youth, where the limbs never ache and the eyes never grow dim, and the staff of the exhausted and decrepit pilgrim shall become the palm of the immortal athlete.

IGNORANCE OF M'KINLEY.

The Republican Nominee Has No Knowledge of Financiering.

McKinley's admirers made haste to give him an opportunity to make some remarks regarding the Coliseum performance, and he improved the opportunity without hesitation in the style to which he is addicted.

The Coliseum crowd had just completed its unique job by nominating the Maine protectionist, all-around monopolist and bosom friend of Senator Frye and the late Mr. Blaine, when a Foraker club drew up before the Canton joss house and elicited a "timely" speech from the occupant of that shrine.

After uttering sundry words in very solemn and impressive style about a struggle greater than that of the civil war—a struggle to preserve the honor of the government, a contest in which "patriotism is above party and national honor is dearer than any party name"—the great oracle went on to say:

> "The currency and credit of the government are good now and must be kept good forever. Our trouble is not with the character of the money that we have, but with the threat to debase it. We have the same currency that we had in 1892, good the world over and unquestioned by any people."

Here we have the same ignorance of economic principles, the same ignoring of notorious facts, that have characterized all of McKinley's utterances on the currency question.

The republican candidate is unable to see anything amiss in the system which culminated in the act of 1890 providing for the purchase of silver with a new emission of legal tender notes and producing the disastrous panic of 1893.

Our currency was not good the world over and unquestioned by any people in 1892. The silver act of 1890, in the passage of which McKinley took an active part, had shaken confidence and caused a reduction of more than $80,000,000 in the net treasury gold long before the presidential election of 1892.

By the admission of far abler republican leaders than McKinley that act produced distrust and was the immediate cause of the panic of 1893.

All competent judges know that our currency has been unsound ever since the war issues of legal tender notes. They know that its unsoundness was confirmed and perpetuated by the half repeal of the resumption act in 1878 and the provision that redeemed legal tenders should not be extinguished.

They know that the endless chain thus forged was put in motion by the republican silver act of 1890. They know that the currency will never be sound until provision is made for the extinguishment of redeemed notes and for taking the goverment out of the business of providing credit currency.

They know that the republican doctrine that government should provide such currency is the source of the whole brood of errors in regard to money which has kept the country in turmoil for 30 years and produced two great panics, not to speak of less serious ones.

McKinley knows none of these things. He actually believes, if we may credit his repeated utterances, that there is nothing wrong with our currency and that the only thing needed to make it absolutely perfect is more taxes for the enrichment of protectees.

Is this the kind of man to lend in a struggle to preserve the honor and credit of the government? Is he the man to guide those economic reforms which we must have before we can be rid of an unsound currency and the whole black brood of panic-breeding errors and heresies which always accompany an unsound currency?

Far from it. Sound financiers, sound democrats cannot support McKinley, the ignorant, more than they can support Bryan, the silver attorney and repudiator. They cannot vote for either of these "advance agents of prosperity" for classes at the expense of the masses.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Although a lower tariff prevails on tin plate than was levied by the McKinley act, the industry continues to gain ground. No less than 36 plants are now in operation making the black plates, which are the foundation of the product, and which have heretofore almost entirely been imported from England. In fact, the country is in a fair way of supplying its own needs in this respect.—Springfield Republican.

——Mr. McKinley appears to have an unfortunate connection with labor strikes. In 1892, with his prosperity tariff law in operation, the bloody Homestead labor war occurred. And now, only a week or two after his nomination as the prosperity candidate, bloody labor riots occur in Cleveland. This brand of prosperity is costly to people and candidate.—Harrisburg Patriot.
